Justice Douglas Hands Down Decision: No Family Pictures

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas didn't seem to co-operate very well after being named "Father of the Year" by the National Father's Day Committee. He wouldn't give out any family pictures. He wouldn't give out any recent pictures of his two youngsters, who were away at school. He wouldn't allow himself to be photographed with Mrs. Douglas at home, around the family fireside. He finally said he and Mrs. Douglas would pose on the steps of the Supreme Court building. It would have made a nice, homey little background—a marble palace with dozens of steps half a block wide and six-story pillars. But Mrs. Douglas vetoed that idea. So no new pictures were made at all.

Sen. Millard Tydings of Maryland is planning a real blowout for his daughter's debut next December. He lists her in the Congressional Directory as Eleanor Tydings, Jr. His wife's first name is Eleanor and she is the daughter of Ambassador and Mrs. Joe Davies.

Anyways, when Mrs. Tydings went to the Mayflower Hotel recently to make reservations for her daughter's coming out party, she was amazed to find that the place was booked solid for a year in advance, with conventions. Few people realize it, but Washington is rapidly becoming the number one convention town of the country. But when the hotel management heard about the Tydings debut plans, it cancelled one of the conventions to make room.

Retired Gen. Lucius D. Clay, head of the new National Committee for a Free Europe, found out the hard way that the Communists were trying to transfer the cold war from Berlin to New York. Commie pickets marched past the entrance to a Free Europe rally in New York, where General Clay was to speak. They carried signs in protest against the return of Nazis to power in western Germany. When Communists tried to create a disturbance inside the meeting, Col. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, who was presiding, gave a pre-arranged signal to the police on duty, and they cleared out the hall. General Clay was for four years U. S. military governor, but he commented "We never had this trouble in Germany."

Col. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, incidentally, has given himself a mission to fight for elimination of fellow travelers and has security risks from a government service. Colonel Whitney recently resigned as U. S. undersecretary of commerce, with a blast at the present ineffective laws, security regulations and loyalty procedures. He now feels he can do more as a private citizen outside government than as an official working on the inside. But before starting his crusade Colonel Whitney says he will take a vacation of several months.

It wasn't reported, but Sen. Joseph McCarthy didn't do as well as he thought in his speech before the Catholic Press Association at Rochester. A number of the editors were displeased by Senator McCarthy's being asked to speak at all. The Rt. Rev. Michael J. Ready, bishop of Columbus and Episcopal chairman of the National Catholic Welfare Council, didn't even attend the evening meeting at which the senator spoke.

In his keynote address to the Catholic Press Association luncheon on the same day that Senator McCarthy spoke, Bishop Ready made some very pointed references. He did not mention Senator McCarthy by name. But as reported in the N. C. W. C. news service, the bishop criticized "those who lately and hysterically identified themselves in the role of defenders of the nation," those who "leap nimbly on the bandwagon of popular condemnation," and those who "fix the odium of shamefully traitorous activities upon persons accused, but not actually convicted of base views."

Road Racing Is Kept Alive By U. S. Sports Car Club

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Almost totally neglected in America since World War I, road racing is a sport of tremendous consequence throughout the rest of the motoring world.

Self-styled crazy crusaders, members of the Sports Car Club of America are making a brave attempt to keep it alive. This country will, for example, be represented in the famous 24-hour race at Le Mans, France, June 24-25, for the first time since 1935. The two-car team will consist of Briggs Cunningham, Phil Walters and Miles and Sam Collier.

The Sports Car Club conducted a road race at Palm Beach early in the year. Briggs Cunningham of Green Farms, Conn., won the first running of a 100-mile Heart Trophy Race at the Suffolk County Airport, Westhampton, Long Island, May 7.

No fewer than 60 cars from all parts of the country are to compete in three races at Bridgehampton, Long Island, June 10. The Watkins Glen, N. Y., Grand Prix, listed for Sept. 23, drew upward of 100,000 spectators last fall. The men who stress high speed maneuverability go again at Del Monte, Calif., Nov. 4-6.

They're making real progress, and soon hope to again make the names of star road racers household words, as they were in the era of the Vanderbilt Cup, in the decade from 1904 to '14.

THE races at Bridgehampton—the main number is a 100-mile—are run over a four-mile square course on town roads, which, of course, are blocked off to ordinary traffic. The meet is open to the public without charge.

These drivers are doctors, lawyers, engineers, businessmen and whatnot who just happen to like to drive and tinker with racing cars. "When you see a man take a corner at 60 miles an hour when you know perfectly well you can't make it at 25, you get a bit closer to the heart of the thing," they tell you. "When you see a driver undertaking to pass another car when both are doing around 100 miles an hour on an ordinary road, it is an infinitely more exciting matter than the same situation would be on a track."

Road-racing cars can be driven with no more instruction than you get from the dealer who sells you a car. Any car can be taken right out of the race and driven home like an ordinary sedan. A few are specials built up for racing, but most of them are eligible to compete for the production-car prize.

Senecas Want To Run Business Without Help

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Indian stated his case with a story.

"When I was a little boy," said Roy Jimerson of the people's committee of the Senecas in New York, "my father had an ornery horse. One day father asked me to feed the horse. The horse bit me."

"As long as we had that horse I was afraid he would bite me again. That's the way we Indians feel about the United States government."

The red man dressed in a blue suit with tie and so to match, was testifying before a senate subcommittee on interior and insular affairs. The issue was a bill which would allow the Indians to take over the job of collecting the money for leases on land they own—instead of letting the federal government do it.

The Indians object to the measure, already approved by the house, on grounds that there are loopholes which might allow the white man to come back and bite again.

