Navy Orders Round-The-Clock Watch For Sub

Well...
I Dunno,
But...

A bunch of Ranger kids were in their glory Thursday afternoon when Carl Farr of radio and movie fame consented to go to the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Jasper C. Massee to give his autograph to the kids and pose for pictures for them.

Farr is one of the Sons of Pioneers and appears in movies with Roy Rogers. He was here for a visit with his mother, Mrs. T. B. Farr and his sister, Mrs. Winnie Staats.

They say there's no honor among thieves but apparently California bachelors don't want the same said of them. They've organized a bachelor's club to be known as "Operations Hands-Off". The idea is that as members of the club they promise not to date each other's girls. But at the organization meeting, the comparison of telephone numbers proved a little embarrassing.

When the telephone books were hauled out of pockets one bachelor admitted that he brought his "B" book and left the "A" book behind. No sir, he wasn't trusting those "wolves." No what was that we said about "honor" among thieves?

Well they're gettin' hotter and hotter, the flying saucer reports. They're smokin' now. Numerous reports were received in Austin Thursday from persons who claim to have seen the smokin' discs flying through the air. Whew, This'll get us down yet.

Ouch, we're shocked when confronted with the realization of how the years are flyin'. We were sharply reminded of this Thursday on learning of the passing of our college days house-mother. For four years we lived under the protecting eye of "Mother" Berry, as she was affectionately called. And what we mean is she didn't miss a thing. She knew what all of us were gonna do even before we did it.

Yep, there're nothin' quite like college days and life in a dormitory. Now, now, no fair askin' how long ago that was!

CAMP HOOD FIRE LOSS MAY REACH MILLIONS

CAMP HOOD, Tex., March 31. (UP)—Damages caused by a wind-whipped fire that destroyed two vast warehouses at Camp Hood may reach $5,500,000, Army authorities said today.

It took the fire only an hour and 15 minutes to burn the warehouses to the ground and destroy an uncounted number of beds, mattresses, refrigerators and other equipment.

Col. Thomas M. Williams, property disbursing officer for the National Guard of Texas, discovered the fire and thought damages could be estimated within a week. A board of officers was appointed to investigate the fire, which was of unknown origin.

Only one armored vehicle was ruined by the flames. Other vehicles parked between the two warehouses were saved, Capt. Max Dolcater, public information officer said.

Camp Hood, one of the Nation's largest military installations and the permanent base of the Second (Hell on Wheels) Armored Division, is used primarily for armored unit training.

However, the destroyed equipment belonged to the Texas National Guard and had been placed in the warehouse for immediate use.

One of the warehouses, built during World War II, was about 300 feet long and contained six storage rooms. The smaller, about half as long, had four "fireproof" brick walls which divided rooms into storage sections.

The "fireproof" walls did not slow down the flames as they burned through the tinder-dry building.

PATROL PLANES, WARSHIP SEEK UNIDENTIFIED BOAT

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31 (UP)—Western sea frontier patrol planes and a warship searched the California-Oregon coastal waters today for an unidentified submarine sighted off the northern California coast.

The Navy announced that it has ordered a day and night aerial search in the area and has dispatched the destroyer U.S.S. Colahan, armed with depth charges, to investigate the report.

There have been seven previous reports of unidentified undersea craft in the same general area during the past three months. All but one of the sightings, made by fishing craft, private pilots or from shore, were discounted by the Navy.

A Navy spokesman said the new find is regarded as important because for the first time the report has been officially verified.

The original sighting was made Wednesday by a trained observer aboard a Navy patrol plane about 40 miles off Cape Mendocino on the California coast, the Navy said.

Within a few hours, a second sighting was made by a fishing vessel four miles south of Blunt Reef Point close inshore.

The Navy said no American submarines are known to be operating in the area.

The observer aboard the patrol plane was not identified. A spokesman said the sub's periscope was sighted about 2 P. M. (PST). No other details of the sighting were given.

