At Least 1,500 Die In Japan Earthquake

NO AMERICAN CASUALTIES IN ARMED FORCES ARE REPORTED

TOKYO—A devastating earthquake struck Japan today, killing 1,500 persons, making 20,000 more homeless, and smashing at least 50 cities and villages on the shores of Japan's Inland Sea.

WASHINGTON—Robert Lewis, American Red Cross commissioner in Japan, reported to headquarters today that preliminary surveys showed no casualties among U. S. Military or Red Cross personnel in the Japanese earthquake.

The pre-dawn temblor, termed more severe than the 1923 Tokyo quake which claimed nearly 100,000 lives, hurled a tidal wave against 300 miles of coastline along Shikoku Island and south-central Honshu.

Preliminary reports set the known dead at 500 but other estimates boosted that total by 1,000. The earthquake and the tidal wave demolished or damaged 14,686 houses and 21 factories, and destroyed more than 1,400 fishing vessels.

Early complications listed 628 persons seriously injured and 823 missing. The only Allied military casualty reported was a British soldier missing at Miho in Hiroshima prefecture.

The thundering wall of water, which swept in from the Pacific after the submarine earthquake, pulled thousands of houses out to sea as it receded, and in other places flooded homes or smashed them flat.

Tonight thousands of families were without shelter in bitter cold weather, with icy winds adding to their misery.

Japanese relief resources were mobilized to rush aid to the stricken area, which extended from Hiroshima on the west to Osaka, Wakayama and Kainan on the eastern edge of the picturesque Inland Sea.

Governor-Elect Talmadge Of Georgia Dies

ATLANTA—Gov. Elect Eugene Talmadge who won an unprecedented 4th term as Georgia governor in November on a promise to maintain white supremacy died this morning less than a month before his scheduled inauguration. He was 62.

The end came at 7 a. m. EST in Piedmont Hospital where members of his family and a few close friends had kept vigil since his condition took a turn for the worse Monday.

In contrast to the stormy and colorful life that marked his ascendancy in Georgia politics, Talmadge passed away quietly. His death climaxed an illness that was aggravated by the real and drive of his 1946 political campaign when he stumped the state to make 272 speeches against the advice of his doctors.

TELLS HOW FDR STARTED ON ROAD TO PRESIDENCY

NEW YORK (UP)—How Franklin Delano Roosevelt got his start in the presidential political scene, through James M. Cox, Democratic nominee who needed a running mate in 1920, is recalled by Cox in his autobiography.

At dawn on July 6, 1920, Cox writes in his "Journey Through My Years," just published by Simon & Schuster, he received a telephone call at his home in Ohio asking for his recommendation for the vice-presidential nomination. Cox had been nominated for president at the San Francisco convention the night before.

Cox said he wanted Roosevelt. He did not know Roosevelt "and so far as I knew, I had never seen him."

He gives three reasons for his choice: (1) Roosevelt met the geographical requirements; (2) he was an independent, a n d (3) he bore a well-known political name.

The manager of the Cox campaign consulted Charles P. Murphy, head of the New York delegation, and a Tammany man. Roosevelt had fought Tammany in the state senate.

Cox reports Murphy's reaction as follows:

"I don't like Roosevelt. He is not well known in the country, but Ed (the Cox manager) this is the first time a Democratic nominee for the presidency has shown me courtesy. That's why I would vote for the devil himself if Cox wanted me to. Tell him we will nominate Roosevelt in the first ballot as soon as we assemble."

The convention did. That is only one of the political and personal bits of history in the 447 pages of Cox's book.

Half of the volume or more is devoted to Cox's building up of his newspaper system. Starting in Dayton on a shoestring, Cox now owns newspapers in Miami, Atlanta, Springfield, O., as well as his original property.

He went into politics early, leaving a job as a reporter in Cincinnati to become secretary for a congressman. Eventually he succeeded the congressman and later was governor of Ohio for three terms during World War I and during the disastrous flood in Ohio in 1913.

