Truman Asks For Huge Housing Program

Well... I Dunno, But...

Mrs. A. P. Avery says she has proof that "it's a small world after all." Recently when Mrs. Westbrook of Ranger went down to the Rio Grande Valley for a visit an item about her going appeared in the Ranger Times. Bill and Gertie Mayes who live in Harlingen and who take the Times, saw the item and drove over to see Mrs. Westbrook. Though they missed her, at least the paper served a little added purpose.

In case you didn't know or had forgotten, Bill used to be editor of the Times and went from here to Harlingen.

A passage in poetry that we've always loved and from Westminster Bridge, by Wadsworth as we remember, "Dear God the very houses seem asleep and all that mighty earth is lying still."

LaGene Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bates, had extra reason to celebrate George Washington's birthday Sunday. It was her birthday, too, her sixteenth one.

Mrs. Bates says that once when LaGene was a wee little girl they were going to have a party on the birthday and LaGene insisted that Washington be invited. It was explained that he was no longer here but still not satisfied, she remarked, "Well, but if he's invited he'll have to come won't he?"

We were interested recently in reading a letter clipped from the Daily Texas at the University of Texas and written by David Lee, meson of Ranger, and son of Aubrey Jameson of Ranger.

There's no doubting David Lee's patriotism after reading the letter. The main theme was to regret the mud slinging going on over the National Students Association. Though he didn't say it was communistic, that was inferred and he saw no reason for the organization trying to replace such well founded organizations as the American Association of Universities and Colleges and the American Red Cross.

He handled the subject in a masterly fashion and we glory in his spunk. David Lee is a student at the University of Texas.

If you missed the patriotic program at the Recreation building Sunday night, you missed a good one. That Men's Chorus from Breckenridge is really something to hear, as was the rest of the program.

We particularly liked the way the chorus did the Rosary and Kentucky Babe.

And Harry Taylor told us some things about George Washington that we'd never heard before.

Members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce today expressed their appreciation to the business people of Ranger for the assistance given in putting on the big barbecue at the Tri-County Livestock Show last Saturday.

The boys really appreciated it and my, what barbecue that was! We never tasted better.

GAMES BOOKED FOR WEST, CENTRAL ZONES PLAY-OFF

In a meeting held in Sweetwater Sunday afternoon officials arranged for two games between Wayland College at Plainview and Ranger Junior College to determine the winner of the West and Central zones.

The first game will be Tuesday night at Plainview and the second will be at Ranger. If a third game becomes necessary it will be played at Gorman Saturday night. Officials at the meeting flipped a coin to determine where the first game would be. If the third game is played the two schools will split the proceeds 50-50 after all expenses have been paid.

Winner of this series of games will play the winner of the South and East zones winner.

Those at the meeting Sunday from Wayland were Dr. Marshall, president, Coach Redin, and business manager Hardy. Dr. G. C. Pcswell, G. B. Rush and Coach Boone Yarbrough represented Ranger.

Ranger won the right to go into the play-off by defeating Temple in two games played in Ranger Friday and Saturday nights.

Saturday night Ranger defeated Temple by a score of 52 to 41. Sullivan was high point man with 19 points scored for Ranger and Simms of Temple was high with 9 points. In the second half Caldwell of Temple scored 8 points to run Simms a close second.

Starters for Ranger were forwards, Sullivan, Blitch; center as possible. G. C. Boswell, President, Texas Junior College Athletic Association.

Public Power Bill's Passage Makes Political Whodunit

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—How Eastern Republican congressmen were rallied to change a public power and reclamation bill from the form in which it was wanted by a majority of the Western Congressmen in both parties, makes one of the more intriguing political whodunits of the 80th Congress.

It concerns the so-called Rockwell bill, recently passed by the House, 232 to 120. According to the Bureau of Reclamation, the agency in charge of federal power projects, the bill, as passed by the House, will increase the rates charged for electricity generated at government dams by from 14 to 49 per cent.

The bill was introduced a year ago by Rep. Robert F. Rockwell, Colorado Republican, as an amendment to the Reclamation law of 1939. One main purpose was to give Congress more control over deciding what projects should be started and how carried out. Since 1902, the Secretary of Interior has had this authority.

