PRICE FIVE CENTS No. 139

All In One Room

Mrs. D. H. Kitoni, 29, pictured with her five children and four brothers and sisters, after the big family, including Mrs. Kitoni's father, Walter J. HUGHES BARRED FROM GOING ON WITNESS STAND

WASHINGTON — Howard Hughes was denied permission today to take the stand and introduce the witness himself that he has asked the committee to call in his defense. But Sen. Homer Ferguson insisted that he could not do this.

The fourth day of hearings got off to a fumbling start this morning. When Ferguson opened the hearing at 10:17 A.M. EST, other Hughes nor his witness were present. Ferguson thereupon called his committee into executive session.

A few moments later the Hollywood plane and movie producer, whose war contracts are being investigated by the committee, sauntered into the hearing room. He found the committee recessed and went to the Senate cafeteria for coffee and eggs. Later four aides showed up and the hearing got underway an hour later.

When Hughes was blocked in his efforts to start talking, Col. E. A. Peterman, a member of a wartime aircraft advisory board, was called.

The Hughes witnesses were expected to testify in support of the planmakers manufacturing "know-how" and to deny charges by witnesses that "high level pressure" was used by Hughes to get orders.

Schools To Close
Dr. G. C. Boswell announced Saturday that all Ranger schools will close Tuesday in observance of Armistice Day, and in order that the students may attend the Cisco-Ranger game at Cisco that afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Hughes Seems Happy
Howard Hughes, center, arrived in Washington where he is to testify before the Senate War Investigating Committee. If there are big problems on his mind at this time, his jovial mood certainly doesn't betray them. (NEA Telephoto).

Congressmen Plan 'Strings' For Foreign Aid Program

EXPECT SOVIET TO WIN SEAT FOR UKRAINE

LAKE SUCCESS — United Nations delegates predicted today that Russia will win its six weeks campaign to seat the Ukraine on the UN Security Council.

The United States and Great Britain have opposed the Ukraine. They favored India for the security council seat which, Poland will vacate Dec. 31.

The UN General Assembly has balloted on the issue, 11 times, but failed to give either the Ukraine or India the two thirds majority needed to elect.

After private meetings on the Soviet - American dispute, several delegates reported that Anglo-American opposition to the Ukraine was relaxing, and that the Ukraine would win. These delegates predicted the deadlock would be broken by the shift of some small powers to the Ukraine.

On the last ballot, the Ukraine received 30 votes and India 25. A shift of five or six votes could decide the issue for the Ukraine.

This would ease the United States and Great Britain out of a tight squeeze, but not force them to back down in their public support of India.

GOVERNMENT GOING INTO CHICKEN BUYING BUSINESS

WASHINGTON — A high food official said today the government is going to buy poultry at above-market prices to prevent a price decline as a result of the plant to end poultry-less Thursdays.

The citizens food committee has called off its poultry-less days, effective immediately, in favor of a "new grain-saving program." But the committee appealed to the public to keep Thursdays "egg-less."

This official, who sat in on recent top policy discussion, said the government's price would be "slightly above" current market prices. The increase, he said, might be as little as one cent a pound.

It was believed the purchase program would be for a limited time to encourage high marketings of chickens now, and yet discourage an increase in future production.

There was no official estimate immediately of the amount of chickens the government might buy. Present plant call for reselling the chickens on the domestic market next spring when supplies of red meat are expected to be short.

The citizens food committee announced the end of "poultry-less" days late yesterday.

VIENNA — High Austrian officials said today that 84 Hungarian soldiers, including one officer surrendered themselves and their arms last night to Austrian border guards at Feldbach.

WOULD FORM CORPORATION TO HANDLE ALL RELIEF

WASHINGTON — Congressional draftsmen of a foreign aid plan have reached agreement on at least a half dozen "strings" which they want tied to any program of assistance for Europe.

The 19-member committee recommended that a new government corporation should be created to administer foreign aid—both stop gap and long-term.