After his defeat for the presidency, Cox devoted his time to his newspapers, but kept an eye on politics, especially the 1932 campaign for his former running mate. Of this he writes:

"The New Deal was not the creature of any one man or set of men. It, or its equivalent, was natural and inevitable. It presents, superficially, a striking political paradox. If its measures had been specified in the Democratic national platform of 1932, it is doubtful whether Mr. Roosevelt could have been elected. And yet, as the major if not the only issue in the campaigns of 1936 and 1940, it was overwhelmingly endorsed."

Cox was vice chairman of the

UN Atomic Body Appears Headed For Fresh Start

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y.—Members of the United Nations atomic energy commission appeared today to be headed for a fresh dispute over "the principles" underlying the American plan for world atomic control.

The argument, based on differences between the United States and Canada, was expected to break out two days after Christmas when the 12 nation commission meets as a working "committee of the whole."

United States spokesmen, reportedly supported by a majority of the 12 delegates, made clear that they believe the commission has accepted the entire American plan for atomic control as such, although not necessarily its exact wording.

Well... I Dunno, But...

H. Reid Hunter who will be home for Christmas and who is a midshipman of the United States Naval Academy will be a candidate for a commission from the Academy in June and will also be a candidate for his B. S. Degree.

Called to our attention—the attractive Christmas decorations at the Roy Payne home on Highway 30 East. There are dozens and dozens of others and we think people that go to so much trouble to give passersby a happy memory and a cheering boost for the Christmas spirit, deserve some kind of thanks.

While attending the annual Christmas program at St. Rita's Catholic school last week, we were, as always, impressed with the evident ability of the sisters who conduct the school.

Their programs are always well presented and the gentility of the sisters is reflected in the conduct of the children.

Few people realize what an asset the school is to Ranger. It is, we believe, the only Catholic school between Ft. Worth and Abilene and has done a very fine work for Ranger.

It has this year one of the largest enrollments of recent years.

One of the busiest places in Ranger is the Frozen Food Locker Plant and from the looks of things down at that plant there shouldn't be any hungry people in Ranger this Christmas.

Well Walker, who helped build the plant is one of the most enterprising box holders and is making a lot of people happy with Christmas presents of meat from his box.

Both the Methodist and the Baptist churches will have beautifully illustrated Christmas programs for the services Sunday adding one more touch of observance of the sacred season.

While most of the country is snowbound and travel held up by snow, rain, sleet and fog, Ranger basks in the most glorious sunshine imaginable. Since Tuesday when temperature hit the low for the season, there has been a gradual climb upward with both minimum and maximum temperatures mounting.

Every day, however, has registered a sub-freezing temperature with the low for the 24 hours ending at 8:00 a. m. Saturday being 30. Temperatures in the afternoon were in the 60s.

It has been called to our attention the shying away from the use of the word cancer, not only by the medical profession but by newspapers and others where the word is indicated.

In the mail this week came a plea from the American Cancer Society to speak out plainly when the use of the word is indicated. Used to illustrate what they meant the article had photostatic copies of news stories concerning the death recently of a prominent newspaperman and writer. Of the eight stories clipped from newspapers all over the country only one referred to his death as being caused by cancer. All the others listed the illness as a "liver ailment."

The point with the cancer society is that the American people need to be enlightened on the subject and disguise is no way to do it they think.

It goes on to relate that 47 Americans die every day of cancer. You, they say, one rarely sees cancer listed as a cause of death in newspaper obituaries.

The pamphlet sent out by the society ends its plea with these words, "It will be a service to your readers to report cancer as cancer."

THE SPIRIT SURVIVES

True Christmas spirit is hard to find this year, pessimists say. And, indeed, one needn't be a pessimist to feel that the present state of the world scarcely justifies the bright Yuletide glow.

The manifold blessings of peace so eagerly awaited for so long simply haven't materialized—or at least haven't been recognized—in the first 16 months after the final shot of World War II was fired. Civil wars, riots, revolutions, diplomatic crises monopolize the front pages.

