War Has Effect On Enrollment In Texas A & M

COLLEGE STATION—(A&MC)—War-time collegiate interest in the shaping of world events is reflected in a record enrollment of 1244 students in various history courses at Texas A&M College, it was revealed today by Dr. S. R. Gammon, department head.

Although the number of students attending Texas A & M's first regular summer semester is almost 2000 below last year's peak of 6975, more than ever before are studying history.

Most popular history course ic American Government, a study made prerequisite to graduation by the legislature, which is taught to 830 students in 22 classes.

This course, designed to teach the student fundamental concepts of American democray, now includes a breif survey, at the request of the war department, of the war in Europe and Asia, and a comparison of democratic and Fascist principlles of government.

The overflow enrollemnt has put a burden on the department short-manned as usual during the summer. In fact, Dr. J. P. Abbott of the college's English department, has been "drafted" to teach history for a six-weeks period. He will be replaced then by Dr. James H. Bass, regular department member now teaching a summer course at the University of Texas.

If He Has Power He Needs Is Now

AUSTIN, Tex., June 16—If H. W. Pennie has the powers advertised in letters mailed at Brenham, Texas, he had better get them working fast on Federal Judge W. A. Keeling.

Judge Keelig has postponed sentencing Pennie on a charge of using the mails improperly and directed federal officers to find out if there are "higher-ups" in the case.

Lucky numbers to cover "everything through life" were among the advertised commodities obtainable for $7. For $5 numbers to win policy games could be had, and for $20 spells could be removed. For half that price general good health, success and happiness was obtainable.

Hundred Thousand Tons Of Rubber To Be Sought In Texas

By United Press

DALLAS, Texas June 13—A good one hundred thousand tons of rubber has been set for Texas in a two-week rubber salvage drive planned yesterday by four war production board regional agencies.

The rubber will come from houses, auto graveyards, industrial plants, commercial institutions, and junk heaps of all types. Filling stations will be the collection bureaus.

The drive will start Monday. Commander in chief of the drive will be E. E. Kirkpatrick, chairman of the Texas Salvage Committee, with his chief aids George Butler, the committee's executive secretary, and Lewis Huff, assistant executive secretary.

Massive Walls Of State Capitol Are Shown By Repairs

AUSTIN (UP) — The massive construction of the Texas state capitol was revealed when workmen this week began enlarging the elevator shaft openings, so a bottleneck in capitol traffic can be widened.

Inside walls were found to be more than three feet thick. They are made of limestone which has not deteriorated in the more than 50 years since the walls were built.

Outside walls are huge slabs of red granite. First plans called for the entire building to be of limestone, and that was one of the reasons the celebrated Austrian-born sculptress Elizabet Ney opened a studio in Austin. She expected to do a series of figures for the building.

Instead, native Texas granite from Llano county was used, the stone being donated in order to obtain an outlet for the huge granite deposits of the area.

Benediction — Rev. E. N. Scarlett.

SCRAP RUBBER COLLECTION RULES GIVEN

DALLAS — Salvage officials in the regional War Production Board office today gave this advice on how to cooporate with President Roosevelt's all-out nation-wide scrap rubber salvage campaign:

1. Collect old and discarded rubber items around your home and yard. Acceptable scrap rubber includes tires of any kind whether automobile or baby carriage, rubbr tubes, patches, boots, reliners, and cut up parts except heads and buffings. Also wanted are old rubber boots, shoes, soles, heels, drug sundries such as hot water bottles and rubber gloves; rubberized clothing, bathing caps, and a multitude of miscellaneous things like rubber mats, hose, jar rings, fly swatters, rubber stamps and pads, etc.

2. Remove all wood, iron, leather and cloth from the rubber article.

3. Take it to a filling station where you will be paid a penny a pound for this scrap rubber. The filling stations will axcept contributions.

The only kind of old rubber that is not acceptable is that in battery boxes.

Salvage officials emphasized that any profit resulting from this collection will be turned over to the U. S. O., Army Relief, Navy Relief and American Red Cross

Rationing Changes Vacation Plans

AUSTIN—Tire rationing and gasoline saving is going to result in Texas people taking their summer recreation in picnics along nearby streams or ponds, Dr. George W. Cox, state health officer, has concluded.

