Give Youth Its Job to Do

Until a young man has turned his 20th birthday, the government doesn't definitely prescribe him a place in national defense. At that time he is registered under Selective Service and awaits his call for whatever form of service may be required of him. He knows, at least, where he stands. He is in line. The decision is elsewhere; the government itself, from that point on, decides what he is best qualified to do, and sees to it that he does it.

That at least leads to a certain peace of mind, in the sense that once registered, a man knows that he is part of the picture. He doesn't know exactly where or when he will be fitted in, but he feels and knows that he has a place.

But what of younger men, those say between 17 and 19? It is true that in certain branches of the service and under certain circumstances, they can enlist voluntarily. But such a youth is pretty likely to be badly torn between conflicting emotions. He wants to enlist, yes. But he is told on the other hand, "Stay in school or college, prepare yourself for specialized service." Maybe he tries to get a job. But employers, naturally enough, are chary of hiring an untrained young man who, as soon as he begins to learn how to do his job, may be called into military service.

So millions of youths between 17 and 20 are floating in a sea of uncertainty, unable to concentrate on work or study, unable to feel that they really "fit in."

What can be done about it? The National Education Association has an idea. It suggests creation of a Selective Service Reserve, in which young men who have passed their 17th but not yet reached their 20th birthday might be enrolled with the understanding that they should not be called for military duty until the present age limit.

In the meantime they would be at the disposal of the government for pre-training of whatever sort is determined to be most valuable to them and to the government. Those who are studying, especially those studying subjects of scientific, technical, or professional value, might be simply "assigned" to that duty. Farm labor and harvest field help, which may be badly needed this fall, could be drawn from this pool. Various other non-combatant services could be performed by young men registered under this classification.

In the meantime, they would feel that they have a place; that their services are really helpful and available for whatever work is needed, whether it be in classroom, harvest field, or civilian defense.

The worst feeling a person can have in wartime is that of having no place or part in the great national effort. Such a plan for the orderly utilization of the energies of youth, just as we now order the energies of more mature men, is well worth consideration.

Frozen-Dehydrated Foods Are Approved For Soldier Diet

By United Press
AUSTIN.—New quick-freezing and dehydration processes for food are going to make the diet for this war's American soldiers better than it was for the dough-boys of 1918.
That's the word of Luis Bartlett, University of Texas engineer and inventor of a process for dehydrating sweet potatoes.
"Especially at training camps it is practical to use dried foods," said Bartlett. "It solves a transportation problem and releases tin cans for where they are needed—at the front."
Some concentrated, dehydrated foods such as yams might be used by men at the front. Frozen foods generally are most suited for serving to soldiers behind the lines.

Bartlett and his assistants are increasing research on preserving carrots and other vegetables in palatable, dehydrated form.

WORKERS IN America's Second Line OF DEFENSE!

Industrial plants are operating on stepped-up schedules in the Nation's all-out war effort. More army camps are being built for our ever-increasing army, more airfields are being rushed to completion, airplane factories are being constructed and equipped so we can put more and more planes in the air.

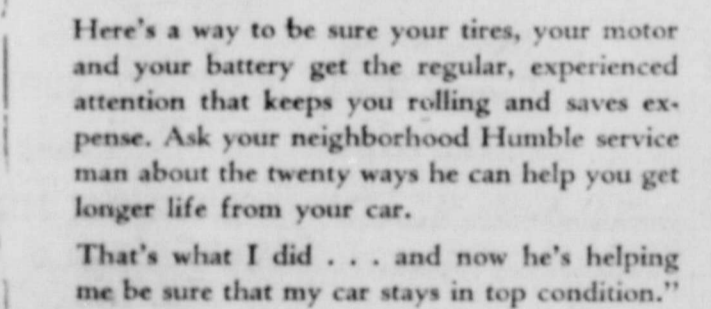

Success of this huge job depends upon the strength of America's Second Line of Defense, the factories and the workers who are pledged to production schedules which stagger the imagination.

Wheels are turning today that had not reached the blue print stage two years ago. America's industrial engineers and workers will put more and more wheels into motion during the coming months to meet huge production schedules.

Electric power turns wheels of production. The men and women of the Texas Electric Service Company have dedicated their all-out efforts as workers in America's Second Line of Defense.

SERIAL STORY

TAMBAY GOLD

BY SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

IN THE CABIN

CHAPTER XXVII

WHILE I was waiting on them, Juddy slipped across to the door and pinched the revolver. It wasn't for letting Angel shoot a poor slob that might be perfectly innocent. They put off about noticing the loss. They hadn't been gone half an hour when Doc showed up at the door. He was in his working clothes, and he looked white and dead.