There are plenty of relatively minor annoyances to mar the holiday cheer of Americans. The housing shortage continues stubbornly in full force. Automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, and most other desirable commodities are still hard to get and entirely too high-priced to suit the average hard-earned wage earner.

So it's easy enough to understand why good old-fashioned Christmas spirit should be a little hard to entertain this year. And yet...

In Chicago recently, a photographer found Mrs. Constance Moser, widow of an ex-Marine private, sleeping with her to a small child in the back seat of her car, parked in a Chicago garage. Pathetic victims of the housing shortage, they had had no bed for three months.

Seeing the picture, readers throughout the nation responded generously to this human tragedy. Mrs. Moser received more than 100 gifts of money, plus offers of homes in Atlantic City, Waterford, N. Y., Chicago, Antioch, Ill., and 10 other cities.

In Dellevue, O., the other day, 8-year-old Johnny Lower was taken, like millions of other American children, on a tour of toy-filled department stores. But Johnny couldn't see the shiny toys—he had to feel them. And what he wanted for Christmas, he said, was a seeing-eye dog. He'd been saving his pennies for months to buy one, but he was still far short of the goal.

Learning of Johnny's problem, the people of the United States solved it for him. He'll have his seeing-eye dog—a young Mastillon, O., mill hand offered to give up an eye so that Johnny might be able to see, not just feel, the flood of Christmas toys pouring into his home.

Perhaps this isn't the best of all possible worlds, and perhaps there isn't much really to be happy about in this year of disillusionments and disappointments.

But don't let Mrs. Moser and her children or Johnny Lower hear you say that there isn't any Christmas spirit abroad in this country. They know better.

America has opened its massive heart to them. In the age old Yuletide spirit of giving, their fellowmen have shared what they had with those who had less.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—From the little island of Iceland comes a fish story which reveals better than a book some of the international shenanigans now going on in reconverting this world from war to peace.

Iceland's whole economy is wrapped around fish. From the sale of its fish catch to foreign countries, Iceland gets the money to buy coal and lumber and machinery and other things it needs to keep going. When the Nazis moved into Norway and Denmark, most of this fish trade was lost. Iceland's fish were sold to England during the war and accounted for about a third of the British fish supply.

When the United States got into the war and Iceland became an important part of the lifeline to Europe, American troops took over from the British, the Army built a big airfield at Keflavik, and in a fancy three-way deal, the U. S. bought Iceland's fish catch, Lend-Leased it to the British, supplied Iceland with American coal and such other essential civilian goods as could be spared.

Except for the fishing business, Iceland's economy practically stopped dead. Prices soared, the cost of living went from 300 to 500 per cent above prewar levels, and wages were advanced by law.

With the end of the war came the end of Lend-Lease, the British found they could buy fish elsewhere at lower prices, Iceland was stuck with a good fishing industry. Then last August there appeared in the Icelandic capital at Reykjavik a five-man Russian purchasing mission. It came empowered to buy the entire Icelandic fish catch. Prices offered for frozen fillets were about 30 per cent higher than had been offered the Icelanders in wartime. Prices offered for herring oil were 80 per cent higher. Prices for cod liver oil were roughly comparable to U. S. prices, but the Russians smartly dickeered that they would buy the fish only if they got the oil. That froze the U. S. out of the market.

Not only that, but the Russians also offered to supply the Icelanders with all the coal and lumber and other civilian goods needed.

All of this happened at a time when U. S. negotiations for peace-time rights to use the Keflavik airfield were at their height. L.A.W. in September there was a three-day general strike in protest against U. S. use of the field. In the end the A.L.H. ratified the treaty U. S. troops will all be out of Iceland by April. U. S. planes can use Keflavik field as long as U. S. occupation forces remain in Germany. U. S. commercial planes may also use the field. But a few days after the A.L.H. approved this agreement, the cabinet of Prime Minister Olafur Thors had to resign. What happens next is in the lap of the gods.

