ARMY THERAPY LEAD WOUNDED IN NEW CAREER

VAN NUYS, Cal. (UP) — Sparkling film actress Jinx Falkenberg tilted her head and the pencils raced over drawing boards as wide as a score of convalescent soldiers turned their thoughts from the battlefield to the peaceful art of portrait painting.

The scene was the Army's Birmingham General Hospital in picturesque San Fernando Valley, where hundreds of Southern California soldiers are recuperating from war wounds—and learning a peacetime trade at the same time.

The art class is only one of many types of classes in which veterans are training themselves for new jobs and rehabilitating themselves for old ones.

Men who were shoe clerks before the war will open their own radio repair shops, because they have learned how to build a radio set while in a wheel chair.

Others, who drove trucks in civilian life, will emerge from the hospitals as typists, offering drastic changes in their occupational potentialities.

When the primary purpose of such therapy is to provide the war wounded patients with self-confidence, the results have far exceeded the original motive, hospital attendants reported.

In the typewriting group more than 100 patients have learned the keyboard and have become moderately fast typists since the class began three months ago. One patient, with a head injury which paralyzed his side, is learning to type to regain the use of his hand.

But the majority have expressed the desire to make typing an integral part of their postwar work. And so it is in the other fields.

In the radio repair class only one patient in a group of 30 had had any previous technical radio experience. Now the entire class can take a set apart, repair it and even build their own sets.

Civil service and companies with foreign holdings are assured trained veterans with new-found skills in foreign languages or advanced mathematics through these classes.

To top off the group instruction, individual help is given by members of the Hollywood writers mobilization to veterans interested in a writing career, while a group of talented and famous artists are instructing in sketching, painting and drawing.

These are just a few of the classes, which include a variety of subjects and trades, such as electrical make up, radio script writing, airport management, voice instruction, aircraft assembly and construction, and modified engineering.

GERMANS SAY FIGHTING IS RAGING INSIDE OF ARNHEM

LONDON (UP) — A supreme headquarters statement says American First Army troops have been forced to withdraw an undisclosed distance east of Dieckrick near the central section of the German-Luxembourg frontier.

The situation of British air borne troops dug in on the north bank of the north branch of the Rhine at Arnhem is described as critical.

According to the latest word, the British Second Army advancing north from Nijmegen has been unable to link up with the air borne forces.

The German radio indicates that Allied troops have entered Arnhem above the Rhine. Berlin says the most violent fighting is raging in the burning city.

The British continue to pour a flood of tanks and fighting men through the corridor above Nijmegen, but enemy attacks are steadily mounting in force.

Allied sources say the Allied break through at Nijmegen has doomed all German hopes of stemming Gen. Eisenhower's drive short of the Reich, an early sweep into Germany's plains now is in prospect.

A swaying tank struggle now is underway east of the Moselle, 25 miles from the Siegfried line. The Americans—after destroying 130 enemy tanks—are slugging steadily eastward in the fiercest battle since D-Day.

Unconfirmed reports say the Nazis are starting to clear out Aachen. But official dispatches said the city still is under siege.

Nearly 1,000 American heavy bombers—escorted by fighters—smashed at industrial targets in the Kassel area of central Germany this morning.

Eighth Army troops took the Italian Adriatic port of Rimini and have entered the southern edge of the Po Valley. They are driving to outflank the Gothic line.

The one-time Fascist head of the Rome police force—Pietro Caruso—was executed today by a firing squad. He was the first Italian war criminal to be convicted.

A Polish communique says the Red Army has entered Warsaw; and it says bitter fighting is progressing in the streets.

Berlin admits the German army has begun a retreat in northern Estonia—presumably toward the capital of Tallinn.

Russian artillery is shelling Tallinn from the east, and Soviet warships stand ready to block any German escape attempt by sea.

War in Europe Reaches Allis Literally Chop Nip, Clean-Up Phase Wehrmacht Into Pieces

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Some Washington authorities say the war in Europe is now in the clean-up phase—and that, in fact, this situation has existed for some time.

It is no longer a question of decisively and finally beating the Wehrmacht, these authorities explain. The German army has been beaten for more than a year now. It was beaten when it lost its power to punch back with counterattacks.

The view held by some authorities, therefore, is that from now on it will be a process of chopping the Wehrmacht to pieces, with piece by piece surrendering. There is no expectation that Corporal Hitler will agree to an unconditional surrender of all German forces.

UNLESS GERMANY DOES CAPITULATE, however, all signs point to an Allied aerial blitz against Nazi cities on a scale undreamed-of by even the most rabid supporters of air power.

