WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON NEA Staff Correspondent

FOR several days, this space will be devoted to an attempt to spell out in the simplest possible language the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for a charter creating a United Nations Organization to prevent wars.

Edson

The document produced by the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, Soviet Russia and China, in seven weeks of exploration at the old Bliss estate in Washington, is in no sense a finished work. Before Congress is asked to put its stamp of approval on the United Nations Organization, the Dumbarton Oaks proposals require further action, first by the four governments, to complete the draft of the plan, then full consideration and adoption at a conference of all the United Nations which will probably be called soon and held early in 1945.

AMERICAN planning to prevent future wars began even before the U. S. was drawn into this war. When Hitler first began to blitz Europe, Secretary of State Cordell Hull set up a new office to start planning for the peace.

The Americans were prepared, even, when Secretary Hull went to Moscow a year ago for a four-power meeting of foreign ministers. The Russians at that time didn't want to talk about it. Then Secretary Hull brought back his draft of a statement for continuing collaboration of the four powers. The Russians listened, then became interested.

The Russians were just as amazed as they were when American supplies began flowing to them through lend-lease voluntarily offered. Russian collaboration in postwar planning went on from there, received full co-operation at Dumbarton Oaks, and is receiving further support in preparation for the full dress conference of the United Nations to write in final form the document whose principles and purposes will be discussed in a series of daily articles beginning tomorrow.

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Sports Editor

A BELMONT Futurity winner has never won the Kentucky Derby, and won't May 5, 1945, for—Walter M. Jeffords announces that unbesten Pavet will not be nominated.

Walter Jeffords agrees with other owners and trainers that the Derby comes too early in the season to ask a 3-year-old to go a mile and a quarter.

The difference in his case is that, unlike many others, he will not risk having a fine colt or prospect break down in a hurried attempt to have him ready for a rich and coveted stake.

Jeffords will not nominate Pavet for the Derby because it is the only way to prevent his friends and admirers of the son of Case Ace from betting in the winter book on the "winner of eight straight.

ANOTHER corking juvenile that probably will not be shipped to Louisville is Sir Francis, the owner of which, George D. Widener, has always looked ahead at the big number at Churchill Downs. Sir Francis bagged the Ardaly Handicap at Jamaica's Empire City meeting, looked right for the Derby in coming from nowhere in Belmont's Champagne at a mile to be beaten only a short margin by Calumet's Pot of Luck.

Sir Francis, by Sickle, the sire of Stagehand, is highly regarded in the Pimlico-Futurity at a mile and a sixteenth, Nov. 18.

NEVILLE DUNN of The Thoroughbred Record suggests that The Preakness be decided on the second Saturday in May, the Derby on the third and the Belmont Stakes on the first Saturday in June. Such a schedule would permit colts to step up from the mile and three-sixteenths of The Preakness to the mile and a quarter of the Derby and have two weeks rest before being asked to tackle the mile and a half of the Belmont Stakes.

The Derby didn't mean too much when Col. Matt Winn upped the date to get the full blast of the spring ballyhoo.

Minister Urges Daily Reading Of Scriptures

By Wallace N. Dunson Pastor First Methodist Church Tomorrow will begin the nationwide Bible reading period for the people of our country. This period will extend from Nov. 23rd to Dec. 25th. It is not a campaign to promote the sale of the world's best-seller Book. This is a movement to acquaint men and women with the content and the truth of the word of God.

As a minister of the Gospel seeking to lead people to a knowledge of God, I find that the reading of the Holy Scripture helps me:

- 1. By furnishing my mind with the Truth, which brings freedom to my soul.
2. It gives me a personal knowledge of the way God deals with and speaks to people in every age, and therefore, enables me to carry out the Divine will in my life.
3. I find portions of the Word that support mankind in every circumstance of life.

My good friend and fellow newspaperman, John McCarty of the Amarillo Globe-News has written a booklet, "The Enchanted West," splendidly illustrated by Ignata Sabula-Dyke and published by the Dr. Pepper Co., of Dallas, that covers the scenic variety of the west in a judicious history, not only early-days characters, great ranches and cowboys, rodeos and many other subjects—truly an excellent piece of work.

Do you like brain-teasers? Here's one: Long, long ago, there lived a despot who built a bridge and, in the middle he erected a gallows. Then he posted a guard at each end of the bridge and each traveler was asked where he was going. If he told the truth, he was to be permitted to proceed but if he lied, he was to be hanged on the gallows.

One day a traveler was asked the customary question, "Where are you going?" and he replied, "I am going to be hanged on the gallows in the middle of the bridge." If the guards allowed him to go across the bridge, then he lied and should have been hanged. On the other hand if they hanged him, then he told the truth and should have been permitted to go on!