"Old Swoby is back," Doc said. "He got him in the shelter."

"Then everything's jake," I said.

"No. He's been shot."

"Shot?" Juddy forgot her feud with Doc. "What—why—?"

"It isn't serious. Flesh wound. He dressed his arm."

"What have they got on him?"

"He was found hiding in a barn near the place."

"Hiding from the airplanes?"

"Of course. But could you get mob to believe that? There's something else. The woman, because she died, mumbled something about a man with a red head. Only had that infernal red cap on his nose. When they found him, ran."

"What'll we do, Doc?"

"I've telephoned the State Police."

"Did you get 'em?"

"No, they're all out on the hunt. I'll be back in a few days."

Juddy hurried across to the feed-barn and brought back my good old five-five.

"Look," I said. "Give this to Old Swoby and head him for the swamp. They won't find him there. Not tonight. Lord! What's that? But I'd heard that lost-soul killing before."

"Bloodhounds," he said. "The amp is hopeless." He turned to Juddy. "Is there a bar to the door of the log shed in your back yard?"

"Yes."

"You don't expect me to give you up, surely?"

"I'd rather have him killed than see you waste time," he said. Juddy spoke up, kind of desperately. "Yes, we're wasting time. You see you can't do anything with him?"

"She didn't look at Doc. I think she was afraid to," he called.

Doc stood by the small front window next the door.

"Everybody quiet, please," he said. "I'll do the talking."

HE stuck his pistol through the window and fired a shot in the air. A car swung into the grounds. By its lights I could see the advance guard taking cover in the thickets. Bixie Groff and a bunch of his townies were behind one clump.

"Don't come any further," Doc said. "You'd have thought he was in his classroom. Quiet authority; that was his pitch. Some bird behind a live oak called out."

"Give the fellas up, Prof. We got nothing against you."

"Anybody interferes, they're right liable to get hurt."

Groff, with a couple of his pals, was edging over to the left. A bullet plunked into the log above my head. Some more followed. They were firing high. The car lights were switched off now, but there was enough moon so we could see a man moving forward alone.

"Stop that shooting," he said. "Maurie Sears," Juddy said. "Quiet!" Doc snapped at her. "Oliver!" Sears called. "Can I have a word with you?"

"Certainly."

He walked up to the door. Through my chink between the logs, I could see his face, stern and set.

"You might as well give him up, Oliver."

"So that you and your friends can lynch him?"

"I'll never have a hand in another lynching. Not at Tambay." (Well, I knew why that was.)

Doc said: "Will you guarantee to deliver him safely to jail?"

"I can't guarantee anything. But I'll do my best."

"I believe that, Sears. But I don't believe it would be good enough."

"There isn't much time," Laurie Sears said. "As your friend, Oliver, I beg you to turn the man over to me."

Doc seemed to be thinking about it, for he didn't say anything for a few seconds. Then, "That's your best advice?"

"It is."

"Would you do it in my place?"

"The case is different."

"Would you do it in my place, Sears?"

"No."

"I thought not. But you expect me to?"

"No."

"Thank you, Sears. Neither will I."

War Housing Is a Brand-New Problem With Shortage of Workers' Homes Increasing

BY PETER EDSON NEA Service Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—A great deal of the congressional thinking on housing which is any good is that in which an honest American worker buys a house or a farm on time, settles down in the community, raises a family, finally pays off the mortgage, stays on the same place or keeps working for the same company all his life, saves enough money to retire on and spends a comfortable old age puttering around the house and the little woman built just after they got married 40 years ago.

That was the pre-First-World-War conception of ideal American life. It is still the rural and the small-town conception of life as it should be, and the majority of the congressmen today are definitely rural, definitely small town, definitely pre-World-War-One. No one can deny that these were the good old days. But the question arises as to whether life is like that any more or whether it will ever be like that again.

Surveys today indicate that not one worker in 100 lives in the same house for 25 years. Jobs change. Factories go bust. A drought or a depression comes along and makes necessary wholesale migrations of thousands of people. Hopeful homeowners carrying mortgages get foreclosed on, slap-dab in the middle of one of these catastrophes and lose everything but their shirts.

IT is sad to admit, but rural and small-town America as they were in those good old days are disappearing. Rurally, there aren't enough new farms opening up for the sons of farmers reaching manhood, and these good young men have to go to the big town for a job. In the small towns, likewise, there aren't enough jobs to go around.

