Well...
I Dunno,
But...

After a number of years of hard work and hammering on the part of the Chamber of Commerce, a rebuilt Caddo-Ranger road is in the making and to our way of thinking this is one of the most important things that has happened to Ranger in a long time.

Not only does it give a fine highway into a valuable trade territory but it's a highway through some very pretty country. And we heard yesterday that the highway will make Ranger closer to Possum Kingdom lake in some points than it is to Breckenridge. It also runs through some of the oldest ranching country in this section.

The road is being made wider, concrete bridges are being put in and a hard surface topping will be put on it. Steep hills have been cut down as much as ten feet.

Yes sir, that's a progressive step for Ranger.

We still think the thermometer was wrong. Yesterday wasn't the hottest day of the season despite the fact that everybody seemed to be betting that it was. The maximum temperature was only 98, one degree less than the season's high.

Some of the Jaycees were a little downhearted this morning and you can't blame them. Dr. Carl Straley and Howard Oliver, making the rounds of business houses today to solicit float entries for the Jaycees' rodeo parade, were met at every turn by the same answer - "We don't have time."

Anything that is worth while requires time and time that might be put in somewhere else, but when an opportunity presents itself the time to take advantage of that opportunity is right then. A float in the Jaycee parade is an opportunity for every merchant and business person in Ranger to get in one of the best plugs possible for their business. Thousands of people witness that parade and while the person that doesn't have time to enter a float will not be missed a float certainly will be noticed if it is there.

Besides that anything that means as much to Ranger as the Jaycee rodeo has come to mean, certainly deserves the cooperation of everybody. Every business in Ranger profits from the rodeo and the crowds that it brings here. The rodeo gives Ranger more publicity than any other thing the town does. It is a civic institution now and something that belongs to everybody.

So be sure you say a flat "no" to entering a float, rider or anything in the rodeo parade, remember what the rodeo means to you, your town and your business. Bands that have accepted invitations to come to the parade from out of town could have said that they didn't have time. The sheriff's posse from Parker and Palo Pinto counties could have said that they didn't have time and as a matter of fact, the cowboys and cowgirls that make the rodeo could have something else to do. And then where would your rodeo be.

Yes sir, it's up to us the same as the Jaycees to make this rodeo parade click.

Correction

It was called to the attention of the Times today that a statement in a story appearing in the Sunday edition was in error.

The article stated that Johnnie Boyd of Fort Worth was a former member of the Second Baptist Church when as a matter of fact he was pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church which at one time conducted services in the building known as the Second Baptist Church.

The Times is glad to make this correction.

Jaycees To Meet

A business meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the Gholson Hotel.

Gov. Beauford H. Jester Dies In Sleep Today

English Strike Situation Worse

LONDON, July 11 (UP)—Ten thousand dock workers definitely voted today to continue their wildcat strike and the labor government immediately asked King George to declare a state of emergency.

The Cabinet, in emergency session at 10 Downing Street, acted promptly on receiving word of the strikers' vote. It had warned the dockers on Friday that it would seek emergency powers to deal with the strike if they refused to go back to work today.

Plans already prepared by the Cabinet were approved and sent to Buckingham Palace. King George VI, who hurried home from a weekend at Windsor Castle, called a Privy Council meeting for 12:20 P. M. (5:30 A. M. EDT).

Globe Wireless said coast guard stations were in communication with the Kulukundis and were sending help.

The vessel gave its latitude as 34.40 north and its longitude as 120.38 west.

A Dutch ship, the S. S. Lawar, acknowledged the SOS, Globe said, and Coast Guard stations and ships in the vicinity of Los Angeles were in touch with the ship.

The Coast Guard at Point Arguello said the weather was foggy.

The Kulukundis is believed to be sailing under the Greek flag.

King Declares Emergency State

LONDON, July 11 (UP)—King George proclaimed a state of emergency today, giving the government sweeping power over the strike-bound docks of London.

The emergency powers, permitting the government to take over the docks regardless of union agreements, were expected to become effective at midnight and continue for at least a week.