Both bills went before the House Committee on Public Lands, whose chairman is Richard J. Wells of California. This committee has 11 Easterners, 17 Westerners. After two months' hearings, they worked out a compromise. It was about 80 per cent Lemke bill and 20 per cent Rockwell bill. It increased to 78 years the period in which a project might pay out. It cut the interest rate. These provisions were acceptable to Bureau of Reclamation.

Negotiation was taken on the bill last year. But when Congress came back this year, it got priority. Late in January, the bill was reported to the floor of the House for a vote. On the first two days, advocates of the bill were able to move down all amendments. But attendance was less than 100. Most of them were Westerners and public power advocates. On the last day, however, the Eastern Republicans moved in strong and fixed this the way they wanted it.

A CALIFORNIA Democrat, Alfred J. Elliott of Tulare, who is a ranch operator and admits to being so fed up with Washington bureaucracy that he will not run for re-election, offered an amendment calling for changing the period of amortization on government power projects from 78 to 50 years. The effect is that projects will hereafter have to pay out in this shorter period of time. They will therefore have to charge more for their power. Some projects may even be found uneconomic to build or operate on this basis.

The Elliott amendment carried by a vote of 219 to 182. Republicans from east of the Mississippi voted for the amendment 149 to 20. The reasons for believing this bill will die in the Senate are good. In the first place, the Senate Public Lands Committee is made up entirely of Westerners, eight Republicans and five Democrats. They all know which side of their bread has government gravy on it.

The disastrous season with the professional Chicago Rockets finally has driven Jim Crowley out of football after 30 years. Sleepy Jim is now associated with an import and export firm in Cleveland, where another of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen, Don Miller, is the U. S. district attorney.

In addition to being a member of football's most famed backfield, the Green Bay Packers built one of the game's most-publicized lines—Fordham's Seven Blacks of Granite.

CLEVELAND gets another football luminary this spring when Sam Cordovano, the Georgetown alumnus who coached the Columbia line so long, opens a trotting track in nearby Painesville.

Those closest to the situation believe Paul Brown will be back at Ohio State within two or three years. Meanwhile, however, a Columbus fan asks, "Why should Brown be interested in returning to the Ohio State football team when he has the Ohio State football team coming to him in Cleveland?"

Patsy Healey, long ago a great fighter and for years a prominent New York referee, doubts that Joe Gans could have whipped the letter-perfect Benny Leonard of the second Lew Teller match.

Push-Button Turns Out Axels

DETROIT (UP)—Push-button warfare may be a long way off, but push-button production is here.

A machine tool producer in Detroit has developed a machine with which "even a child," if he's big enough to lift a bar of steel, can make perfect rear axles for automobiles as easily as a highly-trained technician.

You just put a rough-hewn axle in one end, push a button and wait. There is much churning and impressive noise, and presently a completely finished rear axle comes out.

When the operator isn't doing anything else, he can watch a board covered with flashing lights at his elbow. They tell him where the axle is in the production process.

But there is a mass of detail beneath that smooth exterior. Seventeen electric motors develop 175 horsepower to operate 32 cutting tools simultaneously. There are 44 hydraulic cylinders and five miles of wire.

A small river of oil flows through the machine constantly. Some 10,000 gallons circulate hourly to cool and lubricate the moving parts as well as collect metal shavings.

People Hazy On Marshall Plan Survey Reveals

CHICAGO (UP)—A public opinion poll of the Chicago area shows that more than one-fourth of the people who have heard of the Marshall Plan do not know what it is.

The poll was conducted by the Northwestern University psychology department. It showed that 87 per cent of the persons interviewed had heard of the Marshall Plan. But 28 per cent of them—a "surprisingly large number"—

Office Nurse

By Adelaide Humphries

© by Adelaide Humphries. Distributed by NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: Janice Hilary, pretty, efficient young nurse in popular and handsome society doctor Eric Holbrook, runs his office for him. Eileen McRae, one of the secretaries, has been acting strangely of late. She has received several mysterious phone calls and taken time off during office hours several times. At last she confides to Janice that her second husband, whom she ordered out of the house, has actually carried out his frightening threat to kidnap their little girl, Edna Mae. She is afraid to notify the police. Janice thinks of Ben McRae. He will be able to help, if anyone can. She telephones him—knowing he may still be angry with her for breaking their last date without giving any reason.

XIII
WHEN he heard Janice's voice over the phone, Ben thought, "She's calling to see if I'm sore, to see why I haven't come around since she stood me up and got her kid sister to do a stand-in on our date."

