

JAPAN IS DUE BIG SURPRISE IN ATTACK ON ALASKA BASES

By CHARLES ARNOT

United Press Staff Correspondent

HEADQUARTERS, UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 15.—(UP)—Japan's bases in the Aleutians are a potential threat to both Alaska and Siberia but the Japanese will get a surprise if they try a major offensive from them, a high naval officer said last night after a tour of the fog-bound islands.

"Right now the Japanese have not much in the way of strategic positions," he said. "The fact that they have to hold constitutes a threat east and west. But key American bases are strongly defended and the immediate enemy menace is not great."

In the first eye-witness description of the Aleutian situation by an officer under the command of Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Pacific fleet, the informant said that because of the heavy, unpredictable weather operations at present were a sort of Indian warfare in which stealth was the chief factor.

The informant, reporting on developments in the last month, indicated that the Japanese were working to develop the bases, chiefly at Kiska, 600 miles west of Dutch Harbor, but he declined to speculate on possible specific enemy moves.

He agreed that the Japanese might have 10,000 men in the area.

"Our forces have made many effective bombing attacks on the Japanese," he said, "and are hampering Japanese attempts to develop bases, mainly at Kiska.

"Uncertain weather is a common obstacle to both American and Japanese forces. This type of weather provides a chance for Indian warfare and both sides are taking advantage of it. Either side is likely to get whacked in warfare based on stealth. The only certain thing about the weather is its uncertainty."

Even local knowledge of the weather does not help much, the officer said, because the combination of fog and sudden wind changes makes conditions difficult to forecast.

During one 30-day period, he explained, it was possible to see the horizon on three days during brief sunny periods which permitted limited operations.

"We roam up and down the Aleutian chain constantly in heavy weather and fog," he said. "It is a constant battle against the weather and it demands the greatest resourcefulness and courage."

During the recent bombardment of Kiska, he said, American Navy surface ships advanced close to the dangerous shores in ultra-heavy weather and fog so thick the crews could barely see the blinker lights on the ships closest to them. For that reason, he explained, it was impossible to observe the results.

"If enemy aircraft carriers are operating there they are doing so under extreme difficulty and they are vulnerable to surprise attack," he said.

At the moment, he added, the sea was calm, but other elements remained difficult. The fogs generally clear by September, he said, but then comes strong gales and the temperature drops below zero.

Grandfather Is Doing Nicely Thank You!

County clerk, R. V. (Rip) Galloway had two granddaughters but was not satisfied. He wanted a grandson and was overjoyed when the news came from his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Watson of Breckenridge, that a son was born to them on August 15.

While receiving congratulations from friends Galloway revealed that he had delivered an ultimatum to the young couple that the "youngster" must be a boy.

Marshall Watson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. (Jim) Watson of Eastland.

Latest reports from Breckenridge were that the mother and young son were getting along splendidly. Also a check-up on grandfather Galloway that he is doing nicely and on the road to permanent recovery.

Despite the fighting, the Star correspondent stated, Tulagi Harbor already is the center for Allied activities in the Solomon Island area.

The Tulagi report was followed by admissions by the Axis radio that the American Marines had made landings and had caught the Japanese by surprise, and that the Marines now hold at least two positions on the island.

LONDON, Eng. Aug. 15. (UP)

The London Evening Star reported today from Sydney, Australia, that there were indications that the Tulagi Harbor, in the Solomon Islands, rapidly will be transformed into an Allied advance base.

It was expected, the newspaper correspondent reported, that the base will eventually become a "jumping off place for major excursions" against the Japanese, and possibly against Japan proper.

The Star's correspondent said that substantial equipment can be expected to be concentrated at Tulagi, although the furious fighting in progress still surrounds the island.

Clark Gable Wins First Skirmish As An Army Private

HOUSTON, Tex. Aug. 15.—

(UP)—Clark Gable emerged today from his first skirmish in army uniform with colors flying. He faced determined solid ranks that surrounded him with no escape apparent, then turned on that 45,000-a-week smile and the opposition was his.

It happened last night in the union station here.

His train arrived an hour late. And within five minutes, although without advance notice that the movie star was in town, hundreds of women and a number of men jammed about him on the station platform.

