Into the World . . .

Seldom have classes of students been graduated from the halls of Alma Mater "into the world" by so short a step. This generation of students has been "in the world" all the time. Withdrawal into the sheltering arms of Alma Mater has never been truly possible in times like these. Those graduates who go "out into the world" this June haven't far to go.

There is a certain tendency among men of the present mature generation to apologize because the world in which today's students find themselves is less than a perfect world. In many ways it is a malevolent, a savage world. Some students seem to resent this. Some older men seem apologetic about it.

Yet every generation must make its own world. The classes which were being graduated 20 years ago had not had their school days in a world which was exactly all beer and skittles, either.

They made a brave effort to do something about it. Perhaps it is too broad to say that they largely failed. Certainly they did not make a permanent success. They tried, which is all a person, or a generation, can do.

There was a young man in that other war, a young man who didn't relish going into it. In fact, he had been a pacifist. But he went to the war anyway, and he did very well indeed. His name was Alvin York. At the grave of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington the other day he said a significant thing: "What did it get you?" they ask. It got me 23 years of living in America . . . we fought that last war to make America safe for democracy, and we did, for a while. . . . By our victory we won a lease on liberty, not a deed to it. . . . Now Adolf Hitler tells me that lease is expiring. . . . I choose to renew it."

Let's look at it that way. The men of 1917-1918 failed to get a perpetual deed on the old place, and there are leaks in the roof, and other badly needed repairs and alterations. But they didn't get evicted and lose the house; they did get a lease, with privilege of renewal.

It is up to the new generation, if it wants to continue to live in the old house (the best house in the world, we still believe) to renew the lease. Any alterations and repairs you graduates may want to make are up to you. Every generation has remodeled the place considerably, and it's become a better house every time.

What did graduates expect, anyway, on becoming fully participating tenants in the national house? A paid-up deed in perpetuity and plans all ready for commodious alterations?

We welcome this year's graduates to "the world." They have their job before them—the roof to fix, the new wing to build, old and tottering partitions to tear down. They may even have to renew the lease at the same high price that has been paid for it before.

Slight Delay Seen On Grocery Order

COLUMBIA CITY, Ind.—Impatient housewives who fret over a slight delay in the delivery of a grocery order can console themselves with this tale. It is expected that it will take up to four months for Mrs. M. Sunnpaa of Helsinki, Finland, to receive the groceries ordered for her by her son. The order was placed in the Fij Islands, filled in Columbia City, and will be delivered to Helsinki.

Mrs. Sunnpaa's son, a gold mine foreman in Fiji, answered a plea from her by placing an order with his mine superintendent, Roy Reed, whose parents live in Columbia City. "So Reed wrote to his uncles, enclosing $10 draft and suggesting that the length of the delivery would make tinmed goods the safest item. Into the 16-pound package will go, as most necessary, two pounds of coffee, four pounds of sugar, a package of tea, and dried fruits. The shipment will require $2.44 postage, and just in case this order is sunk, another just like it will follow in one month.

Tramp Miner, 95, Won't Live In Past

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—Most people like to look back over things when they reach the age of 95, but not so with Charles C. Shields. While celebrating his 95th birthday anniversary, Shields looked into the future and made the prediction that "I believe I'll live to be 100."

Mr. Shields is Utah's oldest active Mason—the proud holder of Shrine membership card No. 34. The one-time globe-trotter has resided in Utah for 70 years. Mining and prospecting have been the biggest things in his life. At the age of 17 he went to Australia, later returning to the United States, where he worked in boom mining towns of California and Nevada.

In 1874 the Irish born miner-pro prospector went to Wyoming to join his first Masonic lodge. Masonry had no organization in Utah at the time. He has since been instrumental in organizing several lodges throughout the state.

BUSINESS is good in sports as the defense program gets momentum. Golf courses are more crowded than they have been since the crash of 1929 forced clubs to loosen up on membership restrictions.

This stresses a definite shortage of caddies, industries made it simple for them to find more profitable employment. As many as 40,000 persons are expected to see the Open championship over the Colonial course in Fort June 5-6-7.

Despite expansion of plants, manufacturers of rods, and other fishing equipment can't supply the demand. The largest single manufacturer of steel rods is 60,000 in orders.

WHERE the teams are worth watching, the baseball tickle.

The Brooklyn played before 400,000 in their first 24 of the east, 291,081 in 18 at home, despite the fact that no more than 34,000 can be jammed into Ebbets Field.

There was no public sale of reserved seats for the Memorial Day double-header with the Giants at the Polo Grounds where 60,000 can be accommodated.

The country is still crazy about horses. Last season's New York record attendance—42,000—came May 30 at Belmont Park, but the mutual handle afternoon was surpassed by the $1,568,009 wagered there of this year. The total betting for the first 12 days of the year was $11,280,343, a daily average of more than $940,000.

