LIBERTY BOOK OF U. S. ENTERS FIGHT ON ISMS

By FRANK McNAUGHTON United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON.—The United States Constitution sequent commission has published a pamphlet that Rep. Sol Bloom, D., Y., director general, called "an educational antidote" to subversive doctrines.

The 900-page book, prepared under Bloom's direction, is the only volume in existence, he said, that has within it all the great liberty documents of the world—the Magna Carta, the Habeas Corpus act, the English and American Bills of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of the Confederation, and finally the Constitution.

Bloom also included in the book George Washington's farewell address, and President James Monroe's 1823 message to Congress establishing the Monroe Doctrine prohibiting European incursions to the Western Hemisphere.

One chapter contains a hitherto-unrevealed story of how the commission, with the help of advertising experts and by searching for two years through historic documents in Philadelphia discovered who engrossed the final copy of the Constitution. It was finally established that the man was Jacob Shallus, an assistant clerk in the Pennsylvania general assembly. He received $30 for his work.

Designed as Factual Record The book, Bloom emphasized, strictly a factual record based on authentic historical documents. It traces the origins of the United States, the formation of the constitution, the ratification by states, the organization of Congress, election of George Washington, formation of the bill of rights and its ratification.

One section includes a cross-section of the contents of the constitution, prepared after more than two years of study, with citations showing all implied or contrary powers contained in the document.

Still other sections contain addresses delivered in memorial services at Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon, and complete proceedings at the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1876. These included addresses by President Roosevelt, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, congressional leaders, and other high government officials.

The book was prepared, Bloom said, "with the most painstaking care and research. It is one place where students can find the undisputed historical facts."

Speaks for America It was our idea to show exactly how the union was formed under the Constitution. When an American knows this, one need worry about his being prodded by his government, nor that he will embrace subversive ideologies.

"We believe it is important to see somewhere together all the great liberty documents of the world. For this reason we put them in here—the Magna Carta, the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution. Because Washington's farewell address and the Monroe Doctrine are cornerstones of American policy, everyone should know their elements, and for that reason we put them in also."

Besides historical material on the founding of the union, the book includes a section on the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to the United States. In another section, which Bloom said was prepared specifically for children, 30 of the best newspaper columns published on the 150th anniversary of the Constitution are included.

The Constitution stands as the foundation on which later generations have built the present structure of our government," President Roosevelt said in a letter to Bloom, printed as the foreword of the book.

The book is sold only through U. S. government printing office.

Retired Soldier Lives at Scene Of Pioneer Activities

By United Press
FORT DAVIS, Tex.—Still alert and interested in how soldiers fight, old one-time U. S. Cavalryman, lives at the site where 60 years ago his company was stationed while helping open up the wild West.

"Right over there is where the reservation was," he tells visitors as he points to a spot just across the highway from his home.

"And what days they were," he said. "When we went out on patrol or scouting trips, we were never sure who was coming back. Soldiers in those days had to be plenty tough and plenty hard."

But it was of the pay nights that Aggermann likes to talk.

"My, but they were something," he exclaimed.

"Saturday evenings once a month in the 1880's were when the soldiers got paid at the post," he recalled.

In front of the quartermaster's door would be a long line of soldiers—troopers in field uniforms which still showed the effects of rough treatment on the trail.

"Near the door would stand a table crowned with gold and silver. Guards, well-armed, would flank both sides of the paymaster," he said. "On the table, the money would be assorted in stacks of 13, 15 and 15 dollars—private's, corporal's, and sergeant's pay."

Aggermann said that most of the soldiers' pay went "one of 14 routes—to those fellows handling luscious whiskey in bottles, jugs, or barrels, with string music for chasers, or to one of the gambling joints."

The post had a large adobe compound where almost any evening would be standing 100 head of horses and mules, freshly curried and newly-shod.

The mules were sick, small and nail hard. They were used to haul the canvas-topped ambulances and coaches through the rocky defiles between here and Van Horn Wells, where the stage ran.

