U. S. AIRMEN FLY HIGHWAYS OF THE GLOBE

DODGE CITY, Kan. (UP)—Army pilots can travel from the Dodge City Army air field to India, Africa, China, England or S. America over a well-marked highway that is "visible" day and night—and through driving rain, lowering fogs and swirling snow, storms.

"Pilots say they are riding 'home on the range' or being 'on the beam.' They refer to the signals emitted from radio ranges that mark these airways. The pilot sees this 'highway' with his eyes as well as his ears. He follows a described route at any time, under any conditions, merely by listening to the chirp in his earphones. Under normal conditions and in good weather, Marauder B-26 pilots from this base fly 'on contact.' Their route may be independent of the beam for training purposes, but they are in constant two-way radio contact with the field. They use the radio range system as an auxiliary aid except in emergencies and bad weather. Recently, a larger number of students were flying near Dodge City when the weather suddenly closed in, so that the pilots could not see the ground. The pilots merely flipped a switch on their radios and rode the beam safely into the field. But at one time such an occurrence probably would have caused the loss of several planes and crews.

In operation of a radio beam, signals are emitted along a predetermined course. On one side, for a width varying from 10 to 20 miles, the signal is radio code for the letter 'a'—a dot and a dash. On the other side the signal changes to an 'n'—a dash and a dot. Air traffic usually proceeds to the right of the beam. The pilot can tell exactly how far he is from the center of the 'highway' by the intensity of the signals. When he's riding exactly down the center, he gets a continuous signal, as the 'a' and 'n' blend into one constant tone.

In addition to beam stations, there are fan markers and radio beacon markers along the route that throw a vertical radio signal straight upwards. At the exact moment a plane passes over one of these markers, a series of long chirps is heard in the earphones and a light flashes on the instrument panel. Both the radio beam and the fan markers break their regular mechanical chirping to identify themselves with individual call letters, so pilots may know exactly which beam is guiding them and what marker they have passed.

Radio range stations, operated by the Army Airway Communications System, reach to the farthest corners of the world. They have been built in the Australian bush, where heavy fences protect them from kangaroos. Natives laborers helped install ranges in the rice paddies of India and China. haul in crude bullock-drawn carts. Eskimos sometimes quit work on range stations because the weather was too cold for them.

But without these facilities that help maintain the flow of fighter and cargo planes to the men at the front, flying would indeed be hazardous. Instead, Army aircraft, taking off every minute of every hour of the day and night, can fly safely to their destinations along the invisible but audible "highways" in the sky.

Rotary Meeting Held Wednesday

The weekly meeting of the Rotary club was held at noon Wednesday at the Gholson hotel with the president, O. G. Lanier, presiding.

Following the luncheon, C. E. May, a member of the club who was in charge of the program for the day, gave a talk on safety, stressing the importance of safety measures in the home.

C. R. Adamson, a Ft. Worth pianist, was a guest at the luncheon.

USE OF METAL POWDER SPURS PARTS OUTPUT

By Charles T. Pearson
United Press Staff Correspondent
DETROIT (UP)—Manufacture of tool steel so hard it will cut glass and pressed metal parts weighing more than 100 pounds, though the powdered metallurgy process, has been revealed by Chrysler Corp's Amplex Division. "Developments now being studied in powdered metallurgy promise to add immeasurably to the superiority of American weapons," said A. J. Langhammer, Amplex president.

Parts made from powdered metal sometimes are produced 200 practically every piece of war manufactured methods, Langhammer said, and are now used in practically every piece of war equipment built for its Army and Navy. The Amplex chief said his division now is producing more than 250,000 units daily of parts for war equipment from powdered metal, and that technique has advanced so fast since Pearl Harbor that where formerly three pound pressed pieces were considered a maximum, Amplex now presses units weighing more than 100 pounds.

"On one job adaption of the powdered metal technique saved more than 8,000,000 man hours and 1,250,000 pounds of strategic metal," the company said. Langhammer said powdered metallurgy has solved many problems on war equipment in the form of oil-impregnated bearings that provide their own lubrication.

He termed the new "Oilite" bearings a vital contribution to the design of equipment that has to function efficiently in the world's greatest climatic extremes.

"Oilite bearings now are employed in more than 6,000 different war applications. One American plane was of such fast climbing design that while its units functioned smoothly at ground level, high-altitude operation was impeded by congealing oil and grease," he said. "By using oil-impregnated bearings made by Amplex, these difficulties were overcome."

