UNITED NATIONS HOUSE HUNT

The solemn, history-making sessions of the United Nations seem destined to continue to the same incongruous settings that have formed the backdrop for its deliberations ever since it chose the United States as a permanent home. First it was an opera house, then a girls' gymnasium. And now the organization is to divide its activities between a gynecology factory and a skating rink on a deserted fairgrounds.

Of course, the UN has run into the same housing shortage that afflicts anyone wanting to make a change of residence or business address today. But the final decision on a temporary home (which may have to do for two to five years) seems an unhappy one.

To get over the least important objection first, there is a symbol attached to the chosen buildings which provokes a rather ominous snicker unbecoming to the seriousness of the UN's task.

But there are practical considerations, too. The two buildings are nine miles apart. The Sperry plant, where the Council and Secretariat will hold forth is 22 miles from midtown Manhattan, where the delegates make their headquarters. The old City of New York building, left over from the World's Fair, is seven miles distant from midtown.

Transportation to the Sperry plant will involve a lot of changes for those members of the organization who don't have cars.

In contrast to these disadvantages, there is an alternate choice of a temporary or even permanent home for the UN which at least offers physical inducements. That is the Pentagon Building in Washington.

The Pentagon isn't beautiful, but it is commodious. There are shops and restaurants and some rather fussy office suites already installed, as well as hundreds of unglamorous but efficient workrooms. It could be remodeled to suit UN needs as easily as the skating rink or the gynecology factory. No doubt it would even be possible to convert some of the space into dwelling units, if the housing shortage still warranted such a move.

The building is close to downtown Washington. There is quick bus service and ample parking space. And surely our peacetime Army would have ample room in the several other buildings in the capital which it used during the war.

Probably the Pentagon has been considered and rejected. It may be felt that it is too close to the seat and influence of the American government.

At any rate, the UN officials have made their choice. But we still think they have passed up a good bet.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—The Civil Aeronautics Board is about to let go a whole flock of certificates granting competing U. S. aviation companies the right to operate airlines between the United States and Latin-American countries. The fun will begin when C. A. B. makes its announcement, because of the terrific competition among the 11 airlines and four steamship companies seeking rights to fly some 30 commercial air routes in the western hemisphere.

When the C. A. B. licenses are granted, however, they may go a long way toward determining U. S. government policy in international aviation. The principal issues to be clarified are two: (1) How much monopoly should be permitted, or how much competition there should be between U. S. airlines, in any continental area; (2) Whether or not steamship companies should be permitted to operate international air routes paralleling their shipping lanes.

The scramble for a part of this Latin-American business is worse than it is in any other area. As is generally known, nearly all the air routes to Central and South America, Bermuda, the Bahamas, and the Caribbean Islands were pioneered by Pan-American Airways during the 1920s.

It's good business with an expanding future, and that's why competitors want a piece of it. Many of the routes for which applications have been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board would parallel or duplicate existing Pan-Am services, but Pan-American itself has filed applications for five additional routes.

Hearings on all the applications have been conducted by the Civil Aeronautics Board over the past year or more. The board's recommendations have been sent to the White House, and as soon as presidential approval is obtained, certificates will be awarded.

The steamship applications are of particular importance because the decision in these cases will show what the Civil Aeronautics Board intends to do about freezing the ship operators out of the air-line business in other parts of the globe.

FROM past decisions of the C. A. B., it seems established that the board does not favor participation of shipping lines in the flying business. The board has also opposed operation of airlines by railroads and buslines, believing there should be complete competition between the various forms of travel.

Legislation to set up one American flag-line, which would be owned jointly by U. S. domestic airlines, and which would operate as an American monopoly in international aviation, has been pending in Congress for many months. While it has been stalled, the Civil Aeronautics Board has gone ahead on the assumption that a monopoly flag-line, operating as a chosen instrument, is not in the best public interest.

CAFETERIA CUTS PROFITS said the non-profit eating establishment KANSINGTON, Pa. (UP) which had accumulated a surplus of $100,000, announced an in-and-out decision to return the operation to its original purpose of feeding the 600 student patrons. The school cafeteria had been operating as a business since 1938. Under the reduced prices, students actually paid less than the cost of the food.