The Navy said fishermen Ray Carpenter from Trinidad Harbor near Eureka, California made the second sighting at 1 A. M. (PST) yesterday. He reported his finding to the Humboldt Bay Coast Guard Station and was later interrogated by Navy officials.

Carpenter reported what appeared to be a submarine running on the surface at a moderate speed with its lights on. He said he sighted the craft as he passed Blunt's Reef Light Ship, five miles west of Cape Mendocino.

The submarine apparently was not aware of his vessel, Carpenter said, and made no effort to conceal itself.

The destroyer Colahan is the first warship to be dispatched since the war to investigate such a report. The vessel, carrying wire service and San Francisco Bay area reporters, left its Treasure Island base shortly after noon yesterday and arrived in the area last night.

The Colahan is of the twin-stacked destroyer type that carried on the bulk of the work during the Pacific war. It is in the 2,150-ton class, 350-feet long, and armed with five five-inch guns, torpedo tubes and depth charges.

It normally carries a peacetime crew of 250 men, but the Navy said it sailed short-handed as it could get underway immediately.

Navy officials refused to comment on just what action would be taken if a foreign submarine were flushed, other than to say "I suppose we would follow it."

Under international laws, warships of foreign nations can approach within three miles of the shores of continental United States. But inside the three-mile limit, any vessel may be stopped and asked to identify itself.

It was announced today that the Rev. Cecil Ellis, pastor of the First Methodist Church, will deliver the sermon at the Sunrise Easter service on Easter Sunday.

The service will be held at sunrise on Easter Sunday at the football stadium and music for the occasion will be under the direction of Fred Baumgardner, head of the fine arts department of Ranger Junior College.

Singers from all churches participating in the service will be asked to assist in the union choir. It was also announced today that there will be special musical numbers.

TRUMAN LABELS GOP CHARGES FOREIGN POLICY SABOTAGE

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Reporter

KEY WEST, Fla., March 31. (UP)—President Truman today threw into the 1950 Congressional campaign the harsh accusation that the GOP opposition was willing to "sabotage" American foreign policy and endanger world peace for sake of a political issue.

In words stronger than his "give 'em hell" epithets of 1948, the chief executive said that efforts of some Republican leaders to torpedo bipartisan foreign policy during the cold war were just as bad as trying to shoot our soldiers in the back in a hot war.

He picked out three Republican senators—Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin, Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska and Styles Bridges of New Hampshire—as primary targets for his "sabotage" accusation. McCarthy has been the moving force behind a Senate investigation of alleged disloyalty in the state department.

"The greatest asset that the Kremlin has is the partisan attempt in the senate to sabotage the bipartisan foreign policy of the United States," the president told newsmen here, permitting direct quotation of this remark.

The setting for Mr. Truman's unusually stern criticism of his political opponents was the peaceful, topical surroundings of the winter White House yesterday afternoon. The president had invited reporters to a hot dog and lemonade lawn party.

After most of the party food was consumed, the President gathered the correspondents about him in a circle. He sat in a wicker chair in the shadow of a graceful palm tree and held his first news conference in three weeks.

For days the President had pondered with growing concern the mounting attacks on state department personnel by the communist hunting McCarthy. He had attempted to curb McCarthy's attacks by words of praise for secretary of state Dean Acheson and state department personnel denounced by McCarthy as communist.

Yesterday, one simple question unleased the chief executive's full feelings on the subject.

"Mr. President, do you think there is any disloyalty in the state department?" a reporter asked.

In a steady voice the President said he thought the greatest asset the Kremlin had was McCarthy.

Warning to the subject, the President said that with the endorsement of the Republican policy committee of the senate, McCarthy and others were actually attempting to create an issue with which to seek control of Congress this fall.

These Republicans, he continued, gesturing with both arms, were perfectly willing to sabotage bipartisan foreign policy to achieve their political aim.