The new tool steel—so hard that it will cut glass—Langhammer said is used in precision measuring devices, and is pressed from steel mill waste that is not reclaimable metal.

"Iron powder so fluffy that a good breath will blow it away is now being pressed into precision tool makers' instruments that attain accuracy to one ten-thousandths of an inch," he said.

The company said this development broke one of the war's worst bottlenecks at a time when in spite of the nation's vast machine tool capacity, production of precision measuring devices lagged.

Company engineers said one of the most important advances obtained through the use of powdered metal is that the necessity of machining parts is almost eliminated, resulting in a substantial saving both in labor and materials.

SEVEN IN RACE FOR PLACES ON SCHOOL BOARD

H. C. Wilkinson announced today that three more names have been filed with him for places on the ballot for the election of three members of Ranger public schools board of trustees. The three are John Tibbles J. D. Johnson, Jr., and Mrs. W. D. Conway.

Pleas Moore who had previously announced that he would be a candidate for a place on the board announced today that he was withdrawing from the race. Moore stated that he allowed his name to be placed on the ballot when it appeared that there would not be enough citizens to offer their candidacies to fill the vacancies and since capable citizens have placed their names on the ballot he is out of the race.

Other names which have been filed on the ballot are Paul MacDonald, M. L. King, Chester Rogers and C. H. (Coke) Martin.

The election will be held Saturday, April 1 with the polls open at 8 o'clock at the city hall.

Those now serving on the board whose terms expire at this time are W. A. Lewis, F. S. Pearsall and L. L. Bruce.

Robbery Suspect Forgot 22-Year Prison Record

OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—James Butler was too reticent when questioned about a drug store robbery. He denied having a prison record, saying, "Well, come to think of it, there was a year's stretch I did at Sioux Falls five or six years ago. I stole something."

Examination of his record showed that Butler, now 69, was sentenced to the St. Cloud, Minn., reformatory in 1897, and that after that served in Leavenworth, Kan., Bisfarek, N. D., and the Nebraska penitentiary. He was sentenced to a total of 22 years, and served out most of them.

"Inspector, you must always bear in mind that I couldn't involve myself any deeper. It's a man's prerogative not to testify against himself," Butler replied after being confronted with his tally sheet.

New Processing Will Keep Flavor In Dried Fruits

WENATCHEE, Wash. (UP)—A former college professor has developed a new process for converting fruit into candy through a dehydration process.

The process was worked out by Dr. Frank O. Kresger, former professor at Washington State College and the University of Louisiana. Unlike most dried fruits, those produced by the new method retain the flavor of fresh fruit. This was accomplished, Dr. Kresger explained, by reversing the usual process of drying.

The fruit is subject to a high temperature early in the dehydration process, immediately after the fresh fruit has been immersed in a sugar-glucose solution. The temperature is gradually decreased as the fruit dries.

Dr. Kresger developed the process primarily to absorb thousands of tons of fruit which is lost each year because of lack of processing facilities. He pointed out that the fruit can be processed after it reaches full ripeness on the tree. Formerly, tree-ripened fruit was regarded as largely lost because it was too soft for handling.

The process also employs another agricultural waste product. The sugar-glucose sweetening and preserving agent is made from cull potatoes which are otherwise unmarketable.

Texas Ballot May Carry Rayburn For Two Offices

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)— Voters in seven Texas counties that comprise the Fourth Texas Congressional District may vote for present House Speaker Sam Rayburn of Bonham for two offices in November.

If he is nominated for Vice President at the Democratic National Convention, his name still will go on the ballot in Texas as a candidate for re-election to Congress.

Texas election laws forbid election officials to put the same man's name on a ballot for separate offices, but it has been held this does not apply to a candidate for President or Vice President of the United States because electors and not the candidates have their names on the ballot.

Precedent for the double race was set by former Vice President John Nance Garner.

Incident Robs Father Of Right

GOOSE CREEK, Tex. (UP)— Two passing cyclists and a filling station man assisted in the emergency birth of a nine-pound, eight-ounce girl to a 200-pound mother in a filling station here.

The woman, Mrs. Jesse Powers of Channelview, was driven into the station where she told the attendant she was ill. As she stepped from the car, she fainted in to the arms of the attendant.

Coming to the worker's aid the two cyclists attended to the birth of the child in the station office. The father felt a little bit miffed. He said that it was his first child and he didn't get to pace the hospital corridor.

