Homer Garrison, public safety in Texas, considers the arrest and conviction of Pvt. George S. Knapp of Camp Swift an excellent example of co-operation between state, federal and local authorities.

Knapp's death sentence, assessed by a court martial, is under review by the Judge Advocate General in Washington. He was convicted of slaying eight-year-old Lucy Rivers Maynard of Bastrop.

Private Puts His Ranch In Bank For The Duration

SAN ANGELO, Texas. Pvt. Henry G. McGhee had a ranch near Iraan (Texas) before he joined the army air forces. Yesterday he put the ranch into a safe deposit box for the duration. It had been converted into a $5,000 war bond.

Pvt. McGhee, who is with the San Angelo Army Air Field bombardier school, was worried about what he could do with the money he received from the sale of his ranch. Cash, he knew had a habit of melting away. When the bombardier school started its war bond drive, Pvt. McGhee stepped forward. "Give me the limit," he said. "When this war is over I want to have something besides service stripes."

Pvt. McGhee got the limit for this year and on January 1 he will buy another $5,000 bond and that away in the safe deposit box too. Then, with his ranch secure, he can give his full attention to whipping the Axis.

Conservation Increases Yield Of Texas Farms

"Soil and water conservation measures are increasing per acre yield of war crops wherever these methods are used in Texas," T. E. Hughes of Dublin reported this week when he returned from the second annual meeting of Texas Soil Conservation District Supervisors in Dallas. Hughes is chairman of the Upper Leon Soil Conservation District.

"District supervisors from every part of Texas told us time and again that the use of soil and water conservation practices, as recommended in the district programs, resulted in more beef and

ward. "Give me the limit," he said. "When this war is over I want to have something besides service stripes."

Definite increases in yields per acre of peanuts have been noted in the Upper Leon Soil Conservation District where farmers have been using wind and water erosion resisting and soil-building practices the past year.

Hughes said that if the President's goals for food are met next year and the next, farmers must apply conservation measures on their land to increase yields per acre. He continued that increased yields through conservation of soil and water will be the only way to meet the Food For Freedom goals in this District, since the acreage of peanuts and other crops cannot be increased without clearing additional land.

English Gremlins Have Relatives At South Plains Base

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UP)—The mischief-making horde which gives the RAF so much trouble, has relatives at South Plains Army Flying School, says SPAFS glider pilot.

The stumpy pixies who sometimes play hob with SPAFS gliders are called "Thermens" by the glider boys.

"The 'thermen' takes his name from the thermal—upcurrent of warm air which makes the gliders fly. The SPAF outfit isn't sure the thermen are blood brothers of the gremlins, but they act ugly too sometimes. In fact, they are classified as "right treacherous—sometimes."

"Themin" are peculiar to this part of West Texas, and probably have been here for a long time. In fact, old-timers avow that the thermen are responsible for dust storms which used to plague this sector. They left for a while, but are back now to harass the men in the glider planes.

Soldier Guests Are Really Cadets Of A & M College

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—Judge Bryant of the attorney general's department is a bonafide man. He likes to take soldiers home to spend the night.

On a recent evening, Bryant saw a pair of young men in uniform sitting in a hotel lobby, apparently with no place to go. "How'd you like to spend the night at my house?" asked the judge.

"Fine" chorused the young men. So, the three went to the Bryant residence and got a good night's rest. It was not until the visitors had gone that others in Bryant's family asked how he happened to pick up a couple of Tex-

PLAY BY PLAY

BY PAUL VOLVID PRESTON

COPYRIGHT, 1942, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Both sides of the stadium were wild. And so, for that matter, were players, substitutes, coaches, assistants, water boys. Plainly, Hogan of Lincoln Field had been headed for a touchdown. But the football rules were clear; Hogan's friendship with the two babies was, for once, just his hard luck. The ball was Lincoln's on the 38-yard line.

Coolest man in all the 10 minutes of excitement was Duane Hogan himself. He just stood on the field holding Link and Scooter cupped in one arm, while everybody else gestured and shouted. Blythe saw Nancy Hale, crying, run out toward Duane. A simple stiff-arm did it. Seconds later Duane was streaking for victory while in the stadium new pandemonium reigned.

