British Commandos Raid Normandy Coast

SEN. CONNALLY AGAIN SEEKS STRIKE CURB

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Believing that the real spirit of the mass of American labor ought to be "Defense and not Defiance," and believing that the time has come when the Senate and House must decide who is running the country, John L. Lewis or the congress and the president, Senator Tom Connally last week introduced legislation to assist the President in stopping strikes affecting the national defense.

The bill represents a continuation of Senator Connally's effort to bring a halt to strikes slowing down the country's production of defense material; in June the senate adopted the Connally amendment authorizing the president to take over plants halted by strikes, but the amendment was knocked out by the house of representatives.

Connally requested that his bill go to the judiciary committee, of which he is a member, where hearings on the bill already have begun. The Texas senior senator was named chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the legislation.

The bill provides that whenever plants, facilities, or mines are impeded or hindered by labor difficulties or strikes the president shall have authority to take them over. It further provides that when the government exercises such power the labor conditions, excepting wages, shall be frozen; a labor board would be set up to see if the workers receive a fair wage for their work in plants operated by the government.

Provisions are already on the law books for the government to take over when employers refuse to operate their plants for our national defense.

In introducing the bill, Senator Connally stated to the senate, "I do not believe that the great mass of the laboring men of the United States sympathize with the effort to use the strike as a weapon against the government in this critical hour of the nation's history, at a time when other men are being called to training camps at $21 per month."

The decedent was born Oct. 10, 1858, and had lived in the Tudor community nearly all his life.

TANK BATTLE IN LIBYA IS STILL STIFF

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 25.—British mechanized spearheads slashed more than 200 miles across the Libyan Desert and captured Augila, it was disclosed officially today, as infantry and artillery reinforcements arrived at Sidi Khezah battle fronts to bolster the battered and almost exhausted tank columns near Tobruk.

The tank battle near Sidi Relegh is "lessening in intensity" the spokesman said, as a result of heavy losses on both sides, but the British reinforcements—mechanized infantry and artillery—are smashing forward to hold the ground already taken in an attempt to seal the doom of the Germans.

Some of the main Axis supply bases for armored columns already have been seized and it is believed the advance of British reinforcements might decide the battle as the enemy tanks become immobilized, due to lack of fuel and repair facilities.

ONLY ONE MAN WAS WOUNDED IN ENCOUNTER

Is First Continental Raid Officially Acknowledged By The British

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Britain's Commandos, the tough, black-uniformed "phantom troops," made a daring hit-and-run raid on the Normandy coast of France Sunday night and Monday morning, it was disclosed officially today.

The Commandos, organized to reconquer the German defenses and cause as much havoc as possible and to destroy as much of the German defenses as they can on their raids, were reported to have gotten ashore, completed their mission and returned. The only casualty reported was one man being shot in the arm by machine gun bullets.

As the Ministry of Information was announcing the raid, Admiral Roger Keyes said in the House of Commons that they were eager and ready to act as long as a year ago, when, he said, they might have altered the course of the war.

Admiral Keyes stated that he had started training the men 15 months ago, after the fall of France.

Farmers Are Urged to Repair Machines During Dull Season

A campaign to get Eastland county farmers to get their farm machinery in shape now for producing next year's crops is being waged by the County USDA Defense Board under the leadership of R. R. The plan suggested is for each farmer to check all machinery now to determine what repair parts will be needed, buy or place orders for these repair parts not later than January 1, 1942, and repair all broken parts that can possibly be repaired.

Advertising Enlists for Service

Without advertising, a free competitive economy could not exist. Without advertising, the chances are that the United States would never have become what it is today—the country which has produced and distributed more goods among its people than any other country on the face of the earth.

Hence it is reassuring that Leon Henderson, price administrator of the OPM, has laid down in very definite terms his own feeling on the place of advertising in the defense effort and the present situation in general. It has been freely rumored that Henderson was antipathetic to advertising, though he always denied it, and that some sort of restrictions might be laid down to govern its use.

Henderson in a speech at Hot Springs Va., to a group of advertising men, not only reiterated his previous denials, but laid down some eminently sensible principles.