GEORGE WEISS, director of the chain, describes the Yankees beat—the kind of club that makes opposing managers fall out of dugouts. This doesn't mean that the New Yorks will lap the field by 25 1/2 games, as did the Newark club in 1937, but every time Weiss sees DiMaggio, Keller, Henrich, Eiten, Gordon, Robinson, Dickey, or some other Yankee—they all can do it—smack the ball out of sight. Weiss thinks of an amusing incident that happened across the river in the first game of the International League play-off semifinals nine years ago.

Earl Cook of Syracuse had the Bears shut out, 1-0, with two out in the ninth. But the Bears of that fall, like the Yanks this trip, never ceased being dangerous. Joe Gordon hit the ball over the left field fence, Jimmy Gleason the right, and—

RED MIKE KELLY, the Chiefs' manager, fell smack dab on his head out of the dugout. That Newark outfit was perhaps the finest Double A aggregation that ever took the field. The pitchers included Chandler, Donald, Russo, Sundra, Tamulis, and Beggs. The catchers were Ross and the late Willard Hershberger. McQuinn was the first baseman, Gordon was at second, Dahlgren at third. The outfield was composed of Keller, Seeds, and Gleason.

Practically all of them made good in the big show. Charley Keller, fresh from the Maryland campus, led the wheel with 333 and being his head. "I hit 450 in college," King Kong complained about himself.

Kelley well illustrates to what extent the Yankees school their hired hands. With all his remarkable talent, Keller remained with the Bears for another campaign. Scouts pointed out his only fault. He didn't get the ball away quite quickly enough in throwing.

IN 1938, Keller upped his batting average to .365, but was still not satisfied. And there was some dispute about awarding the batting championship to the only man who out-hit him, Buddy Rosar, who turned in a mark of .387. Rosar, you see, divided the backstopping participated in only 90 games.

The 1937 Newark club won the semi-final and final play-offs in four straight games each. In the Little World Series the Bears dropped three consecutive games to Columbus in Newark. Then they took four straight in Columbus.

One reverse in Columbus would put them out, so each day they packed their bags in order to be ready to catch an early train. Three straight nights they unpacked them.

Following the first night of packing and unpacking became a superstition, the Little World Series a rout. Several of those Bears came up to prolong the mighty Yankee dynasty, which this season has new added momentum, for—

The real Yankees are back-missed those fat pay-checks while in the armed forces, and are hungry again. They had better put nets in front of the dugouts.

MIDDLE EAST HEIR TO MANY ANCIENT ILLS

CHICAGO (UP)—The legacy of disease left by ancient nations in the Middle East area that cradled the beginning of civilization was recently reviewed before the American Chemical Society by Dr. Chester M. Suter.

Describing the prevalence of diseases ranging from Baghdad Boil to typhus, the research chemist also told of barriers to medical aid varying from language handicaps to trade embargoes.

"Here at the birthplaces of civilization is to be found a diversity of ailments that would indicate that each nation as it passed left not only ruins of monuments, but also disease-bearing organisms adapted to living in or on mankind," Dr. Suter said.

"At present these organisms are not too seriously interfered with by the sanitary and public health facilities of this part of the world."

He listed Iran's most serious diseases in order as malaria, typhus, diphtheria, tuberculosis and venereal diseases.

"Typhoid is particularly serious in Lebanon, accounting for 20 per cent of total deaths," Dr. Suter said, "although all but two or 3 of the world's important diseases are prevalent there."

Egypt's 17,000,000 inhabitants are plagued by Bilharziasis, according to the chemist. This is described as a disease caused by blood flukes picked up from snails in irrigation canals where Egyptians often wade.

Baghdad Boil, a variety of the Oriental sore, infects every inhabitant of Baghdad, Dr. Suter said, and can be prevented only by vaccination.

He listed Yaws, Kala Azar, tuberculosis, sleeping sickness, leprosy and filariasis as the medical problems of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

On the brighter side, Dr. Suter explained that new medical facilities are being prepared and old facilities expanded throughout the Middle East.

American University at Beyruth, Lebanon, and the Iraq medical school at Baghdad are carrying out medical research projects, according to Dr. Suter, while the Cairo medical school is now turning out about 100 physicians a year.

in operation, he said, but is handicapped by a law requiring that all instruction be given in Persian, which has neither extensive scientific literature nor scientific vocabulary. Dr. Suter said Palestine probably has more physicians in proportion to the population than in any other country in the world. There are two medical systems in Palestine, he explained, one directed by Arabs and one by Jewish refugees.