It was on the following afternoon, Sunday, that the Lincoln team went down town for a theater showing of the aggie game newsreels. Norman Dana took Blythe. In spite of the 7 to 0 victory Blythe felt spiritless, and . . . They were quiet while the usual play-by-play sequences were shown, and then when the big moment was re-enacted for them, Blythe just had to be generous.

Generous Gesture CHAPTER IX Blythe Hogan had sidestepped the last Aggie tackler at about his own 40-yard marker. And that first diagonal run had placed him well over toward the Lincoln sideline.

This was ducky for the stands, the Lincoln rovers, the reporters and the press men. Hogan was about to break the 0 to 0 deadlock in a sensational 92-yard run! Scooter Hale, age 2 years, wore a distinctive Lincoln football uniform. Technically he made a fourth "man" on the field (as the sports writer later wise-cracked). Actually he was no more than a toddler, of course, but in this impulsive play he was engineered by his puppy, Link. It was Duane Hogan who had brought Scooter the puppy. It was Duane Hogan whom both babies loved. It was Duane Hogan whom both ran out to greet now.

Glancing back warily at pursuing tacklers, Duane didn't see the little ones. "Duane, Duane, look OUT!" Blythe Muller shrieked that. And a warning carried, too, because the 60,000 other spectators were momentarily spellbound. Nevertheless her warning came too late.

Duane turned, saw the babies. In that same instant the puppy leaped. "Yap-yap!" it shrilled in ecstasy. Furry paws struck Duane, spring leash entangled him. . . . momentum could have . . . To avoid the puppy, he threw the puppy. Scooter sprawled, too, hips to the left, his balance off. Link lost his balance, too, his feet came up baritone and playing. Next moment four desperate Aggie men piled on Duane. THE hullabaloo that followed lasted 10 minutes. Rooters on

The referee was clearing the field when people there heard Duane calling. "There's still a minute left, Dana. I'd sure like another chance."

Norman was standing again now, and readjusting his helmet. He answered loudly, cockily, "I wanta try it myself." The sideline group was quiet again, but the murmurs and the glances spoke volumes. So Norman Dana, conceded quarterback, was taking it out on Duane! Duane ought to have the chance if anybody did. He had earned the right, he had the power; maybe, if luck fell even a little contrite, he could have slipped once more through the fighting Aggies. But of course now with the spotlight focused so strongly, with the cameramen and news writers eager to dramatize the next few plays, handsome Dana would call his own signal. Even the Aggies knew his reputation for conceit.

Electric silence gripped the 60,000 tense spectators then, while the Lincoln huddled. The line-men sprang to position; Aggie opponents crouched. Sure enough, Norman Dana was back in an old favorite formation—a T which would give him a chance for a wide sweep around left end. Norman was fast. Duane stood now as second interference man; that and that alone a Next moment Norman's voice was rattling. ON the third hike the ball flew back to him. He was smiling big, in that happy handsome way of his. Blythe grinned her teeth. The four backfield tacks sprung left, as expected. Norman was stooped over hugging his ball. His knees could be seen churning.

The interference was leading out. And to spike the obvious play, the Aggie men were rushing across in a body. That's the moment when Duane's heels dug in.

Duane halted and turned with all the skill of a ranch pony cutting out wild steers. In a split second he had left the interference and was going back! He half-turned once more. The ball was there, by appointment! It had come from Norman Dana at low altitude, knee height in fact, screened perfectly from enemy eyes.

And then there was a newsreel flash of Diane Hogan holding baby Scooter with puppy Link just after Duane had been tripped. This time, Nancy Hale was shown crying and Duane's other arm was around her, comforting her as best he could. "Cinderella girl with Lincoln here," the newsreel commentator said. Then hinted further, "Is romance budding on a football field?" "They'd make a swell match," Norman murmured, smugging Blythe with his shoulder there in the theater dark. "Nancy certainly is beautiful!" Blythe swallowed hard. She didn't want to cry again. Not here.