Advertising, he is reported as saying, is the cheapest and most effective means of distributing goods, and in an expanding economy there is a place for even more of the right kind of advertising than at present. Further, advertising, the total of which equals only two percent of the value of all manufactured goods, has not even been considered as a major cost factor in the fixing of price ceilings. Except in some particular case, in which an industry might claim increased advertising costs as a reason for raising price increases, the OPM inclines to leave the decision of when and how much to advertise entirely to the advertiser.

Further, he indicated, when peace comes again, and the problem of turning defense production back to civilian uses becomes paramount, advertising will have an even greater job to do in moving the goods whose production in peacetime factories will give work. Even now, the market for certain consumer goods, like cotton, which do not conflict with defense, has not approached saturation, and advertising has its job to do.

These are sensible points of view, and everyone who is familiar with the facts of the production and consumption of goods in a free economy knows them to be true.

Advertisers, like everybody else, have their responsibilities to the whole people, to the nation, and to its defense; advertisers, like everybody else, are subject to certain common hazards in these times. But advertising has a job to do, and it is reassuring to note that this is recognized by those to whom great responsibility has been placed in policy-making in Washington.

Advertising has served America greatly; it can serve it now; it can serve it even more greatly in the expanded future that lies before us.

A man can easily drive his argument home by letting his wife sit in the back seat.

NTSTC Students Are Old Fashioned On Girls Smoking

DENTON, Tex. (UP)—The male students at North Texas State Teachers College are 60 per cent old-fashioned by their own admission. The remaining 40 per cent waver between being old-fashioned and supporting women's rights.

A survey on girls' smoking was the issue. The 60 per cent maintained that it isn't "lady-like" or "nice" for a girl to smoke, and others thought that they just don't know how to smoke anyhow. One student, expressing the economist's viewpoint, said that when a girl smokes she is "wasting somebody's money, so if she has to smoke let her roll her own."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

Thanksgiving Day services are held by the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Denton, Massachusetts, and its branches throughout the world. The order of service includes the reading of a Lesson-Sermon on the topic of "Thanksgiving." Opportunity is also afforded those present to give testimonies of gratitude appropriate to the occasion.

The Golden Text is: "Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the most High; and call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me" (Psalms 50:14, 15).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God" (Revelation 21:3).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following message from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Truth's immortal idea is sweeping down the centuries, gathering beneath its wings the

Quail Hunters Are Asked To Watch Out For Leg Bands

AUSTIN.—With the opening of the quail season not far away, the Game Department's Executive Secretary today urged acatergun fans to examine carefully all quail killed to determine if they have leg bands on them.

The quail season opens on December 1 and continues through January 10.

If a quail is banded, hunters are urged to remove the metal band and send it to the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, at Austin, where the information derived from it will be used in scientific studies of quail now being

Boys Soon Due A Spending Spree

READING, Pa.—A 9-year-old boy—we'll call him "Johnny"—of this city, decided to give his pals a treat when he suddenly came into wealth recently.

It all happened when Johnny and his pals went rummaging through his grandmother's house while she was at church. In her bedroom they found a strongbox. "Let's open it," suggested one of Johnny's friends.

"Here, everybody take some." "Now," said Johnny, "we'll hide the strongbox in a place and any time one of us is home he'll know where to find the money."

House Furniture Changed First Time Since In 1883

By United Press
AUSTIN.—For the first time since the state capitol was built in 1883, the furniture in the House of Representatives is being changed.

More than 150 handsome new leather "posture" chairs, with the long star seal of Texas stamped on the back, were delivered this month to the House chamber. Along with them came several smaller chairs of the same material for House officers.

Aviation Gasoline Is Being Improved

AUSTIN.—Experiments designed to cram aviation gasoline with greater power are under way at the University of Texas chemical engineering laboratories as researchers seek new ways of building gasoline cracking plants.

National defense demands have caused a shortage of material from which diapers are made. Looks as if the babies will barely get by.

ing conducted in the wide areas of the Lone Star State. The quail have been banded, and still are being banded, in various localities by Game Managers and Field Biologists of the Commission as a means of accumulating information that may prove valuable in studies of these birds. The average migration of quail, for one thing, is a vital factor that can assist biologists in the program of quail restocking now being undertaken by the Commission.