However, the committee made it clear the corporation should impose prerequisites to assistance. Among these were—

1. That recipient countries make "vigorous efforts to increase production of food and other essentials necessary not only for their own requirements but for those of other countries."

2. That these countries take steps to facilitate the interchange of goods and services by doing away with trade barriers.

3. That countries now having access to American supplies and having "the same incentive as we," cooperate to supplement the U. S. aid program.

4. That private enterprise be encouraged to take over the aid activities which the government must now pursue.

5. That recipient countries stabilize their currency and take other fiscal and monetary steps to stem inflation.

Meanwhile, it was learned that some committee members want to include a provision that American aid should not be used to encourage the nationalism of industry in foreign countries.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICE

"Adam and Fallen Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 9.

The Golden Text is: "We were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light" (Ephesians 5:8).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me" (Psalms 138:3).

The Lesson - Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The great truth in the Science of being, that the real man was, is, and ever shall be perfect, is incontrovertible; for if man is the image, reflection, of God, he is neither inverted nor subverted, but upright and God-like" (page 290).

Garden Lore

By Ethel Brooke Gilmore

The garden of China's Empress Ce-ling-she was noted for its great beauty in 2460 B.C. She took great pride in the growth of her mulberry groves.

The fruit of the black mulberry tree is connected with the Manchoo conquerors. All accounts agree that the Manchoo conquerors were descendants of a branch of the family which gave the Kin dynasty to the north of China; and de lieu of any authentic account of their early history, native writers threw a cloud of fable over their origin. These tell that in a remote age three heaven born virgins dwelt beneath the shadow of the Great White mountains, and while they were bathing in a lake which reflected in its bosom the snow-clad peaks which towered above it, a magpie dropped a blood-red mulberry upon the lap of the youngest. This maiden instinctively devoured it, and forthwith conceived and bore a son, whose name they called Ai-sin Ghioro, which being interpreted is the "Golden Family Stem", and which was the name of the emperors of China during modern times.

When Ai-sin Ghioro's mother entered the icy cave of the dead, he embarked on a little boat and floated down the River Hurka until he reached a district occupied by three families who were at war with each other.

The personal appearance of the supernatural youth so impressed these warlike chiefs that they forgot their enmities, and hailed him as their ruler.

The town of O-to-le was chosen as his capital, and from that day his people waxed fat and lived in peace with each other.

Bulbs that should be planted now are, ranunculus, anemone, trans. from Greek, "Windflower", Dutch iris, and peonies a little later.

Shrubs to be planted are, red-leaf barberry, gardenia, nandina, purple sage and hypericum, "Gold Flower."

If your tuberases died down during the drought and are beginning to grow again, before frost cut off the tops a little under the ground, and mound over so as to protect the bulbs.

U S. Farms Are More Mechanized

CHICAGO (UP)—International Harvester Co. reports that the nation's farmers last year bought approximately $800,000,000 worth of farm machinery, not including tractors.

The company said the expenditure was about twice as much as farmers spent annually for such machines from 1935 to 1939. Farmers' cash outlay for new machinery last year, the company said, was slightly more than five per cent of their net income, compared with an outlay of between seven and eight per cent in the 1935-39 period.

The company cited figures from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics showing that farmers now have enough equipment to do about twice as much work by machine as they could before the war.

Prank Proof Rooms Planned By MIT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UP)—A new dormitory containing "prank proof" rooms will be ready for occupancy by Massachusetts Institute of Technology seniors next fall.

Designed by Finnish architect Alvar Aalto, who is a member of the MIT faculty, the structure will have a serpentine, zig-zag appearance so that most rooms may overlook the Charles River.

Single rooms in the building were described as "prank proof" because all furniture except chairs to be built into the walls. There also will be double and triple bed rooms as well as collective living rooms for 353 occupants.

