Eastland county will be entitled to 18 votes at the state convention.

Enrollment In Schools Increased By 181 Transfers

According to an announcement made Saturday by Dr. G. C. Boswell, the enrollment in Ranger schools will be increased at the fall term by at least 181 transfers and it was stated that at least 20 more were making their plans to transfer to Ranger schools by Monday night.

Monday night is the deadline for transfers and those who are interested in transferring to Ranger schools should see Dr. Boswell sometime Monday.

According to Dr. Boswell the Ranger schools have contracts with Alameda, Okra, Cross Roads and with Frankell for high school students. The merchants and people of Ranger have been asked to cooperate with the schools in making this incoming students happy in their attendance in Ranger schools.

Dr. Boswell also pointed out that the four dollars additional state funds per student has been approved by the attorney general and this will bring an additional $5,376 to the Ranger schools this year.

All teachers have been elected for the coming year and a full faculty has been secured.

BLIND LEADS BLIND

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—Most of the kids on Stanley Street got in on the fun, even if they didn't receive a reward.

An elderly citizen the night before had lost his teeth while walking along a bayou bank. He couldn't find them himself, so he enlisted aid of the kids.

At last reports they hadn't found them, either.

Radio Signals Aid In Finding Cosmic Balls

CHICAGO (UP)—Radio now is used by the University of Chicago to keep track of cosmic ray balloons sent aloft to gather weather data.

On a recent experiment, balloons which might have taken weeks to locate after floating to earth in some remote spot were found almost as soon as they reached the ground.

A radio sound transmitter packed with the weather equipment in the balloons sends signals which are received by the sound laboratory at the institute of meteorology at the university. Two other laboratories also receive the signals.

When there is a disappearance of signals at the university station simultaneously, radio wave distances from both are compared and the balloons are located immediately.

Cool North, East Breezes Soothe Heat Weary Town

Cool north and east winds gave a brief respite to heat weary Ranger residents Saturday morning after three of the hottest days ever experienced by this section.

Friday afternoon's high temperature was 108 degrees and represented a steady climb from Wednesday afternoon when the temperature reached 106 degrees. Thursday afternoon's high hit 107.12 degrees.

No casualties from the heat were reported among local people but a woman enroute to Dallas from California by bus, while stopping at the Ghoslon hotel, Friday afternoon succumbed to the heat. She was stricken while in the hotel and was taken to a room and put to bed. She remained at the hotel overnight and about noon Saturday continued her journey. She was accompanied by a nine year old granddaughter.

MRS. TERRELL'S BOOK ABOUT RANGER TO BE PUBLISHED SOON

Once again Ranger is in the spotlight of the world of books and this time through the efforts of Mrs. S. D. Terrell of Ft. Worth, a former Ranger resident.

Mrs. Terrell has written the Times that she has sold her book to Dorrance and Company of Philadelphia and is eagerly awaiting its appearance. The title of the book is OIL TIDE: A story of Ranger, and has as its hero a young doctor who practiced in Ranger during the boom as its heroine has as a Red Cross nurse who was engaged in public health nursing in the same period. As Mrs. Terrell puts it in her book is one of love and understanding between two people who found themselves in the midst of one of the most colorful booms in the history of Texas. A wide circle of friends in Ranger as well as other sections will eagerly await the publication of the book.

Mrs. Terrell, the wife of Dr. S. D. Terrell, Ft. Worth orthodontist says that she has worked on the book intermittently for a period of 18 years and received a number of rejection slips before the book was finally sold. She became so discouraged at one time that she burned the manuscript.

Certainly Mrs. Terrell was well acquainted with her subject having lived in Ranger during the boom after having come here as the bride of Dr. Terrell in 1914, three years before the discovery of oil well came in. They moved to Ft. Worth in 1925.

She was born in Clay County, Alabama, the daughter of a Baptist minister and at the age of ten years came with her family to Texas and settled at Gorman. After attending Mary-Hardin-Baylor College she went to Valley Mills to teach speech. It was there that she met and married Dr. Terrell, the son of a pioneer Ranger doctor, the late D. C. E. Terrell.

The two children of the couple, Mary Luella and Sanford Dean, Jr., were born in Ranger. Mary Luella will enter the University of Arizona as a junior this fall and Sanford Dean, Jr., is in service.

Mrs. Terrell states that she received encouragement in her efforts from many friends in Ranger and on several occasions consulted and received encouragement from such people as Walter Prescott Webb and J. Frank Dobie.

Information from the publishers is to the effect that work on the book will be started "right away" and the author is eagerly awaiting the debut of "Oil Tide."

NAVY SPEEDS MAIL TO MEN IN MARIANAS

By Charles F. Annot
United Press War Correspondent
WITH U. S. PACIFIC FLEET
IN THE WESTERN PACIFIC —
(UP)—Triple the average number of letters received by the average citizen of Indianapolis, for instance, and you have a rough idea of the postal problem the Navy faced when the Central Pacific front surged westward 4,000 miles from Pearl Harbor to the Marianas via the Gilberts and Marshalls.