"Just let me touch him," glibbed one little blond.

"It really is Clark Gable, isn't it?" gasped another. "And he's got blue eyes just like I thought he had."

Gable, who has been saddened since the death of his beautiful wife, Carole Lombard, in a plane crash several months ago, melted under the warmth of the greetings and turned on his famous smile.

He managed to say between feminine sighs and a long distance to reporters, who couldn't crash through the throng, that he was going to study gunnery at Miami Beach, Fla., and would be there about four and one-half months at least.

He said he wanted to fight, but if the army asked him he would help sell bonds while training.

Several commissioned officers took the background. And after about 15 minutes, train crew members pushed back the crowd and Gable's departed.

U. S. GENERAL HINTS THERE IS SHORT TIME BEFORE SECOND FRONT

DUTCH AWAIT EXECUTION OF NAZI HOSTAGES

By JOHN A. FARRIS

United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Aug. 15. (UP)—Netherlands in exile in Great Britain waited grimly today for news that at sunrise this morning the Germans had slaughtered innocent Dutchmen because patriots who wrecked a railroad train had not been arrested.

The deadline for surrender was midnight Friday.

Gen. Friedrich Christiansen, the brutal commander in chief of the German occupation forces in the Netherlands, had announced that unless by midnight he succeeded in arresting the patriots or Dutchmen betrayed them, an unspecified number of hostages would die before German firing squads at dawn.

Eight days ago, Dutch patriots wrecked a German troop train near Rotterdam.

Christiansen at first tried to win betrayers by offering a reward of 100,000 Dutch guilders, $4,000 for the betrayal of the patriots.

He promised oily that traitors would be treated "most confidentially."

Then in his anger and frustration he broadcast the Prussian warning to the Dutch nation:

"If the saboteurs do not give themselves up or are not caught, especially with the co-operation of Netherlands, before midnight for August 14, the lives of a number of hostages now in Germany will be forfeit."

"The arrests of the saboteurs is in the interests of the Netherlands themselves to protect the lives of the hostages."

The Netherlands government in exile feared that the Germans 1,600 or more prominent Dutchmen as hostages, to be murdered at their pleasure—possibly, even if the saboteurs were arrested without Dutch cooperation, Christiansen had warned.

The hostages had been drawn from all over the Netherlands and included all social and intellectual leaders.

In arresting them originally the Germans apparently hoped they were getting men who would aid any second front landing or commando raids on the Dutch coast.

But instead of surrendering the patriots who blew up the German troop train, Dutch patriots this week attempted to destroy a German army radio station.

British sources reported that the Germans in Norway had murdered three patriots who gave food and clothing to Russian Marines.

It was reported also that Norwegian guerrillas, on the Norwegian arctic coast, had killed several Germans, captured arms and ammunition and dynamited several German ammunition trucks in guerrilla raids.

Only one body was recovered from the ship which plunged into the Pacific Ocean off San Diego, Mrs. Myles B. Ellis of Hammer Field said the Army believes others were trapped.

The missing included Sgt. Elias Saucedo, San Antonio, Texas.

United Press Staff Correspondent LONDON, Aug. 15. (UP)—Lieut. Gen. Dwight W. Eisenhower, American commander in the European theater, said today the "time is short" for training American forces to "stand the most rigorous operations."

Eisenhower said that the American troops under his command must get the most intensive training in all phases.

"This is true," he said with emphasis, "because the time is short—because the problems we have demand the ultimate in trained personnel—because our men must be toughened and hardened physically to stand the most rigorous operations."

As he spoke American Marines were in their first offensive in the Pacific war, and were reported to have strengthened their hold on the Solomon Islands. American fighter planes were also going into action for the first time over the Western Desert of Egypt.

Gen. Eisenhower did not forecast any date for the zero hour for American land fighting in Europe but he denied any friction had arisen between the Royal Air Force and the American air units in Britain.

Meanwhile the pattern of fighting on the Russian Front was little changed.

The Soviets counter attacked on the central and northern fronts and appeared to be making some headway. In the Caucasus the Nazi advance proceeded, but at a reduced pace.