During the white-wing dove season an appeal was sent out to sportsmen to return bands found on the legs of these birds in the Rio Grande Valley. The response was highly satisfactory and much was learned that can be put to use in the future conservation of white-wings, the Executive Secretary said.

MAKING MORE HENS PRODUCE MORE EGGS IS IMPORTANT TO THE DEFENSE PROGRAM

Editor's Note — This is the third of a series of articles on how Eastland County farmers can increase their production of farm products needed in the "Food For Defense" campaign. Other articles will appear from time to time as they are prepared by Elmo V. Cook, county agent for Eastland County.

By ELMO V. COOK
County Agent, Eastland County
Most Eastland County farmers

families would rather use rotten eggs on Hitler than to produce good fresh eggs to help whip him but it's going to take the fresh ones to get the job done. We must produce plenty of fresh eggs for our own folks, some to ship to Britain and some extra ones to store in the U. S. for emergency. For 1942, the Defense Board has asked Eastland County to produce 931,000 dozens of eggs, an increase of 15 percent over the 1941 production.

The average hen in the county produced about 95 eggs this year and to reach the goal it will be necessary for this average hen to increase her production 14 eggs in 1942.

The guarantee of price support made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture of 22 cents per dozen for eggs (Chicago basis) insures those who fill their poultry houses to capacity some profits if they follow the rules of good management. There is no doubt that Eastland County can do a lot more than reaching her goal in egg production in 1942 if the hens now on the farms are properly cared for.

Some oats should be sowed now if there is to be green feed for chickens this winter. The quality of the grazing will be improved if hairy winter vetch is mixed with the oats. The vetch will supply good grazing in the early spring until sudan grass can be gotten up for spring and summer grazing. Green pasture will not be near as good as the sowed pasture. Oats sowed in the fall for grazing on one fourth of the crop, land will help earn the 1942 AAA farm payment.

If there has been any fowl pox or sorehead on the farm in past years, all birds on the farm should be vaccinated now for fowl pox. It costs about half a cent per bird to do this and the bird is immunized for life. It is best to vaccinate the pullets in the summer but it isn't too late to vaccinate if it hasn't already been done.

Hens just won't lay many eggs if they are infested with bluebugs, lice and intestinal worms. Bluebugs can be kept down by painting or spraying the woodwork in the house every six months with a mixture of one quart carbolineum and one gallon kerosene. This destroys the large ones and thus eliminates the small ones. Lice can be controlled by dipping the birds in a mixture of one tablespoon sodium fluoride and one gallon warm water. Dip all the bird except the head and ruff. The feathers while they are in the mixture to get them wet to the skin. Hold the beak shut while the head is dipped under and right out. This should be done early on a warm day so the hens will dry before night. To keep lice to a minimum, build a dust box in one corner of the laying house and keep a mixture of wood ashes and sodium fluoride in it.

To keep down intestinal worms, give the birds a worm pill before they start laying or while they are molting and about every 30 to 45 days give a flock treatment of some good worm powder in the mash.

Feed a good mash made especially for laying hens and keep the hens in good flesh but not too fat by feeding scratch grain every day. If sufficient grain is raised on the farm, by 32 percent poultry protein supplement and mix it with twice as much ground grain. This lowers the cost of the mash but not the quality. The best starter mash that can be bought is not too good for starting baby chicks as their first development is the most important.

Those who have electricity on the farm can burn a 20 watt light in the house all night to encourage night eating or use a 40 watt light over each feed hopper, turning the lights on about 4 or 4:30 a. m.

Chicks should be bought only from reliable hatcheries that have been carrying on a definite improvement program, including pullorum testing or the hens used for producing hatching eggs should be pullorum tested to insure against chick losses from pullorum or white diarrhea. It costs only a fraction of a cent to test a bird for pullorum and the job is easily done with very little experience.

DEFENSE BOOM IN REVERSE

By United Press
PITTSBURGH.—The national defense program may be a boon to some industries, but it is proving just the opposite to some others in the Pittsburgh district. Because of the diversion of metal and other materials to strictly defense needs, a number of plants have been crippled and about 3,000 persons thrown out of work.