It is a dangerous situation and must be stopped said the President. He added without elaboration that the people would realize it when he got through.

Ranger Group At Girl Scout Area Meet Thursday

A group of Girl Scout leaders from Ranger was in Breckenridge Thursday to attend the annual meeting of the Heart of Texas Area Council for Girl Scouts.

Mrs. Ed Harper, Mrs. Arthur Deffebach, Mrs. J. B. Rayfield, Mrs. H. A. Cogburn, Mrs. J. A. Bates, Mrs. H. E. Brooks and Dr. Carl Straley attended the session which was held at the First Christian Church. About 75 representatives of the 14 county area attended the meeting.

During the business session Dr. Straley was elected vice-president of the council.

Following the business session a banquet was held and at which area workers, Jeannine Frazier and Nell Cox, spoke on Girl Scout work. Two Girl Scouts who attended the International Girl Scout Camp in Sweden last year told of their experiences at the meeting.

John S. Hart Candidate For County Judge

John S. Hart of Eastland today authorized this newspaper to announce his candidacy for the office of County Judge of Eastland County.

Hart, who has been closely associated with the affairs of the county for years has served in other county offices in the past. He stated today that he will make a detailed announcement to the voters in the very near future.

In 1945 Colorado had 47,618 farms, with an average of 760 acres per farm.

Only the extreme southern part of the state had broken clouds this morning, the U. S. Weather Bureau reported.

Freddie had the warmest weather in Texas yesterday with 88, while Dalhart had the lowest maximum with 62.

Dalhart was also the coldest spot in the state last night with a minimum of 43 and Brownsville had the highest minimum with 68.

Increasing winds from the south this morning showed a 22-mile blow at San Angelo, while Abilene reported a 21-mile-an-hour wind and Laredo and Brownsville recorded the wind at 20 miles per hour.

However, the Weather Bureau added that no dust "to amount to anything" was expected because the wind was blowing from the south.

House Numbering Captains Asked To Start Monday

Members of the civic committee of the Ranger Civic League announced today that numbers for Ranger houses are beginning to arrive and that there are now 500 numbers on hand.

Those in charge of the house numbering project have asked that the captains for the various parts of town, contact Mrs. C. A. Strong at once and secure their survey blanks and numbers and be ready to go to work not later than Monday.

It was pointed out that the captains should not wait to be contacted by their chairman but proceed with their own work immediately. Some of the captains have already worked their areas, it was said, and are ready to deliver the numbers. These should secure the numbers from Mrs. Strong at once.

The committee members reported that the work has been progressing very satisfactorily and that the captains have been receiving fine cooperation from the public.

The numbers are 25 cents each and what profit is made from the sale of the numbers will be used to purchase street markers for Ranger streets. The committee has also ordered and now has on hand auto tags advertising Ranger. The tags are red with aluminum numbering which reads "From Ranger, Texas and Going Back." They are designed to fit over the top of the license plates on vehicles.

Under international laws, warships of foreign nations can approach within three miles of the shores of continental United States. But inside the three-mile limit, any vessel may be stopped and asked to identify itself.

Easter Service Speaker Named

It was announced today that the Rev. Cecil Ellis, pastor of the First Methodist Church, will deliver the sermon at the Sunrise Easter service on Easter Sunday.

The service will be held at sunrise on Easter Sunday at the football stadium and music for the occasion will be under the direction of Fred Baumgardner, head of the fine arts department of Ranger Junior College.

Singers from all churches participating in the service will be asked to assist in the union choir. It was also announced today that there will be special musical numbers.

Overseas Vets Invited To Meet

Members of the Ralph L. McKinley Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars today extended an invitation to all overseas veterans to attend a meeting at the VFW headquarters tonight at 8 o'clock.

It was stated that food will be served and a business meeting held.

Ed Freeman of Ranger has announced his candidacy for the office of constable of precinct No. 2.