Navy B-29 Will Probe Secrets Of The Universe

CHICAGO (UP)—University of Chicago physicists have equipped a Navy B-29 to climb 40,000 feet to study cosmic rays and the origin of giant atmospheric showers.

Henry Kraybill, an assistant in the cosmic ray research, constructed the complicated scientific apparatus which the planes will carry. It will go on the experimental flights which will reach from Inyokern Field, California, as far south as Panama.

The B-29 was stripped of all of its heavy armament and equipped with supercharged motors. Kraybill's chief problem will be to learn whether all cosmic ray particles are positively charged, as

Earth Slowing But Very Slowly

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. (UP)—The earth is slowing its rotation and the day eventually will be 48 hours long.

The process is a slow one, however, increasing the length of the day about a thousandth of a second every century, General Electric scientists have concluded. It is caused by the braking action of the waters of the earth as they flow by tidal movements over shallow areas. The same affect causes the moon to recede from the earth and thus makes the month longer as well. The maximum effect will come millions of years hence when the day and the month will be the same, equal to about 47 of our present days. Then the earth will always keep the same face toward the moon, just as that body does now toward us.

This Is Happy

By PEGGY DERN

© by Peggy Dern; Distributed by NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Happy Brandon has just gotten a job as secretary to Steve Landers, hard-bitten war correspondent and graduate of Iowa. Steve prefers working in Happy's one-room apartment to his own office. At a cocktail party, Happy meets George Harrell, southern politician and ex-Union farmer. Steve seems jealous when Harrell takes Happy to dinner. But Harrell's interest in Happy appears casual. The next day a number of Happy's friends are having a party in her apartment when the doorbell rings. One of the girls opens the door to an expectantly dressed stranger.

VIII
 "PERHAPS I've got the wrong apartment. I was looking for Miss Brandon," said the man at the door.

"Come on in," invited Grace cheerfully. "She's somewhere about." She turned and yelled loudly. "Hi, Happy, you've got company."

"Surprise! I thought I was all alone," Happy laughed, and then saw George in the doorway and was instantly distressingly conscious of her beat-flushed face, her disheveled curls, her green plastic apron.

"Oh—Mr. Harrell," she stammered, and came toward him. "I wasn't expecting—I mean I thought you were going home today. Do come in."

"I had an appointment that made me miss the early plane," said George. "So I was shifted to the one that leaves at midnight. I tried to get you on the telephone, but was unable to, so I took the chance you might be free for dinner."

His look about the group was apologetic.

"But won't you stay and have—well, it's going to be a buffet, sort of," said George when she had introduced him to the others.

"We'd love having you."

"Of course; do stay," urged the others politely, but their voices hinted plainly that they'd enjoy it a lot better if he didn't.

"Thanks; that's very kind of you, but I couldn't think of intruding. It's been nice meeting you all." George was smooth and polite, and in a few moments he was gone.

"Hi," said Ellen softly when the door had closed behind him and she and Happy were once more in the kitchenette, assuring themselves that the apple pies were heating properly. "Who's the Duke? You've been holding out on me, Hap; I didn't know you knew anybody like that."

"I JUST barely do," Happy admitted. "I met him at a cocktail party and had dinner with him last night. He—oh, Ellen, he's—fascinating!"

"That I can see with half an eye," Ellen assured her. "Only I'm using both eyes. What does Steve think about him?"

Happy bristled indignantly. "What difference does it make what Steve thinks about him?" she protested hotly.

From the doorway a voice said quietly "Did I hear his name mentioned? I'm afraid not to let you know I'm here, because I've never forgotten the old saying—'Eavesdroppers seldom hear any good of themselves,' or words to that effect."

Steve came in, his arms laden with bundles, and put them down on the sink.

"I met the elegant Mr. Harrell on his way out," he offered mildly. "I insisted that he come back and join the party. I even offered to go back and get more beer if he would, but he didn't seem inclined toward partying."

Happy's cheeks hot, avoided his eyes. Ellen, glancing first at one and then the other, found something to call her out of the room and leave them together.

