Arabs Reply To UN Cease-Fire Plea

Well... I Dunno, But...

The duck feathered kids who've been stewing about the swimming pool opening can stretch their webbed feet, now, because the pool will be opened this summer. The decision to open the pool as usual was reached at the regular meeting of the city commission Tuesday night.

There had been some question about the opening because of the water situation and rumors were flying thick and fast. But those connected with the water department state that the opening of the pool will not menace the water supply.

We thought it enough just to stand and watch with great pleasure and relief, the downpour of rain Tuesday afternoon but we saw one woman that eventually thought more of it than that. She walked leisurely along the sidewalk during the heaviest fall and waded slowly through the torrents along the curb.

Though the rain was heavy it amounted to only .88 of an inch and total fall for the month of May is 1.71 as compared with 2.59 that fell last May. And last May was 4.17 inches under May 1946, there having been 6.76 inches in May '46.

In May 1946 rain fell on ten days of the month. In 1947 it fell on eight days of the month and so far this year it has fallen on five days of the month.

We know better than to predict, but you can't deny the figures.

Twice recently we've noticed after the paper was off the press that the word "there" has been used in stories in place of "their". Honestly we know better.

The vandals have struck again and this time in still another place.

Jimmie Phillips, president of the Ranger Country Club tells us that they recently spent quite a sum for new flags for the greens at the club golf course and less than 24 hours after they were put out one of 'em disappeared, along with 50 feet of garden hose.

Of course, anyone caught with such property is subject to prosecution for theft and anyone caught trespassing on that property is subject to the law. But the point is, that it's pretty discouraging to make an effort to improve such property only to have all efforts blighted by petty thieves.

In the first place, we can't imagine what anybody'd want with a flag from one of the greens. Of course, the hose is a different matter. But useful or not to the thief, the loss to the club is a keen one.

TEXAS DEMOCRATS REPUDIATE LEADERSHIP OF TRUMAN

By United Press

Texas Democrats have repudiated the leadership of President Truman. And all indications are that the Texans have embarked on a warpath of opposition that will end on the floor of the nominating convention at Philadelphia.

Political observers in Brownwood agree that anti-Truman leaders went as far as they could at the state convention yesterday in opposing the domestic policies of the nation's chief executive.

And observers believe that, had they gone stronger, the action may have drawn rebellion from border-line groups. That possibly could have resulted in opposition pro-Truman forces edging into convention control.

Political lieutenants of Governor Beauford Jester saw the convention subscribe to a plainly worded platform opposing the

WILSON OFFERS SETTLEMENT TO WORKERS

By United Press

Wilson and company, the only big four packer which remain strike-bound, has submitted what it calls an "official offer" to CIO packinghouse employees, urging them to return to work.

A letter signed by the company's President Edward Wilson charges that many false and misleading things have been said about the company offer to end the strike. The letter promised strikers the same seniority, vacation and other rights they had before the walk-out March 16th. It guaranteed the nine-cent hourly wage increase for which the union settled with other big four packers.

In Detroit, negotiators for the Chrysler Corporation and CIO Auto workers are scheduled to meet this afternoon in an effort to end the Chrysler strike. Most experts believe yesterday's settlement of the General Motors dispute will provide a basis for ending the Chrysler walkout.

The government is working overtime to plan strategy for heading off a nationwide shipping tie-up June 15th when seamen and longshoremen are scheduled to walk out. The President may be asked to invoke the Taft-Hartley law to ban the strike. Officials charge the walk out would cut supply lines to American troops abroad and to nations receiving American aid.

The White House also is said to aid unions to get together again by urging railroad management to settle their dispute which led to government seizure of the roads.

Gorman Rites To Be Thursday For Frank A. Gray

Funeral services will be conducted at the First Methodist church in Gorman Thursday, May 27, at 2:30 p. m. for T-Sgt. Frank A. Gray, who lost his life August 5, 1944, while serving in the United States Air Corps in Burma, and while flying a wounded British soldier from the front lines to a base hospital.

Interment will be in the cemetery at Comanche following graveside military services by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Comanche.

T-Sgt. Gray was born in Comanche, Oct. 21, 1915. He was the foster son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Capers of Gorman. He finished high school in Gorman and before entering the armed forces of his country in 1942, was associated with Mr. Capers in the theatre business in Gorman.

Bass Lake Park, a small but beautiful park at Gorman, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Capers on which T-Sgt. Gray was making improvements when called to the service, was tendered to the City of Gorman by Mr. and Mrs. Capers as a memorial to their foster son and others who gave their lives in the service of their country in the late World War.

