To Save Rubber

If we lived under a dictatorship, dedicated to unflinching efficiency in the conduct of this war, no automobile would be permitted on the streets without specific permission of a transportation control board.

Thus far we have found only one man with pretensions to authority who disputes that an acute emergency exists because of our rubber shortage. He is Elliot E. Simpson, an independent rubber dealer. His views have been given publicity through congressional committees before which he has testified as an expert.

It may be that we are all out of step but Mr. Simpson. There may be an average of 500 pounds of scrap rubber per family lying around, awaiting reclamation. The preponderance against Mr. Simpson's opinion is so great that we are convinced he is deluded on the subject.

If every insider except Mr. Simpson is correct, then our national stock of rubber is not enough to service the military establishment, provide for the transportation of war workers and war goods, and permit civilians to continue driving to the theater, to stores to the beach, to the golf links and the tennis courts, to ball games, to bridge parties, to their country homes.

Conceding that hard-working men and women require diversion and exercise, we are coming face to face with the necessity for choosing between two evils.

For the relatively limited time we shall need to win the war against the axis, is recreation or war production the more essential?

The best available figures indicate that if all the tires we have were to be used exclusively for war purposes, they could be stretched far enough to outlast Hitler and Hirohito.

Unfortunately they now are being wasted at the minimum rate of about 45 miles' wear every week in the east, and even faster in the western areas, not affected by gasoline rationing.

A hard-boiled dictatorship would not permit this wastage, looking toward the day when workmen will not be able to get to their jobs for lack of transportation or, in the alternative, when we must take steel needed for ships and tanks and guns, and use it to build synthetic rubber plants.

Such a dictatorship would take the tires from everybody who does not drive his car for war purposes, and would save them to replace tires worn out in essential use.

We do not believe such a course will or perhaps should be followed in this democracy. Our restraint is due principally to fear that such a program would be fumbled—that chiselers would get away with murder while the patriotically co-operative held the bag.

But if rubber continues to be wasted as it is now, even a democracy may be driven to adopt some modification of this plan.

The Payoff

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK—In all the hullabaloo about the decision, boxing writers muffed the real story of the Robert Pastor-Tami Mauriello match.

They were too concerned about Bob Pastor being shortchanged and what would happen to his third edition with Pvt. Joseph Louis Barrack.

Well, Pastor will get another crack at Joe Louis, in Chicago or Cleveland in July, but that is of no great import. He won't have as much chance as he had the last trip in Detroit.

What the critics overlooked is that the Pastor-Mauriello affair uncovered the one fellow who might have a look-in with Louis, provided the great patriot is on the scene two years hence. And it wasn't Pastor.

Mauriello has come along like a prairie fire. He was fighting middleweights only a couple of years ago. He came in at 177½ the other night, stands 5 feet 11½, and is still sprouting like a young Oregon fir. He has plenty of time. They say he's a couple of years younger than the 22 he claims to be. He is going to be a big, strong, hard-hitting, dead game 190-pounder.

Mauriello has knocked out six heavyweights and obtained the even break with Pastor since his unsuccessful attempt to take Gus Lenzewich's 175-pound title last November. He contended the weight hurt him that night.

Offhand, I would say that Tami Mauriello is the finest heavyweight prospect in sight.

ARTHUR B. NEWHALL, rubber co-ordinator for the War Production Board, reduces the rubber shortage to this simple explanation: A combat tank with a steel track is 20 per cent less efficient than a tank with a rubber track. If any of you would rather have your sons go to war in tanks that are only 80 per cent efficient so that they can go joy-riding, this rubber shortage can be solved. But if you want your son to fight in tanks that are 100 per cent efficient and better than the enemy's, then you'll have to do without the joy-ride.

Maybe in time the arithmetic books will have to be rewritten, using problems that tie in with rationing, price-fixing and conservation. Here, for instance, is a question posed by Leon Henderson's OPA:

Q—A dress manufacturer during March sold and delivered nine style numbers at $14.50 per dozen. Later in March he raised the prices on the three most popular style numbers to $13.50, but actually sold and delivered only two of these three numbers at the higher price. What would be his maximum price on the three numbers raised?