Accordingly he has had the state health department issue a bulletin advising safety measures on such excursions. It is by no means necessary or desirable to eliminate them from the summer program, Dr. Cox said, but it is important to observe some precaution.

His cautions are:

1 At least an hour after meals should elapse before swimming.

2. Upon the first indication of fatigue, leave the water and don't return.

3. If chilled, leave the water at once.

4. Do not enter water when you are overheated.

5. Learn to float.

6. Never swim in water that may be polluted. Swimming even within a few miles of sewage outlets is inviting possibility of desease.

For those who boat rather than swim, he advised: Don't rock the boat.

Meanest Burglar Has Been Reported

By United Press

HOUSTON, Texas, June 13—Mrs. Anna Fenn told police today that a "meanest" burglar entered her home. He drank a bottle of beer, took the canary from its cage and dumped it in the ash can, and put the cat out of the house.

Nothing except the beer was missing, and the canary still is alive.

Public To Sign Bond Pledges In County Saturday

The general public is reminded that Saturday is Bond Pledge Day in Eastland county. On this day each and every person in the county are expected to go to the place, provided in their community for the purpose, and sign a pledge stating what amount they will endeavor to spend for war bonds and stamps.

This pledge, is has been pointed out, is not legally binding, but is for the purpose of ascertaining as nearly as possible the amount of bonds that may be sold in the County for 1942.

Stevenson Wont Have Platform For Campaign

AUSTIN (UP) — Gov. Coke R. Stevenson will have no platform in his campaign for an elective term in the position he inherited when W. Lee O'Daniel became U. S. Senator.

"I never had a platform in any race I have run," Stevenson said, when surprise was expressed at his lack of planks."

"When I first ran for office," he explained, "my opponent had a fine platform. I just told the people if they would elect me I would do the best I could under the circumstances."

Particularly at this time the governor considers a platform a difficult thing. "A man may be for one thing now, but conditions are changing so rapidly that before election he may see it differently. It seems to me state financing is going to be one of the big problems ahead of us. I do not know how anyone can say now who can bear additional taxes," he told friends.

Despite lack of platforms Stevenson was elected to the state legislature four times, twice serving as speaker of the House, before he was elected lieutenant governor and presided over the Senate.

LLB Deegree Now Requires Two Years

WACO,Te x. (UP) — Baylor University Law School, under a war-time program utilizing long summer quarters has made it possible for a student to receive the bachelor of laws degree for work done during two calendar years of 24 months, Dr. Leslie Jackson, dean of the Law School, announced.

"The securing of this degree in two years rather than three as was formerly required, should prove a particular boon to women because government officials and law firms needing lawyers and legal stenographers are now seeking women with law degrees," Dean Jackson said.

Bentonite Found In Houston County By Mineral Survey

AUSTIN, Texas — (UP)—Two layers of bentonite—used chiefly in preparation of drilling muds for the petroleum industry—have been mapped in Houston County by the Statewide Mineral Resources Survey being conducted by the University of Texas Bureau of Economic Geology and the WPA, Dr. E. H. Sellards, director of the survey, has announced.

The upper layer of the mineral —which appears to offer commercial production possibilities — ranges from 1 to 4 feet in thickness, while the lower layer is only about one-third to two-thirds foot thick. Both are found over an area from Hurricane Bayou to Alabama Ferry, a distance of some 20 miles.

The largest deposit of the bentonite occurs on the Palestine highway, less than a mile northwest of Crockett. It covers about 320 acres and averages 3 feet in thickness. A second deposit of substantial size occurs about 10 miles southwest of Crockett, over an area 1.5 miles long and 0.7 of a mile wide.

General Finds All Good Soldiers Are Not In The Army

AUSTIN, Tex.,—(UP)— Maj. Gen. Henry L. T Twaddle, Commander o the 9f5th division, Knows now that army sentries are not the only ones who obey orders.

Here from Rastrop, General Twaddle was taken by Mayor Tom Miller to see the sights. They went to the Colorado River Dam named in honor of th mayor. At the gate they were stopped by a guard who refused to let them pass because they did not have a pass issued by Lower Colorado River authorities.

"He'd make a good soldier," commeted the general but the mayor's face was red.

WAR REACHES HIGHEST TEMPO ON WORLDWIDE BATTLEFRONTS TODAY

Fog Shrouds Latest Developments in Aleutian Islands Where Japanese Apparently Have Suffered Their Newest Naval Setback at Hands of U. S. Forces.

