THE BENCHING OF LIPPY LEO

We are shedding no tears for Leo Durocher, who has been given a year's vacation from his duties as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers. It is quite likely that Mr. Durocher will enjoy his sabbatical leave.

After all, he's made good money and maybe has saved something for a rainy day. His pretty new wife—unless California courts decide she isn't—is gainfully employed by the movie people.

Mr. Durocher has always seemed to like Hollywood. Now he has a chance for a long stay there, uninterrupted by the cares and responsibilities of trying to win a National League pennant.

However, the year's suspension which Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler imposed does raise a question. The suspension really amounts to a fine of some $70,000, which is about what the Brooklyn manager would have earned.

The only legal question concerns Mr. Durocher's Texas marriage to Laraine Day in the wake of her California divorce. But Mr. Chandler has prejudged the case and lists Mr. Durocher's marriage and the subsequent publicity among his offenses.

The Dodger manager realizes, of course, that his position makes him a public figure and, without his seeking it, the object of a great many youngsters' admiration. Like all star ball players, he has some responsibility to the kids—though we've never heard of youthful fan's character being warped by a ball player's bad behavior.

It may be recalled that Judge Landis, Mr. Chandler's predecessor, cracked down hard on baseball figures several times. But his actions were for infractions of known rules against gambling, post-season barnstorming, cuffing umpires, and the like.

There is no such pseudo-legality about the Durocher suspension—which may turn out to be more of a blow to the Brooklyn team, its fans, and its pennant hopes, than it is to its manager.

Maybe Mr. Durocher has this penalty coming to him. But if the idea is to prevent rather than punish future misbehavior, it might be well for the heads of organized baseball to huddle with the commissioner and draw up some definite do's and don'ts for the public idols who work for them.

SPORTS

By HARRY GRAYSON NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—That recent story from Pinehurst has already brought action for the amateur, the forgotten man of American golf.

A Detroit Dubs' Club would lead a national movement to give the Royal and Ancient its deserved place at the top of participant sports.

"We are only a few in the country-wide number that must run into the hundreds of thousands," says secretary K. O. Wilson.

The Dubs' Club met with spectacular success, has come to be a golf club not affiliated with any course, yet enjoying all the advantages of a private club, including tournament play.

The rapid rise of the Detroit Dubs' Club has prompted the founders to create the Dubs' Club Association for the formation and development of units in every city in the United States.

The enthusiastic acceptance of the original Dubs' Club is something in the way of assurance that thousands of other dubs are eager to experience organized golf in competitive form.

A national-wide association of clubs operating on a handicap basis under a uniform set of regulations with provision for a National Dubs' Tournament, participants to qualify in regional tournaments, would fill this urgent need.

It's about time something was done for the game's abused step-children.

K. O. Wilson's idea is a knock-out.

With competitive golf introduced and made available to the duffer, the game would rank with bowling as a participant sport.

Four Detroit enthusiasts, forced by their inability financially to become members of a private club and desiring the type of competition found in a league, formed a club of their own appropriately called the Dubs' Club.

Just The Spur He Needed

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—Two days of testimony by Undersecretary of State Will Clayton before Senate and House foreign affairs committees reveal that the Greek government which the United States now proposes to back is all but bankrupt.

Half of it went for food. The other half divided about equally for clothing and medical care, agricultural rehabilitation, industrial reconstruction, and miscellaneous aid. This may have kept millions before the war, but it didn't begin to do the job.

Because of the food shortages, prices soared. The Germans and Italians took about $1 billion out of Greece during the war—half as occupation costs, half as materials not paid for.

The Greeks tried to get by on printing press money. Before the war the Greek drachma was worth a little less than a cent—137 to the dollar. During the war inflation was so bad that in 1944 the government put out a new issue of currency in which one new drachma was exchanged for 50 billion of the old ones.

Today currency is exchanged on the open market at 8000 drachmas to the dollar. That makes one drachma worth one-eighth of one one-thousandth of a cent. In short, the cost of living in Greece is now 100 times as high as it was in 1939.

Wages have gone up 75 times. But even so, the average Greek family's real wages are now only three-fourths of prewar. And even before the war the Greek standard of living was one of the lowest in Europe.

For this year the Greek government income is estimated at $175 million, with expenses of $196 million—a $21 million deficit. The Greek foreign debt is $67 million, over half of it held by Greek-Americans in the United States.

On top of the $354 million of UNRRA aid, the United States has already advanced $181 million and Great Britain $44 million.

It is now proposed to give $350 million more. Fifty million dollars of it will go for direct relief to follow up on the UNRRA shipments ending March 31. Twenty million will be for aid to Greek agriculture. Fifty million is intended as aid for industrial rehabilitation.

For Greek labor to do the reconstruction job and for building materials purchased in Greece, it is estimated another $80 million will be needed.

But still on top of this another $150 million is to be advanced the Greeks to modernize, equip, and train their army.

Add up all this postwar American aid to Greece—the U. S. share of UNRRA, the postwar credits, the new proposals—and the total comes to $731 million. The $350 million they're talking about in Congress now is just relief to cover the next 15 months.