Redistricting State, Mandatory Under Constitution, Has Been Neglected By Legislature for the Last Ten Years

By RICHARD M. MOREHEAD United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Tex., Mar. 14.—Redistricting of Texas senatorial and representative districts is a constitutional mandate, ignored for the past 10 years, that may get serious consideration before the end of the 47th Legislature's regular session.

Those who shout about the legislature's constitutional obligation to provide old age pensions and other social security are being reminded quietly by proponents of re-districting bills of Section 25, Article 3 of the state constitution. It says, in part:

"The Legislature shall, at its first session after the publication of each United States decennial census, apportion the state into senatorial and representative districts."

Texas last was re-districted in 1921, and legislators since 1930 have ignored this command. West, Southwest, and Texas Panhandle members along with those representing urban sections of the state are hoping that the present legislature will attend to the problem.

An El Paso group once considered filing a suit to force the legislature to re-district the state, but were informed that the courts have held that "shall" has the same effect as "may" when addressed to the legislature without providing any penalty.

Three bills for new representative districts and one for new senatorial districts have been introduced in the house.

They retain the total number of senators, 31, and of representatives, 150.

The only bill affecting the senate and one of the bills affecting the house was drawn by Rep. S. J. Isaacks of El Paso, who spent several weeks before the session began preparing his material. Rep. Hop Halsey of Lubbock and Rep. Dewitt Kinard of Fort Arthur have bills that would reform the legislative districts.

In general, the bills reflect a shift of population toward the Rio Grande Valley area of Southwest Texas, toward the Far West, toward the Panhandle, and toward municipal areas.

A constitutional amendment adopted a few years ago limits the number of representatives that any county may have to seven, regardless of its total population. Except for this limitation, the representative districts are supposed to be based entirely upon a population basis and senatorial districts upon the number of qualified voters.

Judge Isaacks' bills, for instance, allows one state representative for approximately each 40,000 population and one senator for each 36,000 qualified voters. Texas' 1940 population was 6,418,321 and the most recent estimate of the number of qualified voters is 1,250,000.

The re-districting must take into consideration the seven-member limitation from any one county. On a straight population basis, Harris County should have 14 representatives. Now it has only five. Dallas County has the largest delegation in the legislature, six representatives, (including one from a floratorial district) and one senator.

Under the proposed bills, the geographical balance of senators

New Hand Grenade Is Like Baseball

FORT DIX, N. J.—Assuming that the average American youth is a baseball player, the army has developed a new type hand grenade that resembles a baseball and weighs only one-quarter of an ounce more.

The grenade is made of light metal or plastic. It will be particularly effective against machine gun nests and similar small targets whose destruction requires accurate pitching. A supplementary detonator causes the grenade to explode if handled after it has been thrown.

Army officials explain that the regulation hand grenade is too heavy and is likely to throw the pitcher's arm out of joint if baseball technique is used.

Great Britain and Germany hurried their most powerful air attacks of the war at each other's shipping and port facilities today and opening of a new war front in the Balkans appeared probable in the near future.

Possibility of a Balkan front was hinted cautiously in the London press with suggestions that the British would demonstrate shortly that they still hold in the initiative in the Mediterranean.

An attack upon the Italian Dodecanese Islands along the Turkish coast between Egypt and Greece also may be in preparation, some sources believed today.

There is still no confirmation or denial of private reports received by the United Press two days ago of landing of a British Expeditionary force in Greece. However an editorial in London indicated that Britain was now committed to major aid for Greece.

The excellently informed and frank speaking British publication, Aeroplane, said the British would be "foolish" to allow Germany to mass men and machines on the Greek frontier without hindrance.

Balkan preparations went forward as both the Royal Air Force and the Nazis brought the weight of their night air attacks to new and unprecedented levels.

The Germans are smashing heavily at Britain's vital port facilities, through which United States aid must pass, and at her shipbuilding capacity, which must furnish ships to beat the submarine blockade.

The British attacks were designed to strike hardest at Germany's North Sea ports. Hamburg got a terrific pounding. Berlin admitted a casualty toll of more than 50 dead at Hamburg and the Nazi high command made one of its rare admissions of Royal Air Force damage to port facilities and factories, although they described the damage as minor.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain underscored the importance of the sea warfare by announcing food shipping missions would go to America to handle "urgent" shipping problems.

