12 Soldiers Pass Farm with Flying Colors

MERCED Cal. (UP)—The color of "Three Men on a Horse" is nothing on the Merced Army...

Flying School's "Twelve Soldiers on a Cow" for thrills and suspense. Corporal Nelson and his 11-man detail were returning from the Mariposa hills in a quest for...

trees to beautify the Post, when they spotted a cow showing signs of great distress on the farm of Mrs. C. A. Brewer. The soldiers did not remain spectators long when the cow's owner...

appeared and asked for their aid. The bovine was carried to the nearest barn and there the boys delivered a 25-pound bouncing baby bull. According to the latest reports both mother and son were coming along fine, despite the fact that none of the 12 soldiers had ever stepped foot on a farm before.

The leaders of both groups, who have watched absenteeism grow rapidly in war plants, indicated that absenteeism is a specific character fault among school age young people that demands vigorous treatment. They said that the bad working and thinking habits and in wholesome social attitudes which are permitted to persist through high school are definitely detrimental to the efficiency of the individual when he leaves school and takes his place in industry.

Much of the present absenteeism in industry today was blamed on the habits formed while in high school. Fourth full-time branch office of the University of Texas War Training Program has been opened in San Antonio, to manage a greatly expanded program in that city. Other full-time offices are in Austin, Ft. Worth, Dallas and Houston.

THE STORY: Worried, Pat Friday voices her fear that she will be substituted for Loraine Stuart in the transcontinental glider flight. Capt. Jimmy Carr refuses to regard the situation as serious, telling Pat that he will permit nothing to spoil the thrill of his trip. Sounding over Cleveland, now, Jimmy tells Pat he is not sorry that Loraine didn't accompany him. Pat, who has not dared to voice her love for Jimmy, cannot still her heart, which tells her that perhaps she will have a chance in competition with Loraine.

GUN PLAY CHAPTER X CAPT. JAMES CARR with their Victory sailplane down to Cleveland's airport like some gigantic condor settling to a leisurely perch. "Goodness—oh, Jimmy!" Pat crowded off in a little-girl scare. "Stop it," he ordered. "No crying. No apologizing or anything of the sort. Just put on a lot of smiling dandy and bluff right through."

"Yes, Jimmy. I—I'll try." Smiling dignity. That's what he wanted and Pat knew it was right. Now, too, that Loraine Stuart would have done it with naturalness and poise. "I'll probably state or say the wrong things," she predicted, nervously. "You won't," said he. "You love what it takes, Pat. Remember that source mind?" "But I—Jimmy I—"

There was no more time. The crowd was on them, the reporters and the photographers and the officials and the reception committees and the mass of John Public himself. For almost 30 minutes life was a veritable whirl around pretty Patricia Friday. She seemed to be shaking a million hands, hearing a million questions. She remembered to keep a happy smile, but that detail wasn't hard because this was all so exhilarating. Jimmy was making a short talk at a microphone. Then she herself had to speak three—and to her dying day she'll never know what she said! Smiling dignity. She hoped, for Jimmy's sake, that she had managed it.

When she became wholly rational again, she was 3000 feet up, sitting comfortably behind Captain Carr and streaming westward for Chicago. Jimmy was shouting, huzzah-huzzah.

"Heigh ho, heigh ho, A sailing, a sailing I'll go! With a lady so fair— A sailing, a sailing I'll go—o-o-o!" He broke into his ditty. "How'm I doing, Pat?" "Sweet!" "What?" "Sweet!" She repeated, louder. "You're so talkative! Me, I'm having a time. And say, the mob down there liked you, Private Pat. Thanks plenty!" "I'm glad, Jim." "I'll be over in Chicago. Or better, depending on your point of view." "I love it, personally. I love everything about gliding and soaring. I intend to make it a career. But—but I'm out of place here and I know it. You're going to try to smooth it over, and all, telling me nice things." "You're not out of place. There had to be a woman passenger." "But I'm not the right woman. Loraine will be furious, Jim. And I don't blame her. With me, having to use her name, and—" Captain Carr laughed. "Guess you're right. She can throw a mad when she wants to." Now what did he mean by that, Pat wondered. Sitting there in the sailplane behind him, she studied his handsome back, the tilt of his head, the crinkle of his hair. He went bareheaded as much as Army style let him; he was like her brother in the Navy, or like a college boy, virile, and devilish, and gentle within. In his words she sensed his fiancée ought to be here with him, but in his tone he implied that life was grand as is. "Jimmy," she called. "Hup!" "I—I'll do better in Chicago. I mean, I will. I won't have stage fright so. I have my speech all planned in my mind, and I'll try to let you down in the slightest. I'll try to be a real lady." He laughed loud. "Imagine— you, being a lady!" "But Jimmy!" "That'll take 23 more years, Private Pat! And at least 22 more pounds on you. But listen—the lady passenger we needed didn't have to be a dowager with a lorgnette, nor even a somebody with Eleanor Roosevelt poise. Why hello-to-hello, Pat, you did swell! She loved him for that. For that and—and—well she just loved him. It made her miserable even as it exalted her.

