

Reds Battling Savagely For Objective

Well, i dunno but-

Our efforts to fill this newspaper with items of local interest seem well repaid when from some of the foreign fields of battle and foreign stations come word from home town boys saying that they are getting the paper and enjoying it.

From Pvt. Harold E. Weaver, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Weaver, comes such word today. Everett, as he is better known in Ranger, is now stationed in England with a heavy artillery unit and he writes that he is getting the paper every day and enjoying it. He has been in England since January 28 and before going into service was one of the boys that helped B. E. Garner run his theatres.

So whether or not some item which you know may seem trivial to you, remember it might be of interest to some boy in foreign lands who is receiving this newspaper.

If there be one left in these United States who has any misgivings as to what the American Red Cross is doing for the boys in foreign service, the following letter from somewhere in England should be good medicine for them:

SOMEWHERE IN BRITAIN—As many a Texas cowboy of old would loop up to the chuck wagon at roundup, for strong coffee and some of cookie's sordough biscuits, so today in Britain the native sons of the Lone Star State flock in to wherever the American Red Cross Clubmobile "Texan" happens to be.

"Some chuck wagon" this! Large as a transcontinental bus and manned by three pretty Red Cross girls from the States, it serves home-made coffee and doughnuts at distant camps. It follows the round-ups of the G. I.'s and cuts out from the herd those who are hungry—not only for good grub—but for a breath of home.

Captain "Bee" Bogart, who hails not from "deep in the heart of" but from Garden City, Long Island, N. Y., has already acquired a Texas drawl. Her staunch assistants, Katherine Heulsler, of Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. June Dale, of Portland, Oregon (wife of a British officer) are now as familiar with the Texas Panhandle as they are with the doughnut machine.

JUNGLE TRAIL ENTICES AND TRAPS TEXAN

WITH THE SIXTH ARMY, NEW BRITAIN, (UP)—Private Rudolph M. Lee, 20, of Mesquite, Texas, found a very pretty trail in the jungle a mile beyond Sixth Army lines at Anzio and sat down to husk a coconut.

As he ate the white meat, he rested his elbow on his knee and leisurely waved his jungle knife. He suddenly stiffened and the knife stopped with its tip pointing toward the sky.

A Jap patrol of seven men had come quietly down the trail and now stood silently behind their lieutenant as he leveled his pistol at the lone American. They both stared at each other for a second.

"Hey, wait a minute," Lee yelled, brandishing his knife. The lieutenant hesitated, and in that moment the rifleman turned a flipflop and landed behind the solid trunk of a coconut tree.

The Jap officer shouted something and the patrol jumped forward. Lee killed the first with his pistol and reached for a grenade as the patrol stopped. The grenade lifted one Jap from the ground and hit another, and as the others dropped Lee jumped to his feet and ran.

The bullets made the bushes jump as they flicked around him. He ran wildly across an open stretch and dived head first down a small cliff as four Japs broke into the clearing.

Below the cliff he had some cover, but three of the enemy stood on the edge shooting away at him as the fourth came in pursuit.

FIRST AID GIVEN BRITISH SOLDIERS AT ANZIO

BRITISH SOLDIERS of the Allied Fifth Army receive emergency first aid treatment at Anzio, Italy, before being evacuated to a hospital at Naples. Allied forces now have regained all beachhead ground lost to the enemy here after repulsing a powerful two-day Nazi offensive.

FLIES PLANE HOME AFTER MID-AIR COLLISION

THIS BATTERED P-38 fighter, minus one wing and almost torn in two, comes to rest in a wheat field near an American air base in Italy after a miraculous escape by its pilot, Lieut. Thomas Smith of Madera, Cal. Missing a Messerschmitt with the plane's guns, Lieutenant Smith collided with the Nazi plane in mid-air; it crashed in flames, but he managed to fly home safely.

He also stated that Texas, in 1943, subscribed 4,148,656 to the Red Cross which was 81 percent over the State's quota for that year, and that 80 percent of the amount subscribed went to the armed forces.

Young Amateur Posts Weather Forecast Daily

MADISON, Wis. (UP)—Madison weathermen have a rival in an amateur forecaster, 17-year-old Wayland Norland, who is "75 percent correct" in his predictions.

Wayland believes he could give keener competition to Wisconsin's professional meteorologists, who average 87 per cent accuracy on their predictions, if he had their advantage of weather reports from other sections of the country.

According to C. E. May, whose office is handling the 1944 automobile licenses, the sale of the licenses is going very slowly and this in spite of the fact that operators of farm and commercial vehicles have been urged to attend to the matter early since there is such an increase in paper work in connection with the sale of licenses for these vehicles.

