An Amusing Yarn Repeated Nation's War-Time Mood About the Pentagon Building Shows Definite Slowing Up

By HELEN ESSARY Central Press Columnist

IT'S TOLD AS TRUTH. If it's fiction, believe it anyhow. It's the kind of a story anybody likes to listen to.

The scene is that fabulous Pentagon building—producer of "Have-you-heard-this-one?" fabric and line officers. Begin the yarn at the office of an unnamed sergeant. He's the first step into that paneled river front suite where the Top Drawer Big Shots function grandly.

The sergeant, a considerable fellow, often has to take a message to Lieut. Col. Floyd H. Long, Jr. It isn't civilian cricket or Army etiquette to barge into an office that hides behind a closed door. So the sergeant has cut a peephole in the door at about eye level. Simpler than keyhole snooping certainly. Thus he discovers a convenient moment for calling on the colonel.

Lieutenant Colonel Long is affected by the same hesitation as he confronts the door which connects his office with that of Maj. Gen. Wilhelm D. Styer. So he takes to the peephole which he has had cut for a quick eye view of his superior officer.

The superior officer, himself wonders when he can properly interrupt HIS superior—but only until he has looked through the peephole in the doorway leading to the office of his boss, Lieut. Gen. Brehob B. Somervell, commanding general of the Army Service Forces.

And General Somervell—I really do hear this is truth—cocks an inquiring eye through the peephole in the door opening on Robert Patterson, undersecretary of war, before he presents himself in person.

It is reported that there are similar avenues of light and information in the Pentagon wing opposite to that occupied by these gentlemen. It is even hinted that the chief of staff of the United States Army, Gen. George C. Marshall, has—shall we call it a vantage point?—through which he anticipates the leisure moments of Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. And at what does Secretary Stimson look? He looks up the Potomac river toward the White House.

PERHAPS THAT USUAL QUADRENNIAL LAG before presidential election day explains the slowing up in our war-time mood. Perhaps as a nation we are too impatient to take a long fight for victory comfortably.

Certainly the war hurrah is fading. The beating of the preliminary tom-toms has quieted. And travelers report a distressing lack of enthusiasm in all parts of the country in war-time activities. We like to get things done in a hurry in this restless country.

WHATEVER THE DELAY and blindness in the human mind of Washington, the capital itself has blossomed hastily into its usual spring beauty. Some capitals may have had handsome and mellower buildings before the war smote them down. But I cannot believe that any capital has ever had more beautiful flowers and trees than Washington.

So many bushes and plants are shining in the April sun that you can pick your favorite. Do you prefer the pink-lined magnolias? Or the glowing forsythia? Or the feathery cherry trees?

Which reminds me that a refugee from Paris declares that the gardens and parks of the French capital have never looked as lovely as this year. The reason for this is entertaining. There is absolutely no gas for anyone in Paris. There are no automobiles. Not one little motor sipping about, footing that absurd French horn in all the confines of the city.

With no motor cars there is no exhaust of carbon monoxide fumes. Therefore, the trees are sprouting thick foliage and the flowering plants have gone quiet mad with color. The Clamps Elisee is in fete.

And, speaking of refugees, John Pahle, director of the War Refugee Board, says he is determined that the public shall know the truth about the work of his new organization. He does find the United States in a delicate spot, however, as it tells other countries what to do about refugees while itself refusing to let refugees into this country. Sometimes I wonder if we are as noble as we imagine. There may be a touch of Uncle Shylock in our generous humanitarian attitudes.

"SHORT CUT TO DUNKERQUE"

Yankee Senorita BY LORENA CARLETON

SYNOPSIS MALLORY BAKER, self-centered, but young, beautiful and talented singer, has achieved success with the aid of TOD PATRICK, her manager. He has been just what she was an entertainer striving to reach the top. MALLORY fancies herself in love with DAVID DARGEN, blond artist, whose ring she wears. YESTERDAY Mallery asks David to come along with her on her vacation trip to Mexico, but he pleads that he has no money. CHAPTER THREE DAVID'S WORDS. "But what would I use for money?" made Mallery feel as if she'd been stuck with a sharp pin. Suddenly she was furious all over again at Tod Patrick, because the words were exactly his words. Her eyes lost their violet-blue dreaminess. They focused on the man before her. She wanted to say, "Are you kidding?" or some such similar phrase. But she felt such remarks out of keeping with her prima donna position. That is, used to anyone other than Tod Patrick. "Darling," she managed gently, "I don't quite understand what you mean."

