RIP GALLOWAY 'GLAD TO BE COMING HOME'

R. V. (Rip) Galloway who has accepted the position as manager of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce, was in Ranger Saturday and while visiting with friends stated that he is "glad to be coming back home." He said that while he has not talked with the directors, that with their approval, he hopes to conduct a sort of open forum for the people of Ranger at least once each month. The object of such a meeting is to get the people's ideas as about what they want and to tell them about what the Chamber of Commerce is doing. "The Chamber of Commerce is definitely a people's organization and I want their help," Galloway said. He further stated that he is delighted to have the Junior Chamber of Commerce as a working partner and that he will cooperate with them in every effort. "I want the people to tell me what they want and I will definitely appreciate any suggestions that they make," he said.

BUILDING IN CISCO SHOWS A BIG GAIN

CISCO, May 17.—Building permits issued by the city of Cisco since January 1, 1946, have aggregated $115,750, according to records at the city hall, Hal Lavery, city secretary, said. Lavery pointed out that this figure will not approach the correct total of building here in that period, due to the difficulty of obtaining information, either because many builders do not know they are required to secure permits for construction, or a fear that such filing will affect taxes on the property. It will make it more easy and satisfactory, both to the city and the tax payers, to file for permits promptly, he pointed out; particularly since values stated in the permits will have less effect upon tax valuations than the judgments of the assessors. UNION HEADS AGREE TO MOVE AT REQUEST OF PRES. TRUMAN

CLEVELAND (UP)—A nationwide railroad strike scheduled for 4 p. m. Saturday has been postponed for five days at the request of President Truman to postpone the strike. A spokesman for the unions said President A. F. Whitney of the trainmen and Alvanley Johnson of the engineers, had agreed to a request from President Truman to postpone the strike. He said the two union presidents had been in conference with the White House by phone all afternoon.

WASHINGTON (UP)—The government today began to mobilize trucks, bus lines and airplanes to keep essential transportation going despite the imminent railroad strike.

The engineers, and trainmen unions ignored direct government requests to cancel the 4 p. m. strike call.

It appeared that many members of those unions likewise intended to ignore President Truman's appeal that they disregard the strike call and continue at work under the government seizure that was put into effect yesterday.

How severe the tie-up will be remained to be seen after 4 p. m. Government and railroad management officials, however, admitted the situation looked bleak.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of the Office of Defense Transportation—which has charge of the railroads for the government—called in Army, Navy and other officials to work out plans for making fullest use of all available trucks, airplanes and buses—commercial and military.

As much mail as possible will be handled by air, together with other emergency shipments.

J. T. Harkins, assistant grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said in New York that the strike is "absolutely still on."

Col. Johnson said that as yet he has not received any reply at all to his telegram sent 18 hours ago asking heads of the two unions to rescind their strike call and order their men to stay on the job.

Railroad officials expressed belief that the unions would not report for work after the 4 p. m. dead line.

A new rat poison, sodium fluoracetate, may be as deadly to rodents as DDT is to flies. Not yet on the market, the rat-killer is known as compound 1080.

In deference to the urgent requests of many friends and acting upon the advice of professional business, civic and political leaders of the district, Gib Sandefer, known throughout the world as "That Fellowship Man of Texas," today tossed his West Texas sombrero into the great game of politics—as a candidate for the Democratic party's nomination for representative of the 17th District of Texas in the United States Congress.

"It was a difficult decision to make," Sandefer said in announcing his candidacy. "But my sincere desire to serve my fellow man and to work for the best interests and the future development of our great West Texas has led me to ask the people of this district for the most important job they have to offer—that of representing them in our nation's congress."

A son of the late Dr. Jefferson Davis Sandefer, president of Hardin-Simmons University for 21 years, and Mrs. Sandefer, Gib virtually grew up on the campus of that institution. Upon graduation from H-SU in 1927, Gib more or less buried his personal ambitions to assist his father in the completion of his life's dream—the building of a greater Hardin-Simmons University. In the years that followed he served as business manager of the school's athletic program and as such contributed much to bringing nationwide recognition to his Alma Mater.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

A year has passed since Adolf Hitler disappeared from the world's view. He died in the ruins of Berlin, his associates said. Probably it is so. Thus the civilization which he almost destroyed, was cheated of its vengeance. Yet the end which overtook him is perhaps more just and fitting than a trial before humanity and death upon the gallows would have been.

A national Copravty, he was an earth-shaking tyrant who scourged the world with a pack of bloodthirsty hellions at his heel. What as a man, he was nothing.

Hitler's scene of the theatrical would have been offended by his death. It was an anticlimax devoid of any dramatic impact. He, the destroyer, was swallowed up and forgotten in the destruction that he created. The dissolution of his country (which he willed) and the triumph of his enemies (which he could not prevent) completely overshadowed his personal demise.

Perhaps they still speak of Adolf Hitler in Germany. His name keeps cropping up at the Nuernberg trials where his posthumous role is that of scapegoat for his captive henchmen. But elsewhere Adolf Hitler, the man is all but forgotten.