Let's Not Fight Each Other

Out of Washington comes disturbing reports concerning the inability of our war administrators to work together. It would appear that too many in the nation's capital are not looking up, occasionally, at the government-prepared poster that suggests:

"Let's fight Hitler, not each other."
In general, it would seem that the civilian side of the war effort, represented by Donald Nelson, and the military side, represented by Lieut.-Gen. Brehon Somervell, Vice-Admiral Samuel Robinson, are at loggerheads.

As described by one veteran observer, the controversy rests upon a fundamental disagreement in philosophy. The civilian attitude is said to be that the armed services can have all that is left after important non-military needs have been met. The Army and the Navy, on the contrary, contend that they should have the first call upon everything and then, if there should be a surplus, that can go to civilians.

If one had to choose between two such extreme viewpoints, in times like these he probably would side with General Somervell and Admiral Robinson.

Unless the Army and Navy get what they need, there won't be anything at all for civilians—not even the fundamentals of liberty.

Fortunately, it is not necessary to go to either extreme. Both Nelson and Somervell—and Robinson, by repute—are too decent, too sensible, too tolerant to let stiff necks interfere long with the co-operation without which our war effort must suffer.

Unquestionably the Army and Navy must have everything to go without every luxury and most comforts. Donald Nelson will bet he first to concede to that.

On the other hand, General Somervell and Admiral Robinsons they need with which to fight even though that son would not question that there are certain essentials without which the civilian production system cannot continue to function.

We at home can and must give up much that we have refined thus far in the war. The Army and the Navy must toss tradition out of the window and accept substitutes in laundry equipment, cots, broom-bindings, utility hardware, oil cans and other non-critical items.

That such compromises can be worked out is evidenced in the discovery that cartridge cases, highly critical military item, can be made from steel just as well as from brass. The good will of big men will not permit silly disputes to go on.

The average American family spends $10 a year for soap—and that's where the little kids get it in the neck.

If we must have inflation, let's make it just enough to fill our tires properly—and save rubber.

If there's any truth in that "seven years of bad luck" gag, breaking a mirror is no wise crack.

Canadians Man Handy Assault Weapon

THE Bren gun is a handy weapon, according to the men of Canada's Highland Light Infantry on active service overseas. They are useful from a universal carrier, deadly when set up in a machine gun emplacement, as weapons for assault troops bring from the hip and finally, as ack-ack protection against low-flying aircraft. Pte W. A. Smith of Alvinston, Ont., with the gun and Corp. W. C. Thurgood of Hespeler, Ont., are shown setting up ack-ack protection for the assault group as it storms an "enemy" stronghold during field exercises. Volunteer enlistments in Canada in the army, navy and air force are approximately a quarter million, with about 200,000 of these on active service overseas. An observer from the United States recently remarked that the United States will reach the same point on a pro rata population basis when more than two million men are fighting overseas. Output of Bren guns in Canadian munitions plants is nearing 4,500 monthly which, added to production of more than a score other guns of all types, reflects an industrial war effort of "enormous" magnitude.

The Payoff

BY FRANKLIN LEWIS
Sports Editor, Cleveland Press

CLEVELAND—There will be a hefty drive this fall to select James Luther Sewell the manager-of-the-year because of his extraordinary feat in transforming the Browns into a baseball team. I have no quarrel with James Luther. He is one of my favorite persons, a sound baseball strategist and if you catch him with his intellect down, maybe he will show you his assorted college degrees.

But as much as I like James Luther, he is, after all, an adult of more than 40 summers. He has learned to pause before thinking and he has picked up a few slices of the mellowed wisdom that comes with graduation adolescence.

So I will be forced to pass up James Luther as a candidate for manager-of-the-year and turn the palm over to Louis Boudreau, Jr., who was not even gifted with a middle moniker by his parents. Probably Papa Boudreau thought that the Junior tag would be sufficient.

You probably know the details of Boudreau's appointment to the manager's chair in the Cleveland wigwam, of his age—he just turned 25—of his flair for leadership, his confidence in himself.

WE who know Boudreau aren't surprised in the least. No one who ever dealt with this serious young man ever could doubt he would succeed as a manager. If Lou has a serious fault stemming from his managerial debut, it would be that of over-seriousness, and it may be a fault, at that. Lou's personal conduct and the little touches he has added to the Tribe's behavior as a unit have reflected the confidence President Alva Bradley of the Cleveland team had in him.