Fighting on land, on the sea and in the air reached, perhaps the greatest peak of the war on the world-wide battlefronts today as American armed forces pressed their battle to break a Japanese hold on the distant Aleutian Islands.

The American operations, which already had cost the enemy at least six or seven ships sunk or damaged off the Aleutians, were continued in fog that still clouded the outcome of action hundreds of miles west of our Dutch Harbor base.

There was also major fighting on other fronts throughout the world, where dispatches showed the following developments:

Libya—

British are driven from El Gazala stronghold, west of Tobruk, but break through an Axis trap and establish strong defenses around Tobruk. Axis claims that a large British force was trapped have been denied by the British.

Mediterranean—

Axis communiques claim a three-day battle of air and naval forces against two British convoys enroute to Malta resulted in the sinking or damaging of from 20 to 30 Allied warships, but acknowledge the loss of an Italian heavy crusier and two destroyers. The Axis dispatches say that American ships "probably" were involved in the battle.

China—

The Chinese, using more than 150,000 troops, battle to complete the capture of the wrecked Chekiang-Kiangsi Railroad in Eastern China in an efort to protect communications lines to the South Seas against future attacks. The Chinese hold an 80-mile stretch of the Railroad.

Austrailia—

Allied planes have shot down six or more Japanese crafts, making a total of 11 downed in three assaults upan Port Darwin.

Moscow—

The Red Army has halted the Germans dead in their tracks around Kharkov and Sevastopol, official Soviet advices said today. The German were said to be pounding Sevastopol with big seige guns, similar to the "Big Berthas" of World War 1, and a force of 100,000 troops after abandoning their massed tank attacks because of heavy losses.

Egypt—

Units of the United States Air Corps and British planes have been engaged in support of British naval operations in the Central and Eastern Mediterranean in the last four days, it was revealed at Cairo tonight.

Kilday Says He Is Not Guilty Of Sharp Practices

AUSTIN ,(UP) — James E. Kilday, director of the motor division of the Texas Railroad Commission, and brother of Cong. Paul Kilday of San Antonio told the State Democratic Executive Committee here this week that he was not guilty of any sharp practice in filing for the short term of Railroad Commissioner on June 1 — statutory last day for filing candidacies for state-wide offices in the primary election.

The vacancy in the office is for a term beginning Jan. 1, 1943, Kilday said, and Commissioner Jerry Sadler had announced for more than 20 days before June 1 that he was gong to resign. Kilday contended that was "notice to the world" there would be a vacancy and that anyone who wanted to run should have filed for it.

Kilday referred to those who complained as "would-be railroad commissioners who did not understand the law."

When the vacancy begins, Kilday argued, has nothing to do with the controversy because whoever is appointed to fill the vacancy will serve until Jan. 1, 1943, regardless of who is elected to take over on that date.

Committeeman Ernest Wilson of Abilene argued that Sadler's resignation was an "if" resignation dependent on his acceptance for Army service. He said it is only fair for everyone to have an opportunity to run for the office and that Kilday "will not be hurt unless he wants to run without an opponent.

Candidates' Wives Taking Big Part In Campaigns

AUSTIN (UP) — Wives of the three former governors who are rivals for United States Senators are taking active parts in their husband's races.

Mrs. W. Lee O'Daniel has announced that she will again be manager of her husband's campaign. Mrs. Jo Betsy Allred has sent out a personal appeal to friends to help in Jimmie Allred's campaign, and Mrs. Dan Moody was an eager listener at the opening of her husband's campaign in Taylor.

The organization of women voters has been made an early part of the Moody strategy. Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum, who he appointed secretary of state; Mrs. Cecil Smith of Sherman; Mrs. John Claybrook of Austin; and other women who did valiant campaign work in Moody's first race for governor, are again at the helm organizing women's clubs all over the state.

Mrs. Allred, who was at first thought to favor her husband continuing as federal judge, said that while he was on the bench her husband found more leisure time to share with his family than had been possible when he was governor, but that he felt there was a national crisis and he ought to offer to serve where he can do most good.

"I find his spirit contagious," she wrote, "to such an extent that I have been involuntarily swept into an attitude of enthusiasm about the whole matter, and here I am in the rooting section trying to make it possible for him to carry the ball."

