MORGENTHAU SAYS BRITAIN NEEDS U. S. AID

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., said today before Senate foreign relations committee that Britain, Greece and "cannot continue to fight" if Congress passes the Administration's war aid bill.

The expenditure of this sum is expected to gear the industry for increased production during the defense emergency although some of the new equipment will not be available until next year. With the sum budgeted for this year, the sum spent or about to be spent for new equipment by the industry since the beginning of 1935 is brought to a total of $1,390,000,000.

From the beginning of 1935 to the end of 1940, steel ingot capacity was increased from approximately 78,000,000 net tons to approximately $3,000,000 net tons, and further increases will be effected this year with the sums provided for such enlargement. Productive capacity for pig iron, coke and finished steel is also being increased.

To forestall any bottleneck in the various phases of steel production, actual expenditures in 1940 for new equipment were sharply increased and totaled $25,000,000 in excess of the amount budgeted at the beginning of the year before the defense program was expanded, the survey showed.

The total actually spent was over $171,000,000, whereas expenditures contemplated at the beginning of the year had been estimated at only $146,000,000. No small part of that increase was due to the building of new electric furnaces not scheduled at the beginning of the year.

The new equipment budget for 1941 is nearly twice as much as the amount budgeted last year, and is approximately 65 per cent in excess of the amount actually spent for this purpose last year.

This year's program covers the entire range of steel mill productive facilities and provides additional capacity, pig iron and steel ingot capacity as well as equipment for many varieties of rolled and finished steel. Where potential bottlenecks have been located by individual companies, new equipment is to be installed so that the operating level of the industry may be maintained at a high level.

The breadth of the construction program is shown by the fact that fifteen companies are contemplating expenditures for new rolling mills; 29 companies for modernization or enlargement of existing rolling mills; 23 companies for new wire drawing facilities; 22 companies for new cold finishing equipment; 40 companies for new heat treating equipment.

Fourteen companies plan to install new blast furnace equipment and several other companies propose to build new blast furnaces, open hearth furnaces for steel and new coke ovens. Twelve companies have budgeted expenditures for new electric furnaces to increase the output of unfinished steel.

White Men In Central Texas Are Described In Paper

Waco, Tex.—Settlement of white men in Central Texas is described in the papers of George W. Waco, first merchant of Waco, have been given to the University of Texas History by Mrs. Catherine Barlane of Waco, thirteenth of Barnard, Prof. Guy B. The logs, ledgers, and invoices of the first post are part of the collection.

Barnard was a member of the Santa Fe Expedition sent nine months in a Mexican. In 1857 he married Rebecca Ross, daughter of S. P. Ross, and settled down in Waco, Tex. The papers of Barnard include the plan of Waco, an inventory of the first shipment of pig iron, deeds to town lots, many records of business transactions.

Other gifts include an original of Sam Houston given to him by Houston, the Bible given to Barnard by him when he left Hartford, Tex. to come to Texas, a buckskin coat decorated with minute beads given the traders by Indian friends, and a walking stick given by the same Indians. Steel Industry Spending Much On Equipment

To meet the expected expansion in the nation's requirements for steel for defense and other purposes, steel companies plan to spend more than $282,000,000 for new productive equipment during 1941, according to information furnished to the American Iron and Steel Institute by 160 companies representing over 95 per cent of the steelmaking capacity of the country.

The expenditure of this sum is expected to gear the industry for increased production during the defense emergency although some of the new equipment will not be available until next year. With the sum budgeted for this year, the sum spent or about to be spent for new equipment by the industry since the beginning of 1935 is brought to a total of $1,390,000,000.

Your Federal Income Tax

When to Report Income from Salaries, Wages, and Other Sources

Salaried persons and wage earners whose income is derived from personal services form the largest number of Federal income taxpayers. This year this army of taxpayers will be greatly increased. Those who paid an income tax for 1939 have gotten the forms for 1940 income tax return through the mails. In order that none may escape filing the return, employers are required to report on Form 1099, accompanied by transmittal Form 1096, the names of all their employees to whom, if single, they made payments of $800 or more in 1940; and if married, $2,000 or more. If the marital status of the employee is unknown, he must be reported as single.

These returns should be filed on or before February 15, 1941, with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Returns Distribution Section, Washington, D. C.

