POLITICAL WRITER SAYS ELECTION SYSTEM OF TEXAS NEEDS FIXING

By Harry Bengtson-Crozier

AUSTIN, Texas.—It will always be interesting to speculate about the many votes were lost to Mar-

Diou in the recent senatorial election because "scientific sampling" the chemurgizing in Texas at that time counted him out before the day of polling. You can speculate place. Get into too about the effect of the scientific sampling on Jerry's vote. But there is no need speculate on the fact that two dozen of other candidates missed less than a splinter of the all block of votes. It isn't even plain that a man's family will go for him when he isn't going anywhere in an election.

This bringing of public opinion to the laboratory for scrutiny to reduce it to a definitely known quantity is fascinating. It may be helpful even in the guiding of a state's and a nation's politics. But it contributes nothing at all but a high hurdle to a runner-up in a state election. If not men right evil it is scarcely good citizenship.

There are a good many things wrong with the Texas election system. It needs a good going over. Perhaps the legislature would do well to hold a special session devoted to just two purposes: the chemurgizing of the primary election code and the redistricting of the state for law makers. If the public opinion poll works intelligently in its present form it could be put to good service in a new and revised edition. Why not provide for legislative sanction of scientific sampling of public opinion before a primary starts. One of the practical things that encourages an individual person to be the first to discover his own tremendous dozen years in Texas men have come practically out of the mud work to run for office and to lead up a tremendous vote that impeded them as politically important. Under a system that put the vote before instead of after the election there would be fewer "dark horses" but more better horses.

It is a literal truth that in the

more whole horses. The old convention scheme is being done in Texas. It would be a more shameful contrivance in a century ago when it was a third of a century ago when it rumbles down the Texas road now is as shameless as its works and as great a reaction on the people.

It would be mighty wholesome public opinion would turn out being the corpse in a dictating laboratory and just for a change take on the habiliments of the surgeon and do a little operating on its own account for good of Texas.

More Indians Will Get Wealth In Oil

By United Press
APACHE, Okla.—Another large group of Oklahoma Indians have suddenly become wealthy with the discovery of a new oil field in this southwestern Oklahoma.

They have found many plains Indian families in the money. Most of them are members of the Apache, Kiowa and Comanche tribes.

A majority are considered restricted Indians. This means that they are prohibited from disposing of their land without permission from the Federal government.

The first flow of money into the Indian communities has been money. Royalties on oil production will follow if the field does not disappoint oil company officials.

ORE SLEUTHING GIVES DEFENSE VITAL METALS

By H. R. TATARIAN

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—U. S. Bureau of Mines officials report that a corps of 500 technicians and engineers is making "unhoped for" progress in the nationwide search for new sources of strategic metals and minerals needed in defense production.

In less than two years of exploratory work, they said, the experts not only have made detailed surveys of known mineral reserves but have discovered as well numerous new deposits of some of the most essential metals for the defense program.

Much of the exploratory work has dealt with deposits of antimony, chrome, manganese, mercury, nickel, tin and tungsten found chiefly in Arizona, Arkansas, California, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia and Washington.

Officials emphasized that the chief purpose of the nationwide study was to grade known metal reserves so plans for processing subcommercial grade ores could be made in advance of more pressing needs.

Surprising Discoveries Made
But in several instances the work of the engineers was marked by the discovery of unsuspected ore deposits.

One of the most important of the chance discoveries was made in the Yellow Pine District of Central Idaho, where an extensive deposit of scheelite of high commercial value was found in the course of testing low-grade antimony.

Scheelite is a source of tungsten, so important a metal in defense that it has been placed under full priority control by the Office of Production Management.

Tungsten-content steel is used almost exclusively in construction of machine tools because it retains its cutting qualities under extreme temperatures.

The survey of the low-grade antimony in the Idaho field was taken solely as a means of determining the amount available, but in its midst the engineers discovered one strata containing more than 50 per cent metallic antimony—more than valuable enough for ordinary commercial use.

Antimony is needed in making bearings and in hardening the lead in bullets and high caliber rifle shells.

Trucks Are Needed To Haul Vegetables

MINERAL WELLS, July 8.—A call for trucks to handle fruit and vegetables in this area was issued by the Chamber of Commerce in Mineral Wells, Monday.