Yet he knew that that was only wishful thinking on his part. He knew Jan better than that. She wanted Ben to meet them in a room on Third Avenue, did she say, "You're not mad with me, are you, Ben?"

"I'm not glad," he retorted. "I'll try to explain," she began. "Why he cut short with, 'Why bother? Isn't it a bit late?'"

"I hope it isn't," she answered. "Hurry over, Ben; there's a dear. This is really important."

It turned out to be Ben was a sottie when it came to kids, and added to that, any man would have felt a tug at his heartstrings seeing how that poor young mother looked. She had a beaten look, as though she dared not hope for hope.

He told Mrs. McRae that he couldn't promise anything, but that he would do his best. "I have a pal," Ben said. "He works on a newspaper. He's really good. He has a faculty of ferreting out odd angles. And I promise you, Mrs. McRae, he'll keep it mum."

Eileen McRae seemed to need no more convincing than Ben Agner's word for it. You just knew, looking at him, that Ben played straight and square with everybody.

"All right," Eileen said. "Thank you." Hope had not come back into her eyes, but she could hold up her chin.

"Don't thank me," Ben said gravely. "Ben will find Edna Mae if anyone can." Janice said, "It may take time. But I know you would know how to go about it." She thanked him, too, with her eyes.

BEN thought, That's it—she doesn't know what she can do to a man by just looking at him like that. Of course, her not knowing was what did it. But he would not take her thanks, either, until he had earned them. He was just a shade pleased, though, and compensated, that Janice, as well as that plump little Irish gal, believed in him.

"Keep your chin up," he told Eileen McRae, with his broad, confident grin that would have put heart into the most desolate. "I'll get in touch with you just as soon as I can."

They all walked to the subway entrance where Eileen would tunnel down to catch an uptown express, then Ben walked Janice home.

In front of the house, Janice said, "I'd ask you to come in, Ben, only I—"

"Haven't time," he interrupted. "I'll take enough to run down Ed. He's an elusive guy."

"That's what I meant," Janice replied. "I'll get in touch with you as soon as there's anything to get in touch about." Ben told her, as he had Mrs. McRae.

Janice's eyes thanked him again. She seemed to hesitate a moment. Then she said, "I'm sorry, Ben, about the other night. It was Dr. Holbrook's birthday," she explained. "He asked me, at the last minute, to have dinner with him. You see, Mrs. Holbrook had just left for France, and well, I suppose he felt rather at loose ends."

JANICE had thought this was a reasonable explanation; it sounded, however, like a lame excuse.

Ben accepted it, however. He gave her his wide grin. "Skip it," he advised. "As I said, it's 'water over the dam' now."

"You didn't mind, then?" "Why should I?" His grin broadened, but he felt rather woolly inside. So that was what it was—the doctor she worked for, the guy she was with day in, day out, even after working hours, it appeared. And his wife was in France, which made it all just dandy. Ben would have liked to give the doctor a punch in the jaw. "I'm glad you understand," Janice was saying. Her voice, so warm and vibrant, held relief. Her eyes told him that she had not wanted to hurt him, but that she could not help herself.

Jumping Jupiter! Ben was surprised that that had not come out in a groan, instead of just echoing inside him. She might as well have said, I cannot help it, Ben; that I love someone else. I'm so sorry, truly I am. But there's nothing I can do about it.

Her eyes said it for her. Janice had that kind of eyes, direct and honest. So Ben could not blame her, either. He had no right to, since he was in the same kind of sea-going vessel. He knew that when you loved someone you could not help yourself. You had to sit tight even if the boat went down.

"I understand," he said. (To Be Continued)

States Sales Tax Bites Into The Family Income

CHICAGO (UP)—A state-wide survey based on the average family revealed that Illinois residents would have paid a total of $41 in state sales taxes last year on the basis of $3,000 income to support a family of three.

The survey was drawn up by the Chicago Retail Merchants Association and was offered to the public as a guide in computing their federal income taxes. State sales taxes are deductible on federal income.

Illinois collected $152,529,543 in sales tax last year, one of the highest years since the tax was placed into effect in 1942.

Since Noisy Planes Annoy, U. S. Plans To Make Them Less Noisy

By Charles Cordry
United Press Aviation Writer
WASHINGTON (UP)—The Civil Aeronautics Administration says you shouldn't be bothered by noisy aircraft as much as you used to be.