The Russian deal was of course too good to turn down. The Icelanders had to take it. The moral for the United States is that in its international trade arrangements for the future, it is going to have to meet more competition of this kind, and such fishy deals are pretty hard to beat.

BERKELEY, Cal. (UP)—The first atomic oven was designed by Mother Earth millions of years ago and not by atomic bomb scientists at Hanford, Wash., and Oak Ridge, Tenn., according to Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, a leader in atomic research.

Seaborg said spontaneous fission in the earth works incessantly to produce plutonium, one of the essential elements in the making of atomic bombs.

Fission occurring in uranium in the earth releases neutrons, he said, but these elements were not produced by nature in sufficient quantity for any practical purpose.

TEACHER'S BATTLE HYMN
ST. PAUL, Minn. (UP)—St. Paul's striking teachers used a parody of Irving Berlin's "Easter Parade" as a battle chant during their picketing of 77 public schools. Written by Catherine Lennon, a teacher, it read: "In our suits and bonnets, Seize with words upon it, We'll be the proudest teachers in the picket parade. We'll be all in clover, And when they look us over, We'll smile and win the people into giving us school aid. "On the avenue—all avenues—"Life's photographers will snap us, And we'll see that we're in the rotogravure. SPORTS BY NED BROWN

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The Illinois-Ohio State gridiron rivalry is one of those football "naturals" which often produces a hammer-and-tong, tooth-and-nail classic that the patrons speak reverently of for years.

Illinois fans remember the game of 1921, when the Fighting Illini, who had not won a conference game, upset a confident Buckeye eleven that had whipped all its other Big Ten opponents. Two of the more famous games of the series were played in 1919 and 1920. Ohio State had won the conference championship each year since 1915, except for the war season of 1918, with the aid of the immortal Chic Harley.

In 1919 a last-second 20-yard place-kick by Bob Fletcher gave Illinois a 9-7 victory and the championship. Fletcher had never kicked a field goal before, and until that game Chic Harley had never known defeat. Ohio State took the field to regain the conference crown in 1920. Chic Harley was gone, but Pete Stinchcomb, Flaxey and the Workman boys had helped State beat Michigan, Wisconsin, Purdue and Chicago, which left the title to be decided in the final game at Illinois. The Buckeyes and the Illini battled fiercely for 30 minutes.

As the ball sailed through the air the gun was fired. Myers raced on, caught the ball and dived across the goal line. The game was over, but Ohio State was allowed to complete the play by trying for the extra point. Stinchcomb place-kicked successfully, and Ohio had regained its title in one of the most thrilling games in conference history.

If You Can't Get New Car Have It Re-Styled

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UP) — Jerry Stageberg, 22, runs an automobile "restyling" agency here.

Aware that people are tired of their old cars, but can't get new ones, Stageberg remodels their automobiles. A complete "re-styling" includes removing all chromium, changing radiator grille design and lowering the top about four inches. The trunk handle also is removed and the license plate put under glass. Result: a low, powerful-looking, streamlined automobile.

Stageberg said that the general idea is to smooth up the surfaces of the vehicles by removing anything that protrudes.

Derbies are called "iron hats" because politicians of the late 19th century used to line their derbies with iron as protection in election disputes.

EQUAL WOMEN'S PAY DECLARED UNSOUND BY BRITISH BOARD

LONDON (UP) — A Royal Commission, in a 100,000 word report, has written the final chapter of the "equal pay for women and men" controversy in Britain. The verdict was: "Women are just not worth equal pay."

The Royal Commission, comprising five men and four women in substance handed down this dictum in a 220-page document summarizing two years of official inquiry.

The majority of the commission opposed equal pay mainly because there are few jobs where equal work is done by both men and women.

Analyzing the probable consequences of introducing equality of pay, the reporter held that men are more adaptable and versatile than women, more resourceful in dealing with surprise situations and therefore worth a higher wage.

The British Employer's Confederation asserted that "where women are employed on the same work as men, their output is in general lower than that of the men, thereby increasing the number of workers required for a given amount of production and overhead costs involved."