Paul Ord, manager of the organization stated that fruit and vegetables were going to waste for the lack of buyers and trucks to take the products to market.

The building of Camp Wolters here and other defense projects in the South have called into service most available trucks, and men who formerly handled the fruit, vegetable, and watermelon crops here are now using their trucks in construction work, Ord stated.

Local growers have expressed the belief that a sufficient number of trucks are available to handle the crops, if they knew of the shortage of transportation in this area; and growers have requested the Chamber of Commerce to aid in publicizing the truck shortage.

A bumper crop of vegetables, peaches and watermelons are now ready for a receptive market, growers reported.

Town Rations Water To Aid In Defense

By United Press
SELLERSVILLE, Pa.—A system of rationing water has been put into effect in Sellersville so that a factory making defense products can have a sufficient water supply.

A prolonged drought caused the borough's water supply basin to recede nearly 2 feet in a month. Household use of water was restricted so that the U. S. Guarco Co., could obtain the 235,000 gallons it needs daily. The company makes gauges for airplanes, submarines and ships.

Alameda Club Will Meet Next Thursday

Representative Of Air Line Visits In Ranger On Monday

Representing Southwest Feeder Airlines, Inc., W. H. McPhail visited Ranger Monday and met with representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and various members of the business firms of this city.

McPhail explained the proposed operation of this new feeder airline and answered questions regarding the service that this air transportation would bring to the business interests and population of this community.

Southwest Feeder Airlines has at present an application for a Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity before the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington to operate a system of feeder airline routes to carry mail passengers and property.

Such a feeder operation will bring direct air service to the local communities and will connect them with various terminal points which are already served by the larger trunk lines spanning the country.

McPhail explained that his company would operate passenger air travel at a rate of less than 4c per mile, which puts air travel well within the average income.

With this faster mail and express service, direct communication and shipping transportation is greatly speeded up, with the natural accompaniment of increased efficiency and saving in business transactions.

This city has been included as a point on the proposed system. McPhail pointed out that his company desired the cooperation of all the interests here in securing this airline transportation for Ranger. In preparing its case before the Civil Aeronautics Board, Southwest Feeder Airlines regards it as pertinent to include all specific information and data concerning the business interests and economic characteristics of this locality.

This information is being compiled by the Chamber of Commerce.

The economic need for such improved transportation must be established beyond the possibility of doubt, and Southwest Feeder Airlines invites all business firms and interested parties to consider what direct air service to all points in the nation will mean to them, and how they can most benefit from the service it proposes to extend to them.

Those interested in bringing the proposed service to Ranger, or who have contributing economic data, should contact the Chamber of Commerce or address Southwest Feeder Airlines, Inc., Sinclair Building, Fort Worth, Texas.

TWO CHARGES OF INTENT TO MURDER FILED

Charges of assault with intent to murder were being filed Monday by District Attorney Earl Conner against two men following an altercation at the Eastland airport Sunday. The parties charged, Justice of the Peace E. E. Wood stated, were in the act of making bond which was set at $2,000 each.

According to information furnished the officers by witnesses, two Fort Worth men, one of them piloting his own plane, and the other—his instructor—who came along for the trip, landed at the Eastland airport before noon Sunday morning.

The owner of the plane left the airport and came to town, returning later with some friends whom he was going to take up for a ride. Up in the air about 1,000 feet the engine began to sputter and it was determined that the gasoline tank was empty.

The pilot who had been flying only a few weeks, was forced to make a landing, which he did without mishap.

Then he and the instructor set out to find out what had become of the gasoline, their search took them to a residence where the family that lives there was away. They found two men hiding in the house, who, when accused of stealing the gasoline, one of them admitted the theft and offered to pay for it. The plane owner refused the offer and said, "I am going to take you to the officers."

At this a fight started and the men in the house produced guns, one a shotgun and the other a rifle. In the final outcome the two were overpowered, their guns taken away from them and they were brought to Eastland and turned over to the officers.

The entire affair will be turned over to the grand jury, which is now in recess, for investigation, District Attorney Conner, said.

Arsenal Is Alert For Saboteurs

By United Press
RAVENNA, O.—Army officers have announced plans to photograph and fingerprint 14,000 employees at the government's $29,000,000 arsenal as a precaution against saboteurs and spies.