In asking the consideration of the voters in the coming election, Freeman stated that he would give his best efforts to the office if elected.

PLEDGES EFFORTS FOR DEFENSE, UNIFICATION

WASHINGTON, March 31. (UP)—Frank Pace Jr., the youthful government career official who is slated to be the new Army secretary, pledged his best efforts today to further strong national defenses and unification of the armed forces.

Nomination of Pace, now budget director, for the army post was announced yesterday at Key West Fla., by President Truman as part of a reshuffling of key government jobs.

Mr. Truman said that: 1. W. Stuart Symington, now secretary of air, would become the new chairman of the National Security Resources Board. His successor was not named.

2. Frederick J. Lawton, now Peace Assistant, would be named budget director. Elmer Staats will succeed Lawton.

3. He will appoint a prominent Republican as the state department's new roving ambassador. This move is designed to strengthen the bi-partisan approach to foreign affairs.

There were indications that the Senate be asked to act on the nominations next week. Little, if any, opposition was expected.

Texas Weather Mild and Cloudy

Mild and cloudy weather was forecast for Texas over the weekend with southerly winds increasing today.

There was no indication of a "significant amount" of rain, though the weatherman said clouds over Texas might shed a few drops in scattered areas.

Only the extreme southern part of the state had broken clouds this morning, the U. S. Weather Bureau reported.

Freddie had the warmest weather in Texas yesterday with 88, while Dalhart had the lowest maximum with 62.

Dalhart was also the coldest spot in the state last night with a minimum of 43 and Brownsville had the highest minimum with 68.

Increasing winds from the south this morning showed a 22-mile blow at San Angelo, while Abilene reported a 21-mile-an-hour wind and Laredo and Brownsville recorded the wind at 20 miles per hour.

However, the Weather Bureau added that no dust "to amount to anything" was expected because the wind was blowing from the south.

FINGERPRINTS Don't Lie

DETE KESLO remained on the rug, silent and morose until a radio car came in answer to James Stivers' call and took him away to the division station. Keslo had always jeered at the complaints of prisoners whom he had chucked into cells. Now he knew just how they felt.

By his sleepless night, his fingerprint duel with Police Detective Stivers and the wrestling match with Kelo.

When Keslo had been taken away, Stivers and Martin Queripel hunted about in obscure places and found many other proofs of Kelo's secret entry into the house of the late Wendell Palmer. Queripel, in fact, amended his original theory:

He prayed only for strength enough to enable him to telephone to Azalea and lift the little fighting angel from the tomb of her despair. Then he promised himself a good long sleep in his hard desk chair, where his slumbers were sweeter for being stolen than on the downiest bed.

"I'm convinced that Kelo was already in the house when Paul Moody came to call. He could have heard all that Moody had to say and learned all about the old man's objections to the marriage. When Moody left, I imagine that the old man came back fuming with rage, only to find Kelo waiting with a demand that he should pay several thousand dollars for hurting Nelda Croft's feelings by not yielding to her charms. That must have been just one load too many for the irascible old fellow and it made him rash enough to defy Kelo and try to call in the police. What happened after that we know now."

She looked pretty grim—both pretty and grim; because Kenyon had been meditating her impatient soul with explanations of his own difficulties, and O'Hea had only made her the more frantic by telling her of his hearsay evidence and his theory that Kelo, having tried in vain to lasso her father with a woman, had tried to force him to pay for silence, and killed him when he would not buy it.

"Thanks to you," said Stivers meekly.

Just before the drowsy Queripel somnambulated in, Azalea had been saying, "It's sweet of you to tell me all this, Mr. O'Hea. It takes away some of the shame from my poor father's death. He died innocent, and he died brave. But it doesn't bring him back to believe it. And it doesn't bring my Paul any nearer to freedom. The police still say they have his fingerprints and they still say that fingerprints don't lie."