Steve grinned.

"Subtle as anything, Ellen is," he confided. "She's quite sure that you and I are about to start a high old battle royal about the attentions of the elegant Mr. Harrell—and she couldn't be more wrong, could she?"

Happy carved away at the roast turkey and Steve watched her for a moment.

"You like Harrell, don't you, Happy?" he asked at last.

The carving knife slipped and Happy looked up at him.

"Of course I do. I think he's very nice. I had a grand time last night. He told me a lot about his place and Guale, the island."

"Parading his possessions and his ancient history, eh?" There was a faint, not too pleasant edge to his tone, and Happy's eyes blazed.

"That's a tasteful thing to say," she said hotly. "I asked him."

"Of course," said Steve mildly. "For a moment she regarded him almost sternly. And then Steve reached into his pocket, pulled out a folded white handkerchief, shook out the folds, and waved it in silent token of surrender. Happy laughed at him and said helplessly, "Oh, you—" and went back to her carving.

EARLY in January, the buzzer above Happy's door summoned her to the telephone downstairs, and the voice that spoke in her ears was George Harrell's. She was excited, breathless, and her voice shook a little as he identified himself needlessly.

"I came up unexpectedly on a business trip," he explained. "And I thought possibly you might have an evening free and we could do the town."

"I'd like that."

"Then tonight? Or is that too short notice?"

She laughed breathlessly. "Oh, I'm not that popular; I quite often have an evening free without previous arrangement."

"Good!" he said heartily; so heartily that her color deepened. "In an hour, then?"

"An hour," she echoed, and raced upstairs and into her own apartment, so excited that Timmy stirred from his contented slumber and eyed her suspiciously.

Promotion, Pay Go To Sergeant For War Deeds

By William J. Conghlin
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 HONOLULU, T. H. (UP)—Master Sgt. Richard P. Hough, of the 7th Air Force is a persistent man.

His persistency has paid off—$3,000 worth.

Hough was a staff sergeant in the hectic days of 1941 just before the start of the war. He was sent from Hawaii to Clark Field in Manila only a few months before the Japanese unleashed their attacks on Pearl Harbor and the Philippines.

When his outfit was evacuated from the doomed Manila base, he was made a first sergeant and transferred to a unit at Mindanao.

Shortly before the Japanese attack on Mindanao, the officers in his unit were transferred to more useful areas in the South Pacific and Hough soon received orders to surrender his outfit to the Japanese.

40 months behind the barbed wire of prison camps under the eyes and bayonets of Japanese guards cut his group of 80 men to 10 or 12 survivors. Hough was beaten and his teeth were knocked out with the butt of a rifle.

When Sgt. Hough finally returned home in 1945, he knew he had earned that promotion back in the Philippines. But there were no records to prove it and no officers available to vouch for it.

Between hospitalization, he began a two-year campaign to produce the necessary evidence of his promotion. A six week search in Miami last year produced a surviving officer who confirmed Hough's promotion to first sergeant.

With the evidence and a post-interment promotion automatically given all prisoners of the Japanese, he became Master Sergeant Hough.

He received $3,000 due him for back pay.

But that wasn't all of his satisfaction. Master Sgt. Hough read in the papers recently that the two Japanese guards who had knocked his teeth out with their rifle butts had been given 40 years imprisonment each by the war crimes tribunal in Tokyo.

U. S. TRAINING MEN TO MEET POSSIBLE ATOMIC WARFARE

By Ed Bridges
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UP)—If a "push-button" war ever comes, the United States intends to have as many scientists as possible trained to handle atomic energy.

The idea of the harnessed atom as a military weapon still overshadows its use for peaceful purposes.

The training of more scientists in the war-born field will be assured by the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, a sort of atomic college. The institute is actually a non-profit Tennessee corporation.

The institute has just moved into a building provided by the Atomic Energy Commission. Its graduate training program in nuclear research began only last month.

