GUERRILLA WAR, SABOTAGE SPREAD

JAPAN MAY BE TARGET IN THE NEAR FUTURE

Indications found in action in Aleutians and in remarks of Secretary of War Stimson

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UP) June 4.—Announcement by the Navy of mop-up operations in Attu and of an attack from the air on Kiska Island in the Aleutians by U. S. Forces and a hint from Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson of attacks to come, led to speculation of imminent attacks on Japan proper.

Stimson's comment, limited to the casual, matter-of-fact remark that the virtually completed recapture of Attu puts American forces in striking distances of Japanese territory, came in his regular press conference.

He would go no further, turning away requests for elaboration with the remark that it is a pretty long distance from the regained American position in the western Aleutians to the Japanese bases in the Kuriles, some 800 miles away.

Stimson said the Axis now holds 10,000 American prisoners of war, reported through the International Red Cross with Japan holding 11,307, Germany 3,312 and Italy 2,464. There are probably many others not yet officially reported by name.

He told reporters that the Attu fighting passed its peak on May 28 and 29, with American soldiers May 28 of positions overlooking Chichagof Harbor and repulse the following day of a fierce counter attack that penetrated as far as the advance command post and required use of American reserves.

The Navy communique told of more aerial activity in the South Pacific as well as the raid on Kiska and cleaning out of small groups of Japanese on Attu. It said large fires were left burning at Tinian Harbor and Numa Numa Harbor, on Bougainville, and two small ships were attacked, one of them being beached.

Recounting actions of June 1, the communique raised the count of known Japanese dead on Attu to 1,791 and reported that United States Army troops combed scattered areas and by noon had eliminated minor groups of Japanese troops encountered. The report of Japanese dead still included only those whose bodies had been counted and the Navy said that uncounted Japanese killed by shells and bombs were either cremated or buried by the Japanese.

For the first time, the Navy reported use of high-speed, two-engined Ventura medium bombers against Kiska, in company with Mitchell bombers escorted by fighters. Hits were reported on the Japanese main camp area, runway and gun emplacements.

BUSINESS MEN GIVEN WARNING OF ROBBERIES

Chief George Murphy issued a warning today to the business houses with reference to possible burglary, pointing out that there is at present a wave of small robberies going on.

Chief Murphy asked that every business house check carefully each evening to see that entrances and windows in places of business houses be carefully locked. It was also suggested that it would be advisable protection if stores and offices would leave at least one small light burning so that patrolling officers could more easily detect any sign of entrance into the building. If officers then found lights out which should be burning this would be a warning to investigate.

"The local officers are going to do everything possible to protect our business places, but the owners themselves can be of great help in this," Chief Murphy stated. "If they will cooperate with the police force, they will contribute to the safety of their property," he added.

MINERS GET ORDERS FROM THE PRESIDENT

Must return to work by Monday after which dispute will again be taken up by War Board

WASHINGTON, D. C. June 4 (UP)—In a move which backed the action of the War Labor Board which has been defied by John L. Lewis, President Roosevelt, Thursday, used his powers as war time commander in chief, and ordered approximately 500,000 striking mine workers to return to their work Monday.

The president made it plain that when the workers have returned to their work that the dispute will be taken up by the War Labor Board in accordance with the procedure customary in such cases.

The president made no mention of what he would do if the strike continued—in fact his terse statement did not seem to recognize even a possibility that the order could be ignored.

Responsible sources said he was ready to resort to use of troops, the draft laws and other measures if necessary.

Moreover, it was stated on high authority that the government is considering seriously the question of whether men who have struck would be entitled to any retroactive pay increase which might eventually be agreed upon.

No decision has been reached on this point, but it may be referred to Atty. Gen. Frances Biddle for a ruling. Government officials are inclined to the view that miners who struck may have conceded the promise of a retroactive feature in any new contract.

The miners' contract expired on April 1, and if a retroactive increase were denied it would mean the loss of considerable money to the men.

Early Thursday night the United Mine Workers policy committee adjourned a prolonged session without any action on the strike and union officials flatly declined to comment on the president's back-to-work order.

Lewis Refuses Comment

Lewis attended the session except for a short interval, during which he left the hotel for an undisclosed purpose. Reporters informed him of the president's order, but he said no comment.