The Navy solved the complex jig-saw puzzle, Lt. Comdr. Earle B. Chance, revealed here with a handful of ciphers from Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, fleets of transport planes, the judgement of veteran mail handlers and a deft bit of postal "quarterbacking."

Now it isn't unusual for airmail letters posted in New York City on a Monday to be in the hands of a serviceman in the Marshall islands 8,000 miles away just a week later. In the Gilberts airmail letters from home are being received regularly in three to four days. The standing record in the Marshalls is four days from Virginia.

To Chance, a postal inspector for 25 years in his home city, the job of setting up machinery to get the mail to men at the front. Since October, 1942, he has flown nearly 60,000 miles.

"The average post office knows approximately where its patron can be found," Chance explained, "but out here men move around with such lightning speed we must anticipate their movements and then get the mail there ahead of them."

Mail deliveries have reached a peak of efficiency in the forward area of the Central Pacific theater. As Tarawa ships carrying postal details were so close behind the assault forces that their crews watched the preinvasion bombardment.

With the invasion forces at Saipan, a new LST carrying a fleet post office unit. Delivery of mail to servicemen aboard assault ships began four days after the invasion. Two days later sealanes were rushing the first airmail to the Marianas and four days later service was under way for troops ashore.

In spite of the care and speed with which the mail is handled the fleet records office has thousands of undelivered letters which were improperly or illegibly addressed. For instance, there are 11,000 Smiths in the Pacific fleet. Chance disclosed, suggesting that addresses should include service numbers.

Chief Murphy Offers Reward For Lost Billfold

Chief George Murphy stated Saturday that he has lost his billfold and will pay a reward to the person who returns it.

The fold was of black leather and contained very valuable papers which he is eager to recover. He said that his name is on a number of cards and papers in the fold and the finder can very easily identify the owner.

It is urgent that the bill fold be returned by Tuesday if it is found and the finder can be assured of a reward when he returns the bill fold to the owner.

Takes Precaution In Nick of Time

PHARR, Tex. (UP)—Sherman Rynph (R) intends never to look for trouble again, at least verbally.

It all began when he went to the Hidalgo County Courthouse at Edinburg to replace a lost driver's license and conduct other business affairs.

"If I get into trouble," he told Deputy Sheriff Elma Vickers, filling out the license application, "I'll just tell the parties concerned my application has been filed for this license."

Eighth Tightens Assault Arc On Historic Florence

ROME, July 29 (UP)—The British Eighth Army drove the Germans back through the Tuscan hills to within five miles of Florence today and steadily tightened an assault arc on the historic cultural center while the American siege of Pisa bogged down to a temporary stalemate.

The entire German line on the Florence front sagged under the weight of a converging British drive which overran half dozen of the central Italian city's outposts. All the ground south of the Arno and Pesa rivers was being cleared, and the Allies were in position for a frontal attack on the main German position in the Gothic line.

Polish troops pushing up the Adriatic coast captured the southern part of the fishing port of Senigallia at the mouth of the Misa River 17 miles northwest of Ancona.

The hardest fighting in Italy was on the approaches to Florence where the Allies were pressing the Germans northward from their last hill line before the city. A furious battle was going on five miles southwest of Florence, where high ground overlooking the city already was in Allied hands.

Tipsy Officer Resents Command Takes Own Action

TRES, La. (UP)—The increased potency of liquor at high altitudes resulted in the double rescue from the English Channel of a Trees, La., P-47 fighter pilot.

Lt. Ralph B. Day was forced to abandon ship over the channel after it had been shot up by Nazis. On his descent, he drank a flask of brandy which is equipment for all pilots. By the time he hit the chill waters, he wrote his parents, he was under the influence. A few minutes later, a destroyer picked up the pilot. The captain ordered him below to prevent his catching cold. Still slightly tight, the channel-soaked lieutenant had words with the captain and said he wouldn't stay where he wasn't wanted. Forthwith he jumped overboard. The crew fished him out again.

Since this episode, Lieutenant Day has been reported missing in action in the Normandy theater.

Cleveland Plants Making Variety Of War Weapons

CLEVELAND (UP)—War plants in Cleveland manufacture almost every conceivable weapon—or its parts—used against the Axis on the world's battlefronts.

Included among the products are castings for the 80-mm mortar base plate, 37-mm. guns and parts sights for the grenade launcher, rifle ejectors, clips and hammers, and link belt loaders.

The 57-mm. gun is described by Army ordnance officers as the nucleus of anything on wheels or tracks, not excluding the German Mark IV Tiger tank.

The grenade launcher is an ingenious infantry weapon that makes it possible for the American soldier to destroy a tank, a pill box, or he his own mortar crew, with a 60-second adjustment to his weapon.