No degrees will be granted by the corporation. Therefore it is not competing with universities. The program is open to any approved graduate school in the nation granting the Ph.D. or equal degree in any of the fields of physics, mathematics, chemistry, biology or engineering.

Only 48 graduate students a year can be accepted. Every applicant is investigated for the institute by the FBI for several months before being passed on.

The program is limited to the performance of thesis research leading to the Ph.D.

The universities already members of the institute are Duke, Emory, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Catholic University of America, Georgia Tech, Louisiana State University, Tulane, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, Alabama, Texas, Virginia and Vanderbilt.

The location of a nuclear research in the southeast is considered vital to the national interest. Recruiting of manpower for such work in the past has been mostly in the northeast and far west.

The institute's acting executive director is Dr. William G. Pollard, young scientist from the University of Tennessee.

Long Skirts Sinful N. Y. Pastor Says

NEW YORK (UP)—The Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker said in a sermon at the Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church that the new-style long skirts were a sinful waste.

"Christian women," he said, "ought to resist this miserable, silly, modern style of dress as true sin—to what purpose these full, flapping, flowing garments now down to their ankles when recently they were up to their knees, because some designer in Paris cracks the whip, when all over the world there are thousands who need that cloth not to make them more alluring, but to keep them warm?"

Poor Park Avenueites Balk At Rent Rise

NEW YORK (UP)—Things are even getting tough on swank Park Avenue.

Tenants of a 15-story apartment at 1070 Park Avenue petitioned the Office of Rent Control not to let the landlord raise their rents.

They said the apartments have not been painted in the last four years; the laundry is in such poor condition laundresses refuse to work in it; the building has direct electric current, which prevents the tenants from having phonographs and television sets, and the landlord had taken down the street canopy.

COLORFUL CAREER

Col. Ray Leeman, who is in midst of his 21st year as executive vice president of the South Texas Chamber of Commerce, is a veteran of both World Wars and a pioneer of the automobile industry.

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

By Boyce House

As Col. Ray Leeman sits, smiling and alert, at his desk in San Antonio, he has at his finger-tips the pulse-beat of an empire. For 20 years, there probably has been no general movement for the advancement of South Texas which has not been launched, or at least, fostered by the South Texas Chamber of Commerce. Leeman aided in founding the 55-county organization in 1927 and has been executive head during its entire history.

Leeman has had a colorful career—veteran of both World Wars, race track driver, poet, pioneer of the automobile industry, civic leader.

He drove in the Glidden Tour, endurance contest for cars over highways (such as they were) and he raced on Oklahoma dirt tracks. His car crashed and a piece of railing was embedded in the driver's hip.

Leeman was born in Dallas in 1888, attended Castle Heights Military Academy in Tennessee and the University of Texas, where he was baritone in the glee club quartet. He became advertising manager for the Overland car, wrote the first full-page ad in auto history, it appeared in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, invaded the Middle West where he launched a new automobile, the Henderson, with such fanfare it marked a publicity "high" in the industry's early annals.

The scene was Indianapolis, the day before the races—in fact, rivals said he practically "stole" the Speedway classic to exploit his new car. Mayor Lou Shank, famed for his fight on the "high cost of living", poured a sack of potatoes over the "prow", then scrawled the name on the hood with a pencil, five feet long. The machine was to be driven into the lobby of a nearby hotel but the designer, at the wheel, caught Leeman's eye and whispered, "I can't start the blankety-blank thing."

Quick-thinking Leeman stepped back into the crowd and yelled, "Wait! Don't start it! Boys, let's roll 'er into the hotel." With a whoop, a dozen men put their shoulders to the car and shoved it down the street. Next day, the papers said the crowd was so enthusiastic, it pushed the new machine in triumph into the hotel lobby.