BY the time he had delivered Stivers at the crime laboratory and driven his own car to his home, Queripel was exhausted more by his good news than

AZALEA PALMER opened her eyes wide in Martin Queripel's office and sighed as if to herself: "That's the first time in my life I ever fainted. I like it! I think I'll make a habit of it. I've had a perfect rest. Old-fashioned things are the best. And now, I'm a poet!"

me to come to the jail. He said he couldn't bear it.

Azalea blinked her eyes, seeming suddenly to become aware of the three serious gentlemen, gazing at her knees. Her eyes traveled toward her foot, which Queripel had propped ridiculously on the edge of the office chair in order to cause the blood to flow to her head and bring her out of her fainting spell.

Queripel had an answer even for this.

She emitted a shrill little scream as she covered her knees and dropped her legs to the floor. The three gallant gentlemen showed embarrassed expressions for a moment until Azalea, realizing the humor of the situation, awarded them a forgiving smile.

"If you're going to be the wife of that square-jawed sculptor you'd better begin to assert your control over him before it is too late."

She refused the six outstretched hands from the three gentlemen surrounding her, gathered herself into a mystery of cotton and was on her feet and into her chair again, facing Martin Queripel, the police detective, his assistant, Timothy O'Hea, and the young lawyer, Stanley Kenyon.

"Come on!" she cried and dashed from the room, the men following after her like the tail of a comet.

After brief delays that were sternities to Azalea, a guard brought Paul Moody to the conference room. The young sculptor came in sullenly, never dreaming that Azalea was to be there.

When his cell-weary harrowed eyes met the rainbows and lightning glowing and gleaming behind her tea-drenched eyes, his cry was a mingling of agony and rapture.

He rather groaned than laughed as he crushed her in his powerful arms. Azalea was so blissful, and so glad to be so hurt by his too

PLUG 'N TRIGGER

By J. Fred Eder
United Press Outdoor Consultant
The fish and wildlife service reports a disease which two years ago took a toll of more than 36,000 ducks wintering in the Texas Panhandle country near Bull Lake.

Fowl cholera, caused by a micro-organism (pasteurella), is a disease similar to blood poisoning. The cholera organism enters the fowl by way of mouth, multiplying rapidly in the bird's blood stream and internal organs until paralysis and death occur.

The 5,800-acre refuge is the center of an important wintering area for waterfowl in Lamb and Bailey Counties of Texas.

As the sick ducks are not able to migrate far, the disease must be contracted within a few hundred miles of the refuge.

To guard against another damaging outbreak, the fish and wildlife service has been conducting a cooperative research project and field laboratory to study the conditions.

Under supervision of Dr. George Petrie of Texas A & M, the birds had been under way for several weeks before the present cholera epidemic among ducks broke out.

Having the slightest idea of what he had learned, she found his words utterly cryptic. She could not seem to trust her own exquisite little ears. Queripel saw in her eyes again that conflict and confusion of colors and shimmering lights.

Evidence indicates that cholera is evident in domestic poultry on the farms in the immediate vicinity of the refuge. Such infected poultry dying at market or on the farm, are often dumped along farm roads instead of being buried, creating a serious hazard although Texas has laws which forbid the roadside disposal of carcasses of domestic animals including poultry.

Still studying her eyes, Queripel took refuge behind his desk, and told her from there the whole story of his crowded day.

The bodies of decomposing to his purpose, those fingerprints of Paul's had been twisted into the damnedest lie that ever was concocted.

The bodies of decomposing

But when he staggered into his office yawning mightily, the first thing he saw was Azalea Palmer in person, waiting for him. Harley Kenyon and Timothy O'Hea were with her.

Then he waited for her to put on a storm of hysterical weeping and laughter.

She looked pretty grim—both pretty and grim; because Kenyon had been meditating her impatient soul with explanations of his own difficulties, and O'Hea had only made her the more frantic by telling her of his hearsay evidence and his theory that Kelo, having tried in vain to lasso her father with a woman, had tried to force him to pay for silence, and killed him when he would not buy it.