"Criminals beware!" was the terse comment from Col. R. S. Chavin, arsenal commanding officer, as he announced the anti-sabotage precautions.

"A complete photographic and fingerprint record will be made and checked at Washington in the case of every employee," Col. Chavin said. "We are primarily concerned with safeguards against espionage and sabotage."

More than 7,000 laborers at the arsenal had been dismissed May 21 by the Hunkin-Conkey Co., contractors building the sprawling shell-loading project, after some 5,000 of their number staged a "wildcat" strike to enforce wage increase demands.

Most of the men were rehired and work was resumed with settlement of the strike after the arsenal's 14,000 employees were idle for five days.

Col. Chavin made no comment on the GIO organizing activity, but restated the company and government policy:

"Any employee who takes any step to cause a stoppage of work or to delay completion of the project will be summarily dismissed."

GERMANS ADMIT BLITZ HAS BOGGED DOWN ON THE RUSSIAN BORDER

Janesapippin

Adolf Hitler's Russian blitzkrieg had bogged down today, before the withering fire of the Russian Red Army, which is conducting a strategic counter-attack along most of the long, 1,200 mile front.

The German communique admitted that the Nazi troops had made but few advances and said that only on the Southern sector, or Bessarabian Front, were the troops denting the Stalin Line defenses.

The official German News Agency, DNB, claimed that the Russian resistance west of the Dniester River had been beaten down, while Budapest claimed that the river had been crossed by Axis forces.

Despite the estimated high losses, Moscow indicated that the Nazis are striking with fresh power on the Lepel Sector of the Central Front. German attempts to head uproad to Moscow and Leningrad were repulsed today by Red Army counter attacks, the Moscow communique claimed today.

Both sides emphasized fierce fighting with the outcome apparently dependent upon ability to bring more and more reserves into the conflict.

German advances on the Bessarabian Front, with the cooperation of Rumanian and Hungarian troops, is partly discounted by the fighting further north on the main Ukrainian Sector, defending Kiev.

Great Britain's Royal Air Force pounded the German war industries and other targets as never before in day and night raids, following up a record-breaking night bombing attack on eight German cities. The Royal Air Force sent its biggest daylight force of bombers and fighters roaring over enemy territory again today.

The British suffered heavier air losses, totaling 15 planes, last night and today. The Germans claimed that they had downed 28 British planes in the last 24 hours. The higher number of losses indicated an increasing British striking force or it might have meant that the German air strength was being pulled back from the Russian front in an attempt to cope with the increasing air blows Britain has been dealing upon the industrial sections of Germany.

GERMANY HAD PLANNED BASE UPON ICELAND

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8.—President Roosevelt took over military protection of Iceland yesterday, after a report reached him that the German general staff was considering attacking the island to obtain a base from which to control the North Atlantic shipping lanes, a usually well-informed source disclosed today.

United States naval forces are gradually supplanting the British garrison defending the independent island republic, which is but 180 miles from Greenland, 800 miles from the Norwegian wing of Germany's war front, and 2,500 miles from New York.

It had been reliably reported that Germany planned to seize the island, which the British have occupied since shortly after the fall of Denmark in the late spring of 1940, and to convert it into a naval base from which German raiders and submarines could prey upon shipping from the North American continent enroute to Britain.

It is over these waterways that a majority of the war materials now being sent to Britain travel, and control of Iceland would give Germany a firm grip on the northern trade routes between the United States and Great Britain.

Youth for Defense

The armed forces of the United States are being given a dip in the fountain of youth.

No longer will it be policy to induct into the services doddering oldsters from 28 to 36, to say nothing of 45. The Army, the Navy, the Air Corps need youth.

Modern war demands that, just as war has always demanded it. The quick reflex, the lasting stamina—those are youth's, and youth's alone. Further, today's training in the United States is for future emergency—how far in the future, no man knows. The younger the trainee, the longer his experience remains of value to the nation.

Every generation must make its own world. It is the young who have the greatest stake in what kind of a world it shall be, for it is they who must live longest in it.

Thus, while it seems shameful in a way that they should have to face the chance of being cut down in war before they have had a chance to probe deeply into the world's beauties (and its ugliness) it is also they who hold the long stake.