Leeman enlisted in World War I, attended First Officers' Training Camp at Leon Springs (San Antonio), was a lieutenant and, later, captain in the glorious 90th Division, fighting in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives, then serving in the army of oc-

This Is Happy

By PEGGY DERN

© by Peggy Dern. Distributed by NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Happy Brandon has just written a job as secretary to Steve Landers. Steve was correspondent and graphic artist. Steve prefers working in Happy's one-room office to his own office. At a cocktail party, Happy meets George Harrell, southern aristocrat and gentleman farmer. Steve seems jealous when Harrell takes Happy to dinner. But Harrell is leaving the next day and his interest in Happy appears to be only a passing fancy. Happy gets a phone-call from him saying he's in town on business and asking her for a date that evening.

IX
GEORGE was just as she remembered him, she told herself contentedly when they sat opposite each other at the restaurant table: not spectacularly good-looking, but—nice! Clean-cut, bronzed, healthy; alert; interested and admiring, with the manner that makes a girl feel cherished and sheltered. A very nice feeling, Happy told herself contentedly, for a girl who has never known the real meaning of being sheltered.

It was a memorable evening, and after he had taken her home, she sat for a long time, curled up in her chair, Timmy on her knees, a bewildered look in her eyes. She liked him a lot—a whole lot! But she must be very, very careful, because it couldn't possibly come to anything serious. She must face that and make it a part of her daily living and she thought so that she wouldn't be hurt later. She was quite firm about that. Quite firm!

George lingered on in New York. They were together as often as it could be managed, which was quite often! And then one night George said quite casually, "Oh, by the way, my mother and sister are in town for some shopping and a round of plays. I'd like you to meet them. I'd like them to meet you. May I bring them to call?" Happy sat very still for a moment, her hands clenched tightly in her lap, her heart aching its beat. He wanted her to meet his family! Was that significant of something serious? Or was it just that he liked her a little and thought—

He was smiling at her faintly, a slow, teasing smile that deepened the color in her cheeks. She spoke hurriedly. "Of course, I'd love meeting them. Perhaps Sunday afternoon? I'm free then."

"Good, Sunday afternoon it is, then," said George pleasantly, and went on to talk of other things, while Happy warned herself not to be a fool and read into his casual words meanings that could not possibly exist.

ON Saturday morning, when she had finished taking Steve's dictation, she put down her notebook and pencils and said soberly, "George is bringing his mother and sister to tea tomorrow afternoon."

Steve, relaxed in the deep chair that he had claimed for his own, looked at her sharply. "Oh, ho," he said softly. "Getting a bit serious, is he?"

"No, of course not. It's just that his mother and sister are here—"

"And being the wealthy Harrells, they simply do not know a soul in town, so you are elected to show 'em the sights," said Steve mildly, though the dark look in his eyes had nothing mild about it.

"I suppose it's something like that," she admitted soberly. Steve's eyebrows rose a little and the light in his eyes was quizzical.

"Undoubtedly," he drawled, and suddenly he laughed. "Happy, you are without a doubt the most unconcerned female I have ever seen my good fortune to meet! Look, angel child, hasn't it ever occurred to you that Harrell is getting pretty serious about you? And that his desire to have you meet his mother and sister could very easily be—well, at least the prelude to asking you to become Mrs. George Harrell?"

Her cheeks were like popples and her eyes were wide and startled.

"Oh—don't be a g-goo!" she stammered. "Why, he's—he's not the least tiny bit in love with me. He's just—well, lonely."

"A man as attractive as George Harrell, with all the money he's got, lonesome in New York? Don't be foolish, angel child!" scoffed Steve.

She looked up at Steve humbly. "Will they—like me, do you think?" she asked uneasily.

"THE Harrell women? Probably not," said Steve shortly. "Because women like that, as a usual thing, rate everything in terms of background and never take time out to look beneath the surface. They'll look at you, decide that you are quite pretty, but, after all, what does one know about her family? Who was her father? Her grandfather—"

"Oh, stop it," she burst out, almost in tears. "Steve, I'm scared!"

