TRUCKS, JEEPS NOT WASTED ARMY SAYS

By William F. McMenamin United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP) — Under-secretary of War Kenneth C. Royall said today that the trucks and jeeps the public sees standing in open fields at army posts are part of a reserve needed to meet army requirements up to June 30, 1949.

He said people who have the idea that such vehicles are going to rust and ruin are mistaken because "they don't have all the facts."

"The army will sell or declare surplus any truck in danger of deteriorating beyond the point of usefulness," Royall insisted.

He said the army needs its reserve of 154,000 vehicles for regular army use. It also has 58,000 for national guard and organized reserve use.

Most of the vehicles are stored in open fields, but Royall disclosed that there is a regular program to prevent deterioration.

Only 192,000 of the Regular Army vehicles are stored in condition to run immediately. The remainder are in an economically repairable condition.

Of those not ready to run, our test is whether they could be repaired and put in running condition for 30 per cent less of their original cost," Royall said. "If they will become obsolete or deteriorate before they can be used, they must be declared surplus."

Royall said the army explained its policy to the appropriations sub-committees and other committees at the last Congress, and was not advised of any disagreement with the policy.

"Even if we had plenty of money to buy new vehicles, it would be economically sound to keep the ones we have for a reasonable time, so as to get all the use out of them possible," Royall argued. He said also that there was an added reason for the policy, in that the army did not believe it could get appropriations to buy new vehicles and felt it had better hold onto the ones it has.

T. C. U. To Build Playground Area

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—A playground area for intramural sports and physical education classes has been added to the Texas Christian University building program, according to action taken at the University's Board of Trustees' annual meeting.

New tennis courts, already nearing completion, an oval track and a varsity football practice field will be included in the area, along with landscaping and beautification of the grounds, parking lots and roadways.

The housing problem is being overcome with two new dormitories—one for men, the other for women—to be completed by the fall semester. Four barracks-dorms, which were finished in February, now house 200 men veterans, and a building program inaugurated by Britte College of the Bible in 1934 was completed this year with the building of five additional quadrangles for married ministerial students.

Ten temporary classroom and office buildings are now under construction back of the University library and will be ready for use in June, when the summer session begins.

He entered the practice of medicine in Lubbock after his Navy service. He has done special work in urology and specializes in that field.

He with his wife, the former Miss Billie Jean Joseph of Ranger have arrived here and Dr. Ameen has taken up his duties at the clinic.

Search Begun For Missing Army Transport

By United Press WSTOVER FIELD, Mass. — An intensive search by land and air began today for a missing four-engine army transport believed to have crashed within a few miles of Harmon Field, Stephenville, N.H.

The plane, enroute to Germany, carried five crew members and 4 passengers, including two high-ranking officers. It took off from W. T. Field at 10:30 A.M. yesterday and was due at Harmon Field four hours later.

State Health Officer Advises Spring Clean-Up

AUSTIN, Tex.—A good old fashioned spring house cleaning in every city and community in Texas would do a great deal toward furthering good health in this state according to Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, who said in Austin today, "From a practical standpoint the old adage that 'Cleanliness is next to Godliness' is still well worth emphasizing."

A general clean-up program of state-wide proportions with the objective of bettering health conditions for our citizenship should include surface cleaning, drainage, the graveling of streets and alleys, the cleaning of all parks and playgrounds and the clearing of weeds and rubbish off vacant lots.

The destruction of mosquito breeding places and rat harborage, the proper disposal of garbage and trash and the general cleaning up of all premises," said Dr. Cox, "will be of inestimable value in helping to keep down health hazards such as dysentery, typhoid, and poliomyelitis. Good community housekeeping and ordinary sanitary measures require the prompt removal of all waste matter in and around yards and homes in order to abate the danger of such diseases, and insure good health protection throughout the State."

Dr. Cox stressed the fact that many dangerous diseases are fifth borne, and the only possible way to control them is to eliminate the insanitary conditions responsible for their spread.

Marshall also spelled out the basic freedoms he will insist upon for a Democratic Germany.

The substance of Marshall's latest papers to the council was made known late today while the council was in recess. A committee of special deputies began work on the coordination of all proposals submitted in the last two weeks for consideration by the council tomorrow.

Foreign Born on Faculty FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—Ten teachers at Texas Christian University were born outside the United States, with Canada leading the list with four.

Germany is in second place in relation to foreign-born instructors, while France, England and Russia each furnished one.