A—Only the two style numbers actually sold and delivered in March can be sold at $13.50. The third number raised and the other six must be sold at $14.50.

Clerk Gable is now an officer with a desk job in Washington. And one of the common noon hour sights in the Army-Navy area out near the Lincoln Memorial is the number of new civil service stenographers taking their lunch or the noon hour stroll in the vicinity of Gable's office, just to try to catch a glimpse of the ex-movie star.

LIEUT.-GEN. BREHON SOMERVELL wrote a speech recently in which he quoted several passages from Shakespeare. He showed copies of the speech to four of his staff colonels for a check, and the only revisions they made were to correct the English of Shakespeare.

If you get a wedding invitation from your pal, Lieut. Joe Doakes, saying the bride is to be married to plain "Mr." Joe Doakes, don't conclude that Joe has been kicked out of the service. It's just a matter of military or naval etiquette, supported by regulation, which decrees that below a captaincy in the Army and below the grade of Each and all of these committees are being ably assisted by the banking and post office forces in the county as well as the citizens generally.

Our State Administrator Frank Scofield, your County Chairman and the Chairmen of the committees of the respective towns are calling on all employers and employees in the county to work with them to the end that all of the employer-employee cards may be signed by June 17, 1942, and this having been done we are then calling upon every citizen of Eastland County, which includes those who have already signed the employer-employee cards, to go to the town in whose trade territory you reside on Saturday, June 20, 1942, to sign what is known as the triplicate pledge card by which you tell your government the amount of bonds and/or stamps you will try to buy during each month for the duration. The committees in each of the towns above named will have regular places with competent help ready and willing to help each of you fill out your pledge card. We feel that you will cooperate with us in every way so that this sign-up may be put over with the least possible effort and loss of time to all concerned. We think this is the democratic way to do this and feel sure that you do not want some member or members of the committee to take the time to look you up and call on you in person to sign these pledges which your Government is requesting. These pledges are not legally binding but merely tell the government that you will try to purchase the amount of your pledge.

We are calling on the papers of Eastland county to give full and constant publicity to this program, and may it be said in their behalf, that they have given unstintingly of their time and valuable space without pay in all efforts that are being put forward by our government to win this war and the peace to follow.

Without fail go on Saturday, June 20, 1942, to the place prepared in your trade town and help make the sign-up 100 per cent. CYRUS B. FROST, Eastland County Chairman.

Women's Army Auxiliary Corps Organizes

Mrs. Hobey

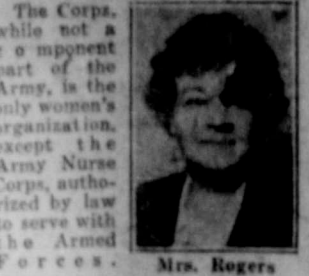

THE WOMEN'S ARMY AUXILIARY CORPS, authorized by an Act of Congress sponsored by Representative Edith Rogers of Massachusetts, will open an Officers Training School at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, Mrs. William F. Biological Director of the Corps, announces that candidates will be trained mainly in leadership, administration and military procedure. Candidates will remain at Fort Des Moines for eight weeks of intensive training and will be paid $50 a month during that period.

The procedure of application and selection is as follows: Officers candidates must be citizens of the United States, between the ages of 21 and 45. They must be married or single. They must have had at least a high school education, be in good health, and of excellent character. In order to secure a representative group of women from the entire United States, according to be on a regional or Corps Area basis. No applications sent to Washington can be given consideration. Applications must be obtained in person, from the local recruiting station and when properly filled out, must be returned, in person or by mail, to the appropriate main recruiting station. The women whose applications are satisfactory will then be notified as to the time and place of examinations. The applications of those who pass these preliminary tests will be sent on to the greater Corps Area, where they will be examined and sifted by a Recruiting Officer and two women assistants.

Each one of the nine Corps Areas will recommend at least sixty candidates for final consideration. In addition to the recommendations made by the Corps Area, Officers Candidates will be recruited from among the volunteers who have served with the Aircraft Warning Service, The War Department will make the final selection of the approximately 450 candidates.

THE PURPOSES OF THE CORPS, the first of its kind in American military history, is to enlist women volunteers for military service with the Army to replace, and release for combat service, enlisted men who are now performing certain non-combatant duties.