In the past year there has been "substantial progress" by government and industry on an aircraft noise reduction program. It includes:

1. Revision of traffic patterns at airports to prevent, as much as possible, take-offs, and landings over congested areas.
2. Pilots, especially those of private planes, have been better educated in "safe and courteous flying practices."
3. Federal, state and local enforcement officers have been bearing down hard on low-flying pilots.

Beyond those immediate actions is a long-range, perhaps more significant program aimed at development of a quieter airplane. One method, which the government's National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics has found to have good results with private planes, is to equip them with multibladed propellers.

Such propellers can turn more slowly, hence the noise level is reduced; but they still can absorb as much power from the engine as conventional two-bladed fans.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration says traffic patterns have been rearranged at LaGuardia Field, N.Y., Newark, N. J., Washington, Boston, Rochester, Buffalo, Chicago Municipal Airport, Miami, Fla., Dallas, Denver, San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Ore., and Honolulu.

"Education efforts emphasize that low-flying can provoke local action to restrict all flying and that it frequently results in serious accidents," the agency says.

The extent of low-flying, buzzing and the like is indicated in the administration's report that its southeastern region last November alone handled 24 violations which represented 58 per cent of all civil air regulation violations in the region that month. Three of the violations resulted in crashes, two with fatalities.

Enforcement action is sometimes a matter of co-operation between the Civil Aeronautics Administration and state and local authorities. In the region covering Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Texas, for example, the CAA has aided the first three states in training officers to apply state laws against reckless flyers. The officers lately have made six arrests, obtained four convictions and issued several reprimands. In the agency's first region, with headquarters at New York, more than 300 violation actions have been handled against low-flying or reckless pilots in the last five months.

Mop-Shaking Etiquette Up For Court Test

EASTON, Pa. (UP)—Northampton County Court has been asked to decide whether a housewife has the right to shake her dust mop where she pleases—or whether she must make allowances for her next door neighbor.

The complaint was filed by Dr. Eugene J. Kutry, Bethlehem, Pa. He charged Mrs. Margaret Scarfoss regularly shakes a mop from the side window facing his home and office. Dr. Kutry asked that she shake it on the far side of the house.

In effect, Mrs. Scarfoss answered she'd shake the mop where she pleased. Dr. Kutry said. The physician asked a court injunction causing her to "cease and desist" from further shaking the dust in his direction.

OLD THINGS

They are so easy, the old things. Old shoes, old pipes, old dreams old friends. The smell of forgotten old lavender does things to the heart.

I don't believe in living in the past because life moves on and woe to him who clings to the old too much.

And yet, it is so comforting to go back, in retrospect, in reminiscence. Old clothes feel so good to the body. There is no strain in old things; old books, old leather.

It's good to use old things, of we do not forget the new things. The new is so highly important; new customs, new books, new thoughts, new inventions, new standards. We're living in a world demanding new things: new atoms, new wars?

Old chamois . . . it rubs so softly and cleanly.

Old mores of the people. Well, it's like walking an old, old country road just as the sun goes down. Everything is quiet and peaceful and comfortable. Old shoes slip against the dirt.

But if one keeps walking long enough, a new morning sun shines into the eyes.

Newness will forever meet every human being who treads this earth.

The old has its place, but you can't get away from the new.

If you have any red blood in your veins, you'll welcome the new. You'll run to meet it and you'll help it get born.

For Heaven's sake, get wise to yourself. Kick off those old shoes and get new ones.

You'll stay younger longer . . . and life will be lots more fun!

Times Change

MADISON, Wis. (UP) — Life at the University of Wisconsin has taken on a new aspect, the lost and found department of the student community center reports.

Before the war, most items turned in by the janitor were fraternity pins, rings and pens.

Today, items turned in are baby bottles, toys, bags of groceries and pressure cookers.

Trade Winds are those blowing continually towards the thermal equator and deflected westward by the rotation of the earth.

Footprints, Blood Give Thief Away

NEW YORK (UP) — Detective William A. Jacobs, investigating the burglary of a drug store, found a broken window. Looking away from it in the snow was a trail of footprints.

There were crimson dots in the snow, too. When the footprints ran out the detective had no trouble in following the bloodstains to a door up a stair and to a bed room, where he found Edward Williams, 55, treating a lacerated hand.

Jacobs arrested him and recovered the stolen merchandise.
