TELEVISION COST SLOWS GROWTH OF INDUSTRY

WASHINGTON (UP)—Television is the worst laggard in the post war radio industry, partly because of the cost of building and operating a station is so high.

Television has been on the air commercially only since 1941. Only six stations are now broadcasting. They were licensed before the war time freeze on non-essential buildings. Three are in New York and one each in Chicago, Schenectady and Philadelphia.

India Protests Unequal Nuptials

BOMBAY (UP)—A bill discouraging "unequal marriages" between men of 45 years or more and girls of less than 18 has been moved in the Bombay legislative assembly by Mrs. Lilavati Munshi, Indian author, reformer and one-time member of the All India Congress Committee.

American officials characterized the row as "the most serious rift" between American and Soviet personnel which has occurred. At one point Russian troops covered the American MPs with their Tommy guns. The Americans retaliated by calling reinforcements including an armored car, and throwing them around the MP station, with guns trained on the Russians.

Denies Reports on Army's Guided Missile Program

WASHINGTON (UP)—Responsible military officers voiced fears today that the armed forces, however inadvertently, have misled the public about our guided missile development program.

Wallace announced yesterday that he would continue to discuss U. S. foreign policy in future addresses. The statement climaxed the controversy over his Easy-Up-On Russia speech last Thursday, which President Truman first apparently endorsed and then subsequently disavowed.

Erect Quietest Room In World

MURRAY HILL, N. J. (UP)—A room which will be so quiet that even the straining of molecules in the air of the room will be heard here for the sake of improving telephone communication.

Despite a rash of reports of fantastic new weapons in the works, the fact is the nation does not have a single guided missile, rocket or supersonic—faster than sound—plane to use if war comes tomorrow.

Wallace is scheduled to see Mr. Truman tomorrow. Clayton conferred with the President yesterday. His assumption that future Wallace speeches would be cleared with the State Department apparently was based on assurances from Mr. Truman.

Homer Wiesen Made Manager of A&P Store

Homer Wiesen has been appointed the new manager of the A&P Store here.

Furthermore, it may be years—perhaps five, 10 or more—before such weapons are available on a scale for effective use in combat.

Clayton said his statement covered any future speech on foreign policy by Wallace. Wallace's next speech is scheduled here next Monday night.

Surplus Ladder Worth Money

Bernard A. DiMaggio, of New Orleans, bought himself a surplus ladder for $3.32 and sits atop it to reach over the mob for another purchase from WAA clerk, Miss Mimi Abide. The huge sale by the WAA had 10,000 people present at a former Consolidated-Vultee plant in New Orleans. (NEA Telephoto).

The Weather

WEST TEXAS—Partly cloudy to cloudy, scattered showers and thunderstorms this afternoon, tonight and Wednesday.

Well...
I Dunno,
But...

Former Ranger residents living in other parts of the country make the staff of the Times feel very happy when they write to say how much they are enjoying the Times.

Something that nearly always stumps a person, is to find themselves mistaken for another. What to do and what to say is puzzling. You always have the feeling that you should know the person speaking to you and that to show no recognition would be discourteous and yet you want to put them straight about who you are. It takes a smooth diplomat to handle such a situation tactfully.

The weather is really giving us room for conversation these days, with one day an attempt at a revival of summer and the next cooling rains.

Monday's temperatures started another upward climb to hit a high of 82 as compared with highs of 68 and 78 the days before. Total rainfall this morning was .41 of an inch.

That brings September's rainfall to 2.90 inches for the month, so far.

Opening of school always gives a busier look to a place, what with all of the kids coming and going and one really has to hustle for themselves at noon time. When those hungry kids are turned out for the lunch hour there's only one thing on their minds—something to eat and what a rush they make for the cafes.

Heard a student say today that traffic lights might be a good deal at the high school. There are so many students and the majority of them, so some say, do not respect the right and left principles of traffic in the halls.

Eager children are often inclined to appear rude when they are no more than in a hurry and thoughtless, but they can be taught to respect the rights of others, despite their rush.