With Eight Thirty, Mieland and Hash colliding with weighed steeds in the $30,000 Suburban Handicap, Belmont cleared the decks for new attendance and betting peaks Memorial Day.

A CROWD of close to 150,000 converged on Indianapolis gas station attendants' Memorial Day picnic—the only major automobile race left in a troubled world. The Burn-of-the-Month Club did well by Joe Louis' selections. Boxing promoters make money when they can get attraction. Professional football owners are so prosperous they gave Layden a fat contract as commissioner.

College football coaches fear players accepting defensive jobs during vacation will find them so good they won't return to school.

This boom is getting serious.

OLD GLORY CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY PRIDE OF NATION FOR 164 YEARS

The shadowy figure of Betsy Ross is shown in the background of the U. S. Marines, displaying our National Flag and their regimental standard. At right are Pine Tree, Grand Union and Rattlesnake flags, used before the Stars and Stripes design was adopted by the Continental Congress, June 14, 1777.

TEXAS will be proud to celebrate Flag Day, June 14, while the Lone Star State has lived under the flags of six governments during the Republic, the Stars and Stripes has been the chief emblem of the state since it entered the Union in 1845. Each year June 14 is remembered as a thoughtful nation as the birthday of Old Glory, beloved emblem of our country for 164 years. Away back in 1777 the Stars and Stripes first waved triumphantly over the land of the brave and the home of the free. The flags of France; Spain; Mexico; Texas, the republic; and the Confederacy have all been emblems of the State at various times. Lone Star Flag was adopted in 1839 and retained at the National emblem until Texas came in to the United States. It then became the State flag and continues as such to this day. It is perpendicular blue bar with the lone star, and the accompanying white and red horizontal bars form a simple yet highly distinctive banner. Equally famous is the Alamo Flag, with its green, white and red perpendicular bars and the year "1824" on its central white bar, indicating an adherence to the constitution of that year. Old Glory had numerous forerunners. In early colonial days, there were scores of flags representing the hopes and aspirations of our forefathers. Some of them bore pine trees, anchors, beavers or rattlesnakes. The Grand Union Flag, sometimes called the Congress Colors, is the immediate ancestor of our flag. It had thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, with a union bearing the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. There is a certain mystery regarding the origin of our flag which has never been solved. Historians fail to agree as to who designed the flag or as to the origin of its chief symbolism, the stars and stripes, although a number of ingenious theories have been advanced. Many persons believe that Betsy Ross, a Philadelphia needlewoman, made the first sample of the Stars and Stripes, but the fate of that original banner is unknown. Soon after it was authorized by Congress the flag was flown at a number of locations, and its popularity was assured. Scores of highlights serve to brighten our flag's history. One of them occurred on February 14, 1778, when it received a salute from the French Fleet in Quiberon Bay, the first salute of the Stars and Stripes from a foreign power. During our war with the Barbary pirates, Lieutenant Presley N. O'Bannon, of the U. S. Marines, hoisted the flag at Derna, Tripoli on April 27, 1805, after the stronghold had been stormed and captured by American blue-jackets and marines. It was the first time the Stars and Stripes had ever flown over a fortress of the Old World. Our flag also served to inspire the writing of our national anthem when Francis Scott Key saw "by the dawn's early light" the Star-Spangled Banner floating over Fort M'Henry on September 14, 1814. From time to time changes in the number of stars and stripes have been authorized and both the flags flown at Tripoli and at Fort M'Henry had fifteen stars and stripes. Yet today, save for forty-eight instead of thirteen stars which now appear in a blue field the flag is much the same as it was 164 years ago. Floating from the lofty pinnacle of American idealism, our flag is a beacon of enduring hope, like the famous Bartholdi Statue of Liberty enlightening the world to the oppressed of all lands. It floats over an assemblage of free people from every racial stock on earth. Old Glory embodies the essence of patriotism. Its spirit is the spirit of the American nation. Its history is the history of the American people. Embellished upon its folds in letters of living light are the names and fame of our Republic who pledged upon its altars their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. Our flag witness to the immense expansion of our national boundaries, the development of our natural resources and the splendid structure of our mutually helpful social system. FOOTSTEPS IN THE FOG BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