PACIFIC BASE RAIDED BY U. S. ALLIED FLIERS

Allied Headquarters, Australia, June 4, (Friday) (UP)—Allied aircraft attacked Japanese shipping at Lautan on the north coast of Timor for the second consecutive day Thursday. Gen. Douglas MacArthur's noon communique revealed Friday, but only two raiding forces and bad weather generally restricted the movements of aircraft in the Southwest Pacific.

The communique did not reveal results of the bombing, which occurred Thursday morning. An Allied communique twenty-four hours earlier had reported that heavy and medium bombers raided enemy shipping at Lautan Wednesday, scoring a near miss on a 4,000-ton cargo ship, and dispatches from an Allied airbase somewhere in Australia said that fliers had sighted a convoy of four sizable transports off shore.

Also raided were Babo, Dutch New Guinea, and Jacquot Bay, New Britain, but bad weather generally limited air activity.

Thunderstorms were reported on all fronts, making extremely bad flying weather, a headquarters spokesman announced.

Liberator bombers raided Babo Thursday afternoon, bombing the enemy base and strafing Dobo on the way home.

A single Liberator made the raid on Jacquot Bay before dawn on Thursday and the belated report of the Macaig ran said that B-25's attacked Hecadjim village and plantation buildings here Tuesday.

PATRIOTS IN JUGOSLAVIA ARE REPORTED FIGHTING GERMANS, DENMARK REPORTS SABOTAGE

Revolution in Argentina is effort to break with government thought to be in sympathy with the Axis

BY UNITED PRESS

Reports of Guerrilla activity and sabotage in Axis-occupied Europe grew today as Allied naval and air units continued pre-invasion battering of the Mediterranean perimeter with attacks on Pantelleria Island.

Jugoslav sources in London learned that the heaviest fighting yet between German forces and patriots was raging in Yugoslavia. Danish sources reported a new wave of sabotage in Denmark, presumably to destroy industry working for the Germans to prevent Allied bombings.

MONTEVIDEO — Argentine President Ramon S. Castillo, in a radio statement, said the Argentine Government was installed on a warship and that "I will not permit installation of any military government in the presidential palace."

Pro-Ally army forces in Argentina revolted against the government of President Ramon S. Castillo and marched on Buenos Aires in a move designed to achieve severance of diplomatic relations with the Axis among other things.

Cannon and machine-gun fire broke out in the suburbs of Buenos Aires when the pro-Ally forces, reportedly led by Gen. Pedro Ramirez, retired minister of war in Castillo's cabinet, revolted.

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt today categorically denied that Admiral William H. Stanley has resigned as Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, Chinese and American air forces, following up the victory of Western Hunan province, strafed retreating Japanese on the Yangtze River today while ground troops attacked strategic enemy bases in the Tung Tung Lake Basin.

Ex-Service Men In New Zealand Donate Trophy

AUCKLAND, N. Z. (UP)—Disabled New Zealand ex-service men from this war are showing their appreciation and admiration for their comrades in arms, in many theaters of conflict—the soldiers, sailors, and marines of the United States—in a unique way.

The Kiwi trophy, made from native paua shell, will shortly be presented in Wellington to a high American authority who will receive it on behalf of the President of the United States.

When Peter Fraser, New Zealand's Prime Minister, was last in Washington, he made arrangements to have the trophy competed for annually in the American servicemen's baseball contests. Fraser also arranged that a portion of the gate receipts should be devoted to the benefit of disabled American servicemen.

The trophy was made by disabled New Zealand soldiers from the rare paua shell, which is found on a few beaches of the South Island of this country. It is in the form of a tobacco jar of the shell and silver, and is surrounded by a Kiwi, nearly extinct native bird of New Zealand native timber.

A number of silver shields will be mounted on the base.

According to sponsors of the trophy, it is regarded as a "symbol of appreciation of the great support received from the United States, and a reminder of the happy associations and comradeship in the war against the common enemy."

Manufacture of jewelry and ornaments from paua shells is being carried out in New Zealand to keep disabled soldiers in useful occupations, and to "avoid mistakes, such as after the last war, when many veterans were thrown on the industrial scrapheap."

EARNING ITS SALT

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following editorial from the Waco News Tribune is reprinted here because of interest it bears to the people of Ranger. Once again the National Youth Administration is up for questioning by politicians and two Ranger men are now in Washington where they testified before the committee investigating the Administration.