Road Project For County Approved

SAN ANTONIO.—Authorization to begin work on 23 WPA projects, involving total expenditures of $1,367,998, has been issued to Texas district managers, it was reported today by Stearns S. Tucker, deputy state administrator.

Included among the projects authorized were two for the improvement of strategic roads in the vicinity of Bowie in Montague county. Both of these projects have been certified by the

SERIAL STORY

LADY BY REQUEST

BY HELEN R. WOODWARD

THE STORY: "I love my inheritance of $2,000,000 if I do not marry by the time I am 35," says heiress Diana Tucker. She has written a letter to her father, Mr. Tucker, who has been and is again a widower, as she told her employer Richard Tucker to go to the devil, have captured his fancy. "Will you marry me for six months and $2,000,000?" he asks, going on to explain that the woman he loves is married to another man. Diana is amazed. Finally she agrees to accept the proposition that will solve the problem of finding a job. It's a business proposition that will solve the problem of finding a job. Diana Tucker has to come with him to meet his stepmother, Ellen Curt, who must pass judgment on her.

A CHALLENGE TO ELLEN

CHAPTER V

WHEN Stephen Curt ushered her into his stepmother's presence Diana thought, "This isn't real. It's a play. Old ladies like that are only on the screen. It's make-up that causes her to look like that!" But when Ellen Curt spoke there was no mistaking her genuineness. "So, Stephen, you've come to your senses at last! I didn't think you'd let the money get away from you. Sit down, both of you, and tell me where you found this girl?"

Diana sank into a small, ancient, overstuffed chair, but Stephen stood restlessly about. Mrs. Curt sat on a straight-backed sofa as if she scorned anything soft and yielding. She was small and fat, but there was an alertness about her that centered in her little twinkling black eyes. Her hair was gray and curled neatly. Her gown was gray, too, of a stiff, rustling material, and on her tiny feet were pearl gray satin slippers.

"Well, begin, Stephen! Tucker, you say the girl's name is—who is she and where did she come from?" Disconcerting, being discussed as if you weren't present. Diana didn't like that. She sat forward on her chair. "You'll let me tell you, won't you?"

Diana glanced at Stephen, saw him stop his pacing to watch her face. She hoped she wouldn't say too much, but she couldn't lie to this clear-eyed old woman. "I've followed your stepson's work for a long time," she said slowly. "Both I and the members of my family have admired him greatly. We think he's a very great man."

"Of course he's a great man," Ellen Curt repeated, tapping her little gray slipper. "Today I met him for the first time. The study was 'An Urgent Gospel Dispel's Heathen Darkness.' Parts were taken by Mrs. R. J. Taylor, Mrs. Bob Hodges and J. T. Anderson. Mrs. Jack Terry gave the prologue and Mrs. Hundick sang a solo accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Wilmet Simpson. A short business meeting was held with Mrs. Chester Rogers in charge.

could be r' ther a darling if you'd let yourself." Old Ellen Curt actually looked embarrassed. It had been so very many years since anyone had called her a darling! She did not see a great many young people and Diana Tucker was like a breath of springtime. Pretty, the old woman thought, and like Stephen she recognized the strength of character in the girl's face. Stephen had been a fool for picking a girl at random like this—but surprisingly, it was going to be all right.

THEY talked together for a long time—Diana told about her people and the farm and old Ellen nodded wisely. "Good, plain stock," she muttered, and at last she said, "You'll do. You must marry Stephen at once!"

But Diana answered quickly, "I'm sorry, but I'll have to talk to my father about it first." "Very well," Stephen said, "when can you leave for home?" "Tomorrow." "That's Sunday. How long would you want to stay?" "Until about Wednesday, I think."

"All right. Give me instructions as to how to get there and I'll drive down for you on Wednesday. I can get back for my broadcast Wednesday night." "Yes, I'd like that. We could talk to my father together." "That's all right. I'll arrange it and old Ellen Curt sat on her straight sofa and watched them go. Her little black eyes were alight with interest. Nobody's fool, that girl. No cringing before her, either, suing for favor. Straightforward, honest. Already Stephen was attracted to her—going down for her on Wednesday. Old Ellen was smiling as she went to her room for the night.