AIR WAR GOES ON AGAINST NAZI AS REDS TAKE POSITION

The Red army pounded at the Germans in the Ukraine today at both ends of a long line arching southeastward from Poland to the lower reaches of the Dnieper.

The fighting in the Ukraine developed into the most important and largest operation of the year, designed to clear Soviet soil of an estimated 500,000 Germans and squeeze them across the Dnieper against the Carpathian mountains.

At the northwestern end of the line the Russians were fighting in the streets of Tarnopol, five-way junction within Poland on the Lwow-Odessa railway. As they closed in on Praskirov, further south on the line, they were on the verge of severing the last supply line of the Germans except the inadequate single track lines into Rumania.

On the front in Italy, strong parol action was in progress as continued activity behind the German lines indicated they still were preparing for a fourth attempt to storm the Anzio beachhead.

It turned out to be a cruising police car, so the robber decided to leave on foot. Police, noticing the broken window on the jewelry shop gave chase, but the thief got away.

Raney Baptist Hour Speaker On Sunday March 12

President Homer P. Raney, of the University of Texas, is the Baptist Hour speaker for Sunday morning, March 12th, at 7:30, according to Chairman S. F. Lowe of the Radio Committee of the Southern Baptist Convention, Atlanta, Georgia.

Mr. Lowe announces that Dr. Raney is peculiarly qualified to speak on his subject, "Youth Facing a New Day", having served as director of the American Youth Commission 1931-39, and having rendered constant and wide service as youth counselor and speaker throughout his distinguished career as President of Franklin College, 1927-31, and of Bushnell University 1931-35, and since as President of the University of Texas.

The music by The Baptist Hour Choir has proven a very attractive feature of The Baptist Hour programs, as is reflected in comments in the fan mail received from throughout the South and West every week.

The other two speakers to follow Dr. Raney in March are: Dr. J. Howard Williams of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, on the subject: "The Basis of World Fellowship."

Dr. W. F. Powell of Nashville, Tennessee, on the subject, "Love is the Answer."

The Baptist Hour can be heard on Texas over stations WFAA of Dallas and KPRC of Houston.

RECORD ENROLLMENT SEEN IN ENGINEERING AFTER WAR

TROY, N. Y. (UP)—An all-time high in college enrollments—particularly in engineering and science courses—is predicted for the postwar period.

Livingston W. Houston, executive vice president of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, says: "Because this is a mechanized war, with amazing scientific devices and engineering feats, thousands of servicemen have become attracted to engineering and science and many will return as engineering students."

engineering colleges, with large student bodies, will experience a period of lower enrollment. However, he adds, "this period will have its advantages, if it will give our faculties and administrators a breathing spell in which to appraise wartime educational experience and develop the best pattern for postwar engineering and science education."

A Little Lesson In Abstracting . . .

The abstract is a written history of the title chain. If carefully prepared it will (1) definitely locate the tract under search, (2) reveal, if possible, the true ownership, (3) show liens, if any, and (4) the defects in the deed or other written documents. It may or may not prove the title to be good. This is the reason for the abstract and why it is necessary in every real estate transaction.

Inside WASHINGTON

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Capital politicians are currently engaged in one of the most intensive debates of the New Deal era—what, if any, lasting effect will the "Barkley incident" have on the fourth term aspirations of the chief executive?

To a majority of observers Barkley's break with the president and the unanimous response he received from the Senate Democrats, offers a grave threat to President Roosevelt's occupancy of the White House after January, 1945.

Break Seen—And there are some who go so far as to say that the results of the break may be the deciding factor that swings the scales against the president's seeking a fourth term.

Affecting Fourth Term—Others—in the minority—contend that Barkley's breach with the executive will be entirely healed and well-nigh forgotten by Democratic convention time.

Behind the scenes, scarcely a Democrat in the Senate believes the president will again "dare" to speak as authoritatively to the Congress as he did in his vitriolic tax bill veto message.

Regardless of which side is correct in their predictions, one result of the split is certain—Democrats in the Senate and House will pursue a more independent course than they have dared follow in 11 years of "New Deal" administration. They have accurately gauged public reaction as overwhelmingly in favor of the reassertion of congressional independence and prerogatives.

If President Roosevelt seeks a fourth term and obtains the nomination, it will be because Congressional Democrats have approved the move—not because it was forced on them by an overbearing, dictatorial party leader.

RECENT AND RAPID AMERICAN SUCCESSES in the Pacific war theater have given rise to speculation that it may be Japan instead of Germany which first will fall to the prowess of Allied arms. Both public and official thinking in Washington up to now has reached a point where it has been virtually taken for granted that the Nazis will be the first of the two major enemy forces to be defeated.