From forward bases in France, Belgium and Italy, American and British heavy and medium bombers and fighters by the thousands will be able to maintain a non-stop assault on German positions and industrial targets. Most military men believe that under such a pounding the most stalwart Germans eventually will buckle.

WHILE SOME GOVERNMENT OBSERVERS have made no secret of their doubts as to Russia's maneuverings in the field of international politics, there is no one who can condemn her magnificently co-operation with the other nations in the military prosecution of the war against the Nazis.

The Russian armies, under the direct command of Premier Josef Stalin, have turned in an inspired performance on the battlefield ever since the Nazi invasion of her territories.

Throughout the war, Russia has steadfastly displayed a willingness to co-operate with the Allies 100 per cent in a military way, and the current operations in Europe are positive proof that the attitude has not been changed by Russian successes.

Course of the war in recent weeks has dispelled the suspicion that Russia, without waiting for the Allies, would over-run Hitler's Reich and refuse to share her place at the peace table with Britain and the United States.

THE PEARL HARBOR DISASTER appears to be shaping up as one of the big issues of the presidential campaign. Senator Homer Ferguson (R.) of Michigan is holding in abeyance a resolution for a congressional investigation pending completion of the Army-Navy probe now under way.

CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND, the noted author, touched off a storm in Congress by his remark to a Republican state convention that the president "cannot avoid responsibility" for the Pearl Harbor debacle.

Democrats, acutely conscious of the Republican campaign, were quick to attack the GOP national committeeman for his remarks. From all indications it appears that the fight will be white hot before November.

THE LIQUOR INDUSTRY was delighted by results of the August liquor-making holiday when it was permitted to turn out potable spirits for the first time since October, 1942. Present estimates are that the August production was between 40 and 50 million gallons.

This is expected to be enough to see the industry through to the fall of Germany—and then some. Further, there is a strong possibility that another "liquor holiday" may be declared next year if need develops.

All this adds up to assurance that the liquor drought of late 1943 and early 1944 definitely is a thing of the past. You are probably going to get about all the beverage alcohol you need for the rest of the war.

Only thing that's got me worried about the Russians are those 220-gun salutes they fire in Moscow and Leningrad celebrating each big, new victory at the front. I'm afraid they'll fire so many of those salutes that they'll run out of ammunition.

When a fellow says, "Not changing the subject," you can be sure that is exactly what he is going to do.

GASOLINE SITUATION IS TIGHT

The average civilian motorist should expect no increase in his gasoline ration for the next several months, at least not before the end of the war with Germany, the Office of Price Administration says.

TO HOLD DOWN FOOTBALL TRAVEL

To restrict football travel, football team managers have been requested by the Office of Defense Transportation to confine sale and distribution of tickets to residents of local areas of cities or towns in which games are to be played. The ODT also has asked football teams in traveling by train to use coach accommodations wherever possible and to make pullman reservations no earlier than the day before departure.

GO ON TO SCHOOL, GI'S ADVISE

The GI's overseas are using their spare time to "crack their school books" in the hope of improving their possibilities when they return to civilian life, advise the boys and girls back home to keep on with their schooling. As Cpl. Kermit Gresson of Atwood, Kans., put it, "Any boy who's in high school now had better finish right away. Because if he doesn't finish before he's drafted, or before he takes a full-time job, chances are he never will. That goes for girls too."

TOUGH ON BLACK MARKET "GAS"

The new "A" basic gasoline ration books to be issued soon outside the 17 East Coast States are going to be hard on the black market in two ways, the OPA says. They are printed on a new type of government safety paper almost impossible for counterfeiters to duplicate, and each book and all coupons it contains will carry a serial number. With the combination of the serial number and the motorist's endorsement of his own state and automobile license number it will be much easier for OPA to trace stolen coupons. The serial number enables a coupon to be traced from the plant that printed it to the person to whom it was issued. The endorsement makes it possible to trace an illegal coupon to the person who put it in circulation. Authorities recently arrested four alleged counterfeiters in New York and seized equipment ready to print five million counterfeit gasoline coupons.

ARMY NEEDS NURSES IMMEDIATELY

The Army needs 4,000 nurses immediately, Paul V. McNutt, Chairman of the War Manpower Commission, reported last week. Men wounded in battle must have adequate care no matter how quickly the war ends, he pointed out in deploring the fact that nurse recruitment had slowed up along with a growing belief that the European War is about over.

The WMC Chairman urged inactive nurses, especially in outlying communities, to return to nursing duty.