There are a few representatives of the people in congress who are seeking to abolish every agency established by the new deal. Irrespective of the contribution now being made to the war effort world has gone down the line that all must go.

An agency which has more than "earned its salt"—the National Youth Administration, a training bureau of the War Manpower Commission—has been attacked by the Byrd committee. While the committee's majority report calls for outright abolition, a minority report not only seeks its retention but asks for its expansion.

The NYA's original purpose was to provide work through which youth from low-income families could get an education, and though work experience learn to do a job well enough to earn a living.

These activities and aims damned the NYA in the eyes of those individuals and groups who place the dollar mark above individual and national welfare.

NYA, while depression-born, has long since reached a maturity of action which enables it to play a significant role in our national life. When the war guns first roared and some of the experts scoffed at the thought of our participation in war and many could not be convinced that there was a need for converting our industrial machine from peace to war time production, NYA saw what was coming and prepared for it. Because of its flexibility, almost overnight, its program was transformed to one of war production training. Youth set to work turning out needed equipment for the Army and Navy—production jobs of a type too small to make it profitable for industry to handle, yet which were vital to the war effort.

Since that time, through round-the-clock training and production schedules, young Americans have been preparing themselves by the hundreds of thousands to take their place on the production lines in war plants or to give added service in the armed forces. There you will find them today; their one thought is to preserve that demeracy which gave them their opportunities.

Because of its demonstrated ability to meet war time needs and because of the contribution it can make in postwar rehabilitation NYA must stay.

SERIAL STORY

Beth Carter, WAAC

BY LORETTE COOPER

COPYRIGHT, 1943, NEA SERVICE, INC.

PLUNGE TO EARTH

CHAPTER XV

TO complicate matters, Rick was coming to, and the Jap probably would be in a few minutes. "Can you fly this plane?" Brit asked Beth.

"Sorry. They made us everything except flyers at Des Moines." "Then it's up to you to keep the folks in the back seat under control."

Beth took care of Rick first. He was kicking around, and it was obvious that the captives' feet would have to be tied, as well as their hands.

Brit turned the cabin lights on. Beth looked for something she could use to tie the ankles together. Attached to the wall were three parachutes. Beth pulled one of them apart and got a length of strong cord, borrowing Brit's knife to cut the material.

Then she went to the Jap. She reasoned that it would be better to tie him, immediately, then struggle with Rick, than to take a chance on having to fight both of them—particularly since the Jap might know some tricks with his feet.

She put the cord around the Jap's ankles and made it secure. "Now it's your turn," she said to Rick.

There was a firm set to her jaw. SHE watched Rick carefully as she neared his feet. This was going to be a problem. Then she saw his solution almost as soon as she recognized its dangers.

She fastened one end of the cord firmly to the Jap's ankles. Then she formed a running loop in the light of the cord.

"Watch out," Brit warned. But there was no need to have any fears.

Beth stepped quickly past Rick, and as he turned to try to trip and kick her viciously, she threw the running loop over his legs and pulled as hard as she could.

She had the advantage, and in three seconds the helpless spy had been caught and dragged so that his ankles were tied to the Jap's.

It was a matter of another few seconds to tie the knot securely. Then Beth rolled the pair away from the center of the cabin and further lashed them to the side of the plane.

She returned to the front. "Good work, Beth," Brit said. "You seem equal to anything. I've never seen anyone cooler . . . in the face of danger or possible death."

"A soldier has to face those things," Beth said, smiling. "Right," Brit answered. "You know the way I've always looked at it is that when the end comes, it will be just like getting transfer orders. I've been transferred a dozen times in the Army. Sometimes to a better spot, sometimes to a worse. Only almost always to a better one. There's something about a transfer—it closes the chapter of your life which was spent at the last post."

He stopped a moment. Then he resumed. "I've always thought that my final transfer would be that way—final, closing a chapter or maybe even the book, and maybe sending me to a better post."

"That's a good way to look at it, I think," Beth said. As she spoke, she realized that she and Rick had a great many things in kinship as far as their attitudes toward life were concerned. "Fine time to talk of death," Brit laughed, "when we're staring it in the face." He switched off the cabin lights again so he could get a clearer view of the ocean. "There's the island, but it's a thousand to one we'll never be able to come down on it."