FIRM DEVELOPS NEW TECHNIQUE IN PROCESSING

BOSTON (UP) — A glass of fresh orange juice from a spongy, golden bowl—that's one of the developments of research by a comparatively new concern here.

Yet President Richard S. Morse of the National Research Corporation would tell you it was done by application of a great deal of science. And he's serious about it. For National Research, with its scientists' mirrors, but with science's high-pressure vacuum. Formed in 1940, National Research's Vacuum Engineering department does everything from basic research to building pilot-plants for commercial uses of high-pressure vacuums.

When this firm refers to vacuums, it has no reference to the slight pressures such as exist in electric light bulbs or vacuum bottles. Such products as dehydrated orange juice or dried blood plasma and penicillin are created in vacuums up to one-millionth of atmospheric pressure. In other words, air as rarified as that probably to be found in the stratosphere some 75 miles above the earth.

There is nothing new about high-pressure vacuums in themselves—physicists for years have known of them and created them to study in laboratories. But the National Research Corporation is the first firm to make the pressures available for wider commercial use. It is an example of one of the new industries that has grown up from modern scientific research.

The development of dehydrated orange juice is a case in point. Researchers of the corporation undertook the original investigation. After they developed working techniques, the firm's engineers and plant designers constructed a pilot-plant. The strained, freshly-squeezed orange juice is put through two operations at a high vacuum, resulting in a golden powder. About a tablespoonful of the powder in a glass of water results in orange juice with the taste, color and vitamin content of the natural product.

The product was successful enough for the Army to place an order for 100,000 pounds a month. Although the war's end cancelled the contract, civilian contracts are already mounting from railroads, hotels and institutions.

During the war, successful applications for the use of high-pressure vacuums was made in the production of magnesium, the drying of blood plasma and penicillin. In fact, dehydrating plants were constructed under the direction of the National Research Corp. in England, Russia and Australia. Brazil and Argentina are reported interested in food dehydrating plants. Other departures for the new technique were the creation of new metallic alloys and coated optical lenses.

Texans Warned Of Danger While Out Swimming

ST. LOUIS (UP) — Approximately 400 Texas residents will die from accidental drowning and about 20,000 will narrowly escape death from drowning in the state this year unless the official drowning toll drops below those of recent years.

That was the warning from the American Red Cross Water Safety Experts today in announcing national aquatic school schedules for the year.

Ten-day schools to qualify men and women as Red Cross instructors include courses in swimming, diving, boating, life saving, first aid and accident prevention.

Among the 27 schools to be held will be those at Marshall, Texas.

War Bride, Five Children Go Strong For Mo.

FOLI DAY, Mo. (UP) — The 265-acre farm of Thomas Benton Dickerson is regarded as a bit of heaven by his British war bride and her five children.

Mrs. Dickerson, who arrived with the children from battered London this week, is delighted with the peace and plenty that abound in Monroe county. The pretty widow who married Dickerson two years ago when he was an Air Forces supply sergeant can't get over having enough milk and eggs to eat. She is also delighted to buy clothes without coupons.

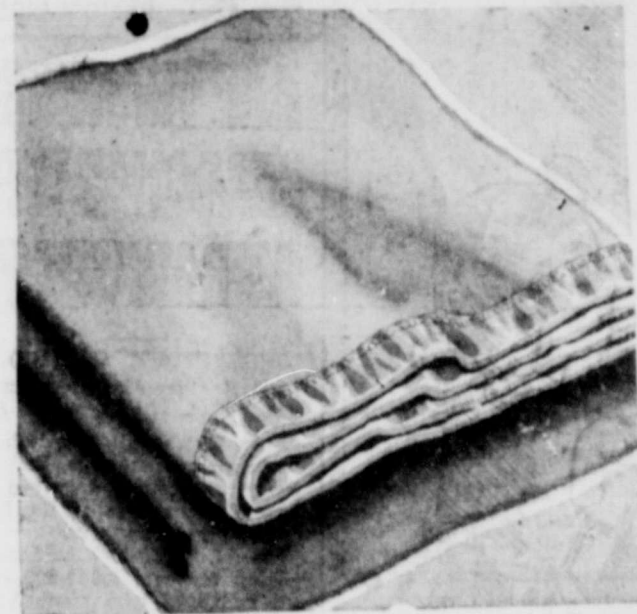

"I never dreamed I could be so 'appy," is the way she sums up her impressions of America.