Steve stood up, obviously angry. He spoke sharply. "Happy, you are a perfectly swell little person. People like—you built this country; people like you keep it going; you're the salt of the earth. And if you let these—these dazzy James get you down, so help me, I'll wallop you! Do you hear me? And now I'm going before I really get mad."

At the door he paused and said, "By the way, don't bother about tea; I'll order things sent over." Then he stalked out and banged the door behind him.

Happy stood for a moment, blinking at the closed door, digesting Steve's unpredictable remarks, his unexpected reaction to the news of the tea party.

She didn't know quite what she had expected Steve to do or say. She flushed a little to realize that at the back of her mind there had been the thought that Steve liked her enough to be jealous of George. But Steve had, with his usual frankness, dispelled any such notion. Far from being jealous of George, Steve seemed to welcome his arrival on the scene.

Aluminum Favored in '48 Automobiles

DETROIT (UP)—Metal experts predict a trend toward wider use of aluminum as a replacement for steel in America's 1948 automobiles.

Kaiser-Frazer Corp. already has announced plans to substitute a seven-pound, 21 gallon aluminum gasoline tank for a 27-pound steel tank of the same capacity. Since its organization in 1945, the Willow Run firm has been carrying out extensive development work in the use of aluminum. With a planned production of 1,500 automobiles a day in 1948 Kaiser-Frazer expects to save 17 tons of scarce steel daily in its gasoline tanks alone.

Other companies also are understood to be working on similar plans. According to trade sources, aluminum is being considered for air cleaners, stone deflectors, head lamp adjuster ring, hub cap, name plates, generator regulator cover, scuff plates for doors and many other parts.

cupation in Germany. He retained his interest in national preparedness, was a reserve officer, taking part in maneuvers each year and, in World War II, was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Back in 1919, just out of the army, Leeman returned to his home town of Mineral Wells. A friend, rich from oil, bought a drug store and gave the veteran a half interest to run it. After a year, they sold out, and Leeman became manager of the Chamber of Commerce there. He gained national recognition by enrolling 600 members and raising $35,000 for an advertising campaign. He burst into verse about the marvelous mineral water—in fact, Leeman writes the rhymes on his Christmas cards and composed a ballad, "The Checkered Flag," about a Speedway racer.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce was going to hold its convention in Mineral Wells so Leeman got busy and an auditorium seating 5,000, was built. A few days before the convention, the city's biggest hotel burned down but all the 50,000 visitors had a place to sleep.

So impressed was the WTCC that the go-getter was made as assistant manager, in charge of the San Antonio office. He conceived the idea of a South Texas organization, helped create it and has been at the helm ever since.

Accomplishments of the STCC are too numerous and well known for mention here—but the record is understandable when one considers the picturesque, achievement-studded background of its sparkplug, Col. Ray Leeman.

Penn Superhighway To Be Extended

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UP)—Pennsylvania's superhighway—a pace-setter in modern road construction—is going to be extended.

Golden Kernels

That isn't gold in that garb, but it might well be. With corn at a record high of $2.45 per bushel, Corinne Lang lets a bag of the precious kernels slide through her fingers at Chicago Board of Trade.

Aerial surveys are under way for extension of the 161-mile, four lane toll road from its present terminus at Middlesex, near Harrisburg, to Philadelphia.

When the preliminary surveys in the east are completed, state highway engineers will start drafting plans to stretch the turnpike from its western end at Irwin to a point between Pittsburgh and the Ohio state line.

 The latest rash of seeking after lost gold mines began some weeks ago, when a New Westminster, B. C. resident chartered a helicopter to fly over the area, apparently looking for landmarks to go with his map.

The Yellowjacket, the old time prospectors said, was also rich in the yellow metal, but historyless. They said its finder merely died of natural causes before he got around to filing a claim.
 Meantime, the three prospecting parties rushed their plans to crowd the Pitt River area with contemporary fortune hunters.