Some have argued that it is older men who should be sent out to the wars, since they have already drunk deeply at life's fountains and have so much less to lose. But it is by that very token that they cannot be entrusted with the future. To Marshal Petain, stumbling down the last remaining years of life, it makes less difference that France is only a painful and perverted stump of a nation, with nothing free and good to which it can look forward. A few years of tolerable comfort is all such a one is apt to ask.

That is not good enough for those who have a full life to live out. To exist as an atom of that death in life which is all any totalitarian country can offer, is not good enough. Freedom was made for youth, and it is fitting that youth should be called upon to defend its own.

In Germany, even the Nazi horror sprang from the ranks of youth. This was possible only in a youth already denied hope by economic collapse and political confusion. The only power in the world able to halt the drive of desperation born in German youth 20 years ago is the power of other youth that is yet free, activated not by despair and hatred, but by creative vision and hope.

SERIAL STORY

ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE

BY DONNA ASHWORTH

YESTERDAY: A dance at the Farmington Country Club is an event for Ann. She has a grand time with Ken, meets new friends. Late in the evening a crowd arrives from Richmond. An elderly man sees Ann, rushes toward her, calling her "Jean."

MARSHALL'S DAUGHTER

CHAPTER VIII

IT was the morning after the spring opening of the Country Club. Ann and Sally sat eating a late breakfast.

"It was too exciting, Sally," Ann was bubbling as she sat drinking her coffee, looking much like a little girl in her crisp blue souse dress, a blue ribbon around her head.

"Exciting! I'd say," Sally exclaimed with eager eyes. "Give me the details."

"Well, those people came in. I didn't know who they were, of course, and when we went into the ballroom, this man rushed toward me as we stood in the doorway. He is terribly good-looking. I can hardly wait for him to get here."

"He's handsome, with some gray in his hair, just like I used to dream my father would look, and he dashed over to me, calling me Jean. You know that was my mother's name, so they said at the home, and the note that she left was signed that way. And there he was, telling me I was her image, asking me if he were crazy, seeing a ghost."

"I told him I was Jean Ann Marshall, so what, and he says he's my father."

"Was everybody impressed? The Marshalls, it seems, have everything and always have had, and I gathered from the conversation that Father—doesn't that sound nice—was a sort of black sheep, went to New York and fell violently in love with my mother, who was a chorus girl. He married her, and when he brought her down here, his family were so snooty that she ran away. His mother must have been like Ken's mother, I guess."

Ann's words tumbled out, as she hurried through her story.

"Mother was going to have me, but didn't tell them, she hated them so, and her husband, too, for not making them take her in, or something, and when I was born, she didn't tell them until long afterward. She wrote Father a letter telling him that she had a daughter whom she had named Jean Ann Marshall, but that he would never find her."

"He never saw my mother again and he had no way of tracing the child, so she had a complete revenge for everything. He married again, later, and has two sons. The second wife is dead now.

"You ought to marry him, Sally. Wouldn't that be nice? You could be my stepmother, and you wouldn't have to work any more. I'll see what I can do. And he's coming. There's the bell now. Oh . . ."

SHE was on her feet, hurrying out, returning in a moment accompanied by a stranger.

"You're as beautiful in the daylight as you are at night," John Marshall said as he walked beside her. "My dear, I can't believe it is all true, but there isn't any question in my mind."

"It doesn't seem possible," answered Ann, her voice shaking a little. "Yes, she would like this man for a father, or for a friend. You don't know what it means to always want a family and never have one. It's just too wonderful."

"And this is Sally. She's pretending to be my aunt, though she isn't, and you mustn't ever tell anybody the difference. Sally will have to be on my mother's side—I've been most indefinite up to now, but now that the family tree has branches on one side, I'll have to begin to grow them on the other. But Sally is a piece of background I never had, and the finest person in the world, Sally, this is Mr. John Marshall, my father. I hope it is true that I can say that."

"I know it is true," John Marshall said. "I have talked to the people at the orphanage in New York. Everything tallies, even to the time that your mother wrote me, the name and all."

John Marshall sat down, but he couldn't keep his eyes off Ann. He drank the coffee which Sally served him, but all the time he was staring at his new-found daughter. "You're the image of your mother. I thought she was the most beautiful woman in the world. . . . Now I've found you. What are you doing down here? I was too excited to ask last night."