The name which millions of his victims cursed is seldom spoken. The death for which millions prayed was reported, disbelieved, then gradually accepted. With hardly more than a sigh of relief, the troubled world moved on.

But that troubled world cannot forget Adolf Hitler's legacy. It is like the lingering complications of an acute

For Adolf Hitler, the man, was, a nincompoop, an insignificant creature without mental distinction or physical grandeur. As a political hypnotist, as the incarnation of illness. The complications remain to plague and cripple long after the attack that caused them has passed from conscious memory.

So men today are trying to piece together the broken fragments of a world which Hitler bequeathed. They are largely conscious of the task at hand, of suffering and misery unprecedented in history, of the difficulty of building peace even with the ghostly souvenirs of war all about them.

And that is Adolf Hitler's triumph. His ghost still walks the earth. It surveys the ruin which, if he could not have world rule, he desired and decreed.

Perhaps we should remember more vividly the Adolf Hitler of the plastered forelock, the bulging eyes, the Chaplin mustache, the narrow shoulders, and the chubby hips. For if the people of the world and their statesmen do not now create an international atmosphere of peace and contentment and trust, another Adolf Hitler can come forward as the spark which will touch off the last great war.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—How to make over 14 million tons of bread grains meet requirements for over 21 million tons in the first six months of 1946 is the pretty little problem now puzzling an outfit known as CFB, the Combined Food Board.

How this CFB operates is a little-known story, though it is probably the most important international organization in the world today—not even excepting the United Nations, since bread comes before peace.

Started as a war agency in 1942, CFB was a combined chiefs of staff organization to plan top strategy on the supply of food to Allied armies and civilian populations. The United States and Britain were the original members, Canada coming in the following year.

Today the members of the board are Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson for the U. S., Maurice I. Hutton for Britain, and J. G. Gardiner for Canada. With their deputies, executive officers, a secretariat headed by M. M. Bendit of the U. S., and 16 Commodity Committees of experts from the Washington embassies of a score or more nations, they have headquarters in the U. S. Department of Agriculture administration building.

THE Combined Food Board did not wish this large job on itself. The board was to have been abolished last December. But as the food crisis has grown worse, the board has been continued until the end of 1948, and it may have to be continued another year.

CFB was forced to operate in secrecy during the war, because food was ammunition, and the submarine blockade had to be overcome. Until recently, this rule of secrecy has been strictly followed. But since food is so important, and all eyes are now focused on CFB decisions, for the future more and more of its work should be conducted in the goldfish bowl.

The principal reason for all the secrecy is that the Combined Food Board has no authority. It was not created by law, and there is no law behind it. The board can only recommend to various countries where they might send surpluses to do the most good in a fair distribution.

FURTHERMORE, the board takes no action except by unanimous agreement of all countries concerned. No agreement, no action. This, naturally, slows up all CFB recommendations.

The first break in this no-publicity policy came a few days ago, when CFB issued a statement on world supplies and allocations of sugar.

The job of the Combined Food Board is to weigh all factors of world need and supply. When agreement can't be reached, the board keeps on arguing, asking claimants to scale down requirements, asking surplus countries to try to dig up a little more, until a compromise formula is reached that all can agree on.

COLUMBUS, O. (UP)—Add shortages! Ohio State University students happily discovered that campus book stores were unable to supply textbooks. But some professors substituted library readings.

ROCKET TEST TO USE FUEL OF ALCOHOL

WASHINGTON (UP)—Col. James G. Bain, chief of the guided missiles branch of the Ordnance Department, announced that a burning mixture of alcohol and liquid oxygen will shoot the 14-ton German V-2 rocket 100 miles in the air at White Sands, N. M., in the first of a series of 25 tests in May.

Bain also announced the appointment of an advisory board of Army, Navy and aeronautics officials to supervise the V-2 firing program.

Bain said the rocket would ascend vertically almost 4,000 feet before bending over gradually to an angle of 45 degrees. It will continue upward at this angle, he said, for about a minute until it reaches an altitude of 28 miles at a distance of 30 miles from the firing point and attains a maximum speed of 3,500 miles per hour.

An automatic pilot shuts off the fuel when the rocket reaches top speed. The projectile continues in free flight to a height of about 100 miles, Bain estimated, before it begins to fall to earth. He anticipated the rate of fall at 1,800 miles per hour.

Civilian scientists will put special rockets to study conditions in the instruments in the heads of the outer atmosphere of the earth. They also intend to study cosmic rays through these instruments, the War Department reported.

The Army will use the new "moon radar" used to bounce an electric signal off the moon recently, to follow the flight of the rockets.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The Kentucky Derby of May 4 appears to be the most open in a decade. While the Mains Chance Farm holds a powerful hand with Lord Boswell, Knockdown, and perhaps another one, there are several colts which could take the Run for the Roses at odds-on odds.

There is no telling about a Kentucky Derby renewal.

In 1919, Sir Barton, a maiden, took it all, and went on to be the first winner of the Triple Crown and one of the greatest runners of his time. The year previous, exterminator, pinch-hitting for Sun Briar, won the Derby, went on to a career that made Old Bones the finest cup performer this country has known.