YESTERDAY, Bridget reveals that a submarine has been sighted a short distance off the coast. Deborah tries to change the topic of the conversation but even Bridget is a Red brings Stephen's thoughts back to war. His father commanded a sea rider in 1814. The Red rings Deborah upon the door to a stocky man, who addresses Stephen in German. "You should not have come here, Wilhelm," Stephen replies. HATE OR LOVE CHAPTER VIII FOR a moment, as Stephen came forward, Deborah caught her first real glimpse of the man she had only half suspected beneath the boy with whom she had played, an older man, a little hard perhaps a little ruthless. "But it was necessary to come, Excellency," the little man hurried on before Stephen could stop him. "You yourself would have been angry not to know. It is to be earlier than we thought. A fishing boat will slip you out through the fog. The Coast Guard—" "Enough!" Stephen interrupted sternly. "Wait here. We will talk. . . I am sorry." He turned to Deborah, speaking again in English. "He is an old family servant—Wilhelm. I must talk with him, if you will forgive me." "Surely. Ask him to come in." "Thank you; but we shall do very well walking outside." Already he had found his coat in the closet where Bridget had hung it, and was shrugging into it. In those brief sentences he had gone away again—pleasantly, courteously as always, but very finally behind his wall. With crisp finality he stepped out into the night and closed the door. Deborah stood, straining her eyes to follow him through the glass of the door; but a few steps down the walk, his white raincoat and fair head were completely engulfed in the mist. As if an unpleasantly clammy hand had brushed her face, Deborah shivered. . . So it had come then—that time she had always felt must come some day. Confused impressions raced through her memory. "They do sayin' that the crew of a schooner that run in out of the fog tells of sighting' wan of them furin fightin' ships, skulkin' round off the coast," Bridget had said. . . Stephen's startled absorption in the messages the Coast Guard cutters were flashing out. Could he read them? If so, what about that had disturbed him so much? Neutrality Repeal Trottled Out for Preview As Knox and Stimson Send Up Trial Balloons

WASHINGTON—There's a gag going around Washington now about certain members of the cabinet who have limbs growing out of their bedroom walls so that with a minimum of inconvenience they can get out on them. Latest exploit of administration spokesmen who verbally chin themselves and then perch out on the end of the well-known diplomatic limb was the feat of Secretaries Stimson and Knox in coming out for repeal of the neutrality act. That was a shocker, and to say that Washington waited with cocked ear to see if the President would follow up the lead puts it mildly. When or if the neutrality act is ditched or modified, you can bet a hat it will mean that the United States is on the verge of war, for this act has been the foundation of the Hull foreign policy, the one measure which more than anything else has kept loss of American lives and American ships at an absolute minimum thus far. To get the background for this bedrock of American foreign policy, you have to go back to 1935, when the famous arms embargo was passed, following general belief that the powder and cannon hawks were a bunch of well-trouble makers. Statutes dealing with keeping America out of war were amended in 1936 and 1937 but the arms embargo provision was retained. Then in 1939, the administration began to feel that the arms embargo might be dangerous, that the situation in Europe was changing to such an extent that it might be desirable for the United States to export arms, just to help keep it out of war. THE idea first began to take root in January of 1939, but it was the end of May before Secretary of State Hull sent a letter to Senator Pittman and Congressman Sol Bloom, then chairman and acting chairman respectively of congressional committees on foreign relations, recommending repeal of the arms embargo and adoption of a program to keep the country out of war: 1. To prevent American ships from entering combat zones. 2. To restrict travel by Americans in combat areas. 3. To provide transfer of title before goods were exported to belligerents. 4. To contract loans and credits to nations at war. 5. To regulate collection of U. S. funds for belligerents. 6. To continue licensed control of arms export and import. In June, the House passed legislation covering this program, but retained the arms embargo, contrary to Hull's wishes. In July, the Senate decided to do nothing until next session. The President and Hull protested but the Senate adjourned without action. On Sept. 1, Germany invaded Poland. Congress was called to special session on Sept. 11, and on Nov. 4, Congress passed the new program, the neutrality act of 1939, dropping the arms embargo. License-lead passage cut right through the neutrality act. Loans to belligerents by American private capital are still prohibited by the Johnson act, but the granting of a seven billion dollar government loan or gift to Britain so far surpasses anything private capital might do that the Johnson act is in all intents and purposes nullified. THERE the matter stands today. Only one American ship has been sunk, and that was by a mine in Australian waters. The neutrality act, as much as anything except our own unpreparedness, has kept us out of war.

POTATO JUICE PROCESSED Children's Salute Is Scored As Nazi

LONDON.—The Netherlands hopes soon to obtain some of its albumen used in cattle fodder from potato juice, according to Dutch newspaper reports. The potato juice will be separated from waste water from the many potato flour mills in Holland. custom to observe June 14, the anniversary of our flag's adoption, as Flag Day. It is also an opportunity time for all Americans to renew this solemn vow: "I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation, indivisible with Liberty and Justice for all." He told the local legion post that the school children when nearing the end of the pledge extend their arms with the hands held palm upward toward the flag. "It is too easy to turn the palms downward, thus making a Nazi salute of it," he said. Col. Groves admitted he had no suggestion for a new type salute.