An ad recently appearing in this newspaper was to the effect that the Monday edition of the Times will be resumed on the first Monday in October.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UP)—Rep. Clarence Cannon of Missouri's ninth district believes in sound economy. He informed the secretary of state he spent six cents in the recent primary campaign in which he was unopposed for Democratic renomination. The "expenditure" was for two postage stamps.

OLD WEAPON—NEW TACTIC

It used to be generally assumed that one of the chief purposes of a strike was to engage public attention and enlist public support for the striking workers' cause.

We don't happen to recall any employers who have been driven out of business permanently by a strike.

Strikes used to succeed in this mission, too. Usually they were undertaken reluctantly and as a last resort for striking was no fun.

The strike is still potentially the same useful weapon that it always was.

In almost every major strike in the last year the public has suffered. Usually strikes have been settled short of an actual menace to life and health.

Recent events are typical. The country's maritime commerce has been at a standstill.

One of these strikes has been against private employers, the other against a government agency.

WASHINGTON COLUMN BY PETER EDSON, NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON COLUMN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—Reparation Ambassador Edwin W. Pauley learned the hard way about how the Russians had taken machinery out of Manchuria as war booty.

WHEN HAROLD D. SMITH left his job as director of the Bureau of the Budget to take a top position with the new International Bank, his former associates in the bureau threw him a party.

SENATOR HARLEY M. KILGORE got the surprise of his life when he went back to West Virginia for the recent primary election and found that some of the United Mine Workers' officials were against him.

Investigation disclosed that some of the miners' officials had the idea that John L. Lewis was a Republican and wanted his local officials to support Republican candidates.

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON, NEA Sports Editor

NAT FLEISCHER, historian of boxing and most prolific writer on the sport today, has just come up with his 43rd book, "The Michigan Assassin."

Few knew Stanley Ketchel as well as Nat Fleischer. Nat tells about the time Ketchel knocked out Porky Flynn in three rounds at Boston, May 17, 1910.

ON the way to California, Steve (nobody called him Stanley) and Pete stopped off in a Colorado mining town, attracted by a huge sign announcing a come-one, come-all heavyweight tournament in the town hall that night.

That night Kid Glutz showed up in a pair of old overalls and battered hat and flattened six heavyweights in a row.

Next afternoon found the pair pretty well charged with champagne, swinging arm-in-arm down the main stem singing a cowboy song, a $200 violin under Ketchel's other arm and the full $100 in his late opponent's pocket.

Ketchel was on his way to the boy's home to present the fiddle in person.

Californian Admits Texas Grapefruit Best

HARLINGEN, Tex., (UP)—News: A Californian praised Texas Rio Grande Valley citrus fruit over his homestate product. A Uelsalia, Calif., canner in search of two Ruby Red grapefruit trees for planting in that state wrote as follows to the Texas Citrus Growers and Shippers, Inc. "Most of our California fruits do bluish excessively but that is caused by a sense of modesty from excessive over-praise. We will admit, however, that blushing is not taking place in our native grapefruit trees. It probably would if some of that fine Rio Grande grapefruit was shipped into this state as the writer has visited your country and cannot praise the quality of your grapefruit too highly."

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

By Boyce House

While perhaps people (if they think of me at all) think of me as a writer of humor, as a matter-of-fact, my first two books were of a serious nature—and not particularly successful, from a sales standpoint.

The first was "Were You In Ranger?" an account of the great oil rush of 1918-20, which began with the McCleskey gusher and transformed Ranger, Eastland, Cisco and Breckenridge from villages into cities almost overnight. Ten years spent in Eastland County editing newspapers gave opportunity for gathering the material that went into this book, which sold about 3,000 copies, which is not bad for a "first book," but not particularly good, either. Incidentally, "Were You In Ranger?" is out-of-print and dealers ask $6 a copy (the original price was $1.50).