But—spectacular achievements of United States forces at Tarawa and in the Marshall Islands, the bombardment of Paramushiro and the destructive raid against Truk bespeak the increasing strength and tempo of the drive to oust the Japs in the South Pacific, reach across the Philippines and China and drive nearer to the enemy home lands.

We have proposed, after beating Germany, to pay full attention to Japan. But Prime Minister Winston Churchill tossed cold water on this idea when he promised Parliament new air attacks on the Nazis this spring and summer "far beyond the dimensions of any yet employed, or indeed imagined."

Churchill expressly pointed out he never had given encouragement the Nazis would be defeated in 1944. Meantime, the sons of the rising sun have collapsed with gratifying swiftness when faced by an overpowering American force.

CONGRESS AND THE NATION'S top farm organizations are stirred up these days about selective service warnings that farm labor deferments will get a tough going over. The Senate agriculture committee, led by venerable Senator Edward (Cotton Ed) Smith (D.) of South Carolina, called Farm Chiefs Brigadier General Hershey before it to explain what draft officials are going to do to agricultural labor. Simultaneously, farm leaders warned the booming labor loss of farm deferment requirements from eight to 16 units will "demoralize" food production. They protest against "further depletion of the farm labor supply."

Good bet: If the Senate committee believes draft officials plan to be too tough on farmers, they will offer legislation to keep the essential farmers at work.

Tomorrow is a lovely word by Marie Blizard

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN BETH'S KNEES seemed to turn to water and she clutched the post of the bed to give herself support after Andrea spoke in that compelling tone. Looking steadily into Andrea's face, where a strange smile had smoothed away her look of wild desire for escape, Beth felt a chill run through her veins. Never moving her eyes from Andrea's face, she asked, "What can you have to tell me that could possibly make me waver in my instinctive resolution not to help you do anything so cruel and selfish as you ask?" "I can tell you that I know, and always have known, that you were, and are now, in love with Jim Ronald," Andrea said quietly. "Beth's heart cried, 'No, you wouldn't have done this thing to me!' But she stood tight-lipped and silent. "That's not very nice, is it, Beth? I pretended that I thought you were just good friends, but I knew I was breaking your heart when I made him love me, and still I did it." Beth's white face was utterly still. "Shall I tell you how it began, Beth? I didn't care a fig for Jim, but I hated his not caring anything for me. I knew he didn't like me. I had to make him see that I'm what I am. I knew when it began, this thing that is like hatred. It's primitive, but my kind of woman knows what it is, and it's exciting, isn't it?" "Must I hear this?" Beth turned to go, but Andrea's hand shot out and caught her. "Yes, you must!" Andrea said with harsh brightness. "I want you to know, I could have stopped back to you, Beth, Jim, who will because he loved you." "Jim never loved me," Beth said in a low tone. "He did. He's told me so. He was going to ask you to marry him in September two years ago. That was when I spoiled it all." "Please stop, Andrea," Beth pleaded. "I'm not going to stop until you've heard it all. I'm giving him back to you, Beth, Jim, who will love you again, and need you, will turn from me to you. You'll marry him, Beth, and be his wife." Her voice was growing unsteady. "Andrea Barnes, what manner of woman are you? Are you telling me that you married Jim to prove that you could?" "No," Andrea said. "I married him because I loved him. But I told you long ago that I didn't want to be separated from him because I knew I could get over it. Beth, Jim is candy. Jim is delight. Jim is my lover. Now I want bread—and other things. Things Jim never can give to Bess and me." "Jim has a right to Bess." "He can have some of her, Beth, but I'm not."

WARTIME CONSERVATION TIPS for Gas Users

Eight Ways to Cut Gas Waste in Meal Preparation

When roasting meat, bake potatoes and a casserole dish of vegetables in oven at same time.

Avoid excessive oven preheating. This allows heat to escape and slows cooking operation.

Do not turn top burners higher than necessary. Flames should not lap up sides of vessels.

Use covered utensils to speed cooking, and always turn to low heat when food comes to steam.

Turn gas on after, not before, putting on a utensil. Turn gas off before, not after, removing a utensil. And don't leave a burner going just because you intend to use it again in a few minutes.

Do not toast bread in oven, unless large quantities are needed. A toaster is more economical for a few slices.

Do not boil more water than you actually need. Don't heat a quart when a pint would do. And turn heat down when boiling starts. No matter how much gas you burn you can't raise water above the boiling point.

Don't use your gas oven as a kitchen heater. Ovens are designed to keep heat in, not throw it out. A small portable heater is more efficient and uses much less gas.