A sign painter here got into the line next. He announced he had a map of the area showing the location of "the" mine. He said he had made some preliminary trips to check a few landmarks, and would make an extensive prospecting trip next year.
 More recently, a local radio engineer said he also had a map of "the" mine plainly marked. He told the United Press he was planning a full scale expedition next summer.

His maps and the sign painter's map, however, didn't quite jibe. That led old timers to remark that there were two lost gold mines in the region—the Golden Sheaf and the Yellowjacket.
 The grizzled ancients said both supposed mother lodes were discovered near the turn of the century. They said the Golden Sheaf, of bloody history, has produced nuggets the size of walnuts.

Prove It Yourself—Inspect Them All!
 Of the world's four largest automobile makers, only Kaiser-Frazer builds genuine postwar cars! The public wants the comfort, safety, styling, roominess and ride that only postwar engineering can achieve. It is this definite demand for something better that has made Kaiser-Frazer one of the "Big 4" in less than two short years. The Kaiser and the Frazer are so new, so different, so directly in line with popular preferences, that they are already the most widely-copied automobiles in the industry. So compare them all! You'll understand why Kaiser-Frazer has made such a spectacular success in so short a time!

Built in a 100%-Postwar Plant
 Willow Run is the only 100% postwar automobile plant! It produces four 100% postwar cars—the Kaiser, the Frazer, the Kaiser Custom and the Frazer Manhattan. Take your choice—in the price range that best fits your pocketbook. Whichever you select, you may be sure, it is a thoroughly modern automobile—embodying all of the vast technical improvements of the war years. These cars need no changes to bring them up-to-date! Think this over before you invest in personal transportation you will want to use for years!

Economical Mass Production
 Kaiser-Frazer cars really have no competition. Many other cars sell in the same price range. But they are not postwar cars. Every product of Willow Run is the result of engineering and design progress made since 1941! And these cars are produced economically. Kaiser-Frazer has, in two years, installed at Willow Run the finest, most efficient, precision mass production equipment available in the world. Much of it was never available before! Many processes have been newly developed by men whose production genius is famous the world around. It was this equipment and this genius that enabled Kaiser-Frazer to break all industry records for its first full year of production—by building more than 125,000 fine automobiles—and selling every one of them!

Investigate Before You Buy!
 If you do not know the many important advantages of fully postwar automobiles, built in a fully postwar plant, read the important items in the box at the left! Here are definite, tangible advantages that mean something to every motor car owner. Then make up your mind to go to your nearest Kaiser-Frazer dealer and inspect and drive these cars before you buy any automobile. It's the only sensible thing to do!

THESE ARE THE FEATURES THAT DISTINGUISH TRULY POSTWAR CARS:

- Improved Design—combines medal-winning beauty of line with such practical advantages as wider seats, greater visibility, and the safety of a lower center of gravity.
- Improved Engineering—that means a new distribution of mass and load; the rear seat set well forward of the rear wheels; better roadability; a higher ratio of horsepower to weight; greater riding comfort and safety; maximum service accessibility.
- Improved Performance—the result of ultra-modern engine design and more horsepower to weight. It means quicker get-away, more rapid acceleration, fatigueloss driving.
- Improved Roominess—Both seats two inches more than five feet wide—comfortable relaxation for six adults; plenty of leg room and head room; extra baggage space!
- Improved Ride—result of placing the passenger load between the front and rear wheels, and lower to the ground. The "soft" springs are controlled by airplane-type shock absorbers. You get a "cradled" ride never known before at any price!
- Improved Safety—result of better visibility (larger windshield and rear window), super-adequate, easy-acting, fully-hydraulic brakes; super-abundant power, finger-tip steering.
- Improved Economy—result of high-compression, 100-horsepower, 6-cylinder, L-head engine, and a low weight-per-horsepower that delivers unbelievable miles per gallon of gas, is miserly in the use of oil.
- Improved Ease of Control—you can drive all day without tiring. Car steers itself on the straight-away; hugs the road on curves!