POSITIONS ON OTHER SOVIET FRONTS GROW WORSE HOURLY

The Germans admit they have lost Cernauti, the capital of Bukovina Province in Rumania, and a gateway to the Balkans.

The loss of Cernauti shatters Nazi communications vital to their southern armies. And it also paves the way for a Russian drive into the central provinces of Rumania.

Marshal Zhukov's first Ukraine army stormed into Cernauti after crossing the Prut River at two points.

At the same time another wing of the first army made a sudden westward drive to capture Kolomyia.

Still farther southeast, the German position in the big bulge above the Black Sea port of Odessa appeared to get worse hour by hour.

One column of the Second Army—swinging southward through Bessarabia, was reported within 12 miles of the last practical railroad for enemy troops in the Southern Ukraine.

British heavy bombers concentrated on France last night, striking at Germany's hard-pressed rail and aircraft engine facilities. Mosquito raiders struck at Kiel while other targets in the industrial western Reich were pounded.

In Italy there still was no major change in the opposing battle lines. Latest dispatches reported stepped up artillery and patrol fighting.

Allied medium bombers battered vital Nazi communications, harbor points and air fields above Rome parallel yesterday's heavy bomber assaults against the important rail centers of Milan, Turin and Bolzano. Railroad targets at Sofia in Bulgaria also were pounded.

Secretary Says Nazis Stopped Us

4 to 1 Is Ratio Of Planes Lost

A Busy Day in the Life of One Capital Writer | Simon Report, House Of One Capital Writer Session, Zionist Dinner

By HELEN ESSARY Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—It was a typical Washington day—if you were missing your reporter's p's and q's. But what a day! Tearing from burning cause to brilliant personality! Eating! Drinking! Having the world with the great.

It began early in the morning in the Pentagon, the foolish, sprawling Pentagon building, where the War Department big shots hang out and on. Took in the Capitol, a Republican lady leader's rather palid press conference, a small gathering of enthusiasts engaged in restoring Robert E. Lee's birthplace. And ended with pink ice cream and handsome oratory about midnight with the banquet of the American Palestine committee, composed of Zionists anxious to keep Palestine opened to Jewish refugees despite the opposition of the 1929 British White Paper diplomatic edict.

The push to the Pentagon began too soon after breakfast—for me, at least.

It's a confession for a newspaper woman, even the columnist kind, to say that this was the first press conference of Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson's I had ever attended. I'm glad it was the first. For as I stepped into the big room with its rows and rows of chairs and reporters, and rows of chairs and brass hats—I had a queer, fresh impression of the serious manner in which the head of the military reports on success and disaster of our Army overseas.

The war secretary was seated at a table facing the crowd. Behind him on the walls were large maps of the South Pacific, Europe and Asia, plus individual maps of such battle areas as Russia, Italy and those unpronounceable islands. A young aide with the air of a ruler on his shoulders was pointing out the places on the maps with a long ruler, as Mr. Stimson read the story of the war's progress written by the war intelligence division.

So quiet was the room, except for the ecclesiastical intonations of Mr. Stimson's voice, that you might well have imagined yourself in church. There was no gaiety, about this press conference. No quipping nor laughter. It was solemn news the war secretary was reporting—"the latest total of casualties."

Stimson made you know he realized his own responsibility in the record. His dignity was somehow comforting. It gave you courage. I left the conference believing that our fight and the men who were fighting it were being wisely led.

The next taxi hop landed me at the House of Representatives, Congressman Martin Dies, chairman of the House un-American activities committee of the House, was already standing before the desk of his brother Texas, Speaker Sam Rayburn. Before him were several hundred attentive legislators. From above a crowded gallery looked on.

Congressman Dies' mellow southern voice was enumerating the aliases which Author John Carlton used between the time he came to this country as an Armenian immigrant and the time he wrote "Undercover." Mr. Dies was convincing. He had facts to support his oratory and beguiling personality. A table beside him was piled with letters, documents and excerpts from books "falsely attacking me."

Later in the House restaurant I saw the big Texas hunching with his pretty little wife. He didn't look too happy. "Wanted another hour to tell my story," he said. "Well, I'll try to get it next week."

Of the meeting with the Republican lady—she was Mrs. W. Glenn Sathers of Chicago, president of the National Federation of Women's Republican clubs—E! tell you another day in a piece on women which I am itching to do.

My next stop was with members of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation. There's an up and getting together crowd of, shall I say, non-public women who are doing one of the best jobs of restoration any group in the country has done. They have succeeded in turning Stratford, the birthplace of Confederate general, into a national shrine.