his. She stood up and looked down on her visitor. "David, you've always told me what a well-to-do family you were. And about the luxurious childhood you had. So what is it all about?" "Mallery, I don't have any family." Apparently, now that he had started his confession, David intended to complete it. "I have only one relative, an uncle in Glendale, California, who'd be tickled to death if I married some wealthy girl. He has an apartment house and is able to send me just enough money to study and pay for a cheap studio room. I don't live on East Eightieth street where you think Mallery. I live farther back, almost to upper Broadway. When you've picked me up, I've always waited in the Eightieth street doorway." He gave a rueful shake of his head. "I'm sorry I've wasted this much time on you. I see now it has all been in vain."

a new guy they hikes him up to the Army. Mallery did not bother to reply. She was too busy eating. However, Prizm did not expect a reply. She talked simply to, as she expressed it, "hear her head rattle." When she finished eating Mallery remained at the table while Prizm cleared away her dinner plate and brought her some hot-house pears. "Prizm, how would you like to have a month's vacation?" You could see your sister near Dallas. "The Negroes' mouth spread in wide pleasure. "Sounds mighty fine. My sister has a new house and a new baby since I last saw her." She sobered. "But I'd miss you, Miss Mallery. I'd miss hearin' your crazy goin' on—and your singin'." Besides, what would you do without me? Nobody can help you the way I can when you have to work. I always have your broth just right and your milk in the thermos and see you don't catch no cold and I press your pretty singin' clothes better'n anybody. I'd better not go, thank you just the same. "But, Prizm, I'll not be here. I'm going to Mexico." "What's Mr. Patrick say about it?" "Oh, he wants me to go—but I'm not going to tell him." "That don't make no sense, Miss Mallery." The girl was cutting a second pear into thin slices. "Just you never mind Mr. Patrick. That's clear enough, isn't it?" "Sure, it's clear. But he sure ain't goin' to like it." "Who cares? I'm going just the same. So you'd better go to Texas while you can. Now finish the dishes and then help me pack. I'll fly to Texas, buy a car at the border and go on down by automobile. I can get plenty of gasoline after I've crossed the line. Pack a couple of dresses, some underclothes and everything in my dressing table drawers." "What you wanta go in a car for?" "Because I'll have a better chance of doing as I please." Mallery began to know that was why she really wanted to make the trip in such a casual, though arduous, fashion. It would be a pleasant change, a release from her habitual life of too many appointments, too many friends, too many spectators. She would "get away from it all" and, so she decided within herself, save her broken heart. In fact, she was learning that her broken heart could be depended upon to give her a great deal of pleasure. Prizm shuffled about the girl's bedroom, opening and shutting closets and drawers. Mallery could hear her muttering to herself. "Hush that right now, Miss Mallery. Just because love ain't in bloom no more there's no cause for you to get your eyes 'huffy'. Come on and eat this chicken and be glad you got it all for yourself." She helped the girl into a chair. "Now sop some of this here cream gravy on top my hot biscuits. An' don't tell she you can't eat. You ain't got that sort of love that starves a body. I've had it four times and I know. When you fall in love like that and can't eat, then, chile, you got it." She put a tumbler of milk beside the girl's plate. "Personally, I'm going to wait until the war's over. Every time I get in'reated in

Auxiliary Meeting Is Held Tuesday

The regular meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary was held at the Legion Hall Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock with the president, Mrs. R. W. Gordon, presiding.

Mrs. E. C. Ward, chairman of the committee for the collection of used tooth paste and shaving cream tubes reported that the group had collected far better than 200 pounds of the tubes and that the collection will be sent to headquarters by the Hartnett Wholesale Grocery Company.

It was also explained at the meeting that so many silk and nylon hose and such a quantity of old records have been left at collection points for the drive that the Auxiliary will try to make another shipment of these articles, although the drives had been completed.

Persons who have old hose or records which they wish to contribute may do so by leaving them at either the Fire Station, the Star Dry Goods company of the A. H. Powell Grocery.

Second Annual School Planned For Mexico City

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—Plans are nearing completion for the second annual school to be conducted jointly by the University of Texas and the National University of Mexico at Mexico City, June 14-Aug. 8.

Courses in 22 subjects will be taught by a dual staff from the two universities. The U. S. Department of State provides funds for the school.

Credit may be received by students at the University of Texas or other leading institutions in the school courses in Spanish, anthropology, art, economics, English, geology, government, history and sociology, university officials have announced.

At the first such school last year there were 161 students attending from 67 different universities and colleges in the United States, Mexico, Canada and Puerto Rico.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Cromolinston which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germs laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Cromolinston blends hickory wood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Cromolinston with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)