The Cabinet asked the King to approve the powers immediately after more than 10,000 dockers decided at a mass meeting to continue their unofficial walkout in sympathy with striking Canadian Seamen.

United Press Staff Correspondent

By the time he was 39, he was Dean of the Senate from the standpoint of service.

Priest Dies Of Brain Injuries

NEW ORLEANS, July 11 (UP)—A 68-year-old priest, member of an order which is devoted to work among negroes, died last night of a skull fracture caused by a bludgeoning he received from a "psychopathic" negro longshoreman.

The Rev. John F. Neifert, priest of the order of St. Joseph, underwent an operation Saturday to relieve pressure from the fracture, but he failed to rally.

Death came to the priest at 10 P. M. in Hotel Dieu Hospital here last night.

The aged priest was beaten early Friday morning with a 10-pound cargo hook as he knelt at prayer in the Holy Redeemer church. Police were holding Frank Bates, 42-year-old negro, who confessed the beating and asked for penance.

They described Bates as a "psychopathic" case.

The church was locked for 24 hours following the bloodshed, according to Catholic Canon, and was reconsecrated Saturday by other priests of the St. Joseph order.

ECONOMISTS FEAR BRITISH STERLING BLOC TUMBLING

LONDON, July 11 (UP)—Some of Europe's economists feared today that Britain's sterling bloc is tottering on the brink of dissolution.

A communique issued by the finance minister of the United States, Britain and Canada at the end of a three-day conference yesterday appeared to sound the death knell of the sterling bloc as it now operates.

Russians Cut Berlin Traffic

BERLIN, July 11 (UP)—The Russians arbitrarily cut Western truck traffic into Berlin by 80 per cent today and forced postponement of a four-power meeting called to discuss the city's economic plight.

Soviet authorities closed all border crossings between Western Germany and the Soviet zone except that on the Helmsstedt-Berlin Super-Highway. There they used every ruse to slow traffic to four trucks an hour.

By 10 A. M., more than 100 big trailer trucks most of them carrying vegetables, fish and other perishable foods for Western Berlin, were lined up at the Helmsstedt check point under a broiling sun.

American and British officials said they took a grave view of the situation. Both have filed verbal and written protests with the Russians, charging that the maneuvers violate the blockade-lift agreement.

BODY FOUND BY PULLMAN PORTER WHO HAD GONE TO A WAKEN HIM

Burleson Asks POW Relief

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 19—Congressman Omar Burleson today called upon President Truman to take immediate steps to pass into effect the law recently put by Congress which will give relief to those veterans who were prisoners of war, the payment of compensation for which is to come from former enemy assets impounded by this Country on the Delegation of War.

Congressman Burleson told the President that he had a number of former prisoners of war veterans in his District who were entitled to receive such funds, and that he hoped the President would find it feasible to set up the machinery provided in the law to make payment to those veterans.

Congressman Burleson stated that under existing legislation, the compensation allowed to any veteran - or if deceased, to his next of kin - would be at the rate of $1.00 for each day he was held as a prisoner of war on which the enemy failed to furnish him adequate food, as provided under the terms of the Geneva Convention of June 27, 1929.

"Certainly, in my opinion," said the Congressman, "I can imagine no better purpose for which enemy assets could be used than for such compensation to those who suffered as prisoners at the hands of the enemy."

Body Being Returned By Plane To Austin; Rites Pending Arrival There

BY PAUL ROSENFELD
UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT
HOUSTON, Tex. July 11 (UP)—Gov. Beauford Jester, tired and fatigued from the punishing pace of the longest legislative session in history, died of a heart attack today alone and unattended in a Pullman berth.

The 56-year-old governor, reportedly en route to Galveston for a medical check-up and a few days of rest and quiet apparently died in his sleep.

His body was found at 7:30 A. M. by Charley Jimerson, a Pullman porter, after the train arrived here at the Southern Pacific Railroad Station.

The late governor will be succeeded as the State's Chief executive by Lt. Gov. Allan Shivers, one of the youngest men in history to take over the reins of state.