BETH looked down on the island, dark and apparently lifeless. She knew that dark as it was, Brit was right. He knew, as commander of that island, that the tiny spot in the ocean bristled with hidden guns, which would blast them down unless they could properly identify themselves. It had been daylight when Lita Danton's American-made Jap plane had first landed, but now it was night.

"You can't get through with the radio?" she asked. "It was plenty of use to the Jap, but none to me. Wrong frequency."

"There aren't any fares?" "Wouldn't do us any good. That would bring the guns into action."

Beth remembered that there were two parachutes hanging on the cabin wall. "Brit," she said, "could you fly over the island lengthwise—you know, so we went across it at its greatest length?"

WPB Promises Swimming Suits Of "Something"

By Eulalie M'Dowell United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, (U P) — With wartime restrictions giving lovers of the out-of-doors a gloomy view of the summer, it appears that swimming will be the diversion.

Even swimmers, however, will have to do with suits that don't "give" like the favored elastic, caps that won't keep the hair dry and a monotony of selection in style—if they are not able to purchase "old stock" swimming apparel.

Spokesmen of the War Production Board, which has the say about what materials may or may not go into swim suits, refuse to paint a picture of what well-dressed swimmers will wear this summer. They have made only the essential provision that they will be permitted to wear "something."

No Restriction on Wool WPB estimates that three-fourths of all sports equipment now being produced is going to the armed forces and a major share of the remaining 25 per cent being allotted to war workers.

With no metal for golf balls, no "bounce" for tennis balls or rubber for tennis shoes, no new rods and reels and fewer fish hooks, swimming is still a good bet, according to WPB, even though there won't be extra gasoline for junkies to the beaches. Naturally, WPB officials say, there won't be any rubber swim suits, but they point out that there is no curtailment of wool for this purpose, even though the woolen bathing suit lost popularity some seasons ago. Some Rayon and Cotton

They also point out that rayon and cotton fabrics have been under no emergency curtailment the only catch being that most of these yarns are now going for strictly military purposes, necessitating the elimination of all but a few basic styles in swim suits.

With the water repellent non-rubber fabrics are enjoying popularity as shower caps, even the WPB grants that the materials is not altogether happy substitute for rubber bathing caps, but it can't be helped.

Other than all these things, the WPB thinks they aren't being too hard on swimmers. Maybe not, at that. Those who can't take it can still resume the fashions of the "oil" swimming hole when it was possible for a fellow to get his sun tan all over.

Doctor Sews Quilt From 1,250 Ties

RANDOLPH, Wis. (UP)—Dr. W. Jones, like most of his medical colleagues, is proud of his stitching, but few doctors have achieved success with the needle comparable to that of the Randolph village health officer. The busy physician, who has practiced in this Dodge county hamlet for the past 41 years, has completed a patchwork quilt. The pieces used were from 1,250 neckties, no two alike, assembled from every state in the Union and several foreign countries. Some were worn around the necks of national and international figures.

The result is no ordinary quilt. The doctor, who held the post of Randolph health officer for 25 years, put most of his leisure time on the quilt for nine months last year. Fifty spools of silk thread went into the stitching, 1,250 ties had to be opened, pressed and cut then fitted on the full-sized bed quilt. Dr. Jones did all the work himself.

A few star-shaped pieces signify celebrities. Among them are John Nance Garner, former vice-president of the United States, who sent a tie to the doctor, when he held office; James Farley who, as postmaster general, forwarded a tie; Isidore Wartale, mayor of Banger, North Wales, Great Britain; former Gov. Julius P. Heil of Wisconsin; the Hollywood notables, Bing Crosby, Adolph Menjou, Fred MacMurray; Clifford I. Huff, sales manager of the Goodyear Rubber Co., Buenos Aires, Argentina; Clayton M. Ziemann, instructor of schools, Honolulu, Hawaii; John O. Jones, then president of the village of Randolph, and a white star representing part of the wedding tie worn by Milton M. Jones at his marriage at Racine 40 years ago.

Many Wisconsin doctors, some of whom are serving overseas with the armed forces and others who have retired to out of the way spots have their ties represented on the quilt.

Dr. Jones' hobby was an incident in a full life of service to the community. Recently he attended the birth of his 2,000th baby since 1901.