There is the other side of the picture, however, dating back farther than Morvich, which won 11 races at two and took the Derby handsly in his first three-year-old effort in 1922. The brown son of Runymede did not win another race.

BROKER'S TIP, a maiden, got the call over Head Play in 1933, when jockeys Meade and Fisher battled down the stretch, but Col. Edward Riley Bradley's last Derby winner wasn't heard of again until he sired Market Wise.

Even stranger was the case of Gallahad in 1940. As a two-year-old, the son of Sir Gallahad III was unable to score, but he threatened at Santa Anita, and Roy Waldron suspected he had something when the Milky Way Farms charge was second to the supposedly invincible Bimelech in the Derby Trial.

Trainer Waldron had such a hunch that he telephoned Mrs. Ethel V. Mars that she had better run down from Chicago, but off the record, the owner couldn't be bothered.

But all eyes and ears will center on Churchill Downs, for the Derby, first of the important three-year-old fixtures, long since has been sold as America's horse race.

JACKSBORO, Tex. (UP)—Jack Worthington, daughter of rancher L. A. Worthington, who bought his daughter Jack a Globe Swift, decided he might as well build a couple of 3,000 foot landing strips on his 10,000 acre West Fork Ranch. Now the airstrips are completed and Worthington has decided he'll build a couple of hangars, put in gasoline pumps and open up an airport. Jacksboro needed one anyhow, Worthington says.

FRUIT CROP PROMISING
CORVALLIS, Ore. (UP)—Oregon State College extension service reports Oregon orchardists will have a favorable 1946 fruit crop. Trees weathered the winter well and late blooming promised less damage from frost, the service said.

Famine's Shadow Falls on China

All of China's numerous economic headaches—including violent monetary inflation—are overshadowed by the constantly increasing food scarcity, with famine a real threat in large areas. Map above shows provinces hardest hit by food shortages, according to the Office of International Trade, Dept. of Commerce. Difficulty of transporting foodstuffs from areas of plenty to famine-threatened ones and an epidemic of cholera and bubonic plague in southeast China further darken the picture.

ment of the equalization board on a fair taxable value. An accurate check on all construction activity is obtained both by water and sewer connections as well as by normal assessment procedure.

It will probably surprise many citizens, even though they have been aware of the revival in home building here, to learn of the number of new homes that have been completed or are now under construction in Cisco. According to city hall records, 15 new residences have been completed here or soon will be. This does not include residences moved to the city from other places and practically rebuilt.

Records show that 17 such homes have been added to the city making a total of 36 new or remodeled houses since January 1. There has been an increase in the rate by which new housing has been added to the city.

Three of the new homes under construction are being built by Cisco Homes, Inc., which took steps this week to speed up completion of these units so that they will be available for occupancy at the earliest date. One of these houses should be ready for sale within two weeks, it was stated. Lack of carpenters had delayed the program to a considerable extent but this shortage was expected to be overcome and full speed ahead begun.

The building permits do not include the 28 emergency veterans housing units recently allotted Cisco by the federal public housing authority on the application of Cisco Junior college, backed by the city and the chamber of commerce. These apartments are expected to be completed by September 2, according to FPHA. They will be available for occupancy by ex-G.I.'s attending college.

If any vacancies should exist after college veterans have exercised their privileges, these vacancies will be available to other ex-service men.

Nor does the figure include the large number of new apartment units constructed in private homes, so that the actual total of new family living units in the city will be much higher than indicated by the 36 additional houses and the 28 FPHA emergency units.

At least five large new business buildings have been added to the commercial accommodations since January 1, including the new A&P grocery headquarters and a building erected by Paul Poe. In addition 20 or more buildings in the business area have been extensively remodeled.

ASKS IF MAIL TRAINS TO BE STRIKE FREE

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Post Office Department today asked the Brotherhoods of Railway Trainmen and Engineers for a new statement as to whether mail trains will be exempt from the railroad strike.

the postoffice hopes to move first class mail by plane and truck without serious stoppages. Assistant Postmaster General Gael Sullivan said he had been promised a reply "within an hour" on the mail train question. He made the request to the union presidents, Alvanley Johnston of the engineers and A. F. Whitney of the trainmen.

He reached them by telephone at their Cleveland headquarters. The original strike called by the two brotherhoods exempted only troop, hospital and milk trains.

Speaking of the Other Fellow's troubles
... suppose, for instance, that he moves an old house or erects a new structure on a lot without first knowing something about the title to the lot. This is being done in every town in the county. What will happen later on is obvious. Fixed improvements become a part of the real estate. If the title to the real estate proves to be faulty the whole investment becomes of doubtful value. The morale is, get an abstract first—buy and improve later!