Stephen drove Diana back to the rooming house and it had never looked so shabby before. He held her hand warmly at the door. "You're a good sport, Diana Tucker, for even considering it," he said gravely. "I shall see to it that you're not sorry. Thank you—and goodbye until Wednesday."

When he had gone she went slowly up to her little room and began to put some of her things into a suitcase. Then she called her landlady. "I'm leaving tomorrow," she said. ## SERIAL STORY

LADY BY REQUEST

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: "I love my inheritance of $200,000 if I do not marry by the time I am 25," says handsome Stephen Curt, famous writer and commentator, to Diana Tucker, whose beauty and intelligence, as she told her employer Richard Thorpe in the devil, have captured his fancy. "Will you marry me for six months and six months?" he asks, going on to explain that the woman he loves is married to another man. Diana is amazed. Really consider his offer as a business proposition that will solve the problem of finding a job so that she will not have to return to her domineering farm home. She asks him to come with him to meet his stepmother, Ellen Curt, who must pass judgment on her.

A CHALLENGE TO ELLEN

CHAPTER V

WHEN Stephen Curt ushered her into his stepmother's presence Diana thought, "This isn't real. It's a play. Old ladies like that are only on the screen. It's make-up that causes her to look like that!"

But when Ellen Curt spoke there was no mistaking her genuineness. "So, Stephen, you've come to your senses at last! I didn't think you'd let the money get away from you. Sit down, both of you, and tell me where you found this girl."

Diana sank into a small, ancient, overstuffed chair, but Stephen strode restlessly about. Mrs. Curt sat on a straight-backed sofa as if she scorned anything soft and yielding.

She was small and fat, but there was an alertness about her that centered in her little twinkling black eyes. Her hair was gray and curled neatly. Her gown was gray, too, and a stiff, rustling material, and on her tiny feet were pearl gray satin slippers.

"Well, begin, Stephen! Tucker, you say the girl's name is—who is she and where did she come from?"

Disconcerting, being discussed as if you weren't present, Diana didn't like that. She sat forward on her chair. "You'll let me tell you, won't you?"

Diana glanced at Stephen, saw him stop his pacing to watch her face. She hoped she wouldn't say too much, but she couldn't lie to this clear-eyed old woman.

"I've followed your stepson's work for a long time," she said slowly. "Both I and the members of my family have admired him greatly. We think he's a very great man."

"Of course he's a great man," Ellen Curt repeated, tapping her little gray slipper.

"Today I met him for the first time. The study was 'An Urgent Gospel Dispels Heathen Darkness.' Parts were taken by Mrs. R. J. Taylor, Mrs. Bob Hodges and J. T. Anderson.

Mrs. Jack Terry gave the prologue and Mrs. Handick sang a solo accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Wilcox Simpson.

A short business meeting was held with Mrs. Chester Rogers in charge.

She thought the black eyes opened wide, and for a moment she expected an outburst of indignation, but after a short pause the old woman said imperiously, "Go on."

"Mr. Curt was in the office where I worked when I lost my job. I think he must have felt sorry for me. And so he explained the terms of his inheritance to me. He asked me to marry him. That's all. I see you're greatly surprised, but I don't see why you should be. After all, he's being forced into a marriage that means nothing to him. Do you think that's fair?"

"OLD Mrs. Curt gasped. Could the girl have suspected that it was she, herself, who had persuaded her late husband to insert that clause in his will? Anything, she thought, was better than having him fall prey to some adventuresome, May brilliant men did, especially when the woman they loved had married someone else, and had their careers ruined thereby. Stephen would be saved. She meant to choose his wife herself. But this girl whom he had brought for approval was something quite outside her experience.

"It's nothing to you, young lady, whether what I do is fair or not. It may not have occurred to you that I have a very good reason for wanting to secure Stephen's happiness. His father was concerned only with his welfare."

"But didn't think enough of his judgment to allow him to choose a wife for himself?"