The law contemplates that every individual, if single, or if married but not living with spouse, whose gross income for 1940 was $800 or more, must file an income tax return. Excuses for not doing so do not relieve the delinquent from responsibility for the delinquency.

Neither the President of the United States, nor the Vice President, nor Federal Judges, nor Members of Congress, are exempt from filing returns.

All types of compensation, unless specifically excluded by statute, should be incorporated in the gross income return of the taxpayer. A minister of the Gospel, for instance, must report all fees he receives—for funerals, for masses, for baptisms, for marriages, and for other like services. In addition to salaries, wages, fees, and commissions, all bonuses, tips, prizes, awards, retiring allowances for past services, honorariums, and other forms of compensation are rated as part of one's income. If a person is paid in whole or in part for his services by anything other than money, the fair market value of the thing taken must be reported as income.

Compensation credited to the account of or set apart for a taxpayer, without any substantial limitation or restriction, and which may be drawn upon by him at any time, is subject to tax for the year during which so credited or set apart, although not then actually reduced to possession. If the services were rendered during the year 1939, or even prior thereto, but the compensation was not received, or made unqualifiedly subject to demand by the taxpayer until 1940, the entire amount is taxable in 1940, when the cash receipts and disbursements basis, which is the basis used by most individuals in reporting net income.

Gen. Cavallero Sacrifices Many Troops In Attack

ATHENS, Jan. 28.—General Ugo Cavallero, new Italian commander-in-chief in Albania, is throwing great masses of men against almost impregnable Greek positions without regard for losses, a Greek spokesman charged today.

He alleged that Cavallero desperately sought quick successes to show Premier Benito Mussolini, Cavallero, Italian chief of staff, was recently placed in command in Albania.

Heavy Italian counterattacks continued on the Central and Northern Albanian fronts, the spokesman said, with the hope of retaking positions the Greeks stormed last week. He said it was all but impossible for the Italians to retake them because the Greeks had had time to consolidate their gains.

The spokesman said Cavallero was using his best troops, including the Cacciatori Alpini, the elite of the Alpine troops, which held during the World War when the Austrians were threatening Venice after Caporetto.

There was no banquet tonight as in former years.

Assert the Brotherhood of Man!

The very words, "brotherhood of man," sound old-fashioned in the world of today. It is true that no age and no country, perhaps, ever accepted the phrase with complete literalness in every implication. But at least lip-service was given to the ideal, at least there was a sense of shame in falling short of that glistening goal. Today, however, there are whole governments and systems based specifically on the rejection of this universal brotherhood, based entirely on the theory of "master" races to which the rest of us owe obedience and virtual servitude. In times past, the brotherhood of man was an as-yet unattained ideal, a shining goal from which men in their weakness fell short. Today, in large sections of the earth, the brotherhood of man is deliberately rejected.

We of the United States just as deliberately reject the idea of a "master race." We believe in men, in individuals; that the least of them is still a man, and that the best of them can be no more than that. On his ground our forefathers took their stand, on this ground we stand today. We believe that ground is not only solid but holy ground. The week of the birthday of Washington (Feb. 22-28) has been chosen this year for the annual Brotherhood Week sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and President Roosevelt has urged its observance "to purge our hearts of all intolerance and to bind all our citizens in a common loyalty."

As never before, this Brotherhood Week should be marked by Americans to show the world how utterly we reject racial doctrines which are to us false and obnoxious. There is, thank God, in the United States no dominant group which merely "tolerates" others as a grudging duty. Every group has its contribution to make to America, and our strength lies in the combination of them all under a common urge to create here a better society.

Some time during this Brotherhood Week, it would be a fine thing if every person in the United States would read to himself in quiet, or aloud to another, these words from the call for the week's observance:

"We affirm the inherent dignity of every human being of whatever blood or creed. And, beyond all the divisions of our imperfect society, we assert the brotherhood of man."

Now that Christmas is over for another year we can all settle down—and up!

Italian press says Mussolini's soldiers have not lost sight of their goal. Must be looking over their shoulders.

Times are so bad right now that more people are having to go to work.