CANDIDATES TO FOREGO ANY MORE RALLIES

In an effort to conserve rubber and assist the war effort in every was possible, the candidates for the various offices in a meeting in the ninety-first district court room Monday afternoon, voted to hold no political rallies, or accept any invitations to the various communities for speaking dates during the political campaign.

Mark McGee, State Rationing oficer, has requested that no political rallies be held, either local or state, and has stated that those using rationing tires to attend political rallies would not be eligible for new tires, and that those who attended would not be eligible for tires when the ones they were using wore out.

The motion not to hold rallies pertains only to the candidates as a group, and brought out plainly that no invitations would be accepted by the group to go into any community and attend pie suppers, etc, and make political speeches.

In the discussion it was brought out that this would be as fair for one candidate as another, and fair to all communities if no invitations were accepted to make political speeches or hold political rallies.

The candidates also voted not to hand out cards or campaign literature on elcetion day.

County Commitee Certifies Names Of Candidates

The County Democratic Executive Committee met Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the 91st District Court room in Eastland and certified names of candidates who made application for a place on the Democratic Primary ballot, and also assessed the candidates for the various offices their pro rata part in defraying the expenses of holding the election.

The candidates did not draw for places on the ballot, due to a mixup in the certifying of names by the State Committee for the office of Railroad Commissioner, and the drawing for places on the ballot was postponed until next Monday, at which time a committee appointed Monday, will meet again and draw for places on the ballot.

All candidates have until midnight June 20th to pay their assessments.

Victory From The Air

Quite apart from wishful thinkers, there is becoming apparent a new note of cautious optimism as to the probable duration of the war.

In part, undoubtedly, this is attributable to the fact that our long retreat before the axis appears to have been nearly halted. When we resist now we hope for success, instead of having to concede that we're stalling with men's lives for delay. Actually we are taking limited offensives. The tide seems all but halted, and ready to turn in our favor.

But the newer optimism rests also upon more general acceptance of a theory which only a few have advanced consistently. The idea is spreading that the war can be won from the air by bombing.

Hitler thought that, of course, and tried it out against England. It proved false in his case. Though Nazi planes seemed unlimited and the British had only a few; though massed bombers broke through nightly and devastated important industrial centers as well as residential and cultural areas. Hitler discovered that he could not beat Britain from the air.

Thereupon a revulsion set in. Armchair strategists decided that wars still must be won by the slogging doughboy with his heavy pack and hand weapons. The air force could be an invaluable aid, but no more.

Now, however, Great Britain has begun going to town. Where the Nazis dropped 680,000 pounds of bombs on poor Coventry, the British tossed some 700,000 pounds each on Rostock and Lubeck. Where the Luftwaffe devastated London with 1,200,000 pounds of explosives and incendiaries, the R. A. F. has ruined both Cologne and Essen with more than 6,000,000 pounds of bombs in one night, each.

British Air Marshal A. T. Harris forecasts nights soon when 3000 United Nations planes will drop 11 million pounds of bombs on Hitler's industrial areas.

So we are shifting back to the 1940 Hitler viewpoint. We say the Luftwaffe failed because it did not follow through strongly enough — that we now have the material with which to accomplish against Germany what Hitler failed to achieve against Britain.

The idea is that such mighty death blasts as we can throw from the air can soften the Reich so effectively—in morale, but particularly by destroying her war production—that relatively few land fighters can almost stroll to Berlin.

If you hear a great silence it's the children crying because vacation time is coming.

If you really want to learn to swim this summer get some smart duck to teach you.

Observes Horned Frog For 13 Years

How long a Texas horned frog will live if alowd to round out its natural life is a moot qustion. Old Rip, the now famous frog that slep for more than a quarter of a centeury confined in the corner stone of the Eastland county courthouse, was an example of there longevity.

Now comes "Pack" Kilborn, former sheriff of Eastland county with a story which he vouches for Kilborn says that for thirteen years now he has been observing a horned frog in his garden. This frog, which Kilborn identifies by the fact that its tail has been severed near the body and the right hind leg is off at the first joint, has appeared early each spring for the past thirteen years and when hibernating time comes hurries itself in his flower bed.