JOE CURRAN, two-faced president of the National Maritime Union has just recently repeated his charges that ships carrying war supplies from U. S. east coast ports to the battle fronts were being lost because they were badly loaded, and that brings up a few bits of background on this situation which aren't too well known, but should be.

Curran first made these charges last April. He printed them in his union's newspaper, The Pilot, and he came down to Washington from New York and spread them before the House of Representatives Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. At that time he listed eight ships which he charged had been loaded badly, and there is no evidence that there have been other cases of the kind since then.

Proof on the eight cases is difficult to establish. All eight of the ships Curran listed did run into trouble after they left U. S. ports. One was torpedoed and one has been given up for lost. Several ran into storms. One had mechanical breakdown. One went aground. Two did have to come back to port and be reloaded.

Given Curran the benefit of a doubt and admitting all his charges are true, you should take into consideration that these are eight cases out of perhaps thousands.

So you begin to look elsewhere for reasons and you run into some interesting factors, the most amazing of which is merely another chapter in the warfare between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. It tells out about like this:

CURRAN'S union is a union of seamen—the men who actually sail the ships and to whom all credit is due for having done an heroic job. Curran's union is affiliated with the C. I. O. The men who load the ships which Curran's sailors operate, however, belong to the International Longshoremen's Union headed by Joseph P. Ryan. This union is affiliated with A. F. of L. and just about now you begin to catch on.

This is the way the situation lines up at all Atlantic coast and Gulf ports where ships are loaded by A. F. of L. longshoremen and sailed by C. I. O. sailors. On the Pacific coast, the situation is just reversed. At western ports, C. I. O. longshoremen in Harbors, Bridges, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, load the ships, while A. F. of L. sailors in the Seafarers' International Union of North America man the ships.

It is to break up the A. F. of L. domination of the eastern ports' waterfront that the C. I. O. Nation and family. Mr. Zane Holmes of San Diego visited Mr. and Mrs. Vel Fonville Monday night. Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hammonds of Ranger visited Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Horn Tuesday night.

NEW YORK.—at the Harvard game, Howard Odell of Yale closed the busiest year a football coach ever experienced. Howie Odell left Pennsylvania for Madison on Feb. 1, Harry Tubbsreher having engaged the best man he could find to help him defend for Wisconsin.

Odell worked with the Badgers for four months, having a hand in the development of Elroy Irsch, the remarkable sophomore back, among others. He says that while Pennsylvania and Wisconsin each has several fine players, the all-round material at these institutions isn't as strong as some people suspect.

He explains that while young Howie Odell's spectacular runs are stolen headlines, he could take Pat Harder, the Badgers' fullback, had he the chance of any one college player's a land.

Odell, at 31, the youngest head coach of a major team in the country, was not engaged by Yale until late June, so missed spring practice. He had some of his boys or four weeks of summer training, but it was too warm to do such.

He says he did not have exact information on many of his boys until they had turned in their mashing and somewhat unexpected 13-6 victory over Princeton in their seventh and next-to-last start.

Yet, taking a team that won eight more than its opener the year before and had been defeated seven times since 1937, his Yale has quipped Lehigh, Dartmouth, and Princeton, where respectability on short notice

Alameda Club In Meeting At Home Of Mrs. John Love

The Alameda Home Demonstration Club met Wednesday, November 25, at 2 o'clock in the home of Mrs. John Love, and worked on the lap robes the club will send to soldiers at Camp Bowie. The meeting was turned over to Miss Gladys Martin, county home demonstration agent, who demonstrated mound storage. She said to make the center of a storage mound slightly higher than the edges, so there would be plenty of drainage, and to use some kind of feed stalks to cover the whole mound, with a few stalks left standing in the center, around a stick, to allow for ventilation. The whole mound should then be covered with dirt to the thickness of eight to ten inches so the produce would not freeze. Mrs. Love served cookies and cold drinks to Miss Martin, Mrs. Ann Lave Edwards and Virgie Blackwell, who were visitors and to Mmes. E. M. Campbell, Thelbert Jones, W. E. Calvert, Bill Logan, Luther Moody, A. H. Dean, E. E. Blackwell, all members. The next meeting will be an all day meeting with a covered dish luncheon being served in the home of Mrs. Thelbert Jones, Dec. 8, when everyone is invited to be present and to bring their wool scraps so the club members can finish the laprobes. Visitors are welcome.