Agent Suggests Thanksgiving Spicy Relishes

Because the 1944 cranberry crop has been cut by bad weather to about half the size of last year's crop, Myra Tankersley, Co. Home Demonstration Agent, suggests a raw relish as a good way to stretch scarce cranberries and make the most of their bright color, nippy flavor and vitamin C. Apples may also be called on to extend cranberries for jelly or sauce. Or citrus relish or spiced fruits may do holiday duty on Thanksgiving tables.

For a delicious raw relish which can be kept in a covered jar in the refrigerator for a week or two, the following recipe is suggested: 1 cup cranberries; 1 orange; 1 apple, cored; 1-2 to 1-2 cup sugar; 1-8 teaspoon salt. Pick over berries, wash and drain. Cut orange in quarters and remove any seeds. Grind berries, apple and orange rind and all-through food chopper, using coarse blade. Combine with sugar and salt. Chill.

Recoups Losses With Toy Ducks

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UP)—Those skeptics who think the Horatio Alger "rags to riches" days are over in America should have a chat with George F. Peterson. A year ago Peterson was down and out—financially. He had been forced to close out his Lubbock hotel because the shortage of gasoline took away his guests.

He got a job as a shipyard welder on the Pacific Coast, and met a man who once made his living manufacturing toy walking ducks. Peterson liked the idea. He came home and set up a walking duck factory in his home.

The idea caught on. Now Peterson has 85 women working in his Evans Company factory, all of them making his toys, and four salesmen out on the road.

"Sales are limited only by the amount of material and labor I can get," says Peterson. "After the war—"

For those who want the traditional red tart jelly or sauce, apples can be called on to stretch the cranberries. Apple juice and cranberry juice may be combined for clear jelly. Or apples may be cooked with cranberries for sauce. When cranberries are made into a strained jelly, a good deal is lost in straining out skins and seeds. A more economical use is a jellied sauce with the whole berries left in and perhaps some apple juice added to make it go farther.

An alternate for cranberry relish or sauce is uncooked citrus relish. Use: 2 apples; cored; 1 orange; rind of 1-4 orange; 1 grapefruit; 1 tablespoon lemon juice; 1-4 cup sugar. Put the apples through a food chopper using coarse blade. Quarter the orange, remove seeds, and put through food chopper with rind. Peel grapefruit, remove sections from membranes and cut in small pieces. Combine with apple, orange, lemon juice and sugar. Chill overnight to blend flavors. Makes 3 cups.

These relishes are also good with your wild game, quail, venison, turkey, etc.

YOU GOTTA THINK QUICK

By Stanley Paley Copyright, 1944, NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: Ginger was right in prophesying that Boggio's attack of mysophobia would leave him unable to cook. He was right. Boggio had refused to let him cook for him.

AS time went on my meetings with Ginger were greatly simplified. She had hit upon a system that we called "Matsie."

Maisie O'Driscoll had been one of the girls in the line at Minsky's when Ginger had first started out there. Maisie was the third from the left. Ginger the fourth. That kind of a setup makes for either rivalry or friendship. In this case they hit it off.

What objections could Boggio have if Ginger suddenly decided to see a whole lot of her friend who had meanwhile married and settled down?

And then one evening we became reckless. Busier than ever, Boggio had told Ginger he'd be out until late.

"Let's go to the Scheherazade," she suggested.

It was a flashy place. The tables were arranged in tiers around the dance floor, enabling everyone to get a good view of the floor show that went on intermittently throughout the evening. Our table was on the highest tier, on a sort of mezzanine. The Scheherazade wasn't very big but the walls were practically all mirror and when half a dozen girls kicked their legs it looked as if there were millions of them.

Ginger and I were in excellent spirits and after a couple of cocktails became positively boisterous. "Hello Maisie," she grinned.

"Hello Ginger."

She turned to face the mirror across from us.

"Don't you think we make a pretty good combination?"

"You bet we do. With my looks and your brains we're about the smartest couple in the joint."

We both laughed and then someone

WHAT'S the matter?

She didn't answer and her face was white as a sheet. I followed her gaze. The mirror she was looking into reflected the one facing the bar downstairs. My gaze slowly traveled along several figures seated on the high stools, then my stomach turned to lead. Holding a glass of milk in one hand and talking excitedly to a man whose face I couldn't see was Boggio. All he had to do was look up and he'd see us.

Practically paralyzed, I slowly turned back to Ginger again.

"Oh, Leo," she murmured. "I'm scared. Get me out of this. Do something, please!"

"Shut up!" I snapped. "And don't move."

It was hard enough for me to figure out what we were going to do without having Ginger throw a fit.

In this lousy Hall of Mirrors we had as much chance of remaining unseen as a couple of goldfish.

Finally I leaned forward, "Where's the little girl's room?" I whispered. "You might slip in there."

"Right back of you," she answered. She was about to rise but I stopped her.