Prison - Made Products Help Supply State

COLUMBUS, O. (UP) — What do the able-bodied inmates of Ohio penitentiary do with their time besides serve it? The answer is found in the prison's annual report for 1945, by Warden Frank D. Henderson. The "boys" do everything from burning bugs and bugling to manufacturing mattress ticking and coffins. The inmates also make automobile and dog tags, cooking utensils, table ware and clothing and towelings. The inmates also manufacture electricity and heat for their own institution and a half-dozen state buildings in the city of Columbus. The biggest manufacturing establishment in the penitentiary is the woolen mill employing 471 men. Last year the mill turned out 14,886 blankets, 103,000 yards of sheeting, 68,500 yards of ticking and 1,280 dozen bath towels. In the power plants, 52 inmates burned coal costing $117,000 to manufacture 357,200,000 pounds of steam for heat and 11,210,000 K-W current for the lighting of the capitol, the state office buildings and several other state buildings. All manufactured products are for state use only, at the penitentiary or in some other state institution or state department.

Government Takes Over Railroads

Alvanley Johnston, left, Grand Chief Engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and A. F. Whitney right, President of the Brotherhood of RR trainmen, arrive at the White House for a conference with President Truman. After being advised by the union leaders that they could not settle their dispute with the carriers, President Truman ordered government seizure of the railroads. Whitney earlier announced he would not cancel the strike despite the seizure but would leave it to each individual worker as to whether he would work for the federal controlled railroads. Says Rail Strike No Short Period Demonstration

NEW YORK (UP) — T. J. Harkins, assistant grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said today there was no foundation for reports that the railroad strike had been planned as only a 48-hour demonstration. Questioned regarding reports from Detroit that the strike had been planned to last only 48 hours as a demonstration of what the railroad brotherhoods could do, Harkins said "That's not true." Earlier he had affirmed that the strike was "absolutely still on" as scheduled.

AAF TO TRAIN SCIENTISTS FOR RESEARCH

DAYTON, O. (UP) — A twilight school will be inaugurated at the Army's Air Materiel Command at Wright Field June 18 to obtain trained scientists for peacetime development of national defenses.

The technical - scientific school will offer courses in the late afternoon daily leading to degrees in an effort to maintain a peacetime scientific nucleus at the field.

The school was planned after scientists and technicians, who were responsible for the wartime development of radar, jet propulsion, rockets and other war work, left to take higher-paying industrial jobs.

Meanwhile Lt. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, commanding general at the Command, urges extensive research despite the cost. "Research takes both time and money," he said, "We've got to remember that the old days of aviation development are gone forever."

"There was a time that research could get by on a day-to-day basis, but in this day of supersonic airplanes and missiles and atomic energy that's out."

"We've got to look and plan far into the future, further than we ever had before. It's expensive, yes, but if we are to maintain a supremacy in military aircraft, we must not consider the costs."

Brig. Gen. L. C. Craigie, chief of the engineering division, predicts an enrollment of 600 students from Wright Field in the technical - scientific school.

Ohio State University plans to send 25 instructors from its graduate schools to conduct classes and laboratory work. Classes will meet in the late afternoon six days a week.

The courses will be aeronautical engineering, chemical engineering, mechanical engineering, physics, physiology, psychology and mathematics. They will lead to masters' and doctors' degrees.

Byrnes Reports To President On Paris Meeting

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes made a two-hour report to President Truman today on the unsuccessful Paris conference of foreign ministers.

Byrnes met with the President shortly after he and his party arrived here by plane from the French capital. He declined to tell reporters what he told Mr. Truman but did say that domestic matters were not discussed.

The secretary said at the airport that he hoped to make a report to the nation Monday night.

During the war the Census Bureau provided nearly 2 million certificates of age and place of birth to persons without birth certificates so that they could work in war industries. Old Census records were searched for the proof. The Census Bureau estimates that 50 million people are without birth certificates in the United States.

Reclamation projects scheduled for Colorado in the next few years will swell the state's population by approximately 132,000 persons, according to E. H. Dehler, regional director of the Reclamation Bureau.

Union Leaders In Close Contact With Washington

CLEVELAND, (UP)—A union spokesman indicated today that the presidents of the Brotherhoods of Railroad trainmen and Locomotive Engineers had been in close contact with Washington all day that any last minute break in the railroad strike scheduled for 4 p. m. would come from the national capital.

The spokesman said both the union leaders had been on the long distance phone "for hours" and that if a break came it would come from Washington "within the next hour."

Sandefer -

(Continued from Page 1) boy Band, Gib developed it into the hit of three continents. With $100 given him by the late Will Rogers to buy some new "tunes", Gib launched the band on its first triumphant tour of Europe. Touring more than 500,000 miles through a dozen foreign countries, this picturesque group of musicians, clad in the colorful regalia of the great Southwest, carried in music and spirit the tradition of the Texas cowboy to the far corners of the earth.

Came the war and Gib soon found a place of service—a field representative of the American Red Cross in combat areas of the world-wide conflict. Responsible for the entertainment of our troops, Sandefer pitched his "fellowship" tent in North Africa, India, Burma and China, culminating in a "round the world" jambi that gave him further contacts in Italy, Australia and New Zealand.

In a personal conquest of Burma, Gib took his "fellowship" right to the end of the Ledo Road to the benefit of "our boys" and the top hands running this war.