The commission based its opinion against equal pay on these main conclusions:

1. Present inequalities of pay are largely justified in the lower wage earning classes by inequalities of performance.

2. Equal pay would ultimately result in a general lowering of standards of pay for both men and women.

3. The married man with a family would become relatively the worst-off member of the community.

Evidence submitted to the Royal Commission defending equality of pay held that the war gave women political emancipation and greatly extended their field of employment. But, the report went on, the continued disparity between the wages of men and women still remains as a barrier to the social advance of employed women and to their playing their full and proper part in the life of the community.

The adverse report further emphasized that equal pay for men and women was essentially in the national interest because "the use of cheap labor means lowering the standard of living and in itself a potent cause of economic instability."

The Trades Union Congress was "somewhat guarded" in its predictions of the actual effect

Methodists of Texas will have the opportunity Sunday to contribute to the annual collection for the orphans home at Waco and on these contributions depends Santa's visit to the 420 children in the home.

The First Methodist church of Ranger has set its goal at $1,000 and a committee composed of M. L. King, Dr. P. M. Kuykendall, David D. Pickrell, Coke Martin and Frank S. Pearsall, has been appointed to receive and collect contributions.

During the fifty years life of the home more than five thousand homeless children have been given a chance to live a full life through opportunities provided at the school.

Mechanical Cow To Spout Milk For Army In Japan

TOKYO (UP)—The Japane-

The Eighth Army has requisitioned a mechanical cow for one of its big army hospitals here.

Col. S. C. Smock said the "cow" will look more like a washing

 it will process, homogenize, pas-

Don't Be Sorry—Be Safe
 ... is good, sound advise well worth taking especially in those cases where heavy risks are involved. One of these risks is buying real estate without an abstract. Most buyers in these modern days don't take risks—they get an abstract.
 And if the seller is about to convince you that his title is good and you don't need an abstract, better play safe. The abstract, among other things, reveals the condition of the title and is always worth far more than it costs.

College And High School Young People To Have Round Of Parties

New Era Club Is Entertained Wed.

Mrs. Evis Landers and Mrs. Dayton Rutledge were hostesses to the New Era Club Wednesday afternoon when the club had its annual Christmas party in the home of Mrs. Landers.

A silvered Christmas tree, trimmed in red ornaments and lights with a huge red satin flat bow lying in the snow beneath it, gave the only light to the room. Large bowls of giant poinsettias, grown by the hostess, graced both living and dining rooms.

Roll call was answered with the name of and a quotation from each one's favorite Biblical writer.

An impressive review of William Allen Knight's "A Lovely Find" was given by Mrs. Walter Daniels.

The Christmas story was read by Marilyn Jackson and a medley of Christmas carols were played and sung by Joanne and Marilyn Jackson, using the marimba, accordion, and violin.

At the close of the program cranberry punch, bell-shaped sandwiches, and green and red candies were served from a table laid with a net cloth centered by candy carol singers on a reflector. Crystal candelabra held red candles. Tiny bells were hung from red satin loops around the table's edge ending in a cascade of beaded streamers. The handle of the punch ladle also held a group of beaded red satin streamers. Mrs. Dayton Rutledge presided at the crystal punch-bowl. Recorded Christmas carols were played during the refreshments hour.

The 1946 Christmas season in Ranger, already off to a busy start, promises to be one of the gayest ever experienced here.

Christmas entertainments have been filling the calendar and more are planned for the holidays. Churches are observing the season with appropriate services and music and school programs have already been given.

Activities during the holidays will center around the college and high school young people with a full program already outlined. Among social events scheduled is a dance Christmas Eve at the Teen Canteen given by Mrs. W. M. Brown, Mrs. A. N. Larson, and Mrs. Charles Hummel honoring their sons and daughter, Charles Brown of A&M Freddie Larson of A&M and Miss Elsie Hummel a student at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago.

Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Brazda will entertain Thursday, December 26 with a dance at the Teen Canteen honoring their daughter, Miss Elaine Brazda, who is a student at Sophie Newcomb in New Orleans.