TWO PARTIES HAIL TRUMAN PURGE ORDER

WASHINGTON — Republicans as well as Democratic members of Congress today cheered President Truman's order to purge the government of subversive employees.

While the order applied to all types of subversive Communist, Fascist or any other kind—some legislators called it a springboard for an all-out campaign against the Communist party.

Chairman Fred A. Hartley, R., N.J., of the House labor committee, said the President's statement set a precedent which logically leads to "eliminating Communists from American life." He is an advocate of legislation to outlaw the Communist party.

Mr. Truman's order, issued Saturday, called for firing all subversives from the federal payroll and setting up new and drastic standards for judging the loyalty of government employees.

Asks Occupation Forces Be Cut To Bone By June

MOSCOW — Secretary of State George C. Marshall proposed to the council of foreign ministers today that the Big Four occupation forces in Germany be reduced to the absolute minimum by next June.

Marshall also spelled out the basic freedoms he will insist upon for a Democratic Germany.

The substance of Marshall's latest papers to the council was made known late today while the council was in recess. A committee of special deputies began work on the coordination of all proposals submitted in the last two weeks for consideration by the council tomorrow.

MORE FIRE PREVENTION SUGGESTIONS ARE GIVEN

Following is the fifth and last of a series of articles prepared by Marjorie Maddocks in connection with Ranger's clean-up campaign.

The fact that Ranger has a 15 per cent bad fire record penalty is evidence that we need to practice fire prevention daily. It is an individual responsibility, so inspect your premises daily for fire hazards. You have heard it said, that "A clean building seldom burns." The Fire Prevention Committee urges everyone to clean up their premises for safety's sake. Get rid of all papers and trash. Help the waste-paper drive. Clean up vacant lots and alleys; this clean-up job goes beyond homes. It is definitely a "must" for stores and factories too. A fire now would be a catastrophe for most lines of business. Let's search out all dangerous conditions and correct them!

If you have not already done so, inspect your property to locate and correct fire hazards. Ask at the Chamber of Commerce office or any member of this Fire Prevention committee for a Home Inspection Blank.

Committee members: Marjorie Maddocks, Chairman, Mrs. D. C. Cox, Mrs. Ernest Latham, R. J. Rains, B. H. Powell and J. E. Meroney.

Well... I Dunno, But...

A light norther blowing this morning had a feel of Easter about it and temperatures, though no where near the freezing mark, were lower. In fact the thermometer just about ran the gamut during the week-end, rising to the highest maximum of the season hitting 80.

A total of .20 of an inch of rain fell in a very typical spring shower Sunday morning and the distant thunder, accompanying the storm warned of storm days ahead.

It also reminds us of the spring in childhood, when we were hustled out of bed at the slightest sign of a storm and hurried into a storm cellar. The cellar was always made ready in the spring, complete with candles, pick and ax, for digging out in case exit was blocked by falling debris if there was a blow.

These trips were the outgrowth of fear of storms created in the minds of people who experienced the cyclone that practically destroyed the home town years before. In fact, so impressed were we with the fear of storms that we spent a good many years of our life trying to get over it.

The boys on the staff don't know it yet, but we understand that there's a big clean-up around the Times scheduled for this afternoon. Somebody gently reminded us that the clean-up should begin at home and we'll have to take the reminder "like it," 'cause it's the truth.

We're afraid that we'd not make a very good diplomat, especially if we had to deal with the Russians. It's hard for us to get some things straightened out in our minds. First, we can see why Russia would think she has as much right to force her type of government on the Greeks and Turks as we have to force ours upon them. Of course, we contend that they have expressed a desire to have a more democratic type of government. But the fact remains, that whatever our intentions, the purpose of our going in there seems to be to forestall Russia's efforts to get at the Balkans for her own interests which we claim would be a threat to our interests.

Oh, me, you straighten it out, we can't. But current events, give us the impression that respect for agreements is as lax as ever and it sure seems like some of them will turn out to be nothing more than "a scrap of paper." And when one nation begins to take things into her own hands, despite the existence of the United Nations, it looks bad to us.

But then, like we say, we can't make heads or tails of it anyway, and maybe we'd better stick to something that we know more about.

Heard a man saying this morning that to him there's always something sad about a wedding. We're not sure it's sadness, but they sure do step on our emotions and if anybody wants to cry at 'em we can readily join them. Yes sir, we can emote over a wedding as good as anybody.