It was while serving in the China-Burma-India theater that Sandefer became even more convinced that only through world fellowship and through understanding of the other man's problems and way of life can the future peace of the world be assured.

Before the war Sandefer operated a small ranch in Nolan county—near Maryneal, where he was unofficial "mayor and fire chief."

After returning to this country, following overseas service, Gib made a 42 state tour for the War Advertising Council in behalf of the National American Red Cross. Since the war he has been trying to further his world-wide fellowship and educational ideas as speaker for the National Dinner Club and the Associated Club Network, of which the Knife and Fork Club is a part. He invariably ends his talks about the different parts of the world he has visited and the world leaders with whom he has "fellowshipped" by saying, "It's always a pleasure to do business with you."

Speaking of the forthcoming campaign, Gib says, "It's going to be a pleasure to do business with the voters of the 17th district and I am looking forward to having a little fellowship with the people encompassed in these 12 counties." Gib adds, like the great humorist, Will Rogers, once said, "Of the thousands of people I have met, I have yet to meet a man I don't like, and when this campaign is over, I'll still be able to repeat that statement."

Sandefer presents a concise, yet comprehensive, platform for the consideration of the people of the 17th District. It follows:

For GI Joe and his sister Jane—The help and encouragement of a grateful country, in every way that can be accomplished. For the war's disabled: All they need, at whatever the cost.

For the farmer and stockman—A legislative program geared to their needs, responsive to their wishes, and guided by their advice and consent, administered as far as possible by the farmers and stockmen themselves through boards representing their local and regional interests.

For the Small Business Man—Recognition as the mainstay of the American system, assistance and encouragement whenever he needs it, protection against the powerful forces that would destroy his existence, and a minimum of governmental interference in the conduct of his business.

For National Defense—An adequate and alert military establishment, backed by continuing research and experimentation, officered and manned by professional soldiers paid a decent wage, given an equal break in privileges, and made to feel that their career is as honorable as it is ancient.

Foreign Affairs—The principle of the Golden Rule, extended to all nations, all-out cooperation with peace-loving people who desire only the rights of mankind and the enjoyment of peace and plenty.

Labor—Maintenance of the principle of collective bargaining, with a sharing of responsibility by labor, industry and the government; the promotion of a live-and-let-live attitude between capital and labor, with the rights of the public to be recognized and protected.

Oil—Continuance of the practice of conservation through cooperation of state and federal government, and protection of the interests of producer, landowner, and consumer—which in the long run are identical.

Private enterprise—Government's chief concern should be to serve as umpire, to protect the young and weak against the strong, the honest from the dishonest, and the good from the bad—with as little government control and regulation as possible.

U. S. Farmers' Know-How Speeds Use Of New Technique Gained In Wartime

WASHINGTON (UP)—Rapid application of new techniques, equipment and seed varieties will usher a new era of farm life in this country during the next decade.

The scientific "know how" of American industry, which started the world in production of war materials, has a postwar counterpart in the swift acceptance of new processes and modes of life by the agricultural population.

The phrase "know how," expressing the capacity of American workers to accomplish technical tasks skillfully, was perhaps the most popular slang term born of the second world war. The farm population seems now to accept scientific innovations in the same spirit.

Every phase of production, marketing, and consumption of farm products now undergoes transformation. The vast experimental program was necessary during wartime by the sudden interruption of agricultural and forestal products from many countries are now diverted to the needs of peace.

Hybrid grain varieties suited to new climatic conditions, mechanical harvesting of cotton and sugar cane, breeding of turkeys or cattle to the particular sizes preferred for market, improved methods for such time honored tasks as milking cows, dehydrations of meats, control of diseases of honey-bees, designing of clothes for farm workers, are a few among thousands of innovations being applied in the national agricultural economy.

Experts say that farmers are loath to accept new and better methods when their economic value is apparent. But new methods put new burdens of skill and management upon the farmers and "know how" becomes as vital to agriculture as in manufacturing industries.

Main for the immense system of scientific agriculture in the U. S. is the Agricultural Research Center at Beltsville, Md., devoted to research "for better farming and farm living," largest institution of its kind in the world. Beginning in 1910 with 475 acres, the Research Center now spreads over 13,900 acres, of which about 1,200 are devoted to a research center for fish and wildlife.

Nine bureaus of the Department of Agriculture have units at Beltsville, and its 2,000 scientific workers include agronomists, animal husbandmen, apiculturists, architects, bacteriologists, biochemists, botanists, chemical engineers, entomologists, grain technologists and many other specialists. Three thousand farm animals are kept for experimentation, and 6,500 small animals for laboratory tests.

The Research Center at Beltsville co-operates with agricultural experiment stations in all of the 48 states, and also lends aid to many foreign countries. It is only a short distance from Washington, and the agricultural attaches of many foreign embassies maintain regular contact with its work and publications.

Typical new marvel of agricultural science is the hybrid 80-day corn (maize). It grows and ripens in a short summer season, being ready for harvest by early September, with the result that the culture of maize is now being rapidly extended to Northern areas where early autumn frosts had always before excluded corn. Home-grown feed corn thus promotes the economy on a great number of dairy farms.