Shivers, 41, was at his East Texas farm near Woodville in Tyler County when word of the governor's death was flashed to him by telephone.

The governor's death, Shivers said, was undoubtedly due to "his deep devotion to duty."

The body was being temporarily held at a Houston Funeral home, pending arrival there of members of his staff and a completion of funeral arrangements.

The governor's increasing weariness had been a cause of growing concern to his staff.

However, he shook off the leaden fatigue yesterday long enough to play softball and lead a sing-song among members of his family and office staff.

He spent his last care-free hours swimming and relaxing with his 10-year-old son, Beauford, Jr., and about 20 members of his staff.

The group had gone to Lake Travis, where the governor swam for about an hour, took a boat ride and then capped the afternoon with a softball game and a sing-song.

The party boarded the boat to return to Austin about 8 P. M.

Gov. Beauford Jester, the 37th governor of Texas, was the first in the history of the state to die while still in office.

Gov. Pendleton Murrah, serving between 1863 and 1865, died during his term. However, for reasons of personal safety, he left the state and went to Mexico during the civil war. At the time of his death, Fletcher S. Stockdale was serving as provision governor of Texas.

However, he ate very little of the evening meal, and about 9:30, shortly before reaching home, he complained of being "very tired."

He returned to the mansion at 10 P. M., and left little more than an hour later for Houston.

As word of the Governor's death reached Austin, the state flag was lowered to half-staff.

A dozen white carnations, decked with white ribbon and green fern, were hung on the locked doors of the Governor's office.

The governor's body was found when the porter attempted to call him at his scheduled hour.

The body of the 56-year-old governor was found at 7:30 A. M. by a Pullman porter, Charley Jimerson, while the train was docked at the Southern Pacific Railroad Station.

Dr. Howard L. Evans, summoned to the empty coach to make an examination of the governor's pajama clad body, said Gov. Jester had died of coronary occlusion. Dr. Evans explained that a blood clot had struck the governor's heart, and that he must have

Rancher May Buy Cleveland Nine

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 11 (UP)—reports that a Millionaire Colorado Rancher was dickering to buy the world champion Cleveland Indians were confirmed here today by Del Webb, Co-Owner of the New York Yankees.

Webb said he would talk with Dan Thornton, who also is a Colorado State Senator, today and arrange "an in person" meeting with Bill Veck, President of the American League Club, or Hank Greenberg, the team's vice president.

Thornton wired him Saturday to help arrange a meeting with either Veck or Greenberg, Webb said last night.

Webb said he talked with Thornton about a possible deal to buy the Indians in Denver two weeks ago.

The Phoenix contractor emphasized that he was not a "go-between" in a possible sale but was only acting as a friend.

Webb talked with Greenberg by telephone yesterday.

Bodies Of Two Found In Bayou

HOUSTON, Tex., July 11 (UP)—Identification still had not been established today for two men whose bodies were found floating in Buffalo Bayou yesterday.

A man tentatively identified as Elmer Lee Edinburg, 38, was found floating in the turning basin by a tugboat captain, M. R. Martin. Later, khaki pants were found on the bank near the spot where the body was sighted. Papers bore Edinburg's name.

The other victim, a man between 50 and 60, was discovered by Ben Correa, who approached the stream to hunt for a lost ball. The body was partly-clothed, police said, but lacked identifying papers.

DISABLED VET WATCHES HELPLESSLY AS WIFE SHOT

MADISON, Wis., July 11 (UP)—A paralyzed veteran of World War I said today that he watched helplessly as a middle-aged carpenter killed the veteran's wife because she spurned his love.

Mrs. Sadie Jackson, 45, an attractive and vivacious roadhouse waitress, was shot to death outside a delicatessen where her husband, Julius, 50, waited for her in the car.

Jackson named George King, 44-year-old carpenter, as his wife's assailant.

King, a widower, was captured early today at a road block six miles south of here as he headed out of town in his son-in-law's car.

