PRICE FIVE CENTS No. 52

Spy Implicates More Big Officials

Well...
Dunno,
But...

We wouldn't want to scare away any of the spectators at the Saturday night performance of the rodeo, but the buzzy roosters, introduced Friday night as the Ranger Junior Chamber of Commerce Glee Club were promising to sing at the last performance.

In case you didn't know who the songsters were, they're T. C. Werner, Allen Full, Willis Clarke, Jr., Buford Waggoner, and J. S. McDowell.

Their perch was explained this way to us. The boys have been working each night at the rodeo and when they get through and the show would get underway, they wouldn't have any place to sit. So Friday afternoon they just go out and build 'em a seat along the top of the east side of the chutes. That's their own reserved seat with exclusive sitting rights.

We honestly believe that the calf scramble has created more fun than most anything we've seen in a long time. Friday night's performance was a wow.

Charles Wheat wasn't taking any chances with his calf, and when the calf had him nailed to the ground, he just stayed there until he could get a hold and turn the calf over.

It'll be interesting to see the results of the year of care the winners give the calves.

We've missed this little trick but they tell us that "Solo," the cowboy that Ike Tucker rides in grand entry, bows his head when the national anthem is played. Also something else we've missed. When Brown Todd is introduced at the opening of the rodeo, his horse tries to steal part of the show and takes a bow himself. And when Brown puts his hat back on his head, up comes the horse from the bow.

Another one of the rodeo cowgirls that works up in the timekeeper's box is Fannie Mae Cox of Austin who also rides in the barrel race. She's pretty and nice, too.

You know, it's bad enough when we've got a bunch of Russian Communists in the country trying to undo our system of government but when it turns out that some of our own countrymen are helping 'em, it's pretty bad.

We can't understand why a guy would deliberately run his neck out that way, when he knows good and well he's gonna get caught, to say nothing of the disgrace of betraying his own country.

Another of the rodeo followers that's a charming lady is Mrs. Eddie Hovencamp of Fort Worth. She is an adopted Texan having come here this year from New York where she worked for United States Steel.

For one so recently from Wall Street, she speaks the rodeo lingo in a surprisingly natural tone. She doesn't choke on a thing and helped us out Friday night when we didn't know what something was all about.

Some of the local talent that was helping out in the grand entry Friday night, were Banker W. F. Creages and his son, Bill. Bill though young in years and small in stature, sits a horse like a veteran cowboy.

TAFT PROMISES CRACK AT DEMO FILIBUSTER

WASHINGTON, July 31 (UP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O., promised today that an attempt would be made next week to crack the Southern Democratic filibuster against the anti-poll tax bill.

The success of the proposed move depended on a reversal of previous Senate rulings. Southerners were confident that there would be no reversal and that they would win their fight to kill the bill.

Taft wanted to dispose of the measure by mid-week to clear the way for floor action on whatever anti-inflation bill is approved by the Senate banking committee. He also made it clear that the anti-poll tax bill will be shelved if the filibuster cannot be broken by the time the anti-inflation bill is ready.

Taft said yesterday that he hoped the extra session of Congress would be able to adjourn on Aug. 7—just one week from today.

Sen. Richard Russell, D., Ga., said in a radio address last night (adjournment) that in view of this adjournment goal, he didn't think the extra session could reach a vote on any major legislation—civil rights or otherwise.

THIRD SHOW WITNESSED BY PACKED ARENA

Another packed grandstand witnessed the third performance of the Jaycee's World Championship rodeo Friday night and indications were Saturday that the last night would be a sell-out.

John Lindsey was still in the hospital Friday night and was unable to perform. Like Tucker, the other clown and Oral Mann, carried on in Lindsey's absence.

New Activities In Frankell Ghost Town

To the list of "ghost towns" of the old-time oil rush days which are witnessing a revival of oil activities after the lapse of many years, add the name of Frankell.

Frankell, in Stephens County, had a population of several thousand for a brief time and then the boom faded. Now a deep test is to be drilled by the Warren Oil Company on the Claud McCauley tract, three miles northwest of Frankell. The test is to go to the Ellenburger. The location is 660 feet from the north and 1,320 feet from the west line of the Southwest half of Sec. 18, Block 6, T. & P. Survey, to be drilled by rotary to 4,500 feet.

Recently, a test just east of the one-time great Pioneer pool was announced and three efforts to strike deeper production around Desdemona, scene of a great rush in 1919 and 1920, will be made and Leary, regarded as "played out" for many years, now has two new deep producers in the old town site and others nearby.