ROUND UP

The Department of Agriculture says Putter supplies for civilians for the last half of this year are estimated to be 4 per cent smaller than in the same period last year and the smallest for this period in more than 50 years. Civilian supplies of fresh fruit, frozen fruit and canned fruit juices are smaller. A few weeks more of favorable weather will give this country the largest volume of crops it has ever produced.

The War Production Board says: Cities and towns are declaring "paper holidays" during which merchants use no bags or wrapping paper except for sanitary or protective purposes. The Girl Scouts of America will join in the drive of tin, paper and rags on October 1. Each Pennsylvania school pupil collected an average of 90 cans for tin can salvage during the six months ended May 31.

No rumors of Germany's surrender should be accepted unless confirmed by General Eisenhower, caution the War and Navy Departments, and the Office of War Information. Five per cent of the 27 million Christmas packages mailed to Army and Navy personnel last year was lost because of faulty packing and addressing. Beginning September 22 all gasoline filling stations may accept off-highway "R" coupons. Production of corn pickers for this year's crop is larger than for any previous year, the War Food Administration says. More than 4,000 automobiles a day are being scrapped to leave an estimated 23,750,000 privately owned passenger cars in operation at the end of the year, according to a report issued by the Office of War Information.

THE REST OF MY LIFE WITH YOU

by Faith Baldwin

SYNOPSIS
Mary Norman, attractive widow, lived chiefly for her son, Dr. Matthew Norman. The income from her smart decorating shop had seen him through college and would aid in establishing his practice. She was overjoyed when lovely Judith Lambert, daughter of an old friend, dropped in for a visit. Judith confessed Matthew used to be her secret love—but he didn't know it existed. En route to Maine for the summer, Judith promised to stop off on her way some in the fall. As Mary awaited dinner with Lynn Mortimer, lawyer, she indulged in a little mental matchmaking about Judith and her son. For years Lynn has been in love with Mary, but his wife, a mental patient, was still living. Mary was stunned when a telegram from Matthew announced his marriage to Irene Murray, a nurse. She had met Irene but never suspected a romance. Early next morning Matthew phoned from a nearby hotel to ask if Irene, who was on vacation, might stay with Mary while he was on duty at the hospital. Mary found her daughter-in-law charming as the latter shyly explained their hasty marriage—"Matthew simply would not wait." She told Mary she would continue at the hospital until Matthew opened his own office in the fall. Mary helped them find an apartment although she had hoped they would live with her. In the fall, Judith Lambert calls and plans to dine at Mary's that night with Irene and Matthew.

demands, keeping up her work at the hospital, conscious that she must not sacrifice a iota of it to Matthew.
Judith came in and Mary presented her. How pretty she is, thought Irene without envy. She was that rare woman, one who could admire another's attractions without jealousy or reservation.
Matthew came barging in and his mother said, "Really, Matthew, if you enter a sickroom like that you'll shock your patient into unconsciousness." But that was how he was made, big, exuberant, dominant, like a strong wind from the sea.
"Not Judy!" he exclaimed in mock consideration. "Never Judy! What in the world have you done to yourself?"
Judith gave him her hand, said little. The nerve tension in her neck lessened. Sometimes she had it quite badly, but if Matthew was with her he could always coax it away with his firm, searching hands.

"Tired, baby?" he murmured.
"No, not a bit," she said brightly.
He was never tired, and it irritated him in the most curious way if she was—although he always asked.
Judith thought: He's better looking than I remembered him. She had forgotten how gray his eyes were, darker than his mother's, brighter, and how his hair curled. He had hated that, years ago. She had forgotten his hands and his shoulders and that arrogant air of almost superhuman well-being that surrounded him. It was like a chal-

"I'm waiting for someone just like you," Judith told Matthew.
"Ouch," and withdrew it. She replied modestly, "Oh, just put on a few pounds in the right places and taken them off in the wrong. Also I no longer wear braces and—"
He said with delight, "You're a knockout!" He took her left hand and looked at it. "What?" he demanded, "no slave symbol? The West Coast men must be very timid."
"I'm waiting for someone just like you," Judith retorted, "but I doubt if there are two of you in the world."
"Of course not." He went to stand beside Irene, and for a moment laid his hand on the top of her head. "Too bad you didn't come around earlier," he told Judith, "before I was bespoken."
Kate came in with the cocktails and appetizers and Mary engaged Judith in a conversation about Maine, Boston, the Fallows, and the trip back to the coast. Irene drank her cocktail and relaxed a ZADOK DUMKOFF calls these "meal-ancholey" days—with his mind on wheat cakes smothered in sirup and completely surrounded by steaming country sausage.

In the West Germany's soil seems to be a lot more powerful than her Wall.