He was booked on suspicion of murder but denied Jackson's charges. He claimed that Mrs. Jackson had wrested the .25 caliber pistol from him and shot herself, according to Assistant District Attorney William McCusker.

However, Jackson's version of the shooting was corroborated by a passer-by, Arthur Fetterhoff, and other witnesses.

Jackson said that King had been

"pestering" his wife to go out with him. They met some time ago when King did carpentry work at the roadhouse where she worked to support her husband and herself.

Saturday evening, Jackson said King waited outside their house and accosted Mrs. Jackson when they came out to go to their car. He said they quarreled and King left.

Jackson said he was seated in his car, waiting for his wife to finish shopping about 8 P. M. yesterday, when King drove up in his son-in-law's car.

King got into the Jackson car, sliding into the driver's seat.

"He started to tell me a story about my wife running around with other men," Jackson said. "I told him I didn't believe a word of it and ordered him out of the car."

"Just then my wife came out of the car but turned to Mrs. Jackson and said:

"I'll teach you a lesson. You've been running around with too many men."

Then, Jackson said, King pulled the pistol from his pocket and shot her.

Mrs. Jackson, struck twice in the chest, dropped her packages, whirled half about and staggered back into the store as King leaped in his car and drove away. She died in the store a few moments later.

Jackson said he was helpless to prevent the shooting because his condition prevents him from moving swiftly.

Jester Cont'd

died instantly. He fixed the time of death as between 3 and 4 A.M. Justice of the Peace Tom Maes returned an inquest verdict of death due to natural causes, and the body was removed to the Houston Funeral Home.

The porter said he went to awaken the governor as instructed at 7:30 A.M. He said he called softly, and then shook Jester gently when his eyes remained closed.

Jimerson hurriedly called the pullman conductor, C. D. Pierce of Houston, who immediately asked for one of the governor's bodyguards, Patrolman W. B. Hawkins. Hawkins told reporters he felt no pulse beat and knew the governor was dead. He called police.

Gov. Jester left Austin before midnight last night, accompanied by a bodyguard of State Highway Patrolmen. He was to spend several days here and in Galveston on a vacation, and to complete what he called a "Secret Mission."

Jester was named to the Executive Board of the National Governor's Conference at its recent meeting at Colorado Springs, Colo. The board is comprised of nine governors. He acted as chairman in 1948 of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission.

The flag of Texas was lowered to half-staff at the capitol following notification of Jester's death. Jester was a leader in the fight to retain states' title to the tidelands, and although espousing President Truman's civil rights program, insisted that the social changes should be worked out by the states.

The pullman car had been completely emptied earlier in the morning, and none of the hundreds of persons milling about the railroad station knew that the governor was dead.

Conductor Pierce, who said he had often had the Governor as a passenger, said Gov. Jester got on the train shortly before 11:25 P.M. last night in Austin. He went directly to lower berth number 5 on the pullman Berkley, leaving instructions about his being awakened.

The Texas Chief Executive then retired without further word, and it was presumed by pullman attendants that he was resting comfortably.

At Austin, the governor's office said railroad officials described Jester's death as being from "natural causes."

The governor, a spokesman said had taken a boat ride on Lake Austin yesterday with his family and staff.

At that time, it was reported, Jester, "complained of being tired."

Jester a week ago had suffered an attack of food poisoning and was confined to the mansion for most of the day.

Saturday he worked during the day on legislation piled up on his desk as a result of the 51st Legislature's final adjournment.

The governor's office said Jester was found at about 7:45 A.M. Maj. Gen. K. L. Berry, Adjutant General, was standing by with a plane, a C-47, waiting to return Jester's body to Austin.

Mrs. Jester, a spokesman at the governor's mansion said, was "too stunned yet to know anything." She had not been downstairs since she was notified of the governor's death.

With Mrs. Jester at the mansion were two of the three children, Beauford, Jr., and Joan. Jester entered public life in 1943, when he defeated 10 opponents to win a place on the State Railroad Commission. He had remained a state official since that time.