The children, whose ages range from 8 to 17 are happy in their new home and the wonders of the farm make up for any homesickness they might suffer.

DENTON, Tex. — "They are just beginning what promises to be some day even bigger big-time shows," was the comment made by a Washington correspondent after the first performance in the capitol city by the North Texas State College Swingtet.

NTSC'S Swingtet, now called the "Moonbeams," who left college last month, made their debut into the theatrical world two weeks ago when they appeared with Vaughn Monroe's orchestra at Loew's Capitol Theater in Washington.

In the review, the Washington correspondent stated that the girls disclaim any ambition to get to Broadway, that they are leaving that up to "Lady Luck." In the meantime, the co-eds, Misses Mary Jo Thomas, Arline Truax, Hilda Cunningham and Katherine Myatt, will appear with Monroe's orchestra in Baltimore, New Jersey and Boston.

China Recovers The Bones Of Famous Buddhist

CANTON (UP) — The 1,000-year-old bones of the famous Buddhist scholar Tong Sam Cheng, who did much to spread the Buddhist culture throughout China, have been located in a Cantonese temple following inquiries made by the Chinese Ministry of Education.

The bones were removed from their resting place in Nanking by a puppet official during the war, and were believed to have been taken to Canton. The Nanking office of the Education Ministry requested its Canton branch to conduct a search, and the bones were located in the Luk Yang Temple, Canton's biggest Buddhist shrine. They will be interred at National Chungshan University here.

CENSUS ENUMERATOR

Opens Course For Employees Of Institutions

MADISON, Wis. (UP) — The University of Wisconsin has started a training program for state institution employees aimed at improving the treatment of inmates and raising the standards of institutional administration.

The institute was begun at the request of the state public welfare department and operates through the university extension division. First institution to request classes was the state reformatory at Green Bay where 43 employees attended class once a week.

Dr. Carl E. Johnson, associate professor of sociology who is conducting the classes, said their aim is to "offer a broader understanding of the relationship of work in various departments of correctional institutions."

With a knowledge of these departments, Dr. Johnson said, the guards and other custodial employees should be able to influence inmates to take part in educational, vocational and recreational activities.

He explained that custodians have the most influence over their charges because of daily contact with them and stressed the importance of an attitude of guidance rather than the assumption that the custodians chief responsibility is to maintain discipline.

On a lecture and discussion basis, the course takes up "theories, methods and techniques considered to be of value in developing broader understanding and deeper insight into problems most frequently encountered in correctional work," Dr. Johnson said.

Discussions include history of penology, activities of the public welfare board, with emphasis on the correctional institution being studied, and duties and responsibilities of various positions.

Attention is directed at activities offered at the institution, such as educational, recreational, religious and vocational facilities and shop and farm work.

Dr. Johnson was director of education for 10 years and deputy warden at the Wisconsin state prison before joining the university staff last year.

National Home Demonstration Week Being Observed May 5-12

National Home Demonstration Week is being observed this week May 5 to 12. "Today's Home Builders Tomorrow's World" is the theme for the National Observation.

The theme for the national observance will be used by rural women throughout the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico to focus attention on the contribution of the home and family toward progress and world peace.

During the week the three million women reached by home demonstration work will hold open house—so to speak—to call attention also to the progress made in rural family and community living since the home demonstration program was initiated over 30 years ago.

From tomato canning in a few southern communities in 1913, the scope of home demonstration work has been expanded—at the request of rural women—to embrace every phase of rural family life. In addition to foods and nutrition, clothing, household management and home furnishings, and handicrafts and recreation, rural families are asking home demonstration agents for help with the solution of problems in such fields as health and medical care, housing, farm and home financial planning, work simplification in the home, consumer education, child care and parent education, community welfare and citizenship responsibilities.

"The farm family is the hinge of the gate that leads to the kind of rural democracy that has brought and maintained steady progress towards an ever-ascending standard of living among rural people in the United States," thus spoke M. L. Wilson, director of cooperative extension work, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in regard to National Home Demonstration Week, May 5 to 12.

Mrs. Edna W. Frigg, was the first county home demonstration agent in Texas. She was appointed on January 16, 1912, in Milam County and served continuously as a county home demonstration agent until her retirement in Denton County, July 31, 1945. There were 15 other county home demonstration agents appointed that year; however none of them served in counties west of Comanche and Wichita.