Not Peace, but a Dagger

Paul Manning Introduces You to the . . . Only American Flying Giant R. A. F. Bombers

Brooklyn Daredevil Charlie Whitehead Gets Action Aplenty

BY PAUL MANNING

NEA Service Staff Correspondent LONDON.—(By Wireless)—The big 15-ton Whitley stands there in the rain, its propellers slowly turning. In another 10 minutes it will be rolling across the airfield on another raid over German-occupied France.

Standing alongside this giant Whitley you wonder how any pilot can make the engines lift such a ponderous weight off this rain-swept flying field. Then Charlie Whitehead of Brooklyn, N. Y., comes waddling out from the hangar, encased in flying suit and heavy lined boots, and all complete with parachute and other equipment which adds about 50 pounds of his weight.

Somehow, catching his determined air, you know he will get this airplane off the ground all right. For this Charlie Whitehead is the one who turned in more hours of brilliant flying on Pan American's run to South America than probably any other pilot.

And this is the Charlie Whitehead who probably pulled more airplanes out of spins over Brooklyn's Floyd Bennett Field than any other instructor. That, of course, was when Whitehead was running his flying school at Bennett Field and had a $1000-a-week contract with the On Leong Tong of New York's Mott Street, under which he turned young Chinese into skillful war birds.

Today Charlie's a war bird himself. He is the only American in the Royal Air Force who is flying the big bombers.

TAUGHT CHINESE FLYERS IN NEW YORK

Originally employed by Lord Beaverbrook to ferry planes from American factories to British airfields, Whitehead transferred to the R.A.F. because he wanted action.

The first day he reported at a bomber station he was one surprised American. He had an idea that when he showed up the adjutant would lean back in his chair, point through the window to a waiting Whitley and end tersely say: "Get going."

But it was months before he ever did get going. He was put through the complicated training by which the R.A.F. turns a good flyer into a top-notch pilot. He had to do blind flying, blind take-off and bombing practice until he thought he would never get a chance for real action.

Then Charlie Whitehead of Brooklyn comes waddling out encased in flying suit and heavy lined boots.

French coastal ports, like the raid this day.

MOST INSTRUMENTS "DON'T MEAN A THING"

Moving on the side of his bomber, he makes one last adjustment of his parachute. Then he tells you to follow him while he checks the instrument. Entering the plane from the side, you crawl nearly its whole length. Then you get seated in the cockpit.

Divides Tenancy Of Apartment Building

By United Press HOLEY, N. Y.—A three-story Public Square building has become a "house divided within itself" with the death of Michael A. Borsario.

Under terms of his will, Borsario's son, Michael, receives the sole use of the two upper floors. With another brother, Michael operates a barber shop on the second floor while the third floor is vacant. A meat market and grocery are on the first floor.

Ex-Pan American Pilot Once Taught Chinese War Birds

Whitehead tests his engines. Then he begins his check-up. You ask him about a few of the 182 instruments. He says most of them do not mean a thing. He says if you just give him the Sperry directional gyro and artificial horizon, he is happy.

Remembering the difficulty in crawling into the cockpit, you ask him what happens when he wants to get out quickly, as, for instance, when a pilot is making a crash landing and knows the plane will probably burst into flames.

Whitehead replies that when that happens the pilot just does not get out. It is only a matter of seconds until the bomber is enveloped in flames after striking the ground.

He says the best bet is to bail out while the machine is still in the air. There are emergency hatches for that. One is directly over the pilot's head, but because the pilot is like the captain of a ship, he cannot leave until the observer and rear gunner—have cleared from the plane.

Outside the plane once more, we walk across the field where Whitehead's crew and men of other Whitleys are waiting their zero hour. Only they don't act as if it was zero hour as they steam out from operational headquarters.

Whitehead goes back to his machine with his crew. You say that it is too bad the weather isn't better. Whitehead replies that weather does not mean a thing to these flyers. He goes inside his machine.

OFF INTO THE MIST

New, as a mere observer, you move a good distance away from his ship because he is giving his engines their liberty.

The ground ropes are pulled and with a slow heave the Whitley rolls forward. It gathers momentum as it reaches midfield. Its tail comes up and then the plane is up in the air. Other Whitleys follow and then you turn away, because there is nothing more to watch. They have all disappeared in the mist at the far end of the field.

Next morning you learn Whitehead has returned from his mission. The official communique says: "All aircraft returned safely."