The finding of deeper pays and acidization of formations which refused to yield back in the days when the acid treatment was unknown are chief factors in the comeback which old area are making.

Alfred Krupp Is Sentenced To 12 Years Today

NUERNBERG, July 31, (UP)—Alfred Krupp was sentenced today to 12 years imprisonment and confiscation of all his property at the war crimes trials.

Earlier Krupp, head of the giant Krupp munitions combine, and five other Krupp executives were found guilty today of plundering French and Dutch factories in the wake of conquering Nazi armies.

Four of the 12 Krupp executives on trial were acquitted. Two were not charged with plundering. All 12 face another judgment later today on charges of using slave labor in Krupp plants.

Sentences are expected to be pronounced after the second judgment is read.

Krupp, 41, had been sole owner of the $175,000,000,000 munitions combine since 1931.

U. S. To Insist On Complete German Unity

ERLIN, July 31, (UP)—Gen. Lucius Clay said today that the United States insists on the complete economic and political unity of Germany, "with all facilities available to all of Germany," as a general condition for a four-power conference.

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—Southern Pacific Railroad officials announced here that whistles on their diesel-powered trains had been classified as a "nudge." The railroad line had received many complaints from South Houston residents that the shrill blasts had almost knocked them out of bed.

WASHINGTON, August 1, (UP)—Elizabeth T. Bentley, confessed Communist spy, today named former assistant secretary of the Treasury Harry D. White as a member of an espionage group that fed secret information to her during the war.

She also named Laughlin Currie, former administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, as another who provided information which she transmitted to the Russians.

Miss Bentley bought White's name into a hearing before the House Un-American activities committee. She said he was part of a group of Government employees headed by Nathan Gregory Silvermaster, who was "probably an agent of NKVD," the Russian Secret Police.

The Silvermaster group, she said, collected information for her. She made trips from New York to Washington every two weeks or so to pick up what they had to offer.

White headed the monetary research division of the Treasury, and was a member of the Silvermaster group, she said. But she added—

"I don't know whether Mr. White was a card-carrying Communist."

Miss Bentley explained that she collected information from two separate groups of government employees. The other group, she said, was headed by Victor Perlo. The committee said he had been employed in the War Production Board during the war.

"He was in the position of handling aircraft production figures for me because he had ready access to those," Miss Bentley said.

"Did he supply you with those figures," committee council Robert Stripling asked.

She said that the Perlo group was "actually an ex-Communist group set up in Washington in the early 30s." She said that she took it over in March, 1944.

When she got to Currie's name in her testimony she stressed that this man was not a Communist but one "who gave me information."

Yesterday, the New England-born former Soviet espionage agent told the Senate investigators that in 1944 a man on the White House staff had informed her that this government had "about broken the Russian code." She said that when she transmitted this information "the Russians became very excited and wanted to know which code."

Currie's name was brought into the House hearing as Miss Bentley named person after person as being a Communist or supplying information to the espionage group while employed by the Federal Government.

As Miss Bentley made her allegations, the House Un-American Activities Committee asked for a "Blue Ribbon" Federal Grand Jury investigation here into Communist activities in the government. Chairman J. Parnell Thomas said the request will be made immediately to the U. S. Attorney for the District of Columbia.

He would not disclose the nature of the diplomats' conversations which were held last night. He disclosed that American Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith saw Valerian A. Zorin, Deputy Soviet foreign minister at 6 p.m. French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau visited Zorin on hour later, and two British representatives called on him at 10 p. m.

Scribes, Pharisees Offer Lesson Today

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
IN the gospel story of the life and teaching of Jesus there are many references to the Scribes and Pharisees.

Who were these Scribes and Pharisees, whom Jesus often criticized so harshly and whom He found so lacking in sincerity and loyalty? They were the successors of those who had played a fine and honorable part in the history of Israel in the four centuries following the return of the Jewish exiles from Babylon and preceding the coming of Jesus.

There were among them still noble and earnest men like Nicodemus (John 3), and Gamaliel (Acts 5). But power and authority, in religion as in other spheres of life, is subject to the temptation of abuse and pride. What was originally fine had become, in many at least, debased and corrupted.

THE Scribes were the lawyers of the Jewish community, but as such they were much more than the lawyers of today. Every reader of the Old Testament knows how great a part the Torah, or the law, represented in the life of Israel. The law was religious as well as political and social, and the Scribe is described as being something of preacher, scholar, lawyer and magistrate. This is what made the role of the Scribe so great and important.