Phantom Eagles Cause City To Have Traffic Jam

CLEVELAND (UP)—Thousands of homeward-bound citizens missed their buses and muddled the rush-hour traffic jam in Cleveland's public square to stare at the top of the Terminal Tower.

The word spread that "there's an eagle up there"—at the top of the towers, which are on a level of 40th floor of the building. Then it was decided there were two of them, "because eagles always travel in pairs." Vermilion eagles, to boot.

You know what the "eagles" turned out to be? Ventilators, with fin-like appendages.

They've been there for at least 20 years.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Co., reports that in 1946 it handled 7,000,000,000 more calls than in 1945.

DETERMINATION PLUS STRENGTH

Nothing seems to typify the mood of the Moscow Conference better than the tight wartime security that the American delegation is maintaining. Stories from the Soviet capital tell of rigid precautions against spies, heavy military guards, and admonitions to delegation members to keep their mouths shut, avoid telephone conversations, and burn all "trash."

Such behavior at a meeting of victorious and nominally friendly allies might seem cynical. But the situation has gone beyond cynicism. It is a very grim realism that has prompted these American measures, and probably similar measures by the other three powers.

It seems clear from this and other signs that the United States is now going to play the game by Russian rules. President Truman and Secretary Marshall will keep on trying for a just and peaceful solution of international problems. But the fiction of pleasant relations between the American and Soviet governments seems to have been dropped.

Mr. Truman's request for loans to Greece and Turkey is a new step in our diplomacy. It is a direct move against possible Russian expansion.

In other words, the United States is being firm with Russia. That isn't quite the same thing, perhaps, as being tough with Russia. It is rather the declaration of an intent which had only been implied before.

There is only one disturbing thing about this latest move. That is the likelihood that our physical strength is not going to match our new diplomatic firmness. Nor will this be the first time there has been a discrepancy between our words and our potential deeds. At least two previous instances come to mind.

Throughout 1941 the United States government's attitude was one of open, active support of Hitler's enemies and a courageous defiance of Axis threats. The only trouble was that there was practically no military backing for this decent and righteous stand.

On the other hand, this government has seldom been more amiable and conciliatory in the face of controversy than it was at the end of the war, when our military and industrial strength was supreme in the world.

The government now seems intent upon enforcing the territorial status quo in Europe and the Near and Middle East. This will require a strong as well as a determined stand. If the Soviet leaders are to be discouraged from their evident desire to communize and control most of the earth, they will probably have to be convinced that it is utter folly to attempt it.

Something more than strong words will be needed to implant that conviction. And that, along with economy, is something for our congressmen to think about.

The Gal He Wants to Impress

Air Service Feasible For Smaller Cities

HAWTHORNE, Cal. (UP) — Northrop Aircraft Co. has designed a new three-engine passenger-cargo airplane called the Pioneer, for "problem people."

DAN RIVERS SHEETS large size, 81X108" real quality something to be proud of, also pillow cases in two sizes 42X36 and 45X36 same brand - Gordon Dry Goods Co. Gordon, Tex.

Problem people, the company explained, are those who live in smaller cities and towns. Plane makers and airline executives haven't yet been able to bring air service to them.

With equipment now in use, improved airstrips nearly a mile long are needed before a town can have air service, and that size airport is out of the price reach of most smaller communities.

Northrop says its Pioneer will take off in as little as 700 feet, carrying a load of more than five tons, and thus use small unimproved fields obtainable within short distance of almost any small city or town.

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

By Boyce House

Uncle Zeb says, "Why don't other folks stay at home so I can get a hotel room when I travel?"

Sen. Grady Hazlewood of Amarillo proposes a constitutional amendment making House members' terms four years. But the best way to keep officials responsive to the people is to require 'em to go back to the people pretty often.

The Senator's amendment prohibits anything of value for receiving anything of value for voting for or against any legislation. That's against the law now, isn't it—or is it?

His amendment would give each legislator a salary of $4,000 a year and would prohibit a lawmaker from practicing influence before a state department—but apparently a legislator could still take what is sometimes called a "fee" from somebody whose business is affected by proposed legislation.

Getting around over the State. You remember the time about the music goes in here and comes out there? Saw a stove in a filling station in Luling that reminds me of the tune. Three sections of old-fashioned stove pipe are laid one on top of the other and connected by elbows and that heat goes in at one end, wanders all around and comes out at the other. Looks like a Rube Goldberg invention—but it works.

