NINE RESCUED AIRMEN BACK HOME IN FT. WORTH

BY PUD DIXON
United Press Staff Correspondent FOR WORTH, Tex., Feb. 18 (UP)—Nine grinning B-36 Airmen—parachute survivors of their abandoned Superbomber off the British Columbia coast—puttered happily around their homes today after a dramatic return here by air.

Their arrival aboard a four-engine C-54 Transport at Carswell Air Force Field last night bore in itself a touch of drama reminiscent of that which sent them balling out of their crippled B-36, when three of its six engines were knocked out.

One engine of the C-54 was dead when it touched down at 10:32 P. M. (CST) and taxied down the ramp toward a joyful group of wives and relatives. The outboard engine was halted over Albuquerque, N. M., because of an oil leak.

"We paid no attention to the one propeller being feathered," said the airmen, and their waiting wives didn't fear of the incident until the ship came in for a landing.

It was a tense moment when the ship rolled to a halt before a battery of portable floodlamps lighting the ramp to daytime brilliance. The anxious band of some 50 wives, children, relatives had past guards.

They waited nervously while a loading ramp was put in place. T-Sgt. Martin B. Stephens, 39, gunner from Houston, Tex., was first to rush down the ramp and into the arms of his wife, who Wednesday learned three times her husband was alive, and then was told an equal number of times he was still missing.

"Oh darling, you're safe . . . you're safe. Thank God," she cried as she hugged her husband. The dark-haired, slender wife of Capt. Harold L. Barry, 30, pilot of the B-36, was near tears. Her lips trembled, but she managed a big smile as they embraced.

Nothing was said for several minutes. The happy airmen kissed and re-kissed their wives. Then turned—lipstick-smudged—to newsmen and photographers.

The youngest member of the B-36 crew—Corp. Richard J. Schuler, 22, radio mechanic from Miami, Fla.—was the only one who had no one present to greet him.

The touse-haired Schuler admitted he had a girl friend in Miami, and said that "while there's no one here to meet me, it's a wonderful feeling to be back."

Stevens was asked if he was going to keep on flying. "I sure am," he replied.

"Oh, don't say that," his blonde wife exclaimed with a weak smile.

The exuberent airmen were in good spirits and appeared in fine physical condition although tired as they stood with their wives' arms about them.

The group sobbed when asked about their five fellow crewmen still missing on Princess Royal Island.

"We're hoping they find them, but I'm beginning to wonder," said Lt. Roy R. Darrab, 29, observer from Martin's Ferry, O.

CLAIM PLOT TO OVERTHROW STALIN HALTED

BERLIN, Feb. 18 (UP)—The American-licensed anti-Communist newspaper Der Abend said today that Russian leaders had smashed a plot to overthrow the Moscow regime of Premier Josef Stalin.

The newspaper attributed its report to "circles associated with the Soviet control commission in Germany." Nothing of the kind was reported in any other source. Unofficial quarters observed only that such a story might have propaganda value.

For what it was worth, the newspaper said the plot involved more than 200 "high" persons. Its discovery, Der Abend said, prompted the Russians to reinstate the death penalty for spies and saboteurs.

The newspaper said the aim of the plot was to establish a Russian Republic with Leningrad as its capital. Leningrad was said to have been the headquarters of the plotters.

Der Abend said a Marshal Golorol, suspended from his post as commander of the Leningrad military district in 1936, was the leading figure. It said the plotters included members of the political directorate of the Soviet Army, officials of the state security ministry, and other Communist party and state officials.

"Experts on the Soviet Union attribute the resistance movement to the fact that responsible officials have realized that wartime promises that the Soviet people gradually would attain a higher standard of living have turned out to be nothing but lies," the newspaper said.

"They feared that the expansion policies of the Stalin-Malenkov clique would bring the Soviet Union dangerously close to war."

Der Abend said the plotters were arrested, the plot collapsed, and its discovery led to "a secret purge action."

ONE OF TWO MOTORMEN FACES MANSLAUGHTER

By DAVID C. WHITNEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N. Y., Feb. 18 (UP)—Twenty-six men and two women died in the Telescoped Coaches of a head-on electric train collision last night and today one of the two motormen was charged with manslaughter.

Three of 116 injured in a disaster that involved approximately 1,000 passengers, were in such critical condition in hospitals that doctors all but despaired for their lives. Their deaths would make the final death toll 31.

The wreck involved commuter trains of the Long Island railroad.

District Attorney Frank Gullotta of Nassau county filed second degree manslaughter charges against motorman Jacob Kiefer. Gullotta said Kiefer ran his train onto a single track already occupied by another train going in the opposite direction, despite the warning of a red signal light.