Mrs. Eloise Trigg Johnson was the first Home Demonstration Agent to be employed in Eastland County. She was agent from November 1, 1922 through June 1, 1923. Her mother was the first Home Demonstration Agent in Texas. Mrs. Johnson is now on the staff at College Station as Specialist in Family Life Education.

Miss Ruth Ramey was agent from June 1, 1923 to October 31, 1941. She is now County Home Demonstration Agent in Ft. Bend County.

Miss Gladys Martin came to Eastland on November 1, 1941, and was agent until February 15, 1944. Miss Martin is now on the staff at College Station as Specialist in Home Dairying.

Miss Myra Tankersley came to Eastland County on February 16, 1944, and is still serving as Eastland County Home Demonstration Agent.

On July 13, 1927 the County Home Demonstration Council was organized with Mrs. Lee Burkhead of Rising Star elected Chairman. Mrs. Burkhead is still an active and enthusiastic club worker. She is the present chairman of council. Her club is one of the oldest clubs in the County, having been active 22 or 23 years.

As a part of the observance of National Home Demonstration Week the club members of women's clubs and 4-H clubs are contributing clothing and food for the Philippine relief.

District-Wide Dairy Field Day To Be Staged

SHERMAN, Tex. (UP) — A district-wide dairy field day, in which prize dairy cattle from herds throughout a four-county area of North Texas will be judged and presented awards, will be conducted here May 14 at the Red River Valley Fair grounds.

Plans for the day were made by the Grayson County Breeding Association and the Dairy Committee of the Grayson County Agriculture Club. Counties to enter the show are Grayson, Cooke, Fannin and Collin.

Accidents are responsible for more fatalities than disease among persons between the ages of 2 and 25 according to the National Safety Council.

One commendable result of wartime food shortages is that more women have learned the simple art of home canning and its many advantages. Surveys made by a leading manufacturer of fruit jars show that most new and old home canners plan to maintain their volume of food preservation. The National Garden Institute will continue to urge home canning in order to alleviate any imminent food shortages.

Supplies of jars and caps will be plentiful. The porcelain lined zinc cap for Mason Jars, favorite of home canners for generations, is back, and so are wide-mouth Mason Jars. Jars will be available in all types and sizes.

Home canning authorities advise housewives to follow carefully instructions packed in each carton of canning supplies in order to insure canning success.

Black Market Hides Slow Up Shoe Industry

ST. LOUIS (UP) — Black market activities are causing headaches in a new quarter—that of shoe manufacturing.

Investigation in St. Louis has shown that inexperienced slaughterers are sending badly mutilated hides to the factories, with slow production and increased costs the result.

One shoe firm official estimated that 34,000 slaughterers are operating today, compared with about 1,400 during the war years. Most of these are black marketers, he added.

Manufacturers who once bought hides solely from the meat packing houses now must purchase from small slaughterers, who have mushroomed since V-J Day.

Shoe company officials say hides are improperly removed and cured. Because they get them in such poor shape, cutting value on the leather is lost.

Some illegal slaughterers bury the hides, causing more loss of leather to the manufacturers.

The United States now is exporting more leather than it is importing, officials state. The shoe industry needs all the leather it can obtain.

Until 1901, track and field days at Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y., included stilt, egg, barrel and wheelbarrow races.

Britain Trains Many Women For Detective Roles

LONDON (UP) — Since there is no Sherlock Holmes around to clear up current crime mysteries, English police authorities have resorted to new methods in an effort to check the postwar crime wave.

One method calls upon attractive young women to train in the Criminal Investigation Department College for employment as qualified "plain clothes" detectives, sniffing out crime in the English provinces. "Plain clothes" is a deceptive term, since these female crimechasers, who receive the same pay as police women will get a special clothing allowance, with coupons. Clothing coupons are as valuable as gold in rationed England.

Twenty-one English girls already have entered the C.I.D. college, with dozens to follow. Before entering the college, the future girl detectives must serve an apprenticeship as a uniformed "flatfoot" helping old ladies cross roads and protecting school children.

English women, sheltered by a parlor-bedroom-and-kitchen existence before the war, stepped into thousands of man-sized jobs during the war and many are now regretting retirement to the kitchen. Female London bus conductors in particular are annoyed by the company's ruling which returns prewar jobs to returning servicemen and bars women as ticket collectors.

Opportunities to serve as crime detectors have kindled the interest of thousands of adventure-seeking women who expect to delve in to the drug racket, smash black-market activities and solve murders.