Take the Laughter

by Karen DeWolf

THE STORY: Sherry and Mona had rented a cottage together in one of Hollywood's bungalow courts. Then Mona went off with a married man and Sherry is left alone. Her three best friends are the boys in the cottage at the end—Sandro, who is French and wants to act in the movies; Australian Tony who wants to direct and Danish Kris who hopes to become a producer. Sherry's allowance from home isn't enough to keep the cottage by herself and she tells the boys she'll have to find a job. Sandro thinks he can arrange a meeting with the story editor of his studio.

BY noon the next day Sherry was waiting for Sandro to call. She knew that his company had probably not even broken for lunch yet, but she waited. It wasn't until ten past two that the telephone rung. It was Sandro. He was excited. He said, "But I have seen you! She can be here by three, can you not?"

Sherry got him straightened out. It was Mrs. Dood he had seen and the appointment was for three. Sherry said, "Oh, Sandro, you're a darling!" and binged up the receiver.

By ten minutes to three Sherry was at the studio desk telling the man she had an appointment with Mrs. Dood at 3 o'clock. The man said, "It isn't three yet. Sit down, won't you?"

At one minute to three she went back to the desk. The man acted as if he had not seen her before, and asked her who she wanted to see all over again. Then he called a number and said, "Miss Lynne to see Mrs. Dood," and hung up and gave her a pass.

In a minute Sherry was on the lot. She had never seen a studio lot before. The big lawns were neat and green, and the red-roofed buildings were white in the sun. Sherry looked carefully at the people she passed. You never could tell whom you might see.

Finally she found the building to which she had been directed. A pleasant, gray-haired woman at a desk looked at her pass and spoke into a telephone. Then she clicked a gate and told Sherry to go upstairs. Sherry found the door and knocked.

A SURPRISED voice said, "For heaven's sake, come in." Sherry came in. She said, "Mrs. Dood?" The woman behind the desk said, "No, Mrs. Dood's busy. I'm her secretary. Can I do anything for you?"

Sherry's heart sank. She said, "I had an appointment with Mrs. Dood at 3 o'clock." The woman said, "What about?" Sherry was embarrassed. "About—about a job," she told her. "Reading?"

Sherry said yes, and the woman took a book out of a drawer and said, "Give me your name and telephone number." Sherry did and the secretary wrote it down at the end of a long list of names and telephone numbers headed "Readers."

After a while a door clicked somewhere and a buzzer buzzed at the secretary's desk. She said, "You can go in now." Sherry went in. She meant to say good afternoon very crisply, but it did not come out that way. The office was large and sunny with chintz curtains. Mrs. Dood sat with her back to the window. She looked important but frumpy. She had dark skin and greasy hair and her eyes were a little oriental. She looked at Sherry as though she did not like her and said, "Sit down. My, you're pretty!"

Sherry was surprised. She sat down. Mrs. Dood said, "Sandro's been telling me how very clever you are—that you know books and write lovely poetry. Do you?" Sherry said, "Well, I don't know if it's lovely or not. Some people like it."

The interview was not very businesslike. Some of the woman's questions were purely personal, and Sherry told her things she did not mean to tell her.

Finally Mrs. Dood said, "Has my secretary got your telephone number? Better give it to her." Sherry gave it to her and left. She felt hot and hated herself. She knew she had talked too much and said all the wrong things.

SHE told the boys about the interview at dinner. She did not tell them how she had messed it up though, and she repeated her answers much more cleverly than she had said them.

"Were you very scared?" Kris wanted to know. Sherry said, "Why, not at all." Kris smiled his crooked smile, and Sherry was uncomfortable. He looked as if he knew all about it; what a fool she had made of herself and everything.

When they were through with the dishes Sherry said she thought she would go home, she had a lot of things to do. She thanked Sandro again and kissed him good night. Tony and Kris kissed her on the cheek.

At home she drew up her knees and laid her head against the back of the davenport and closed her eyes. The telephone rang and reluctantly Sherry pulled it to her. She said, "Hello," as though she were a long way off.

Mrs. Dood said, "You weren't asleep, were you?" Sherry sat bolt upright. "No, indeed."

Mrs. Dood laughed. "I hate to think of people relaxing when I'm still working. I spoke to Mr. Henderson about you tonight. Can you start in the morning?" Sherry said, "Yes, I can. Thank you so much."