The Royal Air Force claimed a big victory over the Italians in Albania, shooting down 14 Italian planes.

Secretary of War Henry Stimson disclosed at a press conference that war materials released for Great Britain had already started abroad. He did not specify the materials involved.

President Roosevelt will speak from the annual dinner for White House correspondents association, and his talk will be carried on all the networks.

Greece, 'Unhappy Orphan of the Storm'

"Greece is without a friend on the Continent," wrote a German newspaper after Bulgaria had yielded and let the grey legions flow down through her territory to the Greek border. "Unhappy orphan of the storm," continued the Teutonic weeper of crocodile tears.

Without a friend on the Continent? Nay, not so. Wherever men are free, and wherever men remember freedom, there Greece has friends. And there are such men on the Continent of Europe, as on all continents.

The number of governments friendly to Greece may be declining. It has been reduced by a round dozen since Hitler began his advance. But to say that Greece is without a friend is not true. Where free hearts beat, there are friends of Greece.

This term, friendship, is a loose word to use in international relations. Friendship is a personal thing. Man may be friend to man, but the relationship between those great organizations of people which we call nations, and other vast masses of people, may be something more or something less, but it is not friendship. To use the word is convenient, but scarcely accurate.

Czechoslovakia revolves in the German orbit, but are the Czechs "friends" of the Germans? Whatever may be the relationship of Poles, Belgians, Dutch, French, Norwegians and Italians, to the Germans, we suspect that it is less than friendship. Are the German and Russian peoples friends? The Japanese and Russian? It seems doubtful.

Perhaps we need a new word to define the relationship between peoples. The bulk of one people feel kindly disposed toward the bulk of another people; they may have joint ambitions and projects; considerations of safety or advantage may draw them together; but friendship is a sacred term which applies to none of these things.

Greece has few allies today, perhaps; there are few armies ready to spring to her assistance or lend a helping hand while she fights so stoutly for her independence. It is entirely beside the point to argue that Greece "favored" Britain rather than Germany; to say she refused to climb aboard the noisy and gaudy bandwagon now lumbering across Europe. She chose to remain Greece, and to fight him who tried to compel her by force.

Greece is no friendless orphan of the Nazi storm. On every continent, including the new Dark Continent of Europe, she has friends in plenty. Not so many government hierarchies, perhaps, but individuals, people, men and women who admire and love her for her courage to fight for her own.

Those, too, are friendships, and they may yet bring a powerful weight to bear in the scales of history.

Cooling Linked As New Utility Of the Future

By Elmer C. Walzer
United Press Financial Editor
NEW YORK—Air conditioning is visualized by scientists as one of the big developments of the future which will receive impetus after the war economy comes to an end.

Dr. Willis H. Carrier, head of Carrier Engineering Corporation, predicts general acceptance of air conditioning which, in the future he believes, will be operated as a public utility with the service—cool and warm air—metered in the manner of metered gas and electricity today.

Manufacturing Company foresees vast possibilities for an air conditioning device—the precipitron. This apparatus, according to the company "electrocutes" grit, bacteria, fungi, and pollen, cleaning the air which enters the home of business.

May Reduce Hay Fever
Air-borne impurities are removed from the air by high electrical charges carried in the fine wires and plates of the precipitron. Electrically cleaned air, it is said, has proved a boon to sufferers of hay fever and asthma. Ragweed pollen, puffball spores and other major irritants are eliminated by the precipitron. Potentialities of the precipitron are viewed as almost unlimited by Westinghouse executives.

Dr. Carrier, who has been in the air conditioning business since 1932, believes wider use of air conditioning will reduce costs sharply and provide a service with greater dependability than is possible with present systems.

"Not only will the buildings be cooled," said Dr. Carrier, "but buildings in the future probably will be provided with arcades which will be enclosed from the street limited to automotive traffic. There will be swathed enclosed crossovers from block to block so that a pedestrian may go from store to store and from block to block without ever subjecting himself to the rigors of winter, the torrid heat of summer days, or the hazards of street traffic.

Health Placed First
"Air cooling will not be overdone. Conditions will be kept reasonably comfortable at considerable economy, but, what is more important, with ideal consideration for health.