- If you were to spell out the cycle of shelter requirements for the average worker during his life span today, housing experts believe it would be something like this:
1. Before marriage—one room.
 2. Just married—two to three rooms.
 3. Raising a family—one to two more rooms.
 4. Change of jobs—a different dwelling for each new location.
 5. Increasing prosperity—a bigger or better house.
 6. After the children grow up and leave home—back to two or three or four rooms.

IN other words, during 30 or 40 years of useful life, the average family will require from five to six or maybe 10 different dwellings. This isn't confined to factory workers in the lower income brackets, either. It applies to white-collar workers in the middle income groups and to skilled technicians, professional folks and executives—particularly to the better paid employees of big corporations who get transferred from one branch office or one plant to another, often in distant cities.

In the face of such conditions, the old talk of "settling down and raising a family" becomes mere nonsense as expressing the way a average American life. The latter part is still possible, but the former is complicated.

BERKELEY, Cal. (UP)—Dr. R. H. Low, professor of anthropology at University of California, completed a text book of the extensive Indian language after extensive research on the Crow reservation in Montana. He established textual material of prayers, several trickster tales and the Crow version of the creation.

Basketball Team From Camp Bowie To Play Eastland

Two teams from the 113th Cavalry at Camp Bowie will play the Eastland All Stars in basketball games at the Eastland High School gym Wednesday night at 8:00 o'clock.

These games are outside games—that is they are not in the Eastland teams' schedule since the scheduled games have all been played for this season—but are return engagements. The Camp Bowie teams having met the All Stars in Eastland in a game last Wednesday which resulted in a score of 50 to 46 in favor of the visitors.

Coach Jeter of the Eastland team expects a good game. The Camp Bowie players are all from Iowa where they play lots of basketball and are good players, he stated.

Tires Plentiful For 10-Year-Old Jalopy

PAULETIC drives a 1931 model and he has just learned that he probably won't have any difficulty getting tires despite the rationing. The tires he uses are rationed and are of use for military purposes.

Of course, manufacturers probably will not be making any more tires for Pauletic's 1931 car while the war is on, but he isn't worried because dealers seem to have plenty in stock, the demand for them isn't heavy, and the rationing board has indicated that there would be few restrictions on the sale of outmoded tires.

NICKELS GO INTO BONDS

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill.—J. W. Crompton, a truant officer, broke up a 25-year-old collection of nickels to purchase a $25 defense bond. He paid for the bond with 875 Liberty head nickels, all that remained of a collection he started in 1912. He said the rest of the nickels were spent for Liberty bonds in the first world war.

L. W. MEADOR IS ELECTED CHAMBER OF COMMERCE HEAD AT MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

L. W. Meador was elected president of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce at a meeting of the board of directors held Monday night, at which 11 directors were present.

R. L. Perkins, Jr., was elected vice president, J. L. Haney was elected treasurer and Pless E. Moore was elected secretary, which completes the roster of officers for the coming year.

T. J. Anderson, who has been a member of the board of directors for some time, presented his resignation because he did not have time from other duties to attend the meeting regularly. Three names were selected for presentation to the City Commission, from which one will be selected to serve as director in Anderson's place.

It was voted by the directors to have the annual banquet on Mar. 12. The date was selected because of other banquets in February, which might cause conflicts. These include the annual George Washington banquet of the Carl Barnes Post of the American Legion, and the annual banquet held in February by the Masonic lodge.

Committees named to take care of arrangements for the banquet which is to follow military theme, were named as follows:

Speaker Committee—L. R. Pearson and Dr. P. M. Kuykendall.

Tickets and Menu Committee—Joe N. Graham, R. L. Perkins, Jr., and Lee Dockery.

Decorations Committee—A. N. Larson and J. L. Haney.

Entertainment Committee—Dr. Ross Hodges and A. N. Larson.

Those present at the meeting were L. R. Pearson, the retiring president, who has served for the past year, A. N. Larson, Dr. Ross Hodges, Dr. P. M. Kuykendall, L. W. Meador, Lee Dockery, R. L. Perkins, Jr., Joe Graham, J. L. Haney, Paul McDonald and S. O. Montgomery.

Red Cross Center Will Open Thursday
Because of illness the Red Cross Center was not opened this afternoon for registration for home nursing classes, but will be open Thursday afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock at which time those wishing to take the course may register.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to express to our friends, our sincere thanks for the thoughtfulness shown us at the recent death of our brother. We are deeply grateful to the members of the American Legion for their aid and we especially wish to express our thanks for the many beautiful floral offerings.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends herringwood essence by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)