The last stopping place in my day was a hotel and the Palestine dinner. Outside the banquet hall, Manpower Commissioner Paul V. and Mrs. McNutt, Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft, Senator and Mrs. Ralph Brewster and Senator Bennett C. Clark were standing in a group. Senator Arthur F. Wagner, who was to preside at the banquet; Senator Robert Capper and Senator Joe Guffey came by.

At the dinner Dr. Abba Hillel Silver made an eloquent plea for entry into Palestine.

"Ahead of Schedule"

An AAF Report on the Aviation Cadet Program

Thanks to the young men of America, the AAF is seizing air supremacy in every theatre, faster than we ever planned or even dared to hope.

Thanks to youth's eagerness to serve, the AAF has grown in a remarkably short time from a mere handful of men into the largest, most powerful air force in the world.

Thanks to the fitness and alertness of these young men, they have learned their job so quickly that we have been able to throw our great airplane production into effective combat quicker than we believed possible. Due to their daring and skill we are destroying our enemy with less loss to our own forces than we anticipated.

All air crew men must have the irresistible desire to fly. Every such flying man in the AAF is there on his own initiative... in response to our invitation to fly and fight with "The Greatest Team in the World." Hundreds of thousands have thronged to our Aviation Cadet Examining Boards in response to this appeal. Thousands are continuing to volunteer... for active duty... and for the 17-year-old Air Corps Enlisted Reserve.

Our gratitude to the young men of America, and to their parents, friends and associates... is without bounds. We should like to welcome on our team any qualified young man who wishes to join. But there are other considerations... a balanced attack must be maintained.

Since last July the Selective Service process had not yielded enough men for all phases of the military program. Other branches of the army urgently need men for currently pending operations.

The AAF is ahead of schedule. It has sufficient men in training and in the Air Corps Enlisted Reserve to meet its present schedule for combat crews. It must therefore balance this activity with immediate over-all needs.

As General Marshall has announced, the AAF has returned to their former commands some 36,000 men who had recently volunteered for air crew training from the ground and service forces. Moreover, until further notice, the AAF will not take any men into active duty from civilian life for air crew training. Also, further enrollment in the 17-year-old Air Corps Enlisted Reserve has been temporarily suspended.

The future of America depends upon the fitness of our young men. All of the armed services need young men who are physically fit, mentally alert and well educated for the exacting demands of modern war.

The AAF urges every man approaching military age to prepare himself physically and mentally for his possible contribution to the defeat of our enemies and for his responsibilities in the post-war world.

We suggest, among other things, the physical training and other preparatory courses of the High School Victory Corps which are recommended for the various armed services, and the physical and pre-aviation training given to CAP Cadets by the nation-wide organization of the Civil Air Patrol, an auxiliary of the Army Air Forces.

The AAF current training program will, of course, continue. All men now enrolled in the Air Corps Enlisted Reserve will start their training after they become 18 as originally planned. And we will soon again take young men of 17 into the Air Corps Enlisted Reserve.

Meanwhile, in recognition of the overwhelming public support given the AAF, we shall continue to report developments—so that when we invite further active enrollment on our flying team, the nation will be familiar with our activities and the vital nature of our needs.

The Problems of LASTING PEACE

By Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson

(This is the eighth installment of the newly-revised, up-to-the-minute version of their important book, The Problems of Lasting Peace, prepared especially for this series by Herbert Hoover, thirty-first President of the United States and Hugh Gibson, former minister to Poland and Ambassador to Belgium and Brazil.)

INSTALLMENT VIII

Economic Forces and Peace

THE relief from economic pressures which makes for friction and war is one of the greatest of all problems that must be solved in this peacemaking.

Experience of the last war and its aftermath proves that these problems fall into two categories. The first are the urgent problems which arise from the disruption of war. The second are the long range problems of rebuilding prosperity in the world and of allaying the economic pressures that make for war.

Certainly, through the history of modern civilization, economic forces have played a large part in war. It was the wealth of the Indies which stimulated the great explorations and conquests of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Pressures of overpopulation to find outlets for emigration have long played a striking part on the stage of war. The cravings for security in supply of raw materials and places to sell surplus products have led to incessant friction. Hate, fear and war. Insistence that "trade follows the flag" has cost rivers of blood and untold sorrow. Economic forces have also in other times and other circumstances acted as a restraint on war.

The economic consequences of the Treaty of Versailles were disastrous. It not only failed to heal the economic wounds of the world but opened new ones. The continuation of the blockade during the Armistice caused steady economic degeneration.