Illustrative of the revolutionary changes, and potentially of worldwide significance is the laboratory production of climates by the U.

S. Department of Agriculture. This has enabled unprecedented experiments aimed at the improvement of pasture and grass lands.

At State College, Pa., is the United States Regional Pasture Research Laboratory, which co-operates with 12 Northeastern states in the solution of pasture problems. Control chambers have been built to reproduce any kind of climate, for research purposes. Just as the "wind tunnel" facilitates the swift development of aviation, these "control chambers" enable the immediate observation of all factors affecting the growth of grass and forage plants. The chambers are designed to control air temperature, soil temperature, relative humidity, and the length of day. Experts can observe the effect of air and soil temperature on seedlings, the effect of temperature or restoration of food reserves in plants after clipping, the effect of length of light and dark periods on seed growth, and the value of seed disinfectants.

definite relationship between fall soil moisture and the ensuing year's grass crop. Officers are: L. R. Pearson, chairman; T. J. Anderson, vice-chairman and A. E. Crawley, secretary.

Barnes said preliminary studies begun in 1940 had indicated that the moisture in the soil in the fall had more to do with next year's grass crop than rainfall during the growing season.

In 1940, he said, soil moisture was low in the fall followed by a scanty spring rainfall. The result was a serious lack of forage during the grazing season.

During 1942-43, however, the November soil moisture was high. Despite below-average rains during the growing season, he said, forage during the grazing season ran about 759 pounds to the acre—far above average.

In 1945, rainfall during the growing season was far above average yet the grass crop dipped to a below-average 471 pounds to an acre. Barnes said the answer was that soil moisture in Novem-

TROY N. Y. (UP) — Russell Sage College has received a rare colored engraving and two valuable volumes to add to its art collection. The engraving of "Benjamin Franklin at the Court of France in 1778" is by Baron Jolly, Flemish painter and hung in Brussels before World War I. It is the gift of Mrs. William B. Conover of Pittsfield, Mass., graduate of 1942. Mrs. Edgar M. Hawkins of Rochester donated the books. One is the "History of the Sage and Slocum Families," by Henry Whittemor, published in 1908. The other is "Esther Burr's Journal," written by Jeremiah Eames Rankin and published in 1903.

William N. Milner, 45, ex-soldier from Lubbock, Texas, has been charged with having mailed an extortion threat demanding $5,000 of Dr. J. T. Krueger, prominent Lubbock physician. Police and FBI agents caught Milner as he was about to pick Krueger to leave the money in a glass jar which he told (NEA Photo).

Quinine Tract In Hilo Nears Full Growth

HILO T. H. (UP) — Quinine-producing cinchona trees, nurtured from seeds flown from Bataan to Australia in one of the last American planes leaving the Philippines in 1942, are reaching maturity here. Carefully protected by federal and territorial governments, 6,000 of the young trees are growing in a 20-acre plot on the Hamakua coast of the Island of Hawaii. Experts are reported satisfied with the progress of the project, but must wait until the spring of 1947 before the cinchona bark can be tested for its quinine content.

From Australia, the seeds were flown to Washington, D. C., and the Department of Agriculture germinated them at the Beltsville, Md., experiment station. They were then planted at Glendale, Md.

After a year's growth, the seedlings were flown to Hawaii for study and transplanting. After investigation, the Hamakua coast tract was selected as the best possible site for maturing the seedlings.

Transplanting was done in five days, under the direction of Robt. Fahau, superintendent of the Kona Experiment Station of the University of Hawaii. Elaborate preparations included treatment of soil with tear gas and other chemi-icals to insure safe planting. The capture of cinchona-producing areas in the Far East by the Japanese, and severance of Allied supply lines, resulted in a military crisis for the quinine-short Allies. Faced with a long war in tropical areas, research for quinine substitutes was intensified and resulted in development of atabrine.

Your high school days are over, so now roll up your sleeves and tackle the bigger problems that may loom ahead. We are confident that if you will but persevere in the same spirit that has marked your days in high school nothing can stop you. Always remember that we are your friends, always anxious to serve you, and still more anxious to please.

"Gold prospectors like their carefree, isolated life," said Mrs. Sapp. "They seldom come to town oftener than every three months, and they seldom have partners. They know that a minimum of work will net them a comfortable $50 per week and a little extra effort means $150."

Idaho has its share of "lost" gold mines, some of which are fact. The hope of finding one of these helps keep the prospector on his toes. One mine is supposed to be located in Nez Perce Pass and was discovered by a wounded gambler escaping a sheriff's posse in the early '80's. To date, no one has been able to decipher the gambler's directions, and the treasure remains hidden.

"But," said Mrs. Sapp, "the thing that keeps every prospector going is the hope that his next shovelful will uncover the mother-lode vein that would start a gold rush heard around the world."