After an all-night search, police finally located the second motorman, J. W. Markin, at his home and took him to the local station for questioning. Like Kiefer he was suffering from shock but beyond bruises did not appear to be injured.

Seventy-eight victims were in hospitals; many will be there for months. One man lost both legs—they had to be amputated before he could be removed from the wreckage.

Two men lost one leg each. Still another man had most of his throat destroyed and was breathing through a tube.

These were the severely injured. Thirty-eight others were treated for less serious wounds, either at the hospital or at a medical center set up at the wreck scene, and taken home. Ordinarily many would have been hospitalized but hospital space was at a premium.

The some 856 other passengers escaped with bruises or unscathed. Gullotta announced, soon after he inspected the wreckage: "I'm interested only in criminal negligence." Kiefer's arrest followed five hours later.

Markin was not taken to the police station until 7:45 A. M. He had been "missing" during the night and at one point the police had "assumed" him dead in the wreckage.

It turned out that he had been treated for severe shock on the scene and told to go home. He did and police found him there when they sent a man to check.

Makin was a pathetic sight. He wobbled unsteadily on his legs. His arms trembled. His eyes seemed glazed. He was taken into an inner room and at 8:05 A. M., police bundled him back into a police car and took him home. His condition, they said, did not permit questioning.

The wreck was the type immortalized in the common expression of satire, "what a way to run a railroad."

Two trains running in opposite directions on a single track collided head-on.

Public Invited To Hear Broadcast

The public is invited to tune in on the Breckenridge radio station Sunday afternoon to hear a gospel broadcast of thirty minutes of song and sermon. The Rev. W. Lee Messinger of the First Baptist Church at Caddo will conduct the service. The minister stated that he will be glad to receive cards and letters from all who hear the broadcast.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand" (Isaiah 14:24). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "There can be but one Mind, because there is but one God; and if mortals claimed no other Mind and accepted no other, sin would be unknown" (page 469).

Pleads Guilty To Spy Charges

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 18 (UP)—Robert E. Vogeler, a New York businessman, pleaded guilty today to spying against the Hungarian government for the U. S. Army Intelligence Service.

Vogeler said his job as Assistant Vice President and Eastern European Manager of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company of New York was "actually only a cover for my espionage work."

The American admitted the government's charge that he had been an American agent since 1942. After the war, he said, he was assigned to Hungary to collect.

The minister stated that he will be glad to receive cards and letters from all who hear the broadcast.

It was the first time in the history of Eastern European spy trials that an American citizen followed fully the pattern of confession established by the Great Soviet purge trials of the middle 1930's.

Asked by Judge Vilmos Olthy if he pleaded guilty, Vogeler replied "yes" in a firm voice which could be clearly understood throughout the packed courtroom where he is being tried of espionage charges with six other persons.

Three of Vogeler's co-defendants had been taking a heavy toll of deer around Lake City before one finally turned the tables. A well-antlered buck dashed through residents' yards, down main streets and across a railroad track to a logical goal, the game sanctuary.

ants pleaded guilty yesterday when the trial opened, Vogeler was the fourth to make his plea. He was charged in a Hungarian government indictment with being a spy "since 1942."

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

Christian Conduct: Ancient and Modern

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.

SOME acute problems of conduct and relationship soon arose among the early Christians. It is well to study them carefully, and the ways in which Saint Paul and other leaders in the church met them, for the same problems in some form or other have been present among church members in every generation since the church began, and they are still acute among Christians.

Some of these problems arose from human perverseness, or frailty, which the new experience had not conquered; others arose from the strength and intensity of the convictions of those who thought that all others ought to see things in the same way that they did, and act as they did. Such Christians were very critical, and even harsh in their judgments, when these others did not submit themselves to their demands.

THE problems were many and varied, as they related to different persons and situations, as a careful reading of Paul's Epistles, as also of John's and Peter's, will show. But three main problems were emphasized, two of which are still very evident in our own time.

The first arose from Jewish converts, who continued to observe certain rites and obligations of Judaism, and who thought that Gentile converts ought to come under the same rule. This meant virtually that one had to become a Jew to become a Christian, and against this Paul, an intense Jew, set himself with great firmness. It comes out in the controversy over circumcision, and other matters.

Meat that had been offered to idols was sold in the butcher shops, or in what corresponded to them in that day. Some Christians considered the idol as nothing, but the meat as good food, and ate it in good conscience. Others thought that to eat anything that had been offered to idols was an offense against their Christian faith. There were other problems of conduct involving direct moral issues, as some thought, strangely, that they could be Christians and still engage in the licentious practices of their pagan environment. But the chief issue regarding Christian freedom arose about the meat offered to idols.