American People Face Acid Test in Treasury's 2nd War Loan To Raise $3 Billion Dollars in Three Weeks The Nation Dare Not Fail in This Greatest Financing Task in History—'They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money.'

Washington, D. C.—Coming as it does upon the heels of income tax payments, the people of America will face an acid test this month when the Treasury's Second War Loan drive opens April 12 with an objective of thirteen billion dollars to be raised through sale of Government securities.

A substantial part of this huge financing, the most stupendous ever undertaken by any government in the world's history, must be loaned by people in ordinary walks of life.

High Government officials have pointed out that the nation must not fail in this duty to our sons on the little fronts who are now carrying the offensive to the enemy at every stage. It is obvious to every thinking man and woman that as the United Nations take this offensive against the dictators, the cost of war operations increases in proportion.

The American people must no longer think of war costs in terms of equipping a soldier, building a tank or plane or a ship. We must now think in terms of the cost of battles, invasions and new offensives. Attacking armies cost more money than equipping that army and we must meet that increased cost by buying more War Bonds and Second War Loan Securities.

They Give Their Lives. It is not only necessary that the American people lend here at home money to help pay the costs in terms of the war effort—it is an honor to do so. For we here at home can do no less than attempt to approach the sacrifices of our brave men out on the fighting fronts to whom the last great measure of sacrifice is but a daily offering. They give their lives for us. We are asked only to lend our money.

And that is the theme of the Second War Loan, "They Give Their Lives—You Lend Your Money."

Financial experts who know monetary conditions in the nation point out that at the present time there is in liquid funds, cash and commercial bank deposits over and above taxes and present investment in Government Bonds, and over and

OUR MEN IN SERVICE

ST. LOUIS, April 4.—Pfc. Travis M. Cozart of Ranger, Texas has received his diploma for successfully completing course of instruction in Aircraft Engine Mechanics given by a School of the Army Air Forces Technical Training Command, at Parks Air Base, Inc., East St. Louis, Ill.

Times has received a poem by a soldier stationed at Adair, Oregon, which camp is the present home for a group of Ranger boys in service. The poem is by James (dy) Sanders, Arlie Elrod, roe Blackwell, Bill Burch and is Lee.

Edson has written the poem: ADAIR A rugged soldier, Bud, has wallowed in the mud, I learned my battle tactics, soaking wet, as never one to swear, I came to Camp Adair, But it hardened me for what is coming yet.

I have beaten through the brush a rhapsody of slush, and the wind has stung my carcass like a whip; at Camp Adair, I say, just another day, and you learn to keep a stiffer upper lip.

SECOND WAR LOAN Buy More War Bonds Today. THEY GIVE THEIR LIVES—YOU LEND YOUR MONEY.

To Hasten Victory No American wants this war to go one minute beyond the time we can bring it to a victorious end. To hasten that victory—to save possibly the lives of millions of our boys on our far flung fronts—it is imperative that every American do his part in the Second War Loan.

Aid to Enemy "Any American who willfully neglects to pay his taxes on time or to invest every cent he can in War Bonds is surely giving aid and comfort to the enemy. . . . We have a job to do and we are all called for service to our country. Our dollars are called to service too. Let us all ask ourselves, 'Shall we be more tender with our dollars than with the lives of our sons?' — Secretary Morgenthau

Thirteen billion dollars—the sum the Treasury must raise in the Second War Loan drive, is only one sixth of the estimated cost of the war for the fiscal year of 1943. The goal of the Second War Loan drive is 12 billion dollars. That is just about one fifth of the estimated increase of the Public Debt for the fiscal year of 1943.