The International Boundary Commission said it is designed to keep cattle, deer and other stock from crossing into South Texas from Mexico as a part of a tick eradication campaign. The lengthy fence, of both mesh and barbed wire, generally will fol

SOURDOUGHS HIT THE GOLD TRAIL AGAIN

LEWISTON, Ida. (UP) Prospectors who temporarily deserted their first love—gold dust—to go into the armed forces and war industries are drifting back into Idaho's primitive country where the yellow metal still affords a living wage.

The rejuvenation of the West's colorful industry can best be measured at the general store of Mrs. Ruth Sapp, the only woman in the state with a Federal Gold Trading license, who doubles as middleman between the miners and the government and as purveyor of their "belly timber."

As in the past years, Mrs. Sapp has been receiving packets of gold sent down the Snake river by registered mail by sourdoughs every other week or so. She is banker for all of them, weighing the gold, filling out necessary government information, and mailing the precious metal to the mint at Seattle.

In return, she receives two checks, one for herself as commission and another for the miners, from which she deducts for flour, bacon and other "vittles" and forwards the balance.

"These gold miners are both peculiar and honest," said Mrs. Sapp. "Most of them won't do any other kind of work, although during the war they had to fight or take defense jobs. They may try other jobs but they always come back for gold. One of 'my' boys who was in the army won't be coming back."

Native of Texas, Mrs. Sapp has been a gold trader for 15 years since opening her grocery store 25 years ago. Her customers include several dozen prospectors, including one woman and several Indians, who dig a living out of the sands of the Snake and its tributaries. One enterprising old codger is using a large dredge to work the river between Lewiston and 7,900 foot Hell's Canyon, the deepest gorge in North America, but the majority stick to panning and placer mining.

Horatio Of The Fish Pond Woos Consuela From Afar

SEATTLE (UP) — Zoology students at the University of Washington have adopted a pair of marine lovers as their between-class pets.

The young zoologists discovered two exceptional gallus canis (a type of fish the scholars challenge anybody to identify) snuggled beneath vegetable life in the limpid waters of the University's Fresh Pond.

The larger of the two, bewhiskered but bashful, the students named Horatio. The smaller, coy and graceful, is Consuela.

Each morning, according to coed Gladys Seidelhuber, Horatio arises, meticulously trims his whiskers and swims to the surface for a breath of fresh air and a nip of chironomus.

"After selecting a choice stem of vesiculosus," Gladys reports, "he swims proudly to Consuela, deposits the sea weed with her and swims bashfully away."

With spring in the air and Consuela at the Romantic end of the cool pond, Horatio should be quite happy. But Horatio is what psychology professors regard as an introvert. Much as he'd like, Horatio cannot bring himself to woo Consuela with sea-wolfish tactics and bold advances.

And so the days go by. Consuela, unaware of Horatio's secret love, circles gracefully at the far end of the pond blowing bubbles. Horatio pines for her beneath a small gray rock at the bottom of the pond, spouting love rhymes to himself by the hour.

Once, according to the student chroniclers, Horatio did gather enough courage to swim close to Consuela. She had just swished her tail and blew him a giant bubble when a clumsy freshman stumbled into the pond and broke up the budding romance.

During the afternoons, while Consuela flirts shamelessly with juicy bugs and then snaps them up, Horatio nestles close to a nymphaea wistfully watching her.

And at sundown, Horatio swims to his little gray rock at the bottom of the pond, there to sigh and blow bubbles, for spring is here, and Consuela is at the far end of the pond and Horatio is bashful.

At least that's what the zoology students explain.

Textbook Shortage Cheered

Ohio State University students happily discovered that campus book stores were unable to supply textbooks. But some professors substituted library readings. Many students were pleased to hear that publisher's stocks are low and that the shortage threatens to continue another year.

WASHINGTON FARMNOTES

By GRANT DILLMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—American farmers may reap dividends from thousands of German and Japanese documents captured by U. S. military forces following the defeat of the Axis countries. The papers now are being indexed by the Agriculture Department as fast as the Army removes them from the secrecy list. They then are made available to American industry which checks them for new techniques which might be useful in this country. Officials expect the chief value of the papers to American farmers to lie in the possibility that they will open the way to development of entirely new uses for farm products, automatics, increasing the farmer's income. The Germans particularly carried on extensive research in chemistry in their efforts to find substitutes for materials which were cut off by the Allied blockade.

Many of the German and Japanese documents were recovered by the Army's field technical information service which was trained for this work. Some were hidden in salt mines and other obscure places. Others simply were taken from German factories.

In some instances, American experts set into German and Japanese plants, evaluated their production methods and compared them with those of the British and Americans. Also included are some American wartime discoveries just released.

Because of the substitutes that Germany and Japan were forced to use and the fact that their citizens were willing to accept inferior goods, few of the products of their economy would measure up to American standards.

There are some exceptions. Germany's I. G. Farben developed a material called perlon which was better in some respects than nylon. Farben also found out how to make acetone from natural gas and by-product gas. Both are plentiful in the U. S.

Some of their other research was not as successful. K. S. Markley, of the Joint Allied Intelligence Agency, made a thorough investigation of the German fats and oils industry. He concluded that Germany had completely lost the leadership she once had in this field because of an acute lag of research during the war.