Gorman accepted the gift and through the Gorman Quarterback club has made extensive improvements on the park.

Fed by natural clear water springs, a large swimming pool is one of the major attractions of the park. There are also many lovely native trees and shrubs in the park.

Forever Ample Sundae Too Ample For Her

ST. LOUIS (UP)—A St. Louis drug store whipped up a super ice cream special and christened the king-size the "Forever Ample."

A group of youngsters, well heeled with week-end allowances, ordered eight of the $1 confections.

As the tired fountain girl dug out the last scoop of ice cream and loaded it on the last dish, she announced: "This is forever ample for me, too. I quit."

And she hung up her apron and walked out. (NEA Telephoto)

Missing eighteen days, the body of Miss Florence White, thirty-six, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, was found in this car salvaged from the Piscataqua River near Kittery, Maine. Leg of the victim may be seen in door of vehicle. The car was driven by Charles Parker, forty-five-year-old Navy yard worker when it plunged off the bridge. Parker was thrown clear and miraculously escaped death. He denied that Miss White had been with him in the car. (NEA Telephoto)

By (UP) The formal Arab League reply to the cease-fire order in Palestine has reached United Nations headquarters. Fifteen minutes before expiration of the U-N's cease-fire deadline it still was being de-coded.

But a member of Lebanon's U-N delegation revealed that the Arabs agreed to accept the cease-fire only on three conditions.

All of them were unacceptable to the new Jewish state. First, the Arabs said all recognition of the Jewish State must be revoked.

Second, the Arabs called for a halt in the arming of Haganah, now the official army of Israel.

Third, they demanded limitations of Jewish immigration into Palestine.

When the 11 a. m. Deadline arrived, the Security Council had adjourned for luncheon for two hours. Not until then will delegates officially receive the Arab League reply. It is not certain whether they will plunge immediately into the Palestine problems or continue with a discussion of the India-Pakistan dispute.

The United States, Russia and probably some other members of the council are said to be ready to press for sterner Security Council measures to halt the fighting in Palestine. Security Council discussion of the next step was put off at a morning meeting until the Arab League reply reaches the U-N.

Delegates now have moved to the India-Pakistan dispute and the Czechoslovak case.

Appropriation For Reclamation Is Recommended

WASHINGTON, May 26 (UP)—The House appropriations committee has recommended that Congress vote the reclamation bureau 226 million dollars for work on western water and power projects in the next fiscal year.

The sum is about 18 per cent less than Mr. Truman's request. The committee asked Congress to lay 210 million dollars on the line for project construction. The rest of the money is for administration and maintenance cost.

The committee noted that the bureau probably would have 26 million dollars left over from this fiscal year, bringing the total construction funds available for the 1948 fiscal year to 236 million. During hearings, bureau spokesmen stressed that any left over money, while spent in the next fiscal year, would apply on 1948 fiscal year programs.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

Republicans to Blame if AEC Becomes a Political Football

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Controversy over President Truman's nomination of David E. Lilienthal for a full five-year term as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission has raised some embarrassing political speculation.

The Republican excuse for not wanting to confirm Lilienthal for a five-year term is that it would lead to a bitter fight in the Senate. Trying to figure what that fight might be is a little difficult. No new dirt has been turned up on Lilienthal. Every skeleton in his family closet was dusted off clean in the mud-slinging fight against his original appointment, led by Sen. Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, last year. Lilienthal's No. 1 Republican enemy in the Senate is Robert A. Taft of Ohio. In the original confirmation fight, Taft called Lilienthal "too soft" on issues connected with Soviet Russia. In spite of this, Lilienthal was confirmed, 50-31. The Senate has practically the same membership this year that it had last. The assumption is that a vote this year would not be much different.

THE new factor in the situation is that this is an election year. Senator Taft fancies he might be the next President. The mere thought of having Lilienthal as his AEC chairman would naturally be repugnant to Taft. This may explain why Taft now says the commission should be reappointed for only one year.

On this, many people feel that Taft may be trying to count chickens before he himself is hatched out of the egg. There is plenty of betting around Washington that Taft and Dewey will staminate each other at the Philadelphia convention next month, and that the delegates will then turn to Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan as their first choice.

Instead of supporting Taft on the one-year extended appointments for the Atomic Energy Commission, however, Vandenberg has notified Dr. J. H. Rush, president of the Federation of American Scientists, that he favors a two-year extension for all five commissioners.