"The same thing my mother did, getting ready to marry a man out of my social level," Ann admitted. "I'm going to marry Ken Richards in June. I wanted to meet his friends, get acquainted."

"So I'm here, trying to be a lady, so that Ken's mother will accept me, that's the main idea. She laughed a little. "I'm telling you all my secrets, but they must not be told in Farmington. Ken made me promise that."

"He didn't have the courage that you had in bringing my mother to your home 25 years ago, is afraid of his mother and people here, so we're playing game of pretend for them. I don't know about that past, gone."

"But it will be all right. You're my daughter, and does count here, as well as Richmond. You'll come over of course, you and Sally? boys are never home."

"The house needs a woman, it, too, though I am well taken care of. Aunt Mimi, the colored housekeeper, has there for years and years, looks after everything, but would be much nicer if you were there."

"Richmond," Ann spoke drily. "Things are just too exciting. I can't get used to it. I think I'd better stay here. I'm going to marry Ken so and I want to see him as often as I can. But we can come and forth. Sally and I will it."

"Now I'm really Ann Marshall who has a family, a father, brothers and probably aunts and cousins. If only you knew I've dreamed of that." Her eyes were shining.

"Last night it happened like I'd dreamed it would, it was much more wonderful cause—she met the eyes of a man beside her—you're so nice, and like I'd dreamed father would be, too. . . ."

"ANN, darling!" The front slammed. There was sound of hurrying feet and Richards came dashing to the house.

"Isn't it great? Good morning, Mr. Marshall. Hello, Sally, everybody in town is talking you. I'll bet Mother has a dozen telephone calls. And excited. There isn't anybody she thinks as highly of as does of the Marshalls. . . ."

Ann looked at him through that were suddenly a little and there was something a mocking about the set of her mouth. "My name was Marshall fore . . ."

"It isn't just the name, honey; it's your being John Marshall's daughter. . . . It makes really somebody."

"I'm just the same person I was yesterday," Ann smiled lightly. "Except I'm happier."

"But you don't understand. Mother has decided to accept She wants you to come to deposits in Oregon and Montana assured the bureau that the nation's reserve of this metal, needed in making durable and rustless alloys, was far greater than previously realized. The engineers reported that great supplies of manganese, indispensable in smelting iron ore, were found in Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Arkansas, California, New Mexico, Washington, Montana and Colorado. Most of the deposits, they said, were far below commercial grade, but could be used in event regular sources are depleted. Surface exploration in the Bottle Creek district of Nevada resulted in the discovery of a mercury deposit of commercial grade. The bureau said work was under way on mercury properties at Coso Hot Springs, Cal., and in Pike county, Ark., although in neither place were operations considered sufficiently advanced to permit conclusions. Mercury Uses Vital Mercury is essential in preparation of medicines and in making a special type of poisonous paint for ship bottoms which keeps the barnacle menace at a minimum. The bureau reported it was currently exploring deposits in Montana and on Yakobi Island, Alaska, for traces of nickel, essential in making marine boilers, armor plate and rustless marine instruments. Nickel also is under full priority control. Considerable effort also is being made in exploration for tin, a metal almost non-existent in the United States but needed greatly for construction of bearings for high-speed machines and in making of metal cans for food storage. The experts said exploratory work was in progress on a tin deposit near Spokane, Wash.

Planning to Win the War After the War, Group Looks at Defense Let Down Problems

WASHINGTON—One imp that probably preys on people's minds more than the concern over what's going to happen to the United States in this war, is the worry of what's going to become of us after the darn thing is over. Even fleeting contemplation of the economic disaster which will follow the next armistice—God speed it—can give you a case of Grade-A howling lueby-juebies if you let it. National debt of $100 billion, defense industries stopped cold, millions thrown out of work, Europe starving. For whatever consolation it gives you, therefore, it can be mentioned that this idea has occurred to a few people in Washington, and they're interested in doing something about it. First steps in this direction were taken when a sub-committee of four congressmen met to consider a couple of resolutions introduced by Rep. Jerry Voorhis of San Dimas, Calif., calling for the establishment of a Post-Emergency Economic Advisory Commission, or a National Commission on Unemployment and Present and Post-War Economic Adjustment, or something. Anyway, the idea is to get going on a study of this problem right now.