AMES, Ia. April 4.—Herman L. Bryan, 20 son of Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Bryan, Ranger, Texas is aiming for a petty officer's rating at the Navy's trade school for electricians on the campus of Iowa State College here. Special training schools for diesel operators and electrician's mates are in operation here. Diesel operators are taught the operation and maintenance of internal combustion engines. Electrician's mates learn the use of electrical tools and to perform such tasks as soldering, brazing, and electrical wiring.

Upon graduation the men will be assigned to duty at sea or at a shore station. Some will receive immediate promotions to petty officer ratings and the remainder will be given an opportunity to obtain ratings a short time after reporting for active service.

Mrs. Dan Milmo has received a letter from her husband stating that he has been ashore though does not say where. He is a pharmacist mate first class and with the navy somewhere in the Pacific.

Mrs. Milmo stated that she believes that he had been on shore at Australia, though censorship prohibited him from saying just where he was.

FORT BLISS, Texas, April 1 1943—The promotion of Pvt.

OF PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

BEFORE anyone gets the cockeyed idea that this C. I. O. versus A. F. of L. dispute over which union should be the bargaining agent for some 80,000 employees of three Kaiser shipyards in Oregon is an isolated case, a situation peculiar to this industry alone, it is well to consult the National Labor Relations Board records and determine how frequent jurisdictional labor rows really are. There are about 80 such cases every month, and this has been the trend for the last year and a half.

NLRB spokesmen insist that all disputes between unions are not jurisdictional disputes. A jurisdictional dispute, according to NLRB definition, is a question over what union laborers are to do a certain job, as, for instance, should ships be built by boilermakers, plumbers, or sheet metal workers, or should welders and riveters form a union of their own to do the job.

A dispute such as that now centered in the Kaiser yards, in which the C. I. O. has petitioned the NLRB to set aside Kaiser contracts with the A. F. of L., so that an election may be held to determine which group should bargain for the workmen, is called by the NLRB a "representation case," not a jurisdictional case.

Accepting this somewhat fine and legalistic distinction, the fact remains that the Kaiser case centers around a dispute between two unions. As such it is a potential interference with efficient operation of an essential war production industry and it should be stopped before it makes any more trouble than it has.

WHATEVER you call this Kaiser case now before NLRB, it is in no way unique. There are 18 such cases in shipyards alone. There are literally hundreds of such union vs. union contests in other war industries. There have been close to 2000 such disputes since war production effort began.

The NLRB seventh annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1942, reveals that 10,977 new cases were filed with the board during the year. In round numbers, 5000 cases were charges that employers had indulged in unfair labor practices as defined by the Wagner act, while 6000 cases were representation cases.

Of these 6000 representation cases, 1079 were contests between rival unions over which should be the bargaining agent, the other being cases in which the union petitioning for an election to determine bargaining agent was not opposed by another union.

To be perfectly fair about this matter, it is to the credit of the NLRB that it handled these 1079 disputes with no more than the local furor they created. But the important point is that in these thousand-odd cases, over half a million workmen were "organized" to vote over an issue which in final analysis was no more important than deciding which union collected its dues.

The number of workmen employed in the plants where these disputes took place, but who did not show enough interest to vote, is nowhere recorded, but in many of these elections, not much more than half the workmen vote.

Currently, the NLRB is holding about 11 elections a day. Approximately three out of every 11 elections is a union vs. union dispute. NLRB collects its statistics on a quarterly basis. For the last quarter of 1942, there were 241 union vs. union disputes, 139 of which were A. F. of L. vs. C. I. O., 92 of which were A. F. of L. or C. I. O. vs. unaffiliated unions, 10 of which were three-cornered fights.

6 Wartime Lighting Suggestions

Wartime sight needs ample light! A recent survey indicates that people are using their eyes in the home 20 per cent more these days than a year or so ago. The timely suggestions below will help you to have better light in your home with a minimum of trouble or expense.

- 1. Clean lamp bowls and lamp bulbs frequently. You'll get 25% to 30% more light from the lamps you have.
- 2. Use white shades or shades with white linings. Repaint them or reline them if necessary. Dark shades waste light.
- 3. Sit close enough to the lamp to get all the help it can give your eyes. A difference of a few inches may mean 50% less light.
- 4. Avoid direct glare from lamp bulbs or bowl, by using shades that are deep enough and big enough.
- 5. Arrange lamps and furniture so each lamp can serve two or more people, if possible.
- 6 Place each lamp so it puts no glare in the eyes of persons using it.