The Indians are not, by construction, a second or third-place team. They began this season with two habitual minor leaguers, First Baseman Les Fleming and Outfielder Ocie Hackett, occupying key positions in the regular lineup. Bob Feller, baseball's greatest pitcher, was gone. Hal Trusky, a slugging first baseman, retired from baseball at the age of 29.

The Tribe lacks a batting punch. It has had, for two of its starting pitchers, old fellows like Mel Harder and Al Smith. The club lacks suitable replacements. Oscar Grimes, the fan-favorite, never has recovered 100 per cent from an eye injury, the result of being hit by a batted ball.

Harry Grayson, NEA Service Sports Editor, is on vacation. In his absence, noted sports authorities will contribute to his column.

HOUSTON, Aug. 16—Pierce Brooks, Dallas, who in the July Democratic primary polled a plurality of more than 64,000 votes over his nearest opponent, with eleven candidates in the race, is grateful to the voters of Texas for their overwhelming endorsement of his candidacy for the unexpired term of Railroad Commissioner.

Brooks polled 420,000 votes in the previous primary and enters the present Democratic runoff primary confident of victory. Throughout Texas everyone is saying "Pierce Brooks is the man qualified to serve on the Texas Railroad Commission and is the man entitled to the unexpired term."

Brooks campaign pledge is "Win the war first." He promises to work toward the conservation of Texas' natural and physical resources, more money for better schools, harmony between state and federal governments in the transportation of troops and materials in our all-out war effort and co-operation with the oil men and freight lines of our state.

He is against the rationing of gasoline in Texas, pointing out it is unnecessary, due to our many means of easy, fast transportation and distribution facilities, which are not available on the eastern seaboard where rationing is now being experienced. Rationing of gasoline would take needed taxes away from schools, would hinder families in time of sickness or emergency from driving their sick and injured to the hospitals or doctors. "It is absolutely unnecessary in Texas," says Brooks.

Hear Pierce Brooks' state wide radio address, Monday, Aug. 17, at 8:30 p. m., over radio station WBAP, and the Texas Quality Network. His speech will be of vital interest to all voters of Texas. PIERCE BROOKS FOR RAILROAD COMMISSIONER (UNEXPIRED TERM). (Paid Political adv.)

SERIAL STORY
BANNERS FLYING
BY MARY RAYMOND

THE STORY: Christie Colton has been a badly injured young man to a hospital. The young man seems to think he knows her. In her return home, Christie discovers he is Stephen Marston, with whom her twin sister Jan is in love. In the ensuing months Christie's nurse, Bart Sanderson, joins the Air Force. In the course of a party in Jan's honor comes news of the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

CHAPTER VI
A PARTY people would never forget—
Well, at least Christie would never forget it, but she could not look ahead.
Right now, Jan was standing in the doorway of Christie's room.
"Oh, twinnie, you're beautiful!" Christie breathed.

"Am I?" Jan asked, her voice stirred by excitement. "I really wanted to be tonight—for just once in my life I want people to stare at me. I'd like to be like you."

"Goodness, Jan, I never looked as beautiful as that. You're like Cinderella—only there won't be any cinders for you tomorrow."

Christie's eyes followed the retreating shimmer that was Jan's gown. "Don't forget to bring Stephen to me," she called.

She secured pink camellias on the shoulder of the simple, white formal she had chosen, and hurried downstairs. She saw her father's pleased appraisal of Jan as she took her place beside him in the receiving line.

Just then, Christie caught Hollis' eyes. He was standing near the entrance. He looked troubled, and, instantly, Christie felt a sober certainty that something had gone wrong. Nothing except some major domestic disaster could prick through the butler's English calm.

"What's the matter, Hollis?" Christie had crossed the room quickly.
"These, Miss Christie. They've been coming in steadily for the last hour."

Christie's hand shook as she lifted the stack of envelopes from the silver tray. "Don't say anything to Mother, Hollis," she cautioned. She fled to her room, sat down and began opening the notes. Calling cards—any number of them... Mrs. Pemberton Brooks regrets... Mrs. Donald Trent regrets... Miss Elizabeth Trent...