"That's enough. Evidently you've agreed to the proposition, or you wouldn't have come here."

"Not at all," Diana answered coolly. "Stephen said you wanted to look me over, and I certainly claim the same privilege. I have not made a decision one way or the other."

Stephen's eyes were dancing delightedly. Not in years, he knew, had anyone spoken to Ellen Curt in just such a way. He rather suspected that old Ellen was enjoying the lilt, too. From the way her eyes snapped, from the way the little gray satin slipper tapped the floor.

"Oh, I suppose then you'd have to approve of me?"

"Certainly. You wouldn't want someone in the family who wouldn't like you, would you?"

"Humph! Well, then—what do you think of me?"

Suddenly Diana smiled. She had seen beneath the forbidding exterior. "I think," she said, "you could be rather a darling if you'd let yourself."

Old Ellen Curt actually looked embarrassed. It had been so very many years since anyone had called her a darling! She did not see a great many young people and Diana Tucker was like a breath of springtime. Pretty, the old woman thought, and like Stephen she recognized the strength of character in the girl's face. Stephen had been a fool for picking a girl at random like this—but surprisingly, it was going to be all right.

"THEY talked together for a long time—Diana told about her people and the farm and old Ellen nodded wisely, "Good, plain stock," she muttered, and at last she said, "You'll do. You must marry Stephen at once!"

But Diana answered quickly, "I'm sorry, but I'll have to talk to my father about it first."

"Very well," Stephen said, "when can you leave for home?"

"Tomorrow."

"That's Sunday. How long would you want to stay?"

"Until about Wednesday, I think."

"All right. Give me instructions as to how to get there and I'll drive down for you on Wednesday. I can get back for my broadcast Wednesday night."

"Yes, I'd like that. We could talk to my father together."

And so it was arranged and old Ellen Curt sat on her straight sofa and watched them go. Her little black eyes were alight with interest. Nobody's fool, that girl. No cringing before her, either, suing for favor. Straightforward, honest. Already Stephen was attracted to her—going down for her on Wednesday. Old Ellen was smiling as she went to her room for the night.

Stephen drove Diana back to the rooming house and it had never looked so shabby before. He held her hand warmly at the door. "You're a good sport, Diana Tucker, for even considering it," he said gravely. "I shall see to it that you're not sorry. Thank you—and goodbye until Wednesday."

could be rather a darling if you'd let yourself."

Old Ellen Curt actually looked embarrassed. It had been so very many years since anyone had called her a darling! She did not see a great many young people and Diana Tucker was like a breath of springtime. Pretty, the old woman thought, and like Stephen she recognized the strength of character in the girl's face. Stephen had been a fool for picking a girl at random like this—but surprisingly, it was going to be all right.

"THEY talked together for a long time—Diana told about her people and the farm and old Ellen nodded wisely, "Good, plain stock," she muttered, and at last she said, "You'll do. You must marry Stephen at once!"

But Diana answered quickly, "I'm sorry, but I'll have to talk to my father about it first."

"Very well," Stephen said, "when can you leave for home?"

"Tomorrow."

"That's Sunday. How long would you want to stay?"

"Until about Wednesday, I think."

"All right. Give me instructions as to how to get there and I'll drive down for you on Wednesday. I can get back for my broadcast Wednesday night."

"Yes, I'd like that. We could talk to my father together."

And so it was arranged and old Ellen Curt sat on her straight sofa and watched them go. Her little black eyes were alight with interest. Nobody's fool, that girl. No cringing before her, either, suing for favor. Straightforward, honest. Already Stephen was attracted to her—going down for her on Wednesday. Old Ellen was smiling as she went to her room for the night.

Stephen drove Diana back to the rooming house and it had never looked so shabby before. He held her hand warmly at the door. "You're a good sport, Diana Tucker, for even considering it," he said gravely. "I shall see to it that you're not sorry. Thank you—and goodbye until Wednesday."

When he had gone she went slowly up to her little room and began to put some of her things into a suitcase. Then she called her landlady.

"I'm leaving tomorrow," she said. "I don't think I'll be back. But will you keep my trunk until I call for it?"

Why had she said that? She wondered. Had she already made up her mind?