But Azalea was one of those fighting spirits who can maintain the battle while there is a battle, but collapse when victory is assured. Instead of bounding into the air and screaming, Azalea just crumpled and slid from her chair to the floor with no sound at all except the little thud her velvety body made when it softly struck the rug.

It was the men who furnished the hysteria. Seeing a woman faint is a luxury almost unknown to modern generations, and the men cast about for what to do.

Being an avid reader and romantically inclined, Harley Kenyon fell on his knees and seizing one of Azalea's limp little hands began to rub it with violence, but without effect.

Then he himself lifted her ridiculously little shoes to the edge of the chair she had just vacated, and revealed two of the prettiest knees, rounded calves and straight-ankles in the whole world.

While the three awestruck men were feasting their eyes on these, Azalea Palmer came slowly to her senses again and found herself lying on the floor, blinking at a strange ceiling.

"To Be Concluded"

She tried to tell Paul all that had happened and to tell everything all at once. So he had not the faintest idea of what she was saying, and had to look over her shoulder to Queripel for information and interpretation.

When he learned all clearly, his knees buckled and Azalea had to hold him up. She said:

When he learned all clearly, his knees buckled and Azalea had to hold him up. She said:

"Go on and faint! That's what I did! It's wonderful!"

"But he disobeyed her—for perhaps the last time."

But Paul Moody was staring at her with a gaze of adoration that seemed fairly to devour her. He drew her into his arms more tightly and said:

"Steel bars? They can be broken. But your little round arms—oh, Azalea! Ouch!"

That was when she clamped him so tightly that his own ribs hurt. Then their lips met and—

The jaller, being a modest man, turned his eyes away.

And so did Timothy O'Hea, who had a wife.

And so did Harley Kenyon, who could not bear the sight.

And so did Martin Queripel.

And so, no doubt, will the gentle reader.

poultry contain billions of the cholera organisms. One of the basic methods of cholera control require the gathering of dead birds and burying or burning them.

The National Guardsmen at the Sioux City Air Base said they saw a white, round "something" apparently following an airplane.

Spreading of medicated grain in the infected refuge is proving beneficial. Cooperation of farmers and ranchers is sorely needed to follow sanitary methods in the disposal of dead domestic poultry.

Other persons who saw "it" described it as a "shiny, pencil-shaped" aircraft which swung back and forth over Sioux City.

U. S. Air Force officials repeatedly have denied any knowledge of the saucers and have reported that thorough investigations have failed to turn up any proof that they exist.

Party Honors Mrs. Ivey Myers

As a compliment to Mrs. Ivey Myers who is moving to Hamlin to make her home, Mrs. O. G. Lanier entertained at her home Thursday afternoon from 2:30 to 5 o'clock with a going-away-party.

During the afternoon Mrs. Floyd J. Spivy assisted Mrs. Lanier in conducting games and other forms of entertainment. Mrs. Morris George, Mrs. Maxie Cunningham and Mrs. Lawrence Purefoy, also assisted Mrs. Lanier in entertaining.

Those attending the party presented Mrs. Myers with two gifts of silver and several individual gifts were also presented to her. At the close of the afternoon refreshments were served.

Contrary to popular belief a wool or carpet rug in your bedroom is not a particular type of carpet weave like Axminster or Wilton. Broadloom refers to any carpet over six feet wide and can be as wide as thirty feet. A wool or carpet rug in your bedroom is cheerful and restful. The softness is most pleasant underfoot and covered floor makes small bedrooms seem larger.

FUND FOR FARMER REACHES NOW DOUBLE WHAT HE LOST

LOCKHART, Tex., March 31. (UP)—William Hagedorn, a wrinkled German immigrant farmer, accumulated new "wealth" today as friends and strangers replaced more than half of the life savings he lost this week in a damage suit involving a mule he did not own.