When he became Governor of Texas, in January, 1947, he was following in the footsteps of his father, George T. Jester, who served as Lieutenant Governor of the State from 1894 to 1898.

Jester was born at the family home in Corsicana, on January 12, 1893. He always considered that his home. His mother, Mrs. Frances Gordon Jester, still lives there.

After graduation from Corsicana High School, Jester attended the University of Texas, where he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1916. He entered the University Law School, but World War I began one year later and he entered first officers training camp at Leon Springs, Tex. He served overseas as an infantry captain with the 90th Division, until its demobilization.

A National Guard Plane left for Houston to return the governor's body to Austin shortly after 11:30 A.M.

The plane was to return later today, with the body being accompanied by Adjutant General K. L. Berry.

The body will lie in state from 10 A.M. until 2 P.M. tomorrow in the Senate Chamber at the capitol. Brief funeral services will be held at 2 P.M. and the body will then be taken to Corsicana where services will be held on Wednesday.

AUSTIN, Tex., July 11 (UP)—Gov. Beauford Jester shook a sudden fatigue yesterday long enough to play softball with members of his staff, the Governor's office said today.

Jester, with his 16-year old son, Beauford, Jr., and about 20 members of the governor's staff, went to Lake Travis.

They took a mid-afternoon swim. Jester swam for about an hour. Jester and his party then took a boat ride for about an hour on a boat owned by Judge C. R. Starnes.

The party stopped at about 5:30 P.M. for sandwiches. Later, Jester and his staff members played softball about an hour. Bill Youngblood, a member of the Governor's staff, said Jester "apparently felt fine."

Jester and his party reboarded the boat and ate about 8 P.M., Youngblood said. The governor led a sing-song.

However, Youngblood said, Jester ate very little of the late meal, and said that about 9:30 P.M., he complained of being "very tired."

Jester returned to the mansion about 10 P.M. and later boarded the train for Houston.

The governor's noticeable fatigue, resulting from constant pressure and work during the longest legislative session in the history of Texas, had caused a growing concern among his staff.

Last Wednesday, the day the 51st session adjourned, the governor stood for several hours smiling, shaking hands and speaking with several hundred persons at an informal reception in his office.

As porters cleaned up after the reception, the guests gone, the governor settled himself on a corner divan and continued work with an aide.

Mrs. Jester came by the governor to tell him she was returning to the mansion, and ask if he was able to leave.

The governor stayed on, dictating wires and signing correspondence.

It was then after 7 P.M. The governor's one desire apparently was to get away from his telephone and constant office conferences.

On Saturday, an office aide had confirmed that reservations had been made for his trip to Galveston.

However, the governor was told "there might be a reception when you get there."

It was explained that the word apparently got out when the reservations had been made.

The governor shook his head. "I don't want that," he remarked.

And then he added wryly, "well, there's one other place I know where I might be able to get away (from office routine). Perhaps I ought to go there."

WOODVILLE, Tex., July 11 (UP)—Lieut. Gov. Allan Shivers, who will take over the Texas government within the next few days, left his ranch here today to rush to Austin to offer his services to the family of the late Gov. Jester.

Shivers said he had been informed of the governor's sudden death by telephone, and that he was "too shocked to know exactly what to do next."

The Shivers family had been vacationing at the ranch five miles north of here since the 51st Texas Legislature adjourned last Wednesday.

The Lieutenant Governor said he had no idea that Gov. Jester was in dangerous physical condition.

"Gov. Jester was sick last weekend, but he dismissed the trouble as a severe case of ptomaine poisoning," Shivers stated.

"Just before I left the capitol last Thursday, he was talking with me about plans. He said he was going with his family for a good, long rest."

The Governor's death, said Shivers, was undoubtedly due to "his deep devotion to duty."

Shivers, talking with the office of the governor by phone, said he would leave at 12 noon for Austin, and would arrive at the capitol city by mid-afternoon.

The governor's office quoted Shivers as saying he had no immediate plans for taking the oath of office as governor.