Next book was "Oil Boom," an account of six Southwestern oil rushes—Spindletop, Ranger, Desdemona, Burkburnett, Snackover, (Arkansas) and Mexia. Two of the chapters appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, before the book came out. "Oil Boom" received a fair amount of attention from some of the national critics and received an award or two—but sold fewer copies than "Were You In Ranger?"

For a long time, just as a hobby, I had been gathering Texas jokes and, just for the fun of it, sat down and dashed off 500 of them. Half a dozen publishing houses in the North and East turned the manuscript down. Finally, Joe Naylor of San Antonio brought it out—and the two most surprised men in Texas were the publisher and the author when folks began buying it. About 115,000 copies have been sold.

Then came "Talk Talk from Texas" (70,000 copies) and "Texas—Proud and Loud" (35,000 copies.) Really, the humor books were just a sort of sideline or by-product—and they happened to catch the fancy of the public. My next book? It will be out soon; it's called "Cowtown Columnist"—and there's not a joke in it!

And will some explain why a year and a half after the war, we still have a sugar shortage? Is John L. Lewis to blame for that, too?

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL HAS INFORMATION FOR VETS

The Eastland County Vocational School has recently received information that may be helpful to Veterans who are enrolled in the School or intend to in the near future. The instructors have been engaged the past two weeks in getting agreements between the employers and their employees. Those agreements between them are "a concise training agreement signed by the employer, the trainee, and a representative of the school. The agreement should contain (1) an outline of the work experience to be given; the trainee, (2) an outline of the instructions to be given by the school, (3) a schedule of wages to be paid the trainee, (4) a statement specifying the number of hours of related instruction per week, and (5) provisions for a signature of approval by an official of the school, the employer, and the student. A copy of this agreement should be given the trainee and the employer, and a copy retained by the school; one copy each must be provided for the State Board for Vocational Education and the Veterans Administration. This training agreement must be approved by the State Board for Vocational Education.

"A detailed instruction outline (or course of study) for each trainee; this outline must list by jobs, machines, or other accepted method, the major types of work experience to be learned, along with a detailed outline of the related instruction to be provided by the school."

On the face of the Training Agreements there is a blank which calls for the salary of the trainee and first instructions were to figure that on the basis of 40 hours work week. The detailed interpretation of that rule came out this week and it is as follows. The standard work week is considered at 40 hours per week and the additional time is considered as regular overtime. All the time spent at the job over the usual time is considered as extra overtime and does not count against the boys wage in figuring his subsistence. The regular overtime does count on the boys salary figures against his subsistence. Gifts, bonuses and donations all so figure into the salary and will be deducted from the subsistence if it exceeds the ceiling wage. The subsistence and the standard wage plus bonuses, gifts, and donations, all together, cannot exceed $175.00 for single men and $200.00 for married men. As an example of this, the following illustration may help clarify the rule. Let us say that John Doe works 60 hours a week regularly. The 40 hours per week will pay him $100.00 a month. His regular overtime amounts to $50.00 making a total of $150.00 which will be the figure used in determining his subsistence unless he receives bonus gifts, or donations. These will be added to the $150.00 and subtracted from the ceiling wage of $175.00 or $200.00. The extra overtime does not count against him.

The cooperation of employers and trainees in getting the agreements completed will be greatly appreciated and if there is any question as to eligibility or qualifications the Director, C. B. Edwards, or any of his instructors of the school will be glad to assist.

DEVIL'S LAUGHTER

By Alice M. Laverick
 Copyright, 1946, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: I, Cecelia Hart, was only 17 when I came to Innisfail that eventful summer to help out Cousin Ellen, who was the eccentric old housekeeper. Autocratic old Honora Fitzgerald, who ruled the household from a sick bed, frightened me but the friendliness of lovely Charlotte Brown, and Professor Mark Fitzgerald, to whom she was engaged, did much to allay my homesickness. Then Colin Fitzgerald came home and everything was different. He had a magnetic charm. At dinner that first evening, though I noticed that he and Mark did not get along, Father tried to keep peace between them and took his leave when dinner was over.