Kilborn stated that his attention was atracted to the frog because of its tail being off and a part of its leg being gone and he has watched it closely. He states that it is smaller in size than when he first discovered it thirteen years ago, the scales on its body appears to be thicker and darker in color but otherwise it appears to be no different to other horned frogs.

Solution To Child Parking Problem Is Being Sought

AUSTIN, Texas, —The only possible solution to the problem of caring for the children of mothers employed in defense industries lies in the co-operation of government and social agencies and in the use of volunteer workers, declares Miss Lucile Emerson, assistant professor of home economics and director of the University of Texas nursery school.

"Most women are not going to be willing to work unless they can be assured of adequate care for their children," Miss Emerson said, "and there doesn't seem to be much question as to the necessity for women workers in war plants."

The responsibiltiy for caring for these children should fall mainly upon the community, Miss Emerson declared, but she added that financial burden of operating child centers should fall at least partially upon the mothers.

"The colleges and universities, in spite of their best efforts, will never be able to supply enough trained child specialists to meet the immediate need," she revealed. "The only way to build up a trained staff is to train volunteer workers on the spot."

In industrial centers, the best way to care for children of workers is through an expanded school program and an organization for the care of pre-school children, Miss Emerson explained.

"The first step is to survey the needs for the community—how many pre-school children must cared for and what the present facilities for caring for them are," she pointed out. "All of the community health and welfare agencies should co-operate in this work, and in the second step of expanding already existing facilities and creating new ones."

Miss Emerson emphasized the need for trained workers in charge of child centers, but said that their training could be passed on to volunteer workers.

"There is no reason why women taking advantage of such a service should expect it to be free," she said. "Wages in defense industries are high enough to enable the mother to pay at least part of the expense of child centers or day nurseries."

The Payoff

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Capt. T. DeWitt Carr justifies athletics in the services.

"Athletes are doing a double job for the Navy," says Captain Carr, executive officer of the Great Lakes Training Station. "They are doing their regular job as sailors and added duties in entertaining other sailors, increasing enlistments and raising funds for the Navy Relief Society."

There are no athletic assignments for the duration in the armed forces. For example, if there is a basketball team at Great Lakes next winter it will be a new one. Two members of last season's squad have, by reason of naval activity, earned commissions as ensigns and are undergoing intensive training before assignment to the fleet. Another has been accepted for flight training. The others will follow these men into the front lines.

The basketball team had only one hour practice daily and that only after the members had completed their regular duties as company commanders or assistants in the mass physical hardening program in which every recruit takes part. The same is true of the baseball team.

A THIRD of the basketball team's 36 games were played at the station. More than 4000 recruits witnessed each engagement.

The baseball team has already played seven games at Great Lakes, including one against the Chicago Cubs. All major league and several American Association outfits will appear before the campaign is concluded. More than 8000 recruits witnessed each home showing. For many it is the first opportunity to see big league aggregations. No admission is charged at Great Lakes.

"Recruits work hard and must have relaxation at the end of the day," explains Captain Carr. "These teams give recruits something in which they take pride. They call it 'our' team. It means much to their morale."

Following an appearance of the basketball team, enlistments increased from 15 to 40 per cent in localities where it performed.

The baseball club to date has met college teams almost entirely. While the schools realized the Great Lakes combination was considerably stronger, they co-operated to the fullest extent by playing the bluejackets on their home fields so students could see the type of men the Navy needs by the thousands.

T & P Official Is Appointed To A Defense Task

W. T. Long, Jr., superintendent transportation of the Texas and Pacific Railway has been appointed deputy associate director, Office of Defense Transportation, effective Friday, June 12.

The Office of Defense Transportation was created by executive order of President Roosevelt on Dec. 18, 1941, with Joseph B. Eastman, chairman of Interstate Commerce Commission as director. The office was created to assure maximum utilization of the domestic transportation facilities of the nation for the successful prosecution of the war. Further, it is set up to coordinate the transportation policies and activities of the several federal agencies and private transportation groups in effecting such adjustments in the domestic transportation system of the nation as may be necessary.

The Office of Defense Transportation will maintain close liaison with the armed forces in order to insure prompt and proper movements of troops and supplies.

Within the office is a division of railway transport, of which Long will be deputy associate director. It will be his duty to cooperate with the various railroads throughout the southwestern area, and with the army, navy and marine corps and their respective air forces in the efficient handling of their transportation problems. He will also assist in coordination of rail-truck transportation.