Vandenberg's stand is a little hard to explain, however, in the light of his all-important role in writing the original Atomic Energy Act of 1946. He insisted that the Atomic Energy Commission be removed from politics. He took the lead, as much as anyone else, in fighting for Lilienthal's confirmation last year. He worked out the compromises on civilian control that made the act acceptable to the House Republicans who wanted the Army to have full control. He worked out the formula for staggered terms for the commission, to begin next August.

UNDER that formula, President Truman sent up the nominations for Lilienthal to be reappointed for five years, Vice-Chairman Sumner T. Pike for four years, Lewis L. Strauss for three years, William F. Waymack for two years, and Robert F. Bacher for one year. The law says that, as each of these terms expire, a new nomination will be sent up for a full five-year term.

Even this formula is not without political possibilities. If a Republican is elected President this fall, he will get to name four commissioners during his 1949-1953 term in the White House. So what have the Republicans to lose?

On still another political basis Republican opposition to the Truman reappointments does not make sense. Four of the five members are Republicans, anyway. The only real Democrat of the bunch is Lilienthal. And he has let it be known he would resign, if asked to, by a Republican President.

But the real danger of a political fight over these appointments is not what rifts it might make in Senate Republican ranks. If the Atomic Energy Commission itself is now made a political football, its usefulness may be ruined. If that happens, the Republicans will have only themselves to blame.

North-South Victory Ranks Ward With Top Amateurs

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Executive secretary Joseph C. Dey, Jr., of the United States Golf Association had never heard of Harvie Ward until he qualified for the National Amateur last summer.

Then Ward's consecutive 70s over a fine Asheville, N. C., course made Joe Dey curious to see the young man.

And when Dey got a look at the present North Carolina junior at Pebble Beach, he immediately singled him out as one of the country's most promising amateurs.

The better amateurs recognized Ward, now 22, for just what he is when the Tarboro had reached the quarter-finals of the National Amateur of 1947, when he turned out to be one of the last eight of a starting field of 1048.

But it was not until he beat a crack field in the North-South Amateur the other day that Ward attracted national attention, took his rightful place in the headlines with the top hands—Willie Turnesa, Skee Riegel, Bud Ward, Frank Stranahan, Dick Chapman, 2 and 1, Chapman resides at Pinehurst, is an intimate terms with every blade of grass on the number two layout at the North Carolina resort.

In the 36-hole final, Ward had a one-up advantage on Frank Stranahan at the 17th, and held onto it. And the Toledo spark plug heir tours with the professionals.

Ward will take dead aim at this year's National Amateur at the Memphis Country Club, Aug. 30-Sept. 4.

Harvie Ward strengthens Dixie's band in Dixie. He is the newest big name in amateur golf.

Pity The Dromia Dromia-No Sponge To Hide Itself

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—An embarrassed dromia dromia arrived at Steinhart Aquarium here without a sponge to hide it.

When it was put into a tank with some eels and wrasse, it looked around for a sponge, but finding none, it broke off a sea fan and tried to cover itself. It has been clutching fans ever since, and has constantly maneuvered to keep the fan between it and its curious tank-mates.

THEY came out into the busy street and turned idly away from the crowd before the theater, wandering down the Place de l'Opera.
"Hungry—thirsty—want to dance?"
She drew a quivering breath. She wasn't really back to earth again quite yet.
"Not very much."
"Neither do I. At least not for the moment. I know what we'll do." He beckoned a passing taxi. "Get in," he said, holding open the door for her.
She sat back in her corner. The taxi was open, though its hood shielded them from being seen by people in the street. A soft breeze blew her hair back from her forehead.
"Where are we going?"
"Out St. Germaine way is my suggestion. I've told the man we want a drive. We might drop off at the Hotel Henri Quatre and have a drink on the terrace there. It looks right across the Seine to Montmartre."
His arm slid around her. He turned her face around and looked at her.
"I suppose you know, darling, that I'm falling in love with you."
Patience said slowly: "I didn't know." And then: "I thought you were in love with Charlotte."
For answer he drew her closely to him and kissed her long and hard full on the lips.
"That's how much I'm in love with Charlotte," he said.
She drew back from him, her heart racing against her side.
"I thought she was in love with you," she faltered.
He laughed shortly.
"Sure! Head over heels in love with me. That's why she's out with Dwight Breedon at the moment. Why she planned to meet him over here."
"Did she?"