COLIN sauntered over to the huge grand piano and began to play casual chords lightly and so one spoke for a moment. Then Mark, filling his pipe and gazing around the room in an abstract manner, scowled suddenly and said, "This room is an atrocity. What's what it is?"

Colin, still playing soft chords, raised his eyebrows in faint surprise and Miss Charlotte said, "Mark, why do you always say things like that about this room? I love it. It's so airy and well-lighted and I'm sure it's comfortable." She leaned her head against the high backed chair and the dull rose of the tapestry intensified the black of her hair and the blue of her eyes.

"That I'll grant you," said Mark, his own gray eyes softening as he looked at her. "But it could still be all of that and yet not so utterly at odds with the good architecture of the original house. Look at those mouldings—gold, mind you. Gold. And that fireplace. To my mind, it's desecration for a man to take such liberties with such a fine dignified dwelling as this one."

From where I lurked in the far corner of the room, straightening magazines on tables and smoothing chair cushions already smooth, I stole a glance at the lespied fireplace and I still thought it beautiful.

"Remember it was your father a perfectionist."

I crept from the room, no one noticing.

THE storm came back again late that night and raged for an hour.

Cousin Ellen pattered into my room and peered at me anxiously two or three times, pattering again upon seeing me so sound asleep. I lay very still each time with my eyes closed, though it was some time before I really slept. I did not mind the storm, indeed, I rather enjoyed it. Nor was I lonely nor unhappy. Rather, on this my third night at Innisfail I thought what a wonderful place it was to be, how drab and uneventful life would be anywhere else. For Colin Fitzgerald had smiled at me, had called me "Little Saint Cecelia" and said he'd be seeing more of each other. Even though he had not noticed me at all, after that.

I was to grow used to not being noticed that summer and it was a bit puzzling at first. I had been brought up to be sure on the old-fashioned theory that children should not be exploited. And I had not, in any case, been the showy type of child who is held up before friends and relatives as proud, beaming parents. Nevertheless, I had not before experienced quite the feeling of nonentity I was to have during most of that summer. My mother, at least, had a way of acknowledging my existence by being extremely careful what she talked about to women visitors in my presence. I think it was the lack of this reserve before me in the Innisfail household that was a constant source of surprise to me. I came to the conclusion, finally, that it was the usual attitude of those who are rich enough and fortunate enough to employ servants. And, too, I was so quiet, so colorless, so shy.

No one ever spoke harshly to me. Indeed, at such times as they remembered me as a person, the Fitzgeralds treated me with an atom of condescension. Those amazing Fitzgeralds. As my mother would say, you never knew where you had them.

fast to take in to the dining room to the Professor.

Mark, buried in the paper, as usual, said, "Thank you, Ellen." I saw that Colin was very much excited. I realized that for the moment he had forgotten that there was a new maid here at Innisfail.

I CAME upon Mark again a little later, when I went to hang out the table linen in the clothes yard, a fenced off square close beside his old-fashioned garden. He loathed the formal gardens over by the living room, with their geometric designs and marble benches, but he would dig and prune for hours here in his own spot where later in the summer there would be a mixture of all kinds of blooms and where already the roses were starting to blossom on his new bushes.

He was kneeling there now repairing the damage that the storm had done and Miss Charlotte was beside him. They did not, of course, notice me.

"He's never done one stroke of work in all the twenty-five years of his life," Mark was saying.

"Perhaps he'll start working now," Charlotte said. "Now that he's had his fling."

"I doubt it very much, Charlotte. I asked him what he intended to do and he said let the poor devil work what he would like to do. Why should he stand in their way?" Mark dug in silence for a moment, then he added, "The trouble is he's always had everything too easy. He took a good share of his inheritance—money my father left him—and went blithely off to see the world for himself as soon as he finished college."

"Well, after all, it's a wonderful thing to be able to see the world, Mark. Don't you think so?"