In the earliest period of the colonization of Texas, the town of San Felipe, Stephen F. Austin's colonial capital, boasted of possibly a dozen log cabins and only one frame building—which was a saloon and billiard hall, records in the University Library show.

Scouts Prepared for Emergency Service

Boy Scouts here and throughout the country are now training in Scoutcraft and outdoor lore with new vigor to be better prepared for any sort of emergency and disaster service. Scout troops are forming units of Emergency Service Corps (see emblem, upper right above) and being trained in firefighting, first aid, rescue work and other service connected with emergencies caused by storms, floods, hurricanes, earthquakes and any type of catastrophe.

At camp and on highways through games and other tractive activities of the regular Scout program, they are learning what to do in a crisis and how to help people at all times. Through demonstrations, displays, exhibits, in cooperation with established disaster relief agencies, they are doing their part to teach the American people to be prepared.

Strict Regulation Of Horse Races Is Provided In Bill

AUSTIN, Jan. 28.—The strict supervision and the restriction of profits of those holding horse races to a "reasonable" figure are features of the racing bill which are being stressed by its advocates, including officials of the Thoroughbred Horse Association of Texas.

The Texas Racing Commission of five members would consist of men who have lived in the State for at least five years and have been thoroughbred horse breeders for at least the past two years. Since racing was barred in Texas in 1937, a breeder of thoroughbreds has had to go to the expense of shipping his horses to distant tracks for proving before he could sell them; therefore, the Texas breeders have operated at a loss. The fact that they have continued, nevertheless, proves that they are interested primarily in the horses themselves and, if the welfare of racing is entrusted to the hands of men who love thoroughbreds, the sport will be conducted properly, it is felt.

Before granting a license for a race course, the law provides that the commission shall determine that the applicant is of good moral character or, in the case of a corporation, association or partnership, that the controlling stockholders and members meet this test.

Provision is made for rigid regulation of racing and, in case of flagrant violations, fines and jail or prison sentences are provided.

Profits of those conducting a race meet are held to a reasonable figure, not to exceed 10 per cent of the investment represented by the property actually necessary to hold a meet. The commission has power to set a valuation on the property and any surplus earnings will go to the State as a tax in addition to the tax of 5 per cent of the gross amount going through the pari-mutuels, besides one-half of the "breakage" taxes on concessions and admission tickets as well as a license fee. The tax revenue would amount to approximately $2,500,000, of which 75 per cent would go to old age pensions and 25 per cent to the State public school fund.

Scrap Iron Gathered Over South Africa

By United Press JOHANNESBURG, South Africa.—South Africa's countryside is being cleared of scrap iron to supply material for the government's iron and steel works in Pretoria.

Farmers are being asked to bring old discarded agricultural implements, chains, and other suitable scrap to the nearest railway station for transport to the works. Stationmasters pay for the material on the spot with credit vouchers drawn on banks.

CONSCRIPT'S WIFE

BY BETTY WALLACE

YESTERDAY: Bill arrives, accuses Martha's explanation of the accident. At the hospital, he accuses Paul about trying to kill his wife in a crash. It is all in fun, however, until Suzanne arrives. She is anxious about Paul's injuries, says no attention to Martha. When Bill reminds her that she was hurt, too, Suzanne turns on him furiously. "You say, why should I care what happened to Martha? If she had let that plane that would never have happened."

FRIENDSHIP ENDS

CHAPTER XXI

"SUZANNE!" Paul Elliott was thundering dangerously. "Suzanne, be quiet!" His free arm shot out, his fingers imprisoned her arm. "Are you crazy?"

But it was too late. While Martha's heart pounded with dread—while Bill stood there, white and stunned and unbelieving—Suzanne jerked pulled away from Paul's grasp and cried furiously. "Let Bill hear it! It's the truth! He should have heard it long ago! I warned her! I told her to stay away from you, but she wouldn't do it."

"She didn't care what she did to you, Paul. She's never cared. She jilted you once, didn't she? She married him. Why doesn't she stick to him, then? Why did she keep coming you, after he went into the Army?"

She whirled on Bill, her slender body shaking under the storm of emotion as a tree trembles in a high wind. "It's your fault, Bill Marshall! You've been blind—blind and stupid! You're her husband. Why don't you know what she's doing, where she's going?"

"I went to her, I told her how it looked. She promised to stay away from Paul! And now what happens? She gets him to come all the way up here—and she nearly killed him!"