"Of the considerable number of margarines tested," he said, "none would be considered an acceptable product in the U. S. either from the standpoint of taste or consistency. The most noticeable quality and disagreeable aftertaste.

"During the war there apparently has been little research and development work in most large plants and little new equipment installed. The leadership that Germany once held in the field of fats and oils technology has passed to England and the U. S. and probably never will return there again."

J. N. McGovern, also of the JATA, found a similar situation in the pulp and paper field.

"The German pulp and paper industry was found in general to be less advanced than the same industry elsewhere," McGovern reported. "In many branches of the industry normal German technique was, in fact, backward."

Nevertheless, he concluded that a study of German methods and research might be valuable to American industry because it might provide the missing link in some of their research projects.

The reports also showed how far the Germans were sometimes driven in their desperate attempts to find substitutes. These included so-called unessential items as well as the necessities of everyday living.

A report on the German food processing industry said "the product of some interest was a non-alcoholic beverage made of sugar beets which was produced as an expensive item for popular consumption somewhat like our cola drinks.

Governs Guam

Rear Adm. Charles A. Pownall, above, has been appointed by President Truman to be Governor of Guam, reinstating the Naval government which administered Guamanian affairs from 1898 until the Japs seized the island in December, 1941.

"The flavor of the product did not impress the writer favorably."

The reports also covered the German fur, hide, canning, plastics, coated fabrics, fertilizer, prefabricated, and deep-freezing industries. The Germans even were trying at the war's end to make cans for canned food without tin.

Since the Agriculture Department has the only copies of the reports in this country in some instances, it does not send out the originals. When a manufacturer wants a report, it is either micro-filmed or photoprinted and then mailed out.

The department now is handling about 5,400 reports a week, of which approximately 50 per cent have either a direct or indirect bearing on agriculture. It ultimately expects to process about 250,000 papers although some officials think the total may reach 1,000,000.

Traffic Order Withheld Until Truman's Talk

AUSTIN (UP)—The Texas Safety Department didn't want to "scoop" the president.

An order was issued last week to motor police to file complaints against all motorists found driving without licenses in their possession.

The order was made public, but not until after President Truman's call for hurrying "nuts and morons" from highways.

Assistant Safety Director Joe Fletcher said the enforcement of the law is difficult because a driver is not required to have the license with him at all times. If he can prove he had one at home or in his office desk, it's a good defense.

SPEAKER SAYS GAS PRICES OUT OF PROPORTION TO OTHER FUELS

AMARILLO, Tex., May 16—Natural gas produced in Texas and supplied to less favored communities in other states is the most convenient and satisfactory fuel in the world and should command prices commensurate with other fuels, according to Fred Shield, President of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, who spoke here last night at the annual meeting of the Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

Shield deplored the low prices received for natural gas by Texas producers and cited the fact that Texas gas sells for less than three cents per thousand at the well, while gas produced in Ohio sells for 16.4 cents; Pennsylvania 22.3 cents; New York 24.5 cents. He said Texas gas producers and carbon black manufacturers should sell their products on the basis of quality instead of cheapness.

"We hear talk from the tax eaters that natural gas taxes should be increased," said Shield, "but, any tax placed on gas today with its present low price becomes confiscatory. Adequate prices will bring increased taxes automatically, since the tax is based on price received at the well."

Shield added that the federal budget this year will amount to 46 billion dollars, while Texas tax collections will exceed 250 million dollars. "Believe it or not," he said, "this means that every man with a wife and two children will pay $4.60 each day in taxes out of what he earns."

He cited figures of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, showing that the Texas petroleum industry spent last year over $1,400,000,000 (billion) in its operations, of which one billion dollars, 71 cents of every dollar spent, was paid directly to the people of Texas and the State and its local subdivisions in wages and salaries, lease and royalty payments and State and local taxes.

Shield paid tribute to the Texas petroleum industry for its fine contribution through its taxes toward the education of the youth of Texas. He stated that this industry paid in 1945 over 34 million dollars of all the school tax revenue collected, which paid for the education of more than 450,000 children. He urged economy and good business management in our school system but said no effort should be spared to have the highest type and character of teachers, who should be well paid.

Memorial To U. S. Dead Proposed By English Town

CAMBRIDGE, England (UP)—An offer to raise several buildings as a permanent memorial to the American dead buried in England has been made by the East Anglian town of Bishop's Stortford. The gift, offered in memory of "the Americans who gave their lives for the cause of peace in this war," is being considered by U. S. Army officials.

The town has proposed to erect the memorial buildings in the U. S. Military Cemetery situated on the slopes of a hill on the outskirts of Cambridge. The cemetery, one of the largest in England, contains the bodies of more than 6,000 Americans. It was opened by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower in 1944.

In offering its gift, Bishop's lush countryside, will remain for Stortford asked that it be accepted "in order that the cemetery, American memorial services are which is a little piece of the England held at the cemetery each May 30.

So you are graduating! That is indeed an honor. It is doubly an honor these days, when scholastic requirements are so high.