You might think that consideration of this problem would draw a big crowd in Washington, or anywhere. But not more than 20 people turned up for the hearings. Maybe, after all, nobody cares what happens to the country after the war is over. But a couple of rather important witnesses didn't think so. There was W. L. Batt, a director of OPM's production division and one of the two or three swingmen, all-out defenders among the dollar-a-year men in Washington. Even the New Dealers say Batt is good and industrialists swear by, not at him. The conservative Brookings Institution of independent, economic researchers in Washington sent over their brilliant Meyer Jacobstein to give evidence something of this kind is necessary now, to co-ordinate all the thinking, to set up a research staff, to get some plan worked out in advance to "win the war after the war." THE impressive thing about the way Voorhis, Batt and Jacobstein look at the problem is that they realize post-war recovery cannot be any leaf-raking, boondoggling, shot-in-the-arm relief program. If Voorhis can get his commission organized with some high caliber talent, capable of seeing beyond a portfolio of WPA projects, capable of turning productive instead of non-productive labor as a solution for national ailments, his work can go down as one of the really important contributions to modern times. If it does the job right, it can sell the country on the idea that everything isn't as hopeless as some people think it is. Batt is practically lyrical on the subject. "If we tackle this problem of post-war demobilization of industry and manpower with an energy comparable to that which we are now devoting to the opposite process," he says, "we can build an economy and a standard of living the likes of which the world has never dreamed. We can, in the process, lay the groundwork for an industrial system... based on a price structure designed to reach a vast reservoir of potential consumers that have in the past been able to afford only the basic necessities of life."

Most of the farmers have their grain threshed. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. McGough and daughter Glen, of West Texas, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Nabors of this community. W. W. Terry, who is in the City-County Hospital in Ranger, is not improving much. Mrs. Jack Mace and daughter, Norma Ann of Brownwood are visiting her mother, Mrs. W. W. Terry. Mr. and Mrs. Bud Fox have had Mrs. Fox's two sisters of Carbon as their visitors this week. George Fox and family of Olden visited his mother, Mrs. W. U. Fox, Friday night. The following were visitors in the W. W. Terry home Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Harley Terry, and daughters of Dickens, Mrs. Ellen Richardson of Ranger, and Mrs. Ada Jones of Eastland. Rita Jones spent Monday night and Tuesday with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Jones of Eastland. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Alford have finished working on their house and have moved home. Norma Jean Lullen of Ranger has been visiting Jean and Ruby Fox. Rozell Fox visited Juanita Fox Tuesday. Mrs. Josie Gullet and Mrs. Jack Gullet of Kermit visited Mrs. W. U. Fox last Friday. Several from this community have been attending the Church of God revival at Olden. Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Woods are having their house painted this week. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Canet were shopping in Eastland Saturday.

OUR DEMOCRACY by Mat

HOME-LOVING PEOPLE ARE FREEDOM-LOVING PEOPLE. DICTATORS KNOW THIS, SO THEY TAKE LITTLE CHILDREN OUT OF THEIR HOMES FOR TRAINING BY THE STATE, AND THEY TEAR DOWN THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE AND MOTHERHOOD.

HOME-LOVING AND FREEDOM-LOVING HAVE AN EVER BROADENING BASE IN OUR DEMOCRACY, FOR THE NUMBER OF FAMILY UNITS PER THOUSAND OF POPULATION HAS INCREASED 15% IN 20 YEARS.

DURING THIS PERIOD HOME OWNERSHIP INCREASED BY 32%, SAVINGS BY 69%, AND EACH FAMILY HAS ON THE AVERAGE 200% MORE LIFE INSURANCE THAN 20 YEARS AGO.