"Suzanne!" Martha could bear it no longer. She leaped to the other girl's side, her own legs unsteady, her breath coming fast.

Bill's hands on her shoulders, his toneless, "Don't," stopped Martha's voice. She crumpled, sobbing, against him.

"Suzanne," Paul ordered curtly, "apologize for what you said immediately!"

"Apologize? For what? For telling the truth?" Suzanne tried to speak, but she covered her face with her hands and wailed. "Oh, Paul, don't be angry with me. I didn't mean to go to pieces, but—"

"I think we'd better go, Martha," Bill said heavily.

"Bill!" Paul's voice was husky. "Bill, don't be a damn fool! Suzanne was crazy, upset. There's not a word of truth in it. Martha and I never—Bill!"

"Come on, Martha," Bill repeated inexorably. He walked out without a backward glance, without a word to the man who had been his friend for so many years. Helplessly, her heart like a stone inside her, Martha went with him. There was nothing else to do.

SHE felt stiff and cold, weary with a weariness that dimmed even thought. Suzanne had threatened this, and now she had done it. With a few impassioned words—in a searing moment she had already regretted—Suzanne had brought the whole world tumbling down around their ears. It would bring her no nearer to Paul. And it had driven a wedge, cruel and all but insurmountable, between Martha Marshall and the man she loved.

Suddenly the numbness left her. "Bill," she whispered. "Bill, you've got to listen to me. You can't go on, with those poisonous words in your mind. Let me explain. Let me tell you—"

"Explain?" How cold his tone was! "What is there to explain?"

"Bill," she said desperately, catching at his sleeve. "Bill, please, listen to me. Everything she said was wrong. It wasn't like that at all. She didn't want Paul to take me out, she didn't want him to come up to the apartment, because she wanted to go with him alone. Don't you understand?"

"She's in love with him, crazy with it. You know she's always been in love with him and he—he isn't with her. And when he was nice to me—when he just tried to keep me from being lonesome—she imagined things. She came to me, told me that people were talking. I never told you, Bill. I didn't want to worry you."

"Worry me!" he said bitterly. "That's rich, that is."

"Darling, don't listen. I'm trying so hard to explain. You must believe me. There was nothing—nothing—"

THEY were still parked at the curb in front of the hospital. People passed, glanced at them. But they were unaware, as oblivious as if there were no one else in all the world but themselves.

"Are you trying to tell me, Martha, that—that Paul never—never made love to you?"

"Never!" she swore. "Oh, darling, never! Do you think I'd let him? He was just a friend—just your friend! You were engaged to him when I met you! You were wearing his diamond. I never could afford a diamond. I couldn't diminished rates to the decade low, 1940's 1.9 per 100,000.

Dr. Cox attributed the very significant decrease in diphtheria deaths and prevalence to the increasingly positive effects of public health and greater appreciation by the parent of the child's well-being. Dr. Cox pointed out that the "increased attention to the well child, using periods when the child is well to protect against future illness, represents an intelligent approach by parents to the health needs of their children."

In the many areas of Texas served by full-time health services, the past four years have seen the immunizations of pre-school children against diphtheria more than double in number. The influence of the full-time public health services in this matter cannot be considered minor. Diphtheria immunization has been a major public health platform in protecting the health of Texas children. The success of this program is indicated by a health survey based on a cross-section encompassing 145,000 school children in areas with and without public health services.

afford a lot of things. He lent you his car to come up and see me. The car I bought wasn't good enough."

"But, Bill, you know that meant nothing—the car—" She fought off the hysteria which was making her talk too fast, too shrilly. She turned squarely on the seat, lifting her eyes proudly to his. "Look at me, Bill. I have nothing to hide. Nothing! I swear to you, Paul never did a single thing, never said a single thing, he couldn't have done or said if you were there!"

Bill Marshall shook his head, like a man in a daze. "I don't know," he groaned. "I don't know what to think. I've always loved you so. I never dreamed—"

"Oh, darling, darling, there was nothing to dream about!" She put her arms around his neck. "Bill, if I cared for Paul, could I pretend like this with you?"

For a heartbeat, cold fear clutched at her. Was Bill stiffening? His face was drawn. Would he reach up and tear away her clinging arms? Then, with a little relief, she felt his arms tighten. Relief, sharp and unutterable, drove her fear away.