200 DEUCE NOTES STOLEN PHILADELPHIA (UP) — There's no doubt now in the mind of Oliver L. Warner, a night club proprietor here, that the off-reputed bad luck attributed to Uncle Sam's two-dollar bill is a thing of reality.

Warner's home was ransacked recently and $400 worth of the $2 notes were stolen. The tavern owner said he had intended to "test their luck" at the races.

LUMBER BOOM BRINGS LIFE TO GHOST TOWN

BROOKINGS, Ore. (UP) From boom to boom is the surprising life-story of this little community.

On Sept. 9, 1942, the press wires flashed the first aerial bombing of continental United States...

Brookings was a sorry, dilapidated little settlement then—a ghost of the fabulous Northwest lumber exploitation era...

Probably no town in the Pacific Northwest is receiving such a thorough going over as this community of myriad memories.

From that day some 20 odd years ago when the huge, sprawling sawmill of the giant California & Oregon Lumber Co. collapsed...

Today those who stayed on and shuffled through the ruins of a last empire, together with a surge of new blood, are wiping out the last remnants of bygone days and resurrecting the dead.

Where once stood the mill, lifeblood of the community; where once spread the miles of railroad track, the many wood camps, are now springing roads and new buildings...

Several miles of new sewer and water service mains are being put underground from stockpiles of surplus war materials...

A ready one thousand and one planer are in operation in the lumber from the many thousands of acres of new timberland growth...

An influx of new residents has created a booming community...

The country's postwar boom has a great bearing on the lumber industry...

Business property along the proposed extension district...

Even the most seasoned lumberman can't overcome the city's indifference...

There is a demand here now and a second doctor has hung out his shingle...

An addition to the consolidated school is being mailed...

They are prone to bring out the mild coastal climate that makes the country a delightful year-around place for outdoor lover...

Also not to be overlooked, the old-timer will tell you, is the flourishing and highly lucrative floral trade that specializes in azaleas and rhododendrons.

There is no doubt the transformation to this thriving, forward-looking community from the brushland that 20 years ago used to be leased at 50 cents per acre per year is little short of miraculous.

Seek Carnegie Award For Deed Of Inspector

DALLAS, Texas (UP) — It probably never occurred to Parkland city Inspector John Dodson that he did anything heroic in January when he saved the life of a young boy...

But fellow city boys thought he was a hero when they heard they hope will win for Mr. Dodson the Carnegie Award.

Dodson was in the yards last January morning on his daily job when the switch crew came along with about 30 cars and stopped the string near where Dodson was working.

Dodson suddenly heard screams and moans and saw cars from the rear found young Francis hanging to the brake rigging of a car...

He knew he probably didn't have time to run forward to the engine and explain what had happened. If the train pulled ahead the boy would soon be dragged to a switch and unaccountably smothered.

Dodson even then he started connecting the last five cars which wouldn't work if the switch engine backed up again. He rejected each of these plans as they flashed through his mind.

He took the only plan left. Not knowing at what moment the train was taking his own life in his might move and recognizing that hands, he nevertheless crawled under the car, disengaged the brake and pulled him to safety before the engine began to move.

Fortunately, the Frazier boy had no bones broken and was only scratched, bruised and badly scared. On his way to school he attempted to crawl under the train. It had started unexpectedly and his clothes caught in the brake rigging. He was dragged quite a distance.

PLEASE LADY, TAKE GOOD CARE OF YOUR ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR!

Production of new electric refrigerators is still far behind the tremendous demand. Dealers are trying to see that war veterans, families with children and others who have no automatic refrigeration get the first call on new electric refrigerators.

Until you can have one of these fine new electric refrigerators delivered into your home to replace the refrigerator which has served you faithfully, take good care of the one you have. In the meantime, keep in touch with your electric refrigerator dealer. He'll help you get better service from your present refrigerator and keep you posted as to when you can get a new electric refrigerator with the many improvements.

Helpful Hints for Better Refrigeration

- Don't place hot foods in your refrigerator. Let them cool first.
- Don't open the refrigerator door more often than necessary.
- Defrost frequently, at least once a week. Thick frost lowers efficiency.
- Leave space between refrigerator and wall to allow air to circulate.

The new low electric rates mean that you can operate your electric refrigerator at still lower cost, right at a time when the cost of living is going up.