Stutterer Says Its Just a Habit

Education, said that the habit soon becomes so tied up with a person's personality that he can go through life with the speech impediment. There is no "certain age," he said, when a child will want to quit stuttering. Parker, who overcame his speech defect by speaking with a pebble in his mouth as the great Greek orator Demosthenes once did, said that a child could be taught not to stutter within two or three weeks. However, he added, if it is not kept under careful watch it will sneak off and stutter, just as one will sneak off to smoke. He added that inability to read correctly was a principal cause for defects in speech. "Perfectly intelligent children and adults are failing to keep up with this fast age," he said, "simply because of poor reading ability which usually has no relation to lack of intelligence." Parker said we all are inclined to talk, eat, sleep, walk and read just as we were taught as children. Since the world of the adult is much faster than that of the child the adult who has not progressed with age finds himself far behind in everything—including reading—which leads to slow and improper speech. He said his institute uses a metronoscope in correcting reading faults. The machine, developed during Parker's active research in the field of speech correction, can train a child's eyes to read properly and rhythmically and thereby aid his speech. Parker said that with the

Recent Bride Complimented

Mrs. Eugene Kribbs, the former Miss Mildred Fern Mitchell, who was recently married, was complimented Monday evening when a group of friends entertained with a bridal shower at the home of Mrs. Colonel Brashier from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock. Hostesses besides Mrs. Brashier were: Misses Twyman Hale, Bob Hodges, Fulton Brashier, J. M. Robinson, Chester Rogers, R. H. McKelvin and Miss Avis McKelvin.

Guests were received by Misses Hale, Brashier and Kribbs who ushered them into the reception room of daisies. Misses Floyd Killingsworth and Malcome Stone presided at the refreshments table which was appointed with crystal and lighted with white tapers in crystal holders. An arrangement of daisies formed the centerpiece. Mrs. Phillip Kribbs was in charge of the bride's book and Mrs. R. V. Robinson, sister of the bride, assisted the honored guest with the gifts.

During the evening about 100 guests called and presented the bride with a shower of lovely gifts.

Ladies Bible Class Meets

The regular meeting of the Ladies Bible Class of the Church of Christ was held at the church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A prayer offered by Mrs. G. C. Love opened the meeting and a song service was led by Miss Zelma Ray Henry of Monahan. The lesson taken from the book of Galatians was taught by Mrs. E. F. Ivey. At the close of the lesson a collection for the needy was taken and arrangements to present a Bible to a family. Visits to the sick and shut-ins were made following the meeting.

W. M. U. Has Business Meeting

The monthly business meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union of the First Baptist Church was held at the church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock with the president, Mrs. Bob Hodges, presiding. Following the business meeting Mrs. David M. Phillips gave a thorough discussion of three chapters from Isaiah. The closing prayer was offered by Mrs. T. J. Anderson.

W. S. C. S. Has Business Meeting

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of the First Methodist Church held its regular monthly business meeting Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the church.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. I. N. Griffin, Mrs. A. J. Ratliff, treasurer, presided over the meeting. Routine business was transacted and reports were made by the following secretaries: Misses C. E. May, Ratliff, George Nicholson and J. T. Killingsworth. It was announced at the meeting that the society will entertain with a picnic Wednesday evening at 5:30 o'clock at the Willows for the Junior Orchestra and choir.

H. G. ADAMS PURCHASES THE SIG'S NU-WAY STORE, TAKES OVER MANAGEMENT TUESDAY

Horace G. Adams, one of the most experienced grocers in Ranger, has purchased Sig's Nu-Way Store from Sig Faircloth, and assumed management of his new business this morning.

Adams, who went into the grocery business in Ranger 21 years ago, and who has been continuously engaged in all capacities, stated today that he intended to carry on the business as it had been handled in the past and he hoped that the old customers of the store would continue their patronage.

Faircloth is to devote his time to the livestock business in the future, and he, too, asked that the people give the new manager and owner of the store the same consideration and patronage that they had given him in the past. In retiring from the grocery business he thanked all for the business he has received in the past.

It was stated today that Adams would continue to operate the meat market, which is in the rear of the store, until he can secure a good, dependable butcher, after which he will work throughout the store, both as manager of the business and in assisting the customers in making their purchases.

For the time being no major changes are to be made in the building or fixtures, though the stock is to be built up until it is as complete as can be found in this part of the country, Adams stated today, and it is possible that other changes may be made from time to time as the need arises.

In announcing the purchase it was stated that the entire stock of both the grocery and market were included in the transaction, as well as the stock and fixtures of the grocery store.

Adams today invited both the regular customers of the store and many who have been his customers in the past, to visit him and his new store, where they will be assured a hearty welcome, whether they come as customers or as visitors.

The name of the store is to be changed, with the change of ownership, but it has not been decided, as yet, by what name it will be known in the future.