Mrs. Dood said, "Fine," and then, "Oh, it's forty a week. All right?" Sherry gasped, "Oh, yes," and Mrs. Dood hung up. (To Be Continued)

MELTING ICE CAPS SEEN FLOODING WORLD'S PORTS

By Dan L. Thrapp
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 LONDON (UP)—All the great ports of the world, including New York, are in danger of being flooded in coming ages by the melting of the Greenland and Antarctic ice caps, last remnants of the Glacial Age, a British authority reports.

He is Gerald Seligman, president of the British Glaciological Society. His particular warning to New York is that the famous
 "Time Capsule" buried at the opening of the 1939 World's Fair and supposed to be under 46 or 50 feet of sea water at that time.
 "It has been estimated," he said, "that melting of these ice caps would raise sea level by 60
 feet."
 But before any dikes are built, there is a big "perhaps" in Seligman's theory.

of years, can show whether or not a new glacial age is in the making," he declared. "We haven't taken enough readings yet to warrant dogmatic conclusions, but it seems clear that the climate all over the world, even in England, is becoming milder." Many geologists believe undersea canyons are due indirectly to ice action. Such canyons are the enormous gorge of the Hudson extending out into the continental shelf and others 4,000 feet beneath the sea off Chile, as well as some deeply submerged off Norway, the Pacific Northwest and elsewhere.

According to these scientists, the great glaciers advanced during the past 100,000 years (during a period called the Pleistocene Age) stored sea water in the form of ice and snow. If, as some believe, the glaciers were four or five miles thick at their center (some in the Antarctic and Greenland are two miles thick now), scientists believe it would have lowered sea level by hundreds, perhaps thousands, of feet.

Thus, the off-shore canyons, now completely covered by continental seas, were carved by rivers on what was then dry land. Seligman, whose glaciological society is the only such organization in the world, believes this process was "probable, although other factors were involved also."

He said other factors included probably, action of ice in dredging channels under the sea itself and erosion by ocean currents.

Preacher From Okinawa Solves Traffic Tie-Up

PITTSBURGH (UP)— The Rev. Stewart Robinson, who once directed traffic on Okinawa, jumped to the aid of Pittsburgh motorists when traffic jammed at a downtown intersection.

The signal lights failed to work and traffic was piling up. The preacher took off his coat and proceeded to direct traffic.

Just as things were beginning to resemble normalcy, a police officer arrived and started to haul Robinson off for disorderly conduct.

Robinson said it seemed that "a thousand persons suddenly converged" around them. The crowd cheered the policeman. Finally, the officer heard Robinson's story and released him. The crowd cheered.

Miss Stuart Of Strawn, Mr. Redmon Married Sunday

In a ceremony performed Sunday evening at 7:15 o'clock in the Methodist church at Strawn, Miss Ella Frances Stuart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henry Stuart became the bride of Mr. Thomas Preston Redmon of Raleigh, North Carolina, and son of Mrs. Redmon of that city.

The service was read before an altar banked with palms and greenery among which stood floor baskets filled with white gladioluses and white stock. Four floor candelabra held white candles which lighted the altar. The Rev. C. A. Wilkerson, pastor of the church, officiated.

Preceding the wedding, Mrs. Jack Farmer of Albany, aunt of the bride played as pre-nuptial music at the organ. If I Could Tell You, Stars In My Eyes, Intermezzo and Claire de Lune. The traditional processional and recessional marches were also played by Mrs. Farmer.

Miss Joan Stuart was her sister's maid of honor. She wore an aqua bengaline full length dress and carried an arm bouquet of yellow gladioluses.

Mrs. Jack Matthews of Midland was matron of honor and wore a dress designed the same as Miss Stuart's but of yellow bengaline. Her bouquet was of aqua gladioluses.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a white satin gown designed with tight fitting bodice, fastened down the back with tiny satin covered buttons. The marquisette folds of the satin and the long tight sleeves ended in a point at the wrist. The long full skirt swept into a deep train. Her illusion veil was outlined with imported Chantilly lace and was attached to a lace coronet dotted with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white gladioluses, ranunculus and centered with white camillas. A shower of white satin ribbon and flowers fell from the bouquet.

Mr. Ralph Roberts of Raleigh served the groom as best man and ushers were Messrs. J. R. Stuart, Donald Crawford, Billy Buchanan, all of Strawn and Jack Stuart of Midland.

A reception for members of the families and the bridal party was held immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

When the couple left for a wedding trip the bride wore a blue suit with pink blouse, blue felt hat and black shoes and bag. They will be at home after April 1 in Raleigh.

Mrs. Redmon is a graduate of Strawn High School, attended Texas State College for Women at