"Such improvements which are here envisioned will not come at once but may be confidently predicted as the logical development of the near future in an art which has already done so much for human comfort and efficiency."

Here are a few of the needs of the future for air conditioning as tabulated by The Research Advisory Service of which Bert H. White, vice president of the Liberty Bank of Buffalo, N. Y., is director:

Digest refrigeration without use of gases or moveable parts; economical method of storing winter cold for summer use and vice versa; elimination of drafts in air conditioning; method of using the same apparatus for heating and for cooling; and a means of sterilizing the air in a heating system to free it from bacteria.

Registree Finds He Is 44 And Not 34

By United Press
JEANNETTE, Pa.—A Jeannette man will not be subject to call for selective military service because he is 10 years older than he thought he was when he registered.

The registrant walked into local draft board headquarters and informed officials he had made a "mistake" in stating his age on Oct. 16. The error, he said, was 10 years.

"I am 44 years of age—not 34," he explained. And he had a birth certificate to prove it.

He said he had been an orphan since childhood, and had to check courthouse records to ascertain his actual age.

The local board accepted his story and crossed his name from its rolls.

NYA Boys Building A Childs Clinic In City of McAllen

AUSTIN—Thirty N.Y.A. boys are building the construction this week of a modern Childs Clinic for the City of McAllen, according to J. C. Kellam, state NYA administrator.

for. A waiting room, two examination rooms, one large ward, a minor surgery room, a dental room, and a room for eye, ear, nose, and throat work will make up the Clinic's floor space.

In April, 1940, local civic organizations in cooperation with the National Youth Administration placed into operation the present Clinic, housed in the McAllen City hospital. Since that time tuberculin tests, 44 cases of dentists have given an average of two hours a week of their time without cost to the 2,150 children who have been aided thus far.

The Clinic has performed twelve small-pox vaccinations, 161 typhoid immunizations, 62 diphtheria immunizations, eight Schick tests, 42 Wasserman tests, 36 tuberculin tests, 44 cases of dental treatment, 819 home visits for patients by the clinic nurse, 721 treatments outside of scheduled clinic sessions, and 47 X-rays. With funds provided by the local civic organizations $282 has been spent on medicines which have been dispensed free of charge to those youth who were unable to purchase them.

Citizens of McAllen, realizing the need for such service and the necessity of more space than the City Hospital could provide, subscribed the funds necessary for a building in which complete medical service could be given all youth in the City of McAllen.

Furniture to equip the building will be made by boys in NYA Workshops. Funds for purchasing examination tables, surgical tables, and other equipment will be provided by various women's organizations there.

Thirty young women are assigned to an NYA Hospital Project to assist in the Clinic's operation and maintenance. Besides routine duties these girls receive work experience in health practices, personal hygiene, first aid, child care, and general sick-room care under the supervision of county health officers and health nurses.

"Defense Clinic" Is Planned By a City For Business Men

By United Press
HOUSTON, Tex.—Invitations have been issued to Texas leading business men to attend a "defense clinic" here March 25 to bolster the state's part in the preparedness program.

The joint conference will include members of the Chamber of Commerce, the Texas State Manufacturing Association, and the National Association of Manufacturers.

To work with, they will have a recently completed survey of Texas defense industries.

The invitations were issued by John R. Suman, vice president of Humble Oil and Refining Co., and H. W. Fletcher, vice president of the Hughes Tool Co.

"American industry today is going 'all out' to produce the materials and equipment necessary for national defense," the invitation read. "From the smallest one-man machine shop to the largest factories, American management is offering whole-hearted patriotic cooperation to the defense effort. So that this spirit of national service can be put to fullest use, it is important that all of us know and understand the magnitude of the job that has been undertaken and the role that each must play."

"We are striving... to preserve our American way of life... We can accomplish this goal only if we prepare ourselves to go forward to a higher standard of living when this crisis is over." Suman and Fletcher said emphasis would be placed on business readjustments after the war as well as on plans for the present crisis.

House Members Are Proud Of Venetian Blinds

AUSTIN, Tex.—The Texas House of Representatives is proud of its new venetian blinds. Members who sit in the great hall have for years complained of the glare from south windows when the shades were up, or of the lack of light when the blinds were drawn.