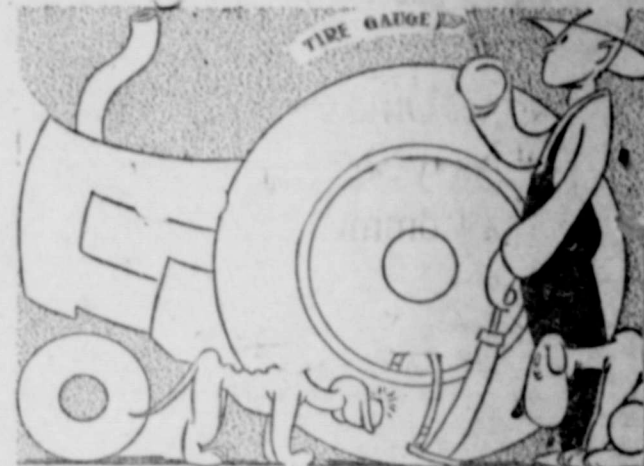

Mrs. Rogers

The Corps, while not a permanent part of the Army, is the only women's organization, except the Army Nurse Corps, authorized by law to serve with the Armed Forces. Units of the Corps may be called upon to serve in Zone Operations, as well as Continental United States only in non-combat operations. Ultimately, the Corps may be expanded to a total of 150,000 women, if and when necessary. General enrollment will not begin until after an Officer and Non-Commissioned Officer cadre has been trained, a matter of approximately 3 months. Formation of this Officer cadre will begin at once.

Former Officers Of Navy Sought For Commissions

Naval officers of the first world war who are physically fit to perform duty are invited to make application for Naval commissions in the present war, according to announcement received from Commander F. C. Hutton of New Orleans, Director of Naval Officers Procurement in the Eight Naval District.

Commander Hutton said appropriate rank will be awarded, and proper consideration given to waiver of physical defects. Those with commissioned experience in the Navy at other periods also are needed, he said, and will receive the same consideration.

Former Naval officers desiring to re-enter the services should, if convenient, call in person at one of the branch offices of the Naval Officers Procurement in Houston and Dallas, Texas; Birmingham, Alabama; Nashville, Tennessee, and Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

If unable to call in person at one of these branches, they should write to the Director of Naval Officers Procurement, 217 Camp Street, New Orleans, Louisiana.

SERIAL STORY

CARIBBEAN CRISIS

BY EATON K. GOLDTHWAITE

COPYRIGHT, 1942, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY—Four visitors arrive at a Dutch West Indian island to complete the life of Bill Talcott, who has been there for six years as branch manager for an American chemical firm. They are Halsey, Bill's successor as manager, who immediately accuses Bill of a large shortage in his accounts; MacDowell, a detective brought to take Bill back to the States; and June Paterson, who found, and June Paterson, beautiful cousin of Bill's former roommate on their first night on the island Halsey and June are molested by natives during a walk. Later June is awakened by shouts from the dock and the sight of a mysterious schooner.

20th CENTURY PIRATE

CHAPTER VII

JUNE PATERSON moved feverishly; slipped into the plum-colored slacks, threw on a blouse and jacket, whipped a tri-cornered bandana about her tousled hair. With more speed than judgment she packed her overnight case, groping in the darkness for the things that were nearest to hand. Her trunk, she decided, could wait. The least that Bill Talcott could do for her would be to see that it followed her home.

Her sole thought was of escape from Abas, from the horrible heat and odor, from the grim, silent intrigue that had settled on the place, turning them all into taciturn, suspicious strangers. There was a boat of some kind attempting to land at the pier now. It was in all probability a government boat; from what June Paterson had seen on her brief stay, had gathered from the words of Leonard Halsey, the law would soon come to Abas, and thus she thought this gray, close-cruising schooner must be its conveyance.

She had no idea as to whether the boat was Dutch or American; where it was going or whether it had come. She knew only that she wanted to get away, to breathe clean air again and forget the horrible memories of the past few hours. Resolutely she seized her bag and with never a backward glance slipped through the cluttered house into the mether darts.