Miss Lancaster, a member of Westwood's oldest family wrote: "I'm not in a party mood tonight, Eleanor. All I can think about is that Westwood's boys will soon be in this awful war."

Christie dropped the stack into the wastepaper basket. She was feeling a burning resentment against the letter-writers. What terrible things people could do in the name of patriotism.
Well, she wouldn't let them do this to Jan!

She picked up the little French phone on her desk and dialed quickly. Miss Lancaster answered. "This is Christie Colton, Miss Sarah," Christie said, coolly. "I think you are old enough to know what patriotism is—it hasn't anything to do with intolerance and petty punishment."

"Well!" Miss Lancaster exclaimed. "I don't know what the world is coming to when young people start insulting their elders. And don't you remind me of my age, Christie Colton."

"What some of you are doing is going to leave a scar on Jan as long as she lives," Christie continued. "I'm ashamed of you, Miss Sarah."

"I'm ashamed of myself," came Miss Sarah's voice. "I have been ever since I sent that note. I think you are a pretty brave girl, and I'm coming over as soon as I can get into my best dress. Anything else I can do for you?"

"You can call about a dozen people for me."
"Give me the names, but I think I know them already."

SOMEONE caught Christie by the shoulders and whirled her around. "Hey, young sprout!"
"Bart—LIEUTENANT!" Christie cried.

"Thought I'd surprise you. Like the 'wing'?"
Christie could only nod, but her expression seemed to please Bart. "Think you could live on a Lieutenant's salary?"

"I know I could," Christie breathed, her voice electric with happiness. "You're volunteering for domestic service, this time, Bart. It might not be so exciting."

"Even K. P. would be exciting if you were in the kitchen," he glanced about. "Gosh, what a place to propose—and be accepted. Will you meet me in the library, later, so your fiancé can kiss you properly?"

"I'll slip away at 11," Christie said, happily.
Here and there, Christie could see some of those Miss Sarah had swung into line—"flu patients," and others who had been "out of town."

Somebody broke on Christie, and she saw Bart heading for Jan. Around 11, Christie managed to ditch a dance partner and made her way to the library.

The library was quiet, but some-

RANGER NOT REACHING WAR BOND QUOTA THE MONTH OF AUGUST

W. F. Creager, local chairman of the War Bond and Stamp Sale Drive, stated Saturday that to date Ranger people had bought but $4,112.50 in bonds and stamps so far this month, while the city's quota for the month was approximately $15,000.

"At this rate," Creager pointed out, "Ranger will not quite reach her quota if the present rate of buying is continued." Plans are now being made to have the registration drive, for signing up pledges to purchase bonds in the amount of 10 per cent of income, to start early next week, with as many people being contacted as possible.

"Ten per cent" buttons have been obtained by Creager, and will be given to anyone who signs a pledge to purchase at least 10 per cent of his income each income period. These buttons are now on hand, and will be distributed as the pledges are signed.

In pointing out how people can purchase War Bonds and Stamps Creager related the story of a Ranger woman, whose name was not revealed.

The woman went to the Commercial State Bank to purchase War Bonds. She had a collection of souvenir coins, most of which she had owned for 20 to 25 years. She turned these in on bonds, stating that in the past she had been unable to help in the bond purchase, and had decided to use her coin collection for that purpose.

In that way, Creager pointed out, the woman not only helped the local bond drive, but is aiding the United States to secure funds with which to win the war, and, in addition, the woman will now realize a return on her money where the coin collection brought in nothing.

"It is possible that we have not put out as much effort as we should," Creager commented in mentioning that Ranger was not quite meeting its bond quota, "but I believe that with a little more effort on the part of everyone—those who are now purchasing stamps and bonds, and those who have not as yet started—that our monthly quota can be reached."

Word has been received here from other sources that in many instances larger companies are now being contacted to see how well the employees are meeting the request to invest 10 per cent of their salaries in War Bonds and

Stamps, and it is expected that within time smaller concerns in the smaller towns also will be questioned about employe participation.

The discussion and meeting to follow has gained state-wide attention in Utah and promises to be of great interest to the church throughout the country.
