LONDON, (UP)-A force of at least 500 American heavy bom. bers based in Italy, striking in support of the Russian armies inading Romania, blasted the important rail and communications center of Bucharest and Ploesti today, and German fighter planes rose to challenge them.

The German radio, broadcasting reports that Allied planes were approaching northwest Germany, indicated there might be a pincers attack on the Reich from Britain

Strong formations of Lightning and Thunderbolt fighter planes escorted the Italy-based Fortresses and Liberators on the Romanian raid and shot down some of the German planes which gave battle.

The rail yards at Ploesti were raided on April 5, while Allied bombers last struck at Bucharest on April 4. The raids should be f considerable assistance to the Russians, for the Germans and Romanians must funnel supplies and reinforcements for their hardpressed armies through Bucharest

The announcement at Naples said the bombers flew "in great strength," indicating a force of at least 500 Liberators and Fort-

Turkey's Ambassador Ertegun | Despite War, Mos.em Envoy

New Dean of Diplomatic Folk | Holds High Hope for World

By HELEN ESSARY Jentral Press Columnist

. THE WASHINGTON DIPLOMATIC CORPS has a new dean. He s Mehmet Munir Ertegun, ambassador extraordinary and plenepotentiary of Turkey.

A soft-voiced, modest philosopher, with a wise understanding of people and nations, is this slendor, dark, be-speciacled little gentleman. Something of a prophet, too, is Ertegun and one who shines in a city of false prophecy. The day after Pearl Harbor he said to friends, "My country will remain neutral."

Budgered by Axis nations and Allies aike for help, Turkey has managed to stand aloof. And today Mehmet Munir Ertegun, her representative in Washington, holds a most im-

Fowerful of Powerful of nerves that the dean of the Washington corps should be the ambassador of the most powerful of neutral mations. For, being dean, contrary to the opinion of must people, is not an empty phrase. The dean of the Washington comb has special responsibilities and influence. He is not a mere ceremonial officer. Frequently he directs the attitude of other representatives in the capital in maiters where a mistake might offend many Americans. For example, during the days or prohibition, it was the dean of the corps who, on calling his group together for a regular meeting, suggested the attitude of the foreign em-

Ambassador Ertogun will exert a calming influence on the Washington diplomats though at the moment they seem to be in a most uniable mood. Turkey's representative is a man of honest humility He is self-effacing and deeply religious. A devout Mohammedanhe has faith in the ultimate brotherhood of man.

"How can you be an optimist now Mr. Ambassador?" I asked These are the dark ages of slaughter and destruction. I believe," said Ertegun solemnly, "that war is like any other discuse which affects human beings. The way to cure many discuses has been found. Some day the way to cure the disease of war will be found. That there are still many diseases proying on human beings should not be a discouragement. Human society goes on and on. It is immortal. There is much more time to treat its sicknesses than there is to treat the sickness of individual human beings whose lives are short.

"Perhaps," I ventured, "it is your religion, your Mohammedanism that teaches you such faith."

"I cannot presume to give an answer to such a serious question, Ambassidor Ertegun said, "without thinking all day. But I do not find anything in my thoughts or reading to make me believe that all people are not atriving toward the same goal. The identity of the vilgion is not important. The purpose of all religions is the samethe effort of human intelligence to solve the doubts of the unknown which surrounds all of us."

The ambassa or is prohably one of the most sarnest students in the Washington corps. He reads and studies many hours a day. The ambassador's wife, Hayrunnisi Rusten Ertegun, is a lovely.

gracious person with pink and white complexion, a fine for bright, while clothes, a quick smile and a Mme. Friegun friendly, happy manner. She will make a charming deyenne of the terps. As a hostess in the handsome unboosy at Sheridan Circle, designed by George Hostess Oakley Totlan, Madame Ertegun has already shown skill and cleverness. She has opterlained many people elegantly at es, at state luncheons, dinners. And I friends in small groups there have been luscious Turkish dishes, exciting to the polate and deagerous to the waistline

Pretty Seima, Ahrico and Nesuhi Ertegun, the three college-age children of the dean of the corps and Madame Ertegun, are brilliant students of whom tipatient parents of Washington children have often spicken thusign "Why can't you be as smart as those young They have had to learn the language you grew up in and wet they are far about of you in classes?"