"Of course I do. But that fellow hasn't a thought for anyone but himself. His concern for my mother after all this time is ironic, to say the least. And look at the way he's treated Beatrice Harrington. I doubt if she's heard from him five times in the three years since he put the ring on her finger, yet he's gone over there today as sure of a welcome as though he'd been there yesterday. Why in heaven's name she's waited for him all this time I don't know."

"DON'T you, Mark?" Charlotte's voice was soft.

"No, I do not. Beatrice is one of the finest girls God ever made."

"But, Mark, darling, almost any girl would have done the same. Colin has the most—the most—potent personality of anyone I have ever met."

"Has he, indeed?"

"Yes, and I think you know it. I also think you love him, really, in spite of the harsh things you say to him."

"He enrages me so, I could—ah, Charlotte, of course I love him, the ingrate. That's why I get so worked up over him. Some one of these fine days he'll give him an awful fling!"

"Not be prepared for it in a whisper," she said.

"Like me, you mean?"

"Oh, my dear, no. The trowel and took her in his hand up the last tablecloth and retire to the house, still unnoticed."

Cousin Ellen being nowhere in sight, I went in to dust the library, but had not read three chapters of "Henry Edmond" when she came to find me, to tell me to work cleaning up silver.

One thing conspired other to keep me from coming that day. Cousin Ellen had the baby at this and that, and late in the afternoon, when I might legitimately have gone into the library, Colin returned unexpectedly, bringing with him Beatrice Harrington and two cars full of other guests.

 . . . is the popular way of saying that we act before we think. It is a state of mind not confined to the ignorant, nor to the mentally ill, but to all classes of people, some at times, others at all times. For instance, we buy property without an abstract. ## Miss Gordon, Mr. Derr Married Here Sunday

At 2:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon Miss Winifred Ester Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus W. Gordon, became the bride of Mr. Warren Paul Derr, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Derr of Beaumont.

The ceremony was performed at the First Baptist church with Rev. David C. Ham officiating before an altar decorated with floor baskets of white gladioluses and fern and lighted by white candles in wrought iron floor candelabra. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. James Metcalf sang Because and Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life, accompanied at the piano by Miss Mildred Balch. Miss Balch also played the traditional wedding marches and during the service played Claire de Lune.

Mrs. C. T. Drury of Beaumont, sister of the bride, attended her as matron of honor and wore a long fitted gold crepe dress with off shoulder effect. She carried a bouquet of baby chrysanthemums in lavender designed in a colonial bouquet.

Karla Kay Kirk was flower girl and wore a long white dress trimmed in blue. She carried a basket filled with white flowers.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a white nylon and lace dress designed with a tight fitting lace bodice with flared peplum over a long full skirt of nylon which fell into a short train. She wore a waist length veil of illusion which was fitted to the head with a bandeau of white daisies and orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of white gladioluses and tube roses.

The groom was attended by Mr. V. Gene Blanchette of Beaumont as best man. Ushers were Sgt. Byron Gordon, Messrs. Homer Gay Charles W. Hodges and Patrick E. O'Donnell, all of Ranger.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. White gladioluses and fern decorated the reception rooms and in the dining room the table was laid with a Madeira and Venetian lace cloth and centered with the white three tiered wedding cake decorated with rosebuds. The base of the cake was surrounded by fern.

Guests at the reception were received by the mothers of the bride and groom and the bride and groom. Those who assisted in the house party at the reception were Mrs. Roney Jones, Mrs. J. D. Johnson, Mrs. Lottie Davenport, and two aunts of the bride, Miss Winifred Dunkle and Mrs. P. J. O'Donnell.

When the bride and groom left on their wedding trip the bride wore a wine colored wool suit with black accessories.

BACK TO SCHOOL

Now that students are starting another year at school, see that they have a good light to safeguard eyesight and make studying easier. The lamp your child uses for reading or studying should have at least a 100-watt bulb to provide enough light. The shade should be wide to spread the light, and be careful to keep any glare from unshaded bulbs from striking the eyes.