Distant stars showed dispiritedly through blanketing clouds; the thin moon had set and the dark path was treacherous beneath her feet. Blindly she stumbled down the hill, shaking off unseen fingers of verdant growth that pawed in silent challenge at her passage. She was very near hysteria when a rise of ground brought her to the cleared slope and she saw the lights of the pier.

In the deep shadow of a frangipani tree she collided head on with a standing figure. It was MacDowell, and when he had picked himself up and got some of his wind back he grunted. "Miss Paterson! I almost shot you! What in Pete's name is going on down there?"

She glared, more in shock than anger. "Why don't you investigate?" she blazed. "You have a pistol. Are you afraid?"

MacDowell grunted. "I ain't afraid, Miss. But I got a wife and two kids back in New York, and that gang on the dock is making a little too free with knives. They—"

Another form came hurtling down the slope and Halsey, pyjamas showing beneath a robe, skidded to a halt. "I heard a shot," he panted. "Are you all right? Have you seen Struthers? He wasn't in his room—What's happening?"

A BOOMING roar engulfed his words; the deep-throated bark of a heavy caliber gun. It ripped through the night, reverberating against the rocky hills, dying with startling suddenness into a void of intense silence.

Halsey's rangy figure stiffened. "This has gone far enough," he snapped. "Miss Paterson, please return to the house, MacDowell, come with me."

But the girl would not return to Bill Talcott's house. No matter what the future might hold in store, she could never go back there. She did not argue; in fact, no word did she utter either in confirmation or denial of the order. But when Halsey and MacDowell began a legging run for the pier she followed; the ridiculous overnight case banging against her knee.

The sight that confronted her when she at last gained the smooth-worn stones of the pier was strange, almost unbelievable. The schooner was long and low to the water and from her sharp nose to her square stern she was a dull and dirty gray. The men who had come from her, some of them, were lined up along the pier like vicious dogs ready to spring, and opposite them in a defensive huddle stood Bill Talcott and Tomas and Sebastian. The little overseer wasn't gesticulating now; he was holding his arm and blood dripped between his fingers and his fat, sweating face was grimaced with pain. Three prone figures, sprawled like wash from a broken line, attested to the ferocity of the brief defense.

Talcott was staring levelly, not at the men confronting him, but at the schooner's deck. June Paterson followed his eyes and saw the reason for the fight's end.

On the cabin roof, seated as calmly as if watching a sunset, was a swarthy villain armed with a shotgun. His black hair was unkempt and fell in a tangle behind his ears; dazzling white teeth opened a gash in his dark face. He wore no shirt and his long, heavy arms were scrooled with faded designs in tattoo.

"SO, Meester Talcott!" the man with the shotgun laughed, swinging his heels gently. "So you want to make trouble, hey? You no like Cap'n Jackson to visit your island, hey?"

"You know I don't like it," Bill Talcott responded. "You and your gang have brought me endless trouble. The poor, frightened people you dump here are penniless and many of them are sick. It gets me in all kinds of jams with the authorities. It endangers the residents of the islands. Now for the last time, clear out of here!"

The man with the shotgun scowled. "Meester Talcott, you are in no position to dictate terms. I, the wores damn rascal in the Caribbean, make my own terms. So now I 'ave two more for you. One ees a var' lovely woman; I would take her to San Tomas myself but I am too much busy. So you well take her an' the gentleman. There weel be no trouble—they 'ave papers. But w'en you beat up my men, that I did not like. See I think one day you an' me will 'ave a var' grand fight, Meester Talcott. Soon, I hope. No?"

"No. And if you have two more people, you keep them. And I advise you to get going before the black room of this island come swarming down that hillside to kill us all."

At his words the dark rogue turned an involuntary glance toward the path, and had not MacDowell spoken then, June Paterson's presence might have gone unnoticed. MacDowell swaggered forward, pistol level in his hand, growling. "Refugee smugglers, hey? Okay. Get goin', and don't leave nobody behind either!"

The muzzle of the shotgun turned. "You want to gamble with thee pistol against thee?" Jackson grunted. "Damn fool! My feenger var' nervous—." His shoulder raised imperceptibly.

June Paterson cried out, but the warning was too late. One of the prone figures raised himself behind MacDowell to bring down a blackjack in a crashing blow against the mustached one's head. (To Be Continued)