Long was born in Desoto, Mo. He was with the Missouri Pacific Railway several years serving in the mechanical accounting and operating departments. He also served several months with the Cotton Belt Railway and came to the Texas and Pacific Railway on March 1, 1918, serving as chief clerk to the general manager, assistant to the general manager, and train master. He has been superintendent of transportation since March 1, 1929. He has been borrowed by the government and is on leave of absence from the Texas and Pacific Railway for the duration. His offices will be in the Southwestern Life Building, Dallas, Texas.

FAREWELL TO ABAS

CHAPTER XIII

BILL TALCOTT'S change of manner had one immediate if unforeseen effect. It scared the daylights out of Professor Constantine.

Apparently Martha Swenson had said something to the Professor about Bill Talcott's being a "political" prisoner, and he had studiously remained out of the way. But as a member of the group assembled on the pier he couldn't very well avoid Talcott, and when orders crackled from the deposed boss's lips he acted as if he expected knives and blackjacks to appear in an encore of his entry to Abas Island. When the launch came alongside, the Professor was first board, stowing himself as far forward as the confines of space would allow. And there he barricaded himself with luggage, muttering and munching pills.

June Paterson, unpredictable creature, also suffered an abrupt transformation. Came down from her high horse, lowered her nose and chin, inspected Bill Talcott with a new light in her wide gray-blue eyes. It made him uncomfortable, because each time he happened to glance in her direction she would blush and glance hastily away. This was a new problem; vaguely he wished she would keep on acting as a spoiled brat because that way he knew, or thought he did, how to handle her.

Martha Swenson's attitude had changed, too. Because she knew he was in trouble of some kind her sympathies were aroused. There was a new glow of warmth in her dark eyes and by accident or design he found her nearer to him; heard her low, disturbing voice directed to him more frequently. The change was startling, and he discovered it was a change he rather liked.

Struthers didn't come down to see them off. Another conference with Halsey and transfer of the precious envelope had wound him up. The last time Talcott saw him he was headed for the office. Even Halsey had been a little nettled. Talcott had overheard him confiding to June Paterson that sometimes people took themselves entirely too seriously.

To Talcott himself, Halsey had nothing to say. Plainly embarrassed he was over the way in which his handling of the transportation problem had turned out. Once in the launch he sat by June Paterson and maintained glum silence, occupying himself with a study of fleeting nimbus clouds.

MacDowell had nothing to say either. Apparently angry at Bill Talcott for refusing his advice, he wedged himself near the stern and kept solemn aloofness. There were plenty of problems other than Talcott to bother him. Already, as Sebastien turned the roomy craft toward dark water, MacDowell's ears were assuming an unbecoming shade of green.

ONLY black Tomas remained on the pier to watch them go. The massive native was proudly erect, accepting his new responsibility with greatest dignity. As the churning wake widened the distance between them Bill Talcott realized suddenly that he was not going away, that in truth he had never really been there. Physically, yes. His body had existed on Abas Island. He had followed a routine, had worked, produced, eaten, slept and sometimes played. But he had never truly been a part of Abas.

He had brought his own world with him, his customs, traditions, thoughts and inhibitions. That world he had never left behind; had worn it all the while as a suit of armor. Of Abas he had never been and could never be a part. He and his kind could come here for a hundred or a thousand years, but Abas would always belong to the men of whom huge, patient, childlike Tomas was a symbolic figure.

The great brassy ball of the sun dropped into the sea. Brief twilight and then the moon, which had been high in the heavens since 3 o'clock, took on ghostly radiance. Low clouds moved swiftly in the brisk northeast trades.

Under the expert hand of Sebastien the sturdy launch ate up the miles in quiet, vibrationless performance. "What time will we get in?" Halsey asked Bill Talcott in his first direct approach since quitting the pier.

"I'd say at 4 o'clock or so."

"Four! Will we be able to get hotel accommodations?"

"I don't know. At worst, we can pass the few remaining hours in the launch."

June Paterson had lighted a cigaret and behind its glowing tip her eyes smoldered. "You don't seem to worry much about the comfort of your guests," she murmured in another abrupt shift to flippancy.

"In any event we can't land until we've had permission from the harbormaster," Talcott answered patiently. "We'll have to clear immigration. Just what luck we'll strike arousing anybody, I don't know."