Friday night, December 27 members of the Deb Club of Ranger Junior College will entertain with a formal dance at the Ranger Country Club.

Invitations have been extended Ranger young people to two dances in Eastland during the holidays.

Many are planning to hold open house Christmas morning and among the open houses will be that given by Dr. and Mrs. P. M. Kuykendall and Mr. and Mrs. James P. Morris and one at the home of Mrs. John M. Gholson.

Among the many entertainments already given was the party given at the Chicken Inn by Mr. and Mrs. J. Floyd Killingsworth and Mrs. J. T. Killingsworth for employees of Killingsworth's. Following the dinner at the Inn gifts were exchanged from a Christmas tree at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Floyd Killingsworth.

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary entertained Wednesday night at the Legion hall with a Christmas dinner and Christmas tree for members of the Legion and Auxiliary and their families. Between 75 and 100 attended the affair. Employees of the C. D. Hartnett Wholesale Grocery Company were entertained at a Christmas dinner at the Gholson Friday night.

Already at home or expected home for the holidays from college are many Ranger young people who will join in the round of parties and dances planned.

Young People's Dept. Has Buffet Supper Friday

The Young People's Sunday School department of the First Baptist church was entertained Friday night with a buffet supper and Christmas party in the home of Rev. and Mrs. D. C. Ham.

As the guests arrived they were given slips of paper containing names by which couples for dinner were paired.

The dining table was laid with a lace cloth and centered with a reflector topped with fern, pine cones, and red candles. The coffee table was decorated with a miniature Santa Claus surrounded by ivy and red Christmas berries. The small tables for four were each centered with an angel figurine candle circled with ivy and Christmas berries.

Mrs. Ham presided at the table and was assisted in serving by Mrs. W. L. Jackson and Mrs. W. A. Lewis.

During the evening several games were played and gifts of small toys were exchanged. The toys at the end of the evening were placed in a large box to be taken to underprivileged children.

The climax of the evening was a story. The Unexpected Christmas Guest, told by Mrs. Ham followed by carols by the group of 42 guests who were present.

Church To Have Program Monday

Monday night at 7:00 o'clock the First Christian church will present a special Christmas program and the public is invited to attend. Immediately before the program Christmas carols will be recorded and the audience is asked to enter quietly and be silent while these carols are played.

The program will be as follows: lighting of candles; Peggy Dooley, Donnie Dooley; Invocation, Harry Warner; duet, Jacqueline Edwards, Betty Sue Cooper; Scripture reading, Dick Jones; solo, Jacqueline Edwards; violin solo, Rosemary Bruce; trio, special from the First Christian Church of Fort Worth; What Do You Do With Your Christmas Gifts, Rev. Pat Adams, pastor; Away In A Manger, children of the church; and Silent Night by the congregation.

Barbara Ann Stewart will be pianist for the program, and Kenneth Hargraves and Jack Littlefield will be ushers.

Following the program, Santa Claus will arrive to distribute gifts from the tree to the children.

Members of the church met Friday night for final rehearsal of the program and to decorate the tree.

Generous donations of fruit and money for the tree have been made and much time and energy have been given to prepare this program, the first for the church in several years.

Department Has Christmas Party

The Nursery Department of the First Baptist church was entertained with the annual Christmas party Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church.

Jacqueline Edwards accompanied by Betty Reuter at the piano sang Christmas songs. The children were delighted with the arrival of Santa Claus who distributed gifts from the attractively decorated tree.

Mrs. R. J. Helping Your Neighbor Idea Solves Woes

KIMBALL, S. D. (UP)—When the weather upset plans for the opening of their $50,000 livestock sales pavilion the Olson brothers were discouraged. The rest of Kimball were interested in their success however.

About 50 business men took over the job of driving spikes, leveling gravel, mixing cement—the job that regular construction workers refused to do—because of the weather.

The Olson brothers opened as scheduled. The pavilion managed to do $15,000 worth of business before the tired owners and their fellow business men called a halt.