After a recent week-end recess, Speaker Homer Leonard pointed out the improvement.

"—And we bought them at less cost than the venetian blinds in the Senate," Leonard boasted.

Salvaged Material Of Building May Form a New One

AUSTIN, Tex.—One of the 100,000 bricks and other materials of the original administration building of the University of Texas the building may rise again, Phoenix-like.

The salvaged materials have been stored under the university stadium. Talk of reproducing the building as a monument was revived by Texas alumni visiting the campus for the annual March 2 observance of the state's independence day.

The holiday, now observed by banks and all state schools as well as state offices and many businesses, had its origin at the university in 1897. Senior law students on March 1 of that year sent a petition to George Taylor Winston, University president, asking that classes be dismissed the following day.

Winston replied that the only independence day he recognized was July 4. The av students cut their classes, "borrowed" a cannon from the state capitol grounds, took it to the university athletic field and began firing it. The concussion rattled windows in the old main building and disturbed other students who were dutifully at work.

Winston capitulated. He invited the law students to drag the cannon to the lawn in front of the main building so that the entire school might join in the celebration.

University officials say the 100,000 bricks of the old administration building represent the number of Texas graduates—100,000.

Convict Becomes A Script Writer at $160 Per Month

By United Press
WALLA WALLA, Wash. — A convict serving a 15-year sentence in the Washington state prison here is winning recognition as a writer.

He is Ralph Hunter, 29, who is following in the footsteps of Jack London and U. S. Grant, who did their early writing behind bars.

Less than five years ago Hunter slipped up on a "job" and was wounded in the leg by a bullet. He was captured, convicted for assault and robbery and handed two concurrent 10-year minimum sentences in the Washington penitentiary.

Today he is one of America's leading script writers. He dabbles in poetry and has sold a number of short stories, not to mention a prize winning 22,500 word serial which netted $750.

Although his world is bounded by the four gray walls of the prison, Hunter has developed from an inexperienced writer with only slight newspaper experience. He

Army Mule Won't Be Replaced By Modern Machines

PORT BLISS, Tex. — This is a mechanized age, and the U. S. Army is utilizing its share of machine transportation and power.

But motor vehicles will never knock out the tough army mule, attributes his success to the help of a friend "outside." The friend is L. T. Wallace.

Working in a corner of the prison penitentiary, Hunter learned rapidly. During the past 10 months, Hunter's income from his writing has averaged $100 a month. The money is kept for him by relatives, for, as Hunter says, "I like about 500 other fellows, want to get out of here some day."

Hunter started his prison writing career in 1938 when he sold a short story entitled "Farewell by Proxy" to a national magazine. He is hoping now for a pardon. When it comes he plans to continue his writing career.

That's the consensus of military strategists at Fort Bliss, America's largest cavalry post.

Historians at the fort who have done research work on the subject figure the mule started with the army. They base their prediction that the mule will never be entirely supplanted by motor transportation and power on the proved fact that the animal is at its best in rough going.

They point out that mules can't get through heavy mud, climb trackless mountains or go through jungles. The mule can.

Capt. Richard E. Arnold, who is serving his 21st year in the army and who now commands the Fort Bliss mule pack train, only one in America, maintains that the mule represents much of the color and romance of the army.

He is a staunch believer in the mule's value to the army.

Captain Arnold's mule pack train—Troop E—includes 303 animals, 75 men and two officers divided into four platoons.

He and other veterans like to tell of the feats of sturdy mules in the World War and of the times they carried ammunition through to the front in France when trucks stuck in the mud or in shell holes.

Wrong Connection Floods Basement Full of Fuel Oil

By United Press
MUSKEGON, Mich. — Charlie Chin, a Chinese laundryman, thought he smelled a foreign odor as he stepped into the basement, and when he found himself knee-deep in 1,600 gallons of fuel oil, he knew something was wrong.

An investigation revealed that an oil distributor made a mistake in his hose connections during a night delivery and instead of attaching his truck line to a storage tank made connections with a pipe leading to Chin's basement.