Halsey grumbled, "Don't see why we can't tie up and go to a hotel. The authorities can wait until morning."

Talcott couldn't resist it. "Do you think Struthers would approve?

"Damn Struthers! I know that I for one am hungry, tired and uncomfortable. I wish to heaven we'd thought to bring sandwiches!"

A lump in the stern bestirred itself. "Food!" MacDowell groaned. "Don't nobody mention that word again!"

* * *

JUNE PATERSON laughed easily. As swift and unpredictable as the wind, her mood was off on another track. "I remember," she said softly, "when I was a very little girl. We lived in the central part of New York State, and in the fall we would always go on picnics. Uncle Jack, Lowell's father, had a big farm and there was a huge woodlot with a wonderful brook meandering through it. We used to ramble through the woods, gathering butternuts and chestnuts to roast over the fire Uncle Jack and daddy had built on a slope of rock by the brook.

"One day Lowell and I decided that we wanted to go swimming and the brook was much too shallow. So while mother and Aunt Ida and my sisters and cousins were laying out the food on blankets, and daddy and Uncle Jack and the other men were smoking their pipes and talking about the county fair and harness racing and crops, Lowell and I built a dam. There was a narrow place where the brook had worn through soft rock and we chucked it full of stones and plugged the leaks with sod and leaves. We worked like beavers and everybody was so busy they didn't take any notice of us.

"All of a sudden we heard a lot of yells and daddy and Uncle Jack came running. Our dam was so successful the brook had made a pond and the potato salad and sandwiches were floating around and the fire was out. And that was the end of the picnic."

Halsey and Martha Swenson joined in her laughter, and even the Professor seemed to think it funny enough to venture a chuckle. But Bill Talcott was silent. Her recital had caused a wave of nostalgia to sweep over him. He remembered Lowell's farm; remembered the woods and the brook and the butternut trees. But through all this memory, stirred by an evident offer of truce on the girl's part, lingered the shadow that she had been spying while he and MacDowell talked.

SATURDAY IS SIGNUP DAY ON WAR BONDS

W. F. Creager, local chairman of the bond sales committee, announced today that Cyrus B. Frost of Eastland, county chairman, has set Saturday, June 20 as the day for everyone to register in the campaign to secure 100 per cent cooperation in the war effort. This registration will be held in the Chamber of Commerce offices. "Everyone in Ranger is being urged to sign one of the pledges to purchase as many war bonds and stamps as they can afford, whether or not they have signed the salary allotment cards," Creager said today.

The chairman pointed out that the pledge to purchase could be on a weekly or monthly basis if one was on regular salary, or if they had irregular income, or an income that came at greater periods they could agree to purchase quarterly, or one a year.

"No one is barred from signing up in the registration," Creager said today. "For instance a farmer, whose principal income comes in the fall, can sign up to make a purchase upon harvest of his crops, or those whose income is annual can do likewise and make one purchase, instead of weekly or monthly purchases."

EAT THE RIGHT FOODS

This Chart Based On U. S. Government's Guide To Good Nutrition

MILK
One quart for children and one pint for adults. Or cheese or evaporated or dried milk.

EGGS
At least 3 or 4 a week, cooked any way you choose or in "made" dishes.

MEAT, POULTRY OR FISH
One or more servings daily. Dried beans, peas or nuts occasionally.

ORANGES, TOMATOES, GRAPEFRUIT—at least one of these every day.

VEGETABLES
Green, Leafy and Yellow—one big helping or more each day—some raw, some cooked.

POTATOES, APPLES, BANANAS—other vegetables and fruits in season, every day.

BREAD AND CEREAL—whole grain products or enriched white bread and flour, macaroni, spaghetti.

BUTTER, FATS, SWEETS—peanut butter, similar spreads and seasonings as you like them.

Save The Vitamins With Modern Gas Cooking

Your gas range is ideally suited to modern "waterless cooking" that saves vegetable vitamins and minerals. Use as little water as possible, bring to boiling point quickly over high flame, then turn to simmer heat and cook gently until done. Keep utensils covered but not tightly sealed. Do not stir unless necessary and do not add baking soda. If you follow this vitamin-saving procedure, you will serve foods that are not only more healthful, but look and taste better.