But the Pharisees, also, had historic and spiritual greatness. They had been the party of strict observance, seeking to maintain the integrity and purity of their religion. In the struggle against conquerors who sought to pervert and corrupt Jewish worship with idolatrous conceptions and practices, the Pharisees had borne severe persecution. As many as 800 of them were crucified in a single day.

Why, then, did Scribes and Pharisees fall under the criticism of Jesus? It was because so many Scribes had become formalists, concerned about the letter, but neglecting the spirit of the law. Law, when it is law and nothing more, ceases to be protection against injustice and a furtherance of liberty and becomes a curse rather than a blessing.

Also in many Pharisees the zeal that had once been for racial and religious purity had become a matter of spiritual pride and the despising of others. "They trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others." Thus it was that a Pharisee, praying humbly for God's mercy upon him as a sinner, stood in noble contrast to the proud Pharisee, telling God how good he was. The lesson of it all ought to be obvious for everyone who would be truly religious.

of public health involved. Many towns have ordinances against such a practice and unless some other medium can be used to stop it in Ranger, we favor such a law.

Civic pride is something else involved. When we ourselves feel like wretching as we have to walk through such, we just wonder what strangers think of the fifth.

Area OIL News

EASTLAND COUNTY-Eastland

Jess Day of Pampa, formerly of Eastland, having read of the oil activity in this area, drove down first of the week for a few days and while here leased his 170 acre farm, located four and a half miles west of Carbon, for oil development. Incidentally this lease is not far distance from a wildcat well now being drilled.

George Hlulkey and J. C. Cook of Fort Worth were recent visitors to the oil fields in the Eastland area, stopping at the Connellee Hotel.

Charles Wampler and his brother, "Bugs" Wampler, drilling contractors of Longview, were recent business visitors in Eastland. The brothers are the drillers on the Killingworth well in the Killen pool northwest of Eastland.

Some have ventured the opinion that this is the tight type of formation which might respond better to an acid treatment, then a shooting with about 250 quarts of nitro and then a recalcidation. However no official comment is available as to just what treatment the company intends giving to the well.

TAXPAYERS' AVIATION BILL $7,000,000,000 THIS YEAR

By CHARLES CONROY, United Press Aviation Writer WASHINGTON (UP)—You're living in the air age, all right, and it's costing you plenty.

The government will spend $7,000,000,000 on aviation activities in the fiscal year just started.

That means roughly 20 per cent of the total federal budget is earmarked for military and civil aviation. Probably no other category of expenditures can match that figure, save, of course, the larger one of general national defense, in which aviation would be the biggest item.

The Camera Doesn't Lie—and This Show Opens Your Eyes! "MOM and DAD"

The European recovery program for example is slated to cost $4,000,000,000 in the same 12-month period which is slightly less than the Air Force budget alone.

Here is a table of estimated aviation outlays by federal agencies in fiscal 1949:

Arabs Demand UN Stop This

Some 600 Jews, first immigrants to get visas from the new state of Israel, start the long journey to the Holy Land from Munich, Germany, with friends and relatives waving farewell. Immigration is one of the chief bones of contention facing the UN as it attempts to work out a peace settlement during the truce. The Arabs demand a complete cessation of immigration while the truce goes on, but Israelis are certain to resume fighting if immigration stops. (Photo by NEA-Acme staff correspondent Gerhard Seining.)

Air Force (total budget)	$4,981,911,000
Navy Bureau of Aeronautics	1,338,000,000
Air National Guard	55,000,000
Veterans Administration (estimated cost of GI flight training)	200,000,000
Post Office for foreign and domestic air mail (expected to be regrouped in stamp sales)	58,583,000
Coast Guard	10,783,000
Civil Aeronautics Administration	149,370,000
Civil Aeronautics Board	3,450,000
National Advisory Committee Aeronautics	66,105,000
Weather Bureau	9,195,345
State Department	4,385,000
Total	$6,876,672,345

In addition to the figures in the survey, it is estimated that $500,000,000 or more will be spent by private sources, and state and local governments in the aviation field in fiscal 1949.

The civilian portion of the federal aviation budget is a very small part of the whole.

Of the total prospective outlays, $2,823,100,000 will go into military aircraft, guided missiles, electronics equipment, instruments and related aircraft items. The Air Force and Navy will spend $335,000,000 more on aeronautical research and development and most of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics budget will be devoted to military research.

In the Navy figures it should be noted, money for carrier operations, salaries and food, is not included, since such funds do not come from the Bureau of Aeronautic portion of the Navy budget.