Hagedorn, 77, lost the $2,632.20 he had saved over a 52-year period of dirt farming in Texas last Tuesday when the State Supreme Court ruled he erred in not appearing in court to deny he owned the mule.

The thrifty old soil-tiller, who can not read or write English, complained in his strong German accent that he "no understand" why the money was taken away from him.

Every cent he had saved was awarded to the W. C. Alexanders of Austin, Tex., who were injured in an accident in front of Hagedorn's farm home when they served their mule into a ditch to avoid hitting a mule which would not get off the high way. The mule belonged to Hagedorn's son.

The Dallas Morning News, a long-established newspaper which always upholds law and order, last week began publishing a series of six front-page articles by staff writer Allen Duckworth detailing the facts in Hagedorn's case.

Duckworth was dispatched to write the series to warn the public of the "pitfalls" of the law, the Morning News said.

Although the dispatches did not ask for funds, the response was spontaneous.

Small amounts of money from sympathetic Texans dribbled to Duckworth's desk Tuesday. The volume became greater Wednesday and, by Thursday, contributions had reached $1,323.50.

Most of the money came in $1 bills from small wage earners who felt Hagedorn had become the innocent victim of a cruel legal technicality, because the state Supreme Court admitted he did not own the mule.

At its noon meeting yesterday the Lockhart business men's club withdrew $25 from its treasury to give Hagedorn and invited the aged farmer and his wife to be Darlene Bridges—As the Virgin Mary in The Wichita Mountain Easter Sunrise Pageant depicting the life of Christ.

Darlene Bridges—Lawton, Oklahoma, housewife. All performers in this traditional Easter Sunrise Pageant are townspeople of Lawton.

LAWTON, OKLA.—The Eastern Sunrise Service presented in the Wichita Mountains near Lawton each year is fast becoming widely known and nationally acclaimed as the "American Oberammergau." The Passion Play, known as The Prince of Peace, covers completely the 26 tableaux of the Bible from the Nativity thru the Resurrection. The fame of the pageant is spreading throughout the nation with the help of the cinecolor motion picture, "The Prince of Peace," which is an exact camera portrayal of the pageant as it is presented each Easter morn.

The leading actors and actresses are townfolk of Lawton. The role of Jesus is played by bank teller, Millard Coody, while a housewife and mother of two children, Mrs. Darlene Bridges, portrays the Virgin Mary. More than 3,000 people from this city and the surrounding Southern Oklahoma cities take part annually.

The Wichita Mountain Easter Sunrise Service Association, which was formed to handle the finances and to annually present the pageant, conceived the idea of filming the great spectacle

Kroger Babb, President of Hallmark Productions, Inc., Producer of "The Prince of Peace."

In 1948 several major west coast motion picture companies were approached. All of them turned thumbs down on a religious project believing that the true story of the Bible could never be accurately recorded by the camera. Independent producer, Kroger Babb, president of Hallmark Productions, Inc., of Wilmington, Ohio, proved to be the only producer with the courage and determination to film and distribute a movie depicting the life of Christ. The wisdom of his judgment can be attested by the fact that in the few months since the picture has been released, more than 1,755,279 people have jammed the theatres in the U. S. alone to see "The Prince of Peace" and to praise its true biblical characterizations.

A winning charm combined with childlike naturalness has attracted nationwide attention to 6-yr.-old Ginger Prince, child performer appearing in "The Prince of Peace," a full-length motion picture filming of the Lawton Easter Pageant.

Mental Patient Admits Starting Sanatorium Fire

PHILADELPHIA, March 31. (UP)—A mental patient, whose "hero complex" led him to start fires so he could sound the alarm, was held today after admitting he started the blaze which killed nine men in a private sanatorium.

"I got a sick feeling in the pit of my stomach and had to do something," speculated Nicholas A. Verna, 26-year-old medically discharged war veteran, was quoted by police.