The third outstanding problem centered around social and economic status, just as such problems center today. Among these early Christians were some who were very poor, and some who were masters and there were slaves, and the New Testament book of Philemon discusses the problem about them. James had to rebuke those who had too much regard for the man with the gold ring (James 2:2). Other passages show how acute this problem of class, wealth, and poverty quickly became.

How did the church leaders meet these problems? First of all, by an insistence upon Christian love as the Christian's supreme obligation. John rebuked the disciples for their lack of brotherly love. Then, by an insistence that the Christians must observe Christ's command, "Judge not." And third, by an assertion of the rights of Christian conscience and freedom. It is a large subject, but what Paul has to say about it in his Epistles is still good doctrine, and good practical counsel for today.

Ranger Victor In Central Zone

DEFEATS CISCO TO WIN BERTH IN FINALS

In a comparatively easy game played Friday night at Cisco, Ranger Junior College won the second of the series of playoff games between the two teams to win the right to represent the central zone in the state playoff in basketball.

The playoff series was scheduled when Cisco and Ranger tied for first place honors in the zone. Ranger had defeated Cisco Thursday night by the narrow margin of 48 to 46 but increased that margin Friday night when they won 39 to 33.

Cisco took an early lead in the game when they won a free shot but Ranger was gunning for the lead and soon took over and maintained the lead throughout the game. At the end of the half the score was Ranger 21 and Cisco nine. Ranger maintained a lead of 10 to 14 points throughout the game until the last two minutes when Cisco scored some long shots to trim the lead.

Harper fouled out with 13 minutes still to play and was replaced by Van Horn. But before Harper fouled out he had scored 18 points to win high point honors of the game.

Bauer Shares Title Honors

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 18 (UP)—Marlene Bauer of Midland, Tex., after beating her older sister for the second time within a week, today shared the Everglades invitational mixed foursome title with Reginald Boardman, Jr. of Palm Beach.

Marlene, who celebrated her 16th birthday two days ago, teamed with Boardman to beat older sister Alice and Clarke Hardwick, 3 and 2.

Last weekend, Marlene defeated Alice in the finals of the Palm Beach Women's Tournament and after yesterday's victory by her kid sister, the 22-year-old Alice observed good-naturedly:

"Since Marlene is 16, she's tougher."

OL' MAN RIVER STILL THREATENING RAMPAGE

CHICAGO, Feb. 18. (UP)—Refugees from Ol' Man River trudged into Makoshift camps or moved in with friends today as floods spread through the lower Mississippi river.

A wintry storm, with blowing snow and sharply colder weather, swept across the Northern Plains and was expected to overspread most of the midwest by tomorrow.

At the moment, the crucial point along the swollen Mississippi appeared to be a weakened levee near the birds' point-neg madrid floodway in southeastern Missouri.

Crews of workmen sandbagged steadily on the levee north of Dorena, Mo., where the river was WORLD RECORD—Mrs. Grace H. Tauck of South Orange, N.J., proudly posed with the 12-pound 14-ounce bonefish that represents a new world record for women. It also is a new world mark on line fishing, under 20 pounds, a United States Coastal high and the top catch in the Metropolitan Miami Tournament. It was Mrs. Tauck's first angling since breaking an ankle 13 months ago. She bagged the big one on her first cast after a 20-minute struggle.

lapping within inches of the top. Army engineers said any heavy seepage or uncontrolled breaks could burst the levee and automatically throw the huge floodway into operation.

On a 60-acre corn field near East Prairie, Mo., refugees from the floodway area pitched tents furnished them by National Guardsmen and the Red Cross. They were setting up heating stoves and collecting chits worth $10 on food per day for a family of three. An estimated 11,000 persons had fled from their homes in the threatened floodway but 300 others doggedly remained in the hope that the river would recede.

Farther south, the Mississippi's tributaries drove 38,000 lowland residents to higher ground in Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee, and the Mississippi itself was straining at its bonds.

Brig. Gen. Raymond Huff of the Louisiana National Guard advised people to get out of the danger zones while they could, and the Coast Guard moved in a rescue unit to help them.

Along the Ohio River and its feeder streams, the situation was improving. High waters were receding in Indiana, Ohio and North-eastern Kentucky. In Western Kentucky, the Red Cross said it was a "waiting game, with still plenty of water."

An average bushel of corn contains 11 pounds of corn cobs. About 33,000,000,000 pounds of corn cobs are produced each year in the United States.

Space in the home freezer is often wasted because of the type and size of the containers used. Rectangular shaped containers are the best space servers.