Aside from GI flight training, the cost of which is estimated from Budget Bureau figures of last February, the largest civilian part of the federal air budget will be spent by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

That agency's major outlays will be $40,000,000 on airport building and improvement, $22,099,000 to establish new air navigation facilities, $62,000,000 to maintain present facilities, $11,000,000 on enforcement of air safety regulations, and $4,000,000 in administrative expenses.

The Weather Bureau will spend $4,135,345 directly on aviation activities and estimates that another $5,000,000 worth of its general services to the public should be assigned to aviation.

most abstractors were wondering where the next order would come from. Then came the gradual rise in the price of petroleum products, release of more building materials, and increased inflation which swelled the price of lands out of all reason. These factors and others contributed greatly to the demand for title work. But thru good times and bad—for more than 25 years—we have never thought it wise to sacrifice quality for quantity. WAR-LIKE TRAINING OF SOVIET YOUTH PUSHED

By WALTER KOLARZ
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (UP) — Official Soviet sources have disclosed plans for the systematic semimilitary education of Soviet youth.

The education will be carried out by three new all-union voluntary societies for assisting army, air force and navy, DOSARM, DOSAV and DOSFLOT.

The foundation of the organizations was announced on May 28 in a communique of three lines. The organizations since have charted their tasks and started the membership recruiting campaign. They are working with the support of the Communist Youth League and the Soviet Trade

The All-Union Voluntary Society for Assisting the Airforce—DOSAV — whose chief is General M. F. Kammin is working for the "revival of mass aviation sport." It set itself the task of opening air clubs and glider and parachute clubs in all bigger industrial centers and in towns of provincial and district importance.

Gen. Kammin said the DOSAV will also organize competitions for pilots, speed trails for light aircraft and rallies and competitions for model aircraft fans. It also plans the reintroduction of medals and insignia for record achievements.

DOSAV also will carry out a great deal of ideological work and boost the Soviet Union as the country of a highly developed aircraft, industry and of 62 international records established by Soviet aviators.

DOSARM, the voluntary society to assist the army, also announcing an ambitious program. DOSARM is about to organize clubs in industrial undertakings and on collective and state farms.

The primary task of DOSARM, working under the supreme direction of Col. Gen. Kuanetsov, will be "to see to it that its young members enter the army not merely with a knowledge of the foundations of warfare but with the technical skill of a telegraphist, telephonist, and driver of motor cars."

DOSARM proposes to set up a net work of rifle clubs and shooting ranges throughout the Soviet Union. Its immediate aim is to hold a series of rifle competitions and sniper's meetings in August. The DOSARM program further provides for the extension of the amateur radio movement and the encouragement of the country's motoring clubs.

Comparatively little was made known of future activities of the third organization, DOSFLOT, headed by Admiral A. A. Nikolayev.

Nikolayev said DOSFLOT will "bring up sailors in the spirit of devotion to the motherland and to the cause of Lenin, Stalin and Soviet patriotism." Its practical task will consist in organizing water sports and naval competitions.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday, August 1.

The Golden Text is: "We have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him" (I John 4:13).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is God: and everyone that is born of God, and knoweth God" (I John 4:7).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mortals believe in a finite personal God, while God is infinite Love, which must be unlimited" (page 312).

XXV
Jessica took her purchases to the kitchen and found Betsy perched on a chair beside the table with an apron tied about her neck and a smudge of flour on the end of her snub nose.

"I'm helping," she said proudly, displaying a grubby bit of dough. "For Daddy." She indicated the pan beside her.

Jessica tossed the bag of groceries on the table and swept Betsy off the chair. "You'll be sick," she scolded. "It's time for your nap." She swept a sobbing Betsy from the room.

Would this day never end and the next pass so that she could get away and leave behind this feeling of uncertainty and apprehension? Nothing could happen now to change her plans, nothing should, she determined, as she stripped clothes from a weeping baby.

"We're going away," she whispered coaxingly.

Betsy said, "Don't want to go away," and wailed and refused to be comforted.

In Jessica's thoughts she anticipated the day when she could divorce Betsy from the subtle influence which her grandmother exercised upon her. "Daddy"—just a word to Betsy, which would soon be forgotten, but which in the meantime could annoy and irritate Jessica to the point of hysteria.

SATURDAY was a busy day with last-minute preparations. Lucy went off with a hurried explanation that she had a date with some girls at the Y. Jessica was too absorbed in her own plans to have any interest in the other girls, but before Lucy left Jessica drew her inside her room and said good-bye.