State police arson investigator Charles Taylor said Verna admitted he touched a match to a towel in the laundry chute of the Belle Vista Sanatorium late Wednesday night and then returned calmly to his room to await the fire alarm.

The flames spread to trash and then to fuel oil lines in the basement. Heavy choking smoke drifted upstairs and filled barred, cell-like rooms in which some patients were reported shackled to concrete slabs.

The sanatorium, repeatedly denounced by the state for its "medieval" practices of using shackles and other mechanical restraints, faces possible loss of its private hospital license.

The nine dead were suffocated by smoke which filled the heavily barricaded "violent ward." Six other inmates of the ward were saved by heroic firemen and day attendant George Lewis, 51, who said he removed five patients who were shackled to their concrete "beds."

Sixty other persons were overcome by smoke, three of them critically, but they were rescued from the building by the heroism of other attendants, firemen and bystanders pressed into service.

Several manufacturers of wool carpets and rugs, sparked by the increasing demand for modern ranch house furnishings, have created carpeting especially for these charming, liveable homes.

TEXAS NEWS BRIEFS

TEMPLE, Tex., March 31 (UP)—Funeral services were to be held at 1:30 P. M. today for Dr. Charles M. Simpson, well-known Texas surgeon who died yesterday of heart attack at the age of 54.

He had been a member of the Scott and White Hospital's surgical staff 24 years, Dr. Simpson was born at Waxahachie and received degrees from Trinity University and Harvard Medical School.

He was immediate past president of the Texas Urological Society and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

Burial will be at Dallas.

BONHAM, Tex., March 31 (UP)—The Texas Railroad Commission may decide today whether the Texas & Pacific Railway should discontinue two Fort Worth-To-Texarkana passenger trains.

Railway officials protested yesterday at the beginning of a hearing that they are losing "hundreds of thousands of dollars" by maintaining service on the trains and should be allowed to discontinue them.

W. T. Long, Jr., General Superintendent of transportation, and J. G. Horn, assistant general auditor of the line, said changes in schedule had been made frequently in an attempt to develop more business for the trains.

ELSA, Tex., March 31 (UP)—Work at Elsa's parking shed was guests of honor at next Thursday's luncheon.

Among other contributors, Duckworth said, were employees of the fiscal division of the reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Internal Revenue Department of the U. S. Treasury Department.

The smallest donation came from a man and his wife who could not spare more than 10 cents but wanted "to do something."

at a virtual halt today as employers remained out on strike for higher wages.

The striking workers demanded 75-cents an hour for jobs now paying between 50 and 65 cents an hour. The strike began Wednesday.

Spokesmen for the men on strike said about 40 workers had left jobs. Packing shed owner Doc Treon lessened the figure to 17.

Meanwhile, Treon hired Mexican contract laborers to process green vegetables.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 31 (UP)—Radio news editor Glen Krueger believes that psychologist David Tracy may help the St. Louis Browns in the 1950 pennant race.

Krueger said he became "very drowsy" yesterday while making a telephone recording of an interview with Dr. Tracy in town this week to relax the San Antonio Missions of the Texas League through his powers of suggestion.

Wondering if radio listeners would react as he had done, Krueger broadcast the interview over station KITE.

Several listeners called to tell Krueger the recording had made them drowsy, too.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 31. (UP)—Police were looking today for the owner of a brahman bull which was struck and killed by a car driven by a Houston couple three miles west of Houston.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gray, suffered cuts and bruises when their car skidded into the bull and killed it.

Gray said he was blinded by the lights of an oncoming car and did not see the bull until he was within 100 feet of it.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 31. (UP)—A 26-year-old Danish sailor whose ship sailed without him attempted suicide last night by slashing his wrists three times, police reported.

The sailor, Erik Daugaard, was found unconscious beside a service station. He was taken to a Houston hospital but was released after treatment and placed in care of the Danish Consulate until he finds a ship.