The preposterous method of collecting reparations created economic "bitter" which over its period of adjustment. About the only constructive economic action at Versailles was the relief of several hundred million starving people and still under the relief to restore communications and transportation.

The world will be faced with greater economic disorder both international and domestic than after the last war. It, therefore, becomes doubly important that we create an international economic climate favorable to world recovery.

The long-range international economic tasks of peace settlements will be concerned chiefly with trade barriers, currency controls, or in the conduct of shipping, they become bidders in the market and competitors with other peoples and other governments. Thus, all the usual conflicts and frictions of the market as to price, quantity, credit, and a thousand other things become conflicts and frictions between governments and finally lodge in their State Departments. There they arouse national emotions. Under private traders, such activities do not involve governments, and thereby avoid centralizing their cumulative effects into international frictions. The Russian Government has of course dictated their entire foreign trade. We in the United States have not been free from it before this war as witness our government dumping of wheat. Britain has encouraged cartels.

A large number of these problems arise from the growth of government activities in international economic life since the first world war.

Thus the problem is partly an ideological one for it involves the question of the return of the world to private enterprise versus economic statism, pure or mixed. If the purpose of world reconstruction is to give freedom to men, then the return toward economic freedom is essential to the survival of other freedoms. It would be ironic that a war for freedom should end in such a defeat of personal liberty.

One of the problems both of trade barriers and world economic peace will arise from governmental control of currency and credit, export and import of goods, government shipping and air transport. At once we may state that these observations to follow do not apply to the emergency relief measures which must be undertaken after the war, but to the long-view setup in the world.

If the world is to have recovery, prosperity, and higher standards of living the aim of foreign trade should be the maximum practical exchange of goods and services. Private traders cannot compete with governments, for governments can rely upon taxes to pay their losses.

If there is to be a restoration of the maximum volume of international trade, there must be ultimate removal of all direct or indirect government control of buying and selling of goods in foreign markets.

There are also peace aspects in government trading. When governments engage in exchange of commodities, or credit or financial controls, or in the conduct of shipping, they become bidders in the market and competitors with other peoples and other governments. Thus, all the usual conflicts and frictions of the market as to price, quantity, credit, and a thousand other things become conflicts and frictions between governments and finally lodge in their State Departments. There they arouse national emotions. Under private traders, such activities do not involve governments, and thereby avoid centralizing their cumulative effects into international frictions. The Russian Government has of course dictated their entire foreign trade. We in the United States have not been free from it before this war as witness our government dumping of wheat. Britain has encouraged cartels.

We believe the whole experience of the last twenty years of direct or indirect government trading in commodities, credit and shipping has demonstrated that it is alive with international friction and threats to peace.

We suggest that American policies should be directed to restore freedom of private enterprise in foreign trade.

Government-permitted or encouraged cartels or monopolies in international trade have many of the aspects of direct government trading.

These formations outside of the United States have increased greatly since the last war. They are likely, unless dealt with, to increase still further after this war. We in the United States prevent the functioning of such organizations by the Anti-Trust Laws.

We suggest that American policies should be directed to abolish all cartels and monopolies in foreign trade.

Quotas are again a government interference and a barrier to trade, for they can be organized and administered only by governments. This invention has been discovered since the last war and is one of the worst of all human devices in obstruction of the free movement of goods. Quotas constitute a complete wall against trade, with doors open only to favored nations and in favored amounts. This device has also been used by the United States, Great Britain and a number of smaller nations.

We suggest that the American policy should be their total abolition.

VICTORY GARDEN MOVE IS STARTED IN EASTLAND

The County Wide Victory Garden Program was started in Eastland recently. Hazel Parchman, Vocational Homemaking Teacher of Desdemona was elected temporary chairman of the same. Mrs. Earnest Shafer was elected temporary secretary. Mrs. Jack Frost gave a report on the progress of victory garden work started in Eastland. Miss Myra Tankersley, Co. Home Dem. Agent, who told of the necessity for a more intensive victory garden program in 1944.