The more you study this picture, the worse it looks. Sen. Bowker Hickenlooper asked Secretary Clayton, "If, after having spent all this money things get no better—then what?"

"We do not contemplate failure," said Clayton. "Fifteen months in this world is a good long time, and a year from now conditions will be better."

The question everyone in Washington is now asking himself is, "What else is there to do?"

XXVIII
MARCIA had moved over to the Chateau, but Sherry did not remember much about those days and nights. They all ran together somehow in a dull, dry hurt. There were telephone messages, and well-meaning counselors from the studio. Funeral parlors sent in bids like contractors on a new building, and described coffins to make them sound cozy and desirable. Some of the other widows, strangers to Sherry, called just to talk about it all, and insurance men appeared with papers to sign. There was an inquest, of course, and Sherry thought, This is horrible. Horrible! Like a three-ring circus. An attorney announced that he was willing to handle her case against the studio, and talked in large sums of money. Sherry said, "Thank you, but I don't want to sue the studio," and hung up on him. The bank sent a man to straighten things out, and Peter's broker came, and a man from the cashier's office at the studio. Sherry listened to them all without hearing, and said, "Thank you." Somehow the funeral was got through with Marcia's help, but Sherry kept thinking, This isn't true. It isn't really happening. I know I'm not thinking straight, but I don't want to realize it. It was that night that she was frightened. She was lying very still in bed, staring at nothing through the darkness. She saw herself and Tony coming up into Hidden House that hot October night so long ago. She felt the thrill of that first real kiss, and how terribly she had loved Tony there in his arms. Suddenly Sherry knew what she was thinking. She sat up. She said, "This is hideous!

Thinking a thing like that now! You're a monster! Your head's not working right," and she buried her face in her hands. Marcia moved in the other bed and Sherry wondered if she had spoken aloud. Marcia said, "We'll pack up here tomorrow, no use of your keeping the apartment. Come over to the court till you decide what you're going to do." Sherry said, "I can't go back there," very dully. Marcia sighed. She said, "All right, we'll hunt up something else." It rained the next day and for days after that. Sherry wrote thank-you letters for flowers and condolences, and gradually people let her alone. Marcia made her do things—shop with her in the drizzle and go out to meals. She took her to business appointments, too, and all the while they were shopping for a place to live. Marcia kept her busy, but Sherry did not mind. She knew her head was not clear, but it was too much effort to try to rise through the fog. Besides, she was getting used to it. Everything was easier like that. When Tony kept popping up, but she could not go on fighting Tony through the fog. Besides, she was tired of his shoulders and the curve of his strong, young arms. When she wanted something done she remembered how dependable he was and how practically he went about things. When other people talked, she knew what Tony would have answered, and what he would have said to this and that. THE day they found the apartment the letter from Sandro came. He was shocked at the accident, and was dear and sympathetic. He praised Peter and lauded his virtues. He went on about how good

Joe Lives Again In Wheelchair

EBENSBURG, Pa. (UP)—Joe McEvoy has some good friends and a new philosophy to bolster his journey through life in a wheelchair. About six years ago, Joe developed a form of arthritis in his left leg. Treatments at three hospitals failed to help and he resigned himself to the life of an invalid. One day two school chums tried to interest Joe in a wheelchair. At first, he rejected their pleas but finally gave in. Now, a year and a half later, patrons at the Ebensburg Bowling Gardens watch a man roll ten-pin balls from a wheelchair almost nightly. His friends take him to dances, parties, and basketball and football games. Last summer he went camping for two weeks. This year he hopes to take in some major league baseball games and to go fishing. As a result, Joe has lost his inferiority complex and self-consciousness. He goes willingly to an office job in an Ebensburg garage. "It makes me feel like living again," Joe said.

Detouring Around Financial Tangles.
 ... has long been a mark and characteristic of the successful man. Young, inexperienced men seldom do and sad to say, few of his older brothers. To avoid many of the pitfalls blocking successful careers, watch investments closely, save something regularly—spend less than you make—and if one deals in real estate, guard against faulty titles. While there may be no set rule that would apply under all circumstances and to all individuals alike, these few fundamentals, if followed, will detour you around many financial tangles.

Disappointed In Love, His Legacy Gladdens Brides Century Later

By Charles D. Nethaway
United Press Staff Correspondent
BATON ROUGE, La. (UP)—
A French bachelor who died more than a century ago is still paying for new babies in West Baton Rouge parish today.

Julien Poydras, frustrated in love in his native France, left a curious will when he died at 80. In it he bequeathed $30,000 to the parish, "the interest of which sum shall be employed to endow the girls of the parish who may happen to get married."

A lot of them happen to get married every year. Poydras, legend says, loved a poor girl. It was his romantic downfall, because French custom rebelled against his marrying a girl who was too poor to provide a marriage dot. Poydras joined the French navy. When he reached New Orleans, some years later, he was flat broke. But he scraped up enough cash to set himself up as a house-to-house peddler of miscellaneous goods. Later, he became one of Louisiana's richest and most influential men. He owned six plantations and more than 1,000 slaves. But he never married. This year, 23 parish brides benefited through the Poydras fund which is administered by a special commission headed by a sheriff. Each got a check for approximately $50. The dowries have amounted to as much as $500, depending on the number of brides who qualify each year.

