Let's Contain Ourselves

From the dark continent comes bright news. Rommel's forces have been smashed, and appear to be in almost panicky retreat. Any attemps they may make to stand at natural barriers, short of coastal strong points, would not seem promising.

Meanwhile, far in the rear, large American forces armed to the teeth with the most deadly of modern equipment are taking over the French northern colonies with a minimum of resistance. Soon, it seems, the axis forces will be crushed into extinction between the jaws of a vise.

Moreover, in their haste to get away, the Germans have left their Italian allies without food, water, fuel or ammunition. This might indicate any of several things, one of which is a possibility that those necessities have become virtually non-existent in axis Africa by reason of United Nations blockade of sea lanes. At any rate, the Italians can hardly be expected to love the Nazis any more for this cold-blooded desertion.

All of that is mightily encouraging. It has been so long since we have had really good war news that we can hardly be blamed for feeling that this is our night to howl.

But we have had enough cruel lessons to make us remember that pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall. We must not forget that this pleasing success, at its best is infinitely less imposing than dozens of victories which the Nazis have won during the past couple of years.

There is a tendency on the part of some commentators There is a tendency on the part of some commentators to assume that the war now is nearing an end victorious for us. We must not let enthusiasts deceive us. This is only the first upward step, and the mountain top lies so far above that as yet we can not see it through the dark clouds.

Let's assume that present operations are concluded with let's assume that present operations are concluded with let's princeton game.

Then what? Then, say the exuberant commentators, flame with impetucus hope, we leap across the Meditermnean, conquer the unenthusiastic Italians in a few weeks, march to Germany, squeeze the Nazis between the Rusdans and an Angle-American second front, and plant the Inited Nations' standards unter den Linden.

PRAISE the Lord and pass the aspirint A full report of what actually happened in the election is as disma eading as a Navy communique.

If the Democratic party feels like the Navy after Vake Island and if the Republican party feels like he untried but cocky Army, talk about a unified command is again in order. The war can't be von now as a Democrats' war. It must be won as in American war, with both parties united, both parties sharing the responsibilities, both parties aking the credit for bringing the country through the war to ultimate victory. e war to ultimate victory.

If you think Washington was all confusion be-ore, what do you think it's going to be now?

Saddest lame duck spectacle of the election is of course Sen. George Norris of Nebraska, a Progressive caught in a three-way election traffic jam. And by the way, since there's a vacancy on the Supreme Court, why wouldn't Uncle George be good man for the job, even if he is over 70?

This election makes good the old saw that the American people may never vote "for" any issue but they do vote "against" when ple margins, the next step is to take a post-election poll to find out why the pre-election polls went wrong.

Election post-mortems will lated by the executive end of the probably last as long as the war. The voters obviously didn't like what has been going on, but whether they were registering the administration would like to have it. whether they were registering their disapproval of military and naval setbacks or whether they were registering disapproval of civilian matters—price ceitings, rationing, lack of manpower, rationing, lack of manpower, there is a shutdown of small business, farm didn't mean a thing. revolt, higher taxes—those are the things every politician would.