Mrs. W. C. Walsh of Ft. Worth is here to spend the week-end with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. A. B. English. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lat of McAllen announce the birth of a baby girl, Wednesday.

Conservation Increases Yield Of Texas Farms

"Soil and water conservation measures are increasing per acre yield of war crops wherever these methods are used in Texas," T. E. Hughes of Dublin reported this week when he returned from the second annual meeting of Texas Soil Conservation District Supervisors in Dallas.

milk or more peanuts, corn, sorghums or cotton per acre," the District chairman recalled.

Members of the association are the supervisors of Texas' eighty-six soil conservation districts that cover 80,725,000 acres and include approximately 728,600 farms and ranches.

Definite increases in yields per acre of peanuts have been noted in the Upper Leon Soil Conservation District where farmers have been using wind and water erosion resisting and soil-building practices the past year.

English Gremlins Have Relatives At South Plains Base

LURBOCK, Tex. (UP)—The mischief-making horde which gives the RAF so much trouble, has relatives at South Plains Army Flying School, says SPAF's glider pilots.

The "thermen" pixies who sometimes play hob with SPAF's gliders are called "Thermen" by the glider boys.

The "thermen" takes his name from the thermal-upcurrent of warm air which makes the gliders fly. The SPAF outfit isn't sure the thermen are blood brothers of the gremlins, but they act ugly too sometimes.

PLAY BY PLAY

Both sides of the stadium were wild. And so, for that matter, were players, substitutes, coaches, assistants, water boys. Plainly, Hogan of Lincoln Field had been headed for a touchdown. But the football rules were clear; Hogan's friendship with the two babies was, for once, just his hard luck.

The referee was clearing the field when people there heard Duane calling, "There's still a chance left, Dana. I'd sure like another chance."

Norman was standing again now, and readjusting his helmet. He answered loudly, cockily, "I wanta try it myself."

The sideline group was quiet again, but the murmurs and glances spoke volumes. So Norman Dana, conceited quarterback, was taking it out on Duane! Duane ought to have the chance if anybody did.

Electric silence gripped the 60,000 tense spectators then, while the Lincoln huddled. The line-men sprang to position; Aggie opponents crouched. Sure enough, Norman Dana was back in an old favorite formation—a T which would give him a chance for a wide sweep around left end.

ON the third hike the ball flew back to him. He was smiling big, in that happy handsome way of his. Blythe gritted his teeth. The four backfield men sprang left as expected. Norman was stooped over hugging the ball. His knees could be seen churning.

The interference was leading out. And to spike the obvious play, the Aggie men were rushing across in a body. That's the moment when Duane's heels dug in.

Duane halted and turned with all the skill of a ranch pony cutting out wild steers. In a split second he had left the interference and was going back! He half-turned once more. The ball was there, by appointment! It had come from Norman Dana at low altitude, knee height in fact, screened perfectly from enemy eyes.

Duane bowed over an astonished Aggie end, only man who saw the quick maneuver. A simple stuff-armed did. Seconds later Duane was streaking for victory while in the stadium new pandemonium reigned.

It was on the following afternoon, Sunday, that the Lincoln team went down town for a theater showing of the Aggie game newsreels. Norman Dana took Blythe. In spite of the 7 to 0 victory Blythe felt spiritless, and.

"Norman," said she, "that was not only a very shrewd bit of quarterbacking, that last play; but it was exceedingly generous of you, as well. I mean—it was—I think I—maybe understand what you—how you really reasoned, better than most people would."

"Cinderella girl with Lincoln here," the newsreel commentator said. Then hinted further, "Is romance budding on a football field?"

"They'd make a swell match," Norman murmured, smugging Blythe with his shoulder there in the theater dark. "Nancy certainly is beautiful."