"It's no good. When you walk past that mirror you'll be smack in his field of vision. Just stay put and look at the menu."

It was one of those huge affairs, the size of a tablecloth. She did as she was told and I continued to blink. Maybe we could slip over to a less prominent spot? But the place was raked. Only one table was empty and it was marked "Reserved." It wasn't much better than ours but you clutch at any straw in an emergency. Hiding my face I hailed the waiter as he walked by.

"What's wrong with Florida?" He had me behind the eight ball. Maybe the whole thing was a trap. Maybe he knew why I wanted to go so far away in such a hurry. Which would also account for his letting me go. Suddenly I had an inspiration.

"I want the long drive," I said. "And I want to see this country of ours. So far it's only been squares and rectangles on a map. I want to see what it really looks like."

Boggio was in an ironical frame of mind. He made a clucking noise with his tongue.

"I should live to see you wave the flag."

"Look, Virgil," I said. "Is there any special reason why you don't want me to go to California?"

He shook his head.

"The only thing I don't want is for you to go too far away from New York. Suppose I need you?"

"I only figure to be gone about six weeks. A week going, a week coming back, and a month there. That isn't long."

He thought it over for a few moments, then shrugged. "All right," he said. "Go to California. But if you stay one day longer than six weeks I'll give you hell."

"Thanks, Virgil," he said. "One more thing," he said. "When you get to Hollywood, check in at the Plaza on Vine Street. I may want to get in touch with you, and besides it's a good place."

Boggio knew all the good hotels from here to the Equator. "Right!" I said. "The Plaza on Vine Street."

"When are you leaving?" "This afternoon, if I can."

THE STORY: Kabateck takes Ginger to a subject like that I go into it with such conviction that I almost sell myself.

verge of a nervous breakdown. When I got started on a subject like that I go into it with such conviction that I almost sell myself.

Boggio sat there and listened. He didn't interrupt once. Just looked at me with a strange expression. Maybe he knew I was putting on an act and was waiting to see how far I'd go. One thing was certain, however. I had been going to court three or four times a week as he had suggested, and I'd bought a typewriter and written reports of the most interesting cases with comments on the verdicts. But instead of writing them up in simple, non-technical language so he could understand them, I had made them as involved as possible. I knew they had impressed him and they gave me the basis for my arguments. I'd knocked them out with relative ease but naturally I explained how I'd burnt the midnight oil and worked myself into a frazzle. After awhile, disconcerted by his silence, I broke off.

"Well!" he said. "Go on!"

"I've spoken my piece, Virgil. And I don't have to be a mind reader to know what you're going to say."

"And what am I going to say?" "That when you were my age you didn't need any vacations and that I can forget the whole thing."

"That's where you're wrong, Leo. I want you to go."

I WAS flabbergasted! "Only I don't know why you want to go to California!" he added.

I couldn't very well tell him that the more miles I put between Ginger and myself, the better it would be for all parties concerned.

"It may sound silly to you," I said, "but I've always wanted to see oranges without a trademark on them, growing on bushes or whatever they grow on. And palm trees."

MEET "DOC" GRIMES, H. F. S.*

Things are mighty different for "Doc" these days. He looks back wistfully to the time when he had plenty of gas, tires and other products for his customers . . . when experienced help was plentiful . . . and his service was something he could—and did—brag about.

Today—he has to work harder and longer doing most of his work. He knows doctors, war workers and lots of other essential drivers must keep going with old cars and old tires. And he figures it's up to him to see that they do.

There may be times when he can't sell you a thing—but "Doc" is always glad to see you, always glad to give you any of the typical Humble Services that will help keep your car in good shape. For he's looking forward to the day when you can once more drive into his station, road map in hand—and say, "Fill her up, Doc. We're heading for the highway."

Tetra-ethyl lead, when added to gasoline, raises the octane number of the gasoline and reduces or eliminates motor "kicks." But tetra-ethyl lead has recently become a critical war material . . . so critical that the Petroleum Administration for War has directed all refiners of premium grade fuels to limit their production of such gasoline to one-half the amount produced during the six months prior to June 1944. This reduces drastically the amount of premium gasoline available to civilians.

Also in the interest of conserving war-critical tetra-ethyl lead, P. A. W. has directed that less of it be used in the manufacture of all Regular gasoline. Consequently the octane number of this product has been reduced from 72 to 70.

So, if your Humble Station is temporarily out of Extra Extra, or if Humble Regular does not perform in your car like it did in the past, please remember that tetra-ethyl lead is really at war . . . just another of those small sacrifices all of us at home are asked to make in the interest of an earlier Victory.

This Saturday Humble Brings Two Broadcasts

This Saturday, Humble brings two games to the football fans of Texas, one of which will undoubtedly have an important bearing on the Conference Championship.