"Bill! Bill, darling!"

"Oh, Martha!" His arms were fierce, glad, suddenly asserting their possession once more. His mouth came down warm against her own. Long and hard, he kissed her. A kiss that went on and on, a kiss that was like a vow, compounded of love and faith renewed and fleeting doubts dispelled.

"Forgive me for even asking—" he begged humbly. "I should have known—it couldn't be true. No! You! Oh, Martha, you're so sweet, so real, how did I dare! But when a man's away from his wife—when you've had nothing but letters and memories—"

She caressed his lean cheek with the palm of her hand. "Hush, darling. Let's never, never speak of it again. Let's forget it ever happened."

BUT it came to her, Sunday night, as she took Bill to his train, that forgetting wasn't so simple a matter as that. For, as they sat together in the quiet station, Bill took her two hands in his. "I want you to promise me something, Martha."

"What is it?"

"I want you to resign from Air Transport. Suzanne was wrong—but one thing she said was true. People are bound to talk. I—I think it'll be better if you don't see Paul again. Martha, promise me you'll stay here with Helen and Eugene. Promise me you'll stay until I get out of the Army."

Will Celebrate 60th Birthday of Youth Move

The week of January 26th to February 2nd will be a busy week for church young people. For during that time they will conduct church services, rallies, and banquets in celebration of the Sixtieth Birthday of Christian Endeavor.

It was February 2, 1881, in a little Congregational Church in Portland, Maine, that Christian Endeavor, which is the forerunner of all church youth work, was organized by Dr. Francis E. Clark. This movement filled a need in the church and answered in a Christian way the cry of young people for action. Within five years of its birth, this organization became worldwide and demonstrated its power to attract young people.

Today this movement claims three to four million members in more than seventy-five thousand societies, in more than eighty religious bodies in almost every nation of Texas join with those of the whole North American Continent in this celebration of Christian Endeavor Week. The climax of the Sixtieth Birthday celebrations will be the International Christian Endeavor Convention in Atlantic City, N. AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT LIBERAL BLOC WINS 8-YEAR FIGHT TO PUT STRESS ON CONSUMPTION

BY BRUCE CATTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—An eight-year-old fight between liberals and conservatives in the Department of Agriculture is ending at last with the liberals winning all along the line.

Symbol of the liberals' victory is the retention of Claude Wickard as secretary of agriculture in the third-term cabinet.

In substance, the victory means a defeat for the AAA group, led by such men as AAA Administrator R. M. Evans and I. W. Dugan, head of AAA's southern division. The victors' leaders are Milo Perkins, head of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation; C. B. Baldwin, chief of the Farm Security Administration; and Howard Tolley, head of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The decision will mean less emphasis on crop restriction and more emphasis on measures to increase consumption—less of the AAA program and more of things like the stamp plan and the farm tenant program.

Several years ago the conservatives triumphed, and there followed the famous "trip-to-Jakarta" in which such men as Jerome Frank and Gardner Jackson were ousted. But events played into the hands of the liberal bloc. The war helped kill the reliance on export markets. The existence today of a 14,000,000-bale cotton carry-over has stimulated the effort to broaden the domestic market. And with President Roosevelt giving his backing to Secretary Wickard in the latter's siding with the liberals, the reversal of the conservatives' victory in the "purge" is about complete.

Two actions by Secretary Wickard recently gave the tip-off on the victory.

One was his public statement urging farmers to raise more hogs to take advantage of rising pork prices. This was heresy to the conservatives in the department, who argued it was simply a means of knocking down pork prices all over again.

Another was Wickard's announcement of a supplemental cotton program, which in effect will give cotton growers cotton stamps rather than cash for making further reductions in cotton acreage—a measure aimed at increasing consumption of cotton goods at the same time that it cuts production of raw cotton, thereby biting into the surplus from both sides.

Under this act, as amended in 1934, the National Mediation Commission has been quietly but effectively helping railroad in a management and railroad labor compose all of their differences around the conference table. Avoiding any interruption to commerce; forbidding any limitation on the workers' right to join or form a labor union, providing for complete independence of both workers and carriers in the matter of self-organization to carry out the purposes of the act; and providing for prompt settlement of all disputes.