BOOM TIME RESIDENT, MAJOR IN AIR CORPS VISITS RANGER

Major R. S. Fogg, who was discharged from the army air corps of World War I, to come direct to Ranger and join in the pursuit of flowing gold, visited Ranger Saturday morning for the first time in almost 25 years.

At present he is stationed in the office for flying safety, with the Air Corps in Ft. Worth and was enroute from Abilene to Fort Worth when he stopped here.

He stated that when he reached the oil fields after being discharged from the air corps in 1919 he was put to work as a "roust about" and fared rather well until the contractor on a well where he was working became suspicious that he was spying on some of the contractors underhanded deals. The contractor, when convinced that the major was seeing too much, appeared at the well one morning with a 45 strapped on his hip and ordered the ex-flier into his car. They took off from the well, headed for where the major did not know. At what turned out to be Baird, but then unknown to

Private Believed To Be Youngest Grandma In WAC

AMARILLO, Tex. (UP)—Pvt. Florida May Schartner is 34 years old, a medical technician at Amarillo Army Air Field.

But that's not the whole story. It is believed she is the youngest grandmother in the Women's Army Corps.

"I was married when I was 14," Pvt. Schartner explains. "And my daughter, whose son is now more than a year old, is now 18."

Her 34-year-old husband, PFC. William Schartner, is stationed at Brunning Field, Brunning, N. M.

Her young grandson is Raymond Leslie Parker, Jr., son of Cpl. and Mrs. Raymond L. Parker of McMill Field, Fla.

"I enlisted because I wanted to be a medical assistant to boys who are wounded," said the attractive private. "I want to go overseas. I have passed my medical qualifications and I've been told that I'm just awaiting a call for my military occupation specialty."

Texas Wells Must Average 22.2 Bbls. To Meet Demand

DALLAS, Tex. July 28.—Texas' 101,345 oil wells will have to produce an average of 22.2 barrels per day during August in order to supply the 2,246,739 barrels daily allotted by the Texas Railroad Commission in response to a request from the Petroleum Administration for War for more oil to power the drive to victory, the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association pointed out today.

"In order to meet the Texas quota for August the wells will have to produce at a rate 29 per cent greater than in August 1943, and 46 per cent higher than in December, 1941, when war broke out," the Association said.

"In December, 1941, Texas had 100,778 wells. The average production for the month was 1,550,000 barrels or 15.2 barrels per day per well. Under the impact of war—government restrictions on materials and well spacing, scarcity of labor, rising costs of drilling and production and prices frozen at depressed levels—the number of wells dropped 100,414 in August, 1943, but the production rose to 1,727,100 barrels daily or 17.2 per well.

"The average daily gross production during the entire year of 1943 was 16.3 barrels per well. The average cost of drilling a well in Texas last year was $333,614. The net production—the operator's interest in the oil after paying the royalty owners their share—amounted to 13.9 barrels.

"At the average price of $1.19 per barrel for Texas oil, the operators' 13.9 barrels through this $16.54 daily. Out of this he had to pay 87.6 cents per barrel in production costs or a daily outlay of $12.18. This left him a net income of $4.36 per day or $1,591 in a year.

"The cost of drilling an exploratory test—a wildcat—is materially higher than the overall average. Much time is consumed in examining formations on the way down. Furthermore, the search for oil is being made at deeper and deeper levels. The average

Incident Brings Career of Sea Life, Adventure

PORT ARTHUR, Tex. (UP)—Ducking into the old Seamen's Institute twelve years ago to evade the wrath of a truant officer launched Melvin Arvidson on a career of adventure at sea and brought him many citations for bravery.

At the age of 14, he signed on for a berth on the Bull Line Ship "Eleanor". Now a hero in the Maritime Service, he is a hero of World War II, survivor of torpedoes, bombings, and strafing by enemy forces.

Back home for a rest, Arvidson told of helping bring a torpedoed tanker home on an epic voyage from the mid-Pacific after a Jap sub had left her for a "dead duck."

The enemy sub sent a tin fish into the tankers' pump room, Bo'sun Arvidson recalled, cutting a hole in her side, "as big as a box car." Although the ship was listing 30 degrees, the seamen brought her into Pearl Harbor, patched her up and brought her home.

Arvidson was bombed and strafed in the Mediterranean. He was shot in the hand off the Anzio beachhead by Nazi snipers ashore. His ship was hit by an aerial torpedo off Naples, the concussion from which threw him down and broke his hip.

Arvidson feels indebted to the

Texan Knew All Invasion Plans

LA GRANGE, Tex. (UP)—Capt. Edward Mattingly, Jr., writes his parents that he knew, studied and wrote so much about invasion plans that "I could have recited them in my sleep."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Mattingly, he is a member of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's supreme headquarters staff in England.