"Of course she did. But we're not driving through the Bois in the moonlight to talk about Charlotte. I want to forget her."
"I see."
He looked at her sharply.
"Just what do you mean by that? In that tone of voice."
"ONLY that you're driving with me in the Bois in the moonlight simply because you want to forget Charlotte."
"I'm not."
"You are. But it's all right. You see, I want to forget Paul. That makes us quits."
"Well, I'll be darned." He drew her to him roughly. "What is all this? Who's Paul? I don't like the sound of his name."
Patience shook her head.
"You don't want to talk about Charlotte. I don't want to talk about Paul."
"That's fair enough." He kissed her again. "Shall we talk about each other? I suppose you know—hang it all, I've just told you—that I'm crazy about you."
"Temporarily."
"Darling, love affairs are always temporary."
"Oh, no," she said sharply. "Not all love affairs."
"I'm afraid so."
"I don't want to think that," but even as she said this she wondered if it were true. There'd been Paul, Paul with whom she thought she'd be in love for all time.
"Don't let's bother about whether we're in love for tonight, a week, a year or a lifetime," Roger said softly. "Let's just enjoy the moment. Don't let's think of anything else. Of tomorrow. Or returning to London."
"Or such a person as Paul."
"Patience, you're so utterly sweet." And he drew her closely to him again and kissed her.

DAWN was breaking over Sacre Coeur when eventually they returned to the hotel. They'd lingered on the terrace of the Henri Quatre watching the lights twinkling over Paris. Then they'd driven slowly back again and found a little night club in the Rue Piquante. They'd had supper and they'd danced and they'd said: "We'll do this again tomorrow and the night after. In fact, every night this week." It was a game they were playing. They kept it up till they said good night. And then they came back to earth. They looked at each other. The night porter dozed sleepily in his little cubby hole.
"Thank you for a lovely evening," said Patience.
"There's still tomorrow morning—"
"I know."
"We're not catching a plane until three." Roger glanced over at the night porter. "I wonder if he's really asleep. The devil, I don't care if he isn't. He caught her to him and kissed her. "Sleep well, darling."
A clock struck the half hour as she went into her room. She looked at her watch. It was even later than she realized. Half-past four!
She undressed and slid into bed. She reached out a hand and switched off her bedside lamp. She'd drawn the curtains apart and now a faint gray light was seeping into the room. Morning. It was here already. She lay very still, sleep evading her, going over the events of the evening. Hearing again all Roger had said to her. Feeling his arms around her. Thinking, "It's Roger now, not Paul." Wondering if she really meant it. Wishing that she did. Hoping that she did. Only, if so, where would it lead her? Roger wasn't seriously in love with her. Whatever he felt for her would only be in passing. He'd as good as said so in the taxi driving around the Bois. All love affairs were temporary. She lay probably very soon be forgetting her. Once they were back in London this was almost certainly what would happen. Besides, there was Charlotte—

FRENCH RETAIN STRATEGIC AREA IN AFRICAN DESERT

Western Allies, With Eye On Future, in Favor of Fezzan "Occupation"

By ROBERT D. GRAFF
 United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS (UP)—Seventeen French soldiers are holding on to a piece of land in the Sahara no bigger than the state of Texas. It has great strategic value in wartime and perhaps hidden oil reserves worth millions below the shifting sands.

The area is known as the Fezzan. It doesn't show on most maps as such, but it is a huge stomach-shaped territory in southern Libya extending up in a narrow corridor to the sea between Tripoli and the eastern border of Tunisia. What makes Fezzan important is that it connects Algeria and Tunisia with French Equatorial Africa. It gives France a solid block of territory between the Mediterranean and ports along the West African coast such as Dakar, Accra and Lagos. It makes a continuous war-time supply line possible. Any oil that might be found beneath the sand would be an added prize.

In 1942, Gen. Jacques Philippe Leclerc's second armored division marched to the Mediterranean from Lake Tchad. En route he occupied the Fezzan. The French have never moved out.

Diplomatic sources close to the French foreign minister say France intends to stay there, even should the rest of Libya be returned to Italy by agreement among the victorious allies. There are many signs pointing that way. The French last month issued an Algerian airmail stamp showing a plane flying over a map of the Fezzan.

The French also have sealed the Fezzan off from the rest of Libya by erecting road blocks on the roads south of Tripoli, which force traffic through Tunisia. French military government in Tunisia currently is responsible for feeding its 17 men and for controlling the tribes in the windswept Fezzan. Naturally, the Arab nationalist movements in North Africa are excited. At Cairo, Arab League headquarters has made a formal protest with the Allied Treaty Commission dealing with disposal of Italian colonies. However, diplomatic sources said the United States and Great Britain, presumably for strategic reasons, are known to favor French possession of the Fezzan. That means, those sources said, that despite any shouting and fuss France probably would end up in possession of the territory it grabbed during the last war. French eyes are less on the last war than on the possibility of the next war and such oasis as Chadames and Anat would provide planes and heavy bombers.