NEW HIGH SET IN NUMBER OF VET CHECKS

The Veterans Administration set a new high in the number of checks certified in its Dallas Regional Office for April payments and reached a new figure in total amount disbursed, Robert C. Rice, manager, announced today. The finance division approved 91,156 checks totalling $7,986,427. These payments were for veterans' subsistence, pensions, tuition, supplies beneficiary travel, and medical services.

Checks which went out March 1 totaled 78,871 and were more than $1,000,000 under the April 1 payments. The Regional Manager said the gain was especially heavy in monthly subsistence to veterans attending colleges or receiving job training. The regional finance division certified 52,162 checks amounting to $4,412,000. There were 11,589 more individual payments than in the previous month. The Regional Manager in early March set an April 15 goal for no claims pending longer than ten days. As a result of the finance division's work in eliminating the backlog, the manager said the division is virtually on a current basis now.

The finance division estimates it has only about 1,500 awards on which payments can be made. The remainder of awards awaiting payments have been voided or duplicated by payments through some other Regional Office serving an area to which the veteran has transferred. Okinawa, where 35 vessels were sunk and 49 others seriously damaged, was the most costly operation to the U. S. Navy in World War II.

Chicago Horn Blowers Get Courtesy Hint

CHICAGO (UP)—Horn blowers now get tickets—on courtesy—from Chicago traffic policemen. The tickets read: "Be a courteous driver—don't blow your horn—except to save a life." The cards, issued by the Chicago Noise Abatement Commission in co-operation with Police Commissioner John Prendergast, were meant especially for the second man behind a traffic light, who, surveys show, usually blows his horn when the light turns green.

Whiskey For Snake Bite Is Out Says Expert

DALLAS, Tex. (UP)—The old belief that whiskey is a cure for snake bite is disputed by a Texas expert on snakes and their bites. Lawrence Curtis, of Dallas, whose hobby is collecting snakes, says whiskey is harmful when taken in snake bite cases. It causes the heart to beat faster, he says, and that speeds the poison through the system.

A Way To End The Telephone Strike

We did our best to avoid this strike and we're doing our best to get it settled. Agreement on our arbitration offer on wages could be the means of ending the telephone strike.

Wages are the big issue.

The company believes the wages paid its employees are good.

The union says they aren't and wants much more. Their demands total $66,000,000 per year, or an average of $3.00 per month per subscriber.

The company has said, there, "Let's decide by putting it before an impartial board of arbitration and have both sides abide by the decision."

The union has refused.

Acceptance would hasten the end of the strike.

It would get employes back on the payroll.

THE PUBLIC WOULD GET NORMAL TELEPHONE SERVICE.

Radio And X-Ray To Aid In Hunt For Civilization's Hidden Secrets

BERKELEY, Calif. (UP)—If a former Army Air Corps technical officer and professional photographer is right, modern science may be used to locate hidden bones in coming archeological expeditions.

William B. Terry, 27, recently appointed to the staff of the University of California South Africa expedition, explained he believes X-ray photography and the use of radium will disclose hitherto undetected secrets of past civilizations.

The probing light of the X-ray camera may show up the remains of earliest man believed to have been located in a South African cave of limestone.

Dr. Charles Camp, director of the Museum of Paleontology, who appointed Terry, declared that no definite conclusions have been reached and cannot until the experiments are performed with actual limestone from the South African cave believed to contain the earliest man's remains.

Samples of the stone are en route to Berkeley in care of Wendell Phillips, leader of the expedition. Phillips has just finished preliminary arrangements for the expedition's arrival there next summer.

In the roll of photographic of ficer during the war, Terry served on more than a score of bombing missions over Japan and contributed several major photographic developments to the air corps during his service.

He "shot" the only motion picture film recorded of the bombing attack on Hickman Field, Hawaii, Dec. 7, 1941.

He will serve as chief pilot for the expedition, which plans to use airplanes to survey possible fossil deposits.

And, too, we'll bet that it'll be necessary to put on extra operators when service is restored, because people will sure have a lot of telephoning to catch up on.

Your Electric Refrigerator is a Priceless Possession ... Give It Good Care

Your electric refrigerator is built to give long service. Like all equipment, it serves you best if you give it proper care. To help your refrigerator operate better and last longer, here are some timely suggestions:

- Defrost your electric refrigerator regularly—at least once a week in the summer, or when the layer of frost becomes about as thick as a lead pencil.
- Your refrigerator needs breathing space. Be sure there is air space in back of the refrigerator, and over the top.
- Avoid using a knife, ice pick or other sharp instrument to loosen ice trays. You might puncture the freezing coil.
- If your refrigerator has an open type mechanism, it should be oiled according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Should your refrigerator need adjustment or repair, call the dealer from whom it was purchased, or some other reliable service man who is experienced with your make of refrigerator.