Thanked her for her kindnesses and then, as a last-minute thought, "Try to make Tom understand, Lucy."

"Tom will never understand," said Lucy bitterly.

There were tears in Lucy's eyes as she turned and left the room hastily.

For the rest of the day Jessica tried to recapture the high spirits of the day when her father's letter came. She was going home, she assured herself. She remembered how she had longed for this moment, and now it was here.

Mrs. Blake showed no interest in her movements. She seemed lost in thoughts of her own, slipping in and out of the house, prowling up and downstairs, in and out of Lucy's room. Later, refusing to eat her supper, going off again in spite of Jessica's remark that a storm seemed imminent.

Finally the old house was quiet except for the wind outside which shook the house and rattled the shutters. When Jessica went to bed a cold moon rode high in the sky. Against it the skeleton branches of trees stretched black and bare and writhed in the wind. Wind. It made her nervous and kept her wide-awake for hours. Then she dozed, and awoke startled by a sharp peal of thunder.

Down the hall a door swung shut with a bang. Rain lashed the windows. Jessica grabbed a robe and went out into the hall and listened.

Had Mrs. Blake come home?

She tiptoed down the hall past Lucy's door, which stood ajar, and opened her mother-in-law's door and peeped inside.

A flash of lightning revealed the bed smooth and unoccupied. The curtains blew straight out and Jessica crossed the room to close the window.

A sound arose above the roar of the wind and the slashing rain. The siren, high and shrill. A wild wail carried on the wind. The fire siren, repeating over and over, its blast of warning.

FIRE! Jessica leaned out of the window, with the rain and wind tearing at her hair as she listened. Fire! Was Mrs. Blake out in this storm and would she rush off to the fire when she heard the siren?

Surely not. She must have been caught in the storm and spent the night with friends.

She wished Lucy were at home. Jessica closed the window and looped back the soaking curtains. Lucy would be out in the storm, too. Possibly there were shelters for hikers in the hills beyond Akron.

She returned to her own room to find Betsy sitting up, frightened and sobbing. Jessica lifted her out of her crib and into her own bed where they snuggled down close together.

"Just a storm, darling," she told the baby.

Through the closed window she heard the siren again, faint but shrill and persistent. Again she slid out of bed and went to the window and lifted it. The rain had ceased. The air was damp and chill. In the distance bells clanged and cars swept down the street. The blackness of the night was pierced by a dull glow on the horizon and against it the bare trees were silhouetted darkly.

Fire, a bad one. Where was Mrs. Blake? thought Jessica uneasily.

Lights sprang up in Doris' bungalow across the way and she saw Doris and her husband standing together on the steps.

She ran downstairs, clutching her robe about her, opened the front door and called, "Where's the fire?"

Doris pointed toward the glow. "Way downtown," she shouted.

Silly to worry about a woman who had an obsession for fire, but now she could understand Lucy's uneasiness for her mother. Mrs. Blake meant nothing to her, and yet . . .

I'll make hot coffee, Jessica decided. She'll be drenched if she comes back.

If she comes back. Her own words terrified her. Why shouldn't she come back? What could happen to her?

Ancient Egypt Had Horoscopes

CAIRO (UP)—An ancient Egyptian horoscope dating back to 1286 B. C., or 3,254 years ago, has been sent for reading at an orientalist's conference in Paris.

The horoscope is written in a papyrus scroll eight yards long and seven inches wide. It was translated by Dr. Abdul Bakir.

The papyrus in the form of a calendar, tells ancient Egyptians that each day of the year is favorable for certain actions. It also lists things that should not be done on certain days. The scribe likewise seemed to know the length of every day of the year.

The names of the months are identical with those of the Coptic calendar, still in use among Egyptian farmers.

Although a 12-month calendar was in use at the time, the author of the papyrus added a thirteenth. That means to archaeologists that the ancient Egyptians found it necessary to add one month every few years.

The calendar lists the Nile flood festival, which is still celebrated every year, and is known as the Cutting of the Khalig.

Homesick Cat Returns After 400-Mile Hike

LEOMINSTER, Mass. (UP)—A homesick cat walked more than 400 miles in a month and returned here footsore and travelworn.

Year-old Pluffy, an angora, deserted the trailer of the Ben Hausberry family at Buffalo, N. Y., while they were en route to a new home at Moses Lake, Wash.

The provincial-minded pussy padded up to the back door of their former home, where neighbors found him mewing sadly.

Arrangements were made to forward him to the Hausberrys by air after a rest cure.