Methods of how home gardens can meet this production was demonstrated by Loma Faye Hearn, Asst. Home Dem. Agent, who gave an inspirational and informational demonstration on making plant beds and plant flats. By the use of the plant bed, such seeds as tomatoes, cabbage, pepper, and

Chickens - Turkeys

STAR SULPHUROUS COMPOUND given in drinking water or feed, destroys in the germ period—intestinal germs and worms that cause most all disease and loss in egg production. Also rids them of blood-sucking lice, mites, fleas and bluebugs. Then they will stay in good health and egg production at a very small cost. Money back if not satisfied. OIL CITY PHARMACY.

egg-plant can be started immediately and transferred to the plant flat when they have reached the weight of 4 to 5 inches. This, according to Miss Hearn, will insure thrifty, vigorous plants to be set out in the garden when the danger of killing frost is over. It is especially important that growers of tomatoes comply with this procedure in order that they may get the most production.

Floyd Lynch, County Agent, gave information obtained recently from Mr. J. F. Rosborough, Horticulturist of the Extension Service of A&M College, and the West Cross Timbers Experimental Station, Stephenville, Texas.

Gardens are divided into early and late. Early gardens are to be started in February and March. English Peas—The little Marvii variety is preferred.

Carrots—If planted, should have a well prepared seed bed. Plow or fork up the soil to a depth of 1 1/2 inches.

Beets—Should be planted and thinned when 3 inches high to 2 or 4 inches apart in row.

Spinach—Should be fall rather than spring grown. A firm seed bed is required. Bloom-dale and Long Standing are desired varieties.

Mustard Greens—preferred to Spinach this late. They grow off much quicker.

Tomatoes—Varieties giving best results at the Experiment Station are: New Improved Porter, and Stockdale.

The new improved porter is very prolific—produces well through the summer. It is excellent for making tomato juice. It's biggest objection is its size. It produced 1-2 tons per acre. The next tomato in producing is the Stockdale. It produced 3 1-2 tons per acre. It is larger and very fine quality. This tomato as well as any other tomato should be started early. A plant box made in last week in Feb. produces plants that are the desired size for transplanting to the garden. Lettuce and Onions—Plants should be planted in the early garden. Potatoes should be disinfected before planting. Semesan Bel disinfect can be purchased locally. The Irish Potato varieties most common are cobbler and triumph. Katahdin and pontiac are new varieties that produce well and are quality potatoes and keep well. Sweet Potatoes—Should be bedded out now—Nick the potatoes and bed out only salmon colored ones.

Don't shrink at the very mention of coffee and children? Don't believe all the old rumors, legends, misunderstandings and thick-headed gossip? Then examine the question frankly and realistically. That's what doctors did long ago—and promptly buried it.

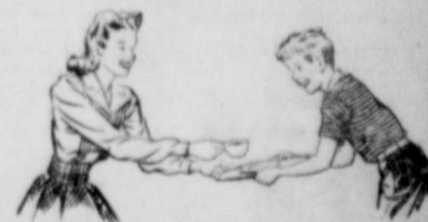

Of course give the little moppets coffee to drink! Not the way you drink it. No. Nor as a substitute for nutritional or essential foods. But a cup of delicious Admiration Coffee, diluted with milk or cream, is perfectly all right. Children tire of the taste of milk. Many mothers therefore use Admiration in the milk as an encouragement to drink quantities of milk.

Admiration, a blend of the choicest "mild" coffees, is frequently added in the proportion of half coffee and half milk. This is tempting to youngsters both in flavor and psychologically. Coffee is an "adult" drink to children. Admiration can also be used advantageously as a new and exciting flavor for custards, junkets and the like. No matter how you serve it, Admiration's thrilling flavor and richness are present—and enjoyed.

As to the silly doubts—let's dissolve them with a word. Coffee does indeed contain caffeine. So does tea. And hot cocoa. And chocolate candies. A Little Lesson In Abstracting

The abstract is a written history of the title chain. If carefully prepared it will (1) definitely locate the tract under search, (2) reveal, if possible, the true ownership, (3) show liens, if any, and (4) the defects in the deed or other written documents. It may or may not prove the title to be good. This is the reason for the abstract and why it is necessary in every real estate transaction.

TRUCK DRIVER EXPLAINS

SALEM, Ore. (UP)—A certain Oregon truck driver reported his version of an accident to the state motor vehicle accident bureau.

"Well, it was just about day-break. I had the old corn popper in the whistle nearly winding about 35 when I saw this old hay-shaker coming across the side road.

"I gave him the horn and pinched the air a couple of times, but he stopped for the highway, so I kicked it in direct and stuck my foot into the accelerator."

"I was just getting wound up again when I hit the intersection, and this lub pulled out on me. I cut for the barn and made it around him all right, but I couldn't bring her back, and the next thing I knew I was out in the pea patch plowing corn."