Roy Jimerson was one of several spokesmen. He talked right back to Sen. Herbert H. Lehman, D., N. Y., and his committee.

"People claim," Jimerson said after receiving permission to stand instead of sit while he spoke his piece, "that the government has been good to us. But look. They gave us attorneys. They promised us more money for our lease. Before we signed the last agreement we made $8,000 a year. The government said we would make $10,000 on the new one. There was a slight error. We made $6,000. It was contract.

The committee began to squirm a little. Jimerson described himself as a story teller—and there fore historian.

"Let me tell you a story," he said. "Maybe it's legend. But one day an Indian was sitting on the limb of a tree overhanging a river. It was his tree, on his own land, hanging over his river. A white man came along and sat on the limb—on the bank side. The white man said, 'move over.' The Indian moved to follow the law of the land. The limb broke, and the Indian went into the drink."

Jimerson said he wouldn't be surprised some day to find that the whole Seneca nation had gone ker-plash.

Actually the measure is designed to give the Senecas a bigger part in their own affairs. But the Indians don't see it that way.

The witnesses argued that there are sleepers in the bill that would give Uncle Sam a firmer grip on the reservations. They object to the Bureau of Indian Affairs, under the Department of Interior, keeping all their records under lock and key. They don't like to be compelled to follow the law of New York state when they leave their land to outsiders.

Another red man who didn't see eye to eye with the committee was Roy Jimerson's brother, Theodore. He's president of what is known as the new government of the Seneca nation.

"I've looked through the records," Theodore Jimerson said. "I know a thing or two about bills that go through congress. You can grease them though, but you can't grease 'em but again very easy when they become law."

Distant Star BY HERMINA BLACK

THE STORY: Falling in love had been far from the small town's bliss when she became the daughter of a small town doctor. Her father, Dr. Piers, who lives with his brother, Dr. Ames, in the town of Piers. Clemency is engaged to Piers. She has given to Piers who she loves and is in love with Piers herself. She tells Clemency that before his marriage, Piers and Piers were engaged and Piers loved them to live at his home as he and Piers would be engaged in marriage. Piers and Piers together, and Piers creates the impression that Piers and Piers were engaged. Piers has given to Piers, who she loves and is in love with Piers herself.

AS Piers reached the door, she looked back. Clemency was bending over Baba, who clutched hold of her with one small, feverish hand. The sight of her child clinging to the girl stirred an filigree resentment to life. First Piers, then Baba. A moment before she had been on the brink of a revelation, now she changed her mind, saying instead, "Send for me if you want me. I'm going to lie down again for a little while. I'll tell Justin to come to you."

She went out, and Clemency, remaining by Baba, who was murmuring broken, difficult-to-interpret phrases, was thinking that if things had turned out differently it would be she herself who was drifting away from Baba. Piers would come back, and she would have to face him.

But that was something which she definitely did not want to contemplate now.

In an incredibly short time, remembering the double journey he had made, Piers returned to Baba with Dr. Rigaud. The diagnosis was even worse than Clemency had feared—double pneumonia.

was something to be thankful for, Clemency told herself. Or was it? Even while she despised herself, her heart yearned for him—that heart she knew she would never be able to call back into her own keeping. She had taken off her ring—in any case she could not have gone on wearing it with her hands constantly in disinfectants.

Although Sister Theresa took over from about 9 o'clock, Clemency was still determined not to give up her vigil entirely. In case Baba realized that she was in strange hands, but she had been going almost constantly since sunrise and she knew she must rest. First, she felt she must have a breath of fresh air. Wriggling a coat about her, she slipped downstairs and out into the courtyard.

ABOVE were the same stars that had shown only two nights ago when she stood in the circle of Piers' arms and felt that singing joy in her heart; when she had believed that the particular star of her destiny had come down to bring her heart's desire.

It was all over, Piers must realize that as clearly as a day, he had kept clear of her all day, but she knew that there could still be no escape from that inevitable next meeting with him, and again the paralytic desire to get away thrust itself upon her.

Foolish! she thought. There was no escape. If the whole world was between them, and a thousand Syries held them apart, her heart would still be his.

It was not even as though he were happy—or ever could have been happy with Syrie. How utterly incredible that the man she Piers should forget every scrap of honor for a woman like Piers! No wonder he looked tortured.

But he had loved Syrie; he loved her desperately and was going to marry her, and then something like this happened. But it was that which mattered. It was what had happened here.

Had not Piers told her: "There are many things you have to forgive me. Men are fools, mistaking dress for gold, the mirage of reality."

CRIME SYNDICATES FACE TOUGHEST FOE IN NEW SENATE INVESTIGATING GROUP

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The big gambling and vice syndicates which have developed in the U. S. into a tightly controlled, multi-billion dollar business face a band new foe in the special Senate committee headed by Sen. Estes Kefauver (D. Tenn.).

Kefauver's group has a weapon the syndicate big wigs never have faced before. It's the authority to weld into one anti-crime force all of the law enforcing and regulatory agencies of the U. S. government.

Up until now the shocking success of syndicate activities has resulted from the exploitation of a legal go-man-land. Operating across state lines, state officials have found themselves powerless to nail the top syndicate men in any clean up drives. Local officials have been even more frustrated.

Appeals to federal agencies for help have been just as fruitless. The FBI, for instance, has no authority to investigate gambling. The only thing treasury agents can do about slot machines is collect a tax on them.

SPARKLING COMEDY AT ARCADIA TODAY

RAY MILLAND and ROSALIND RUSSELL go bicycling in the park, in a scene from Columbia's "A WOMAN OF DISTINCTION."

KEFAUVER: His group has a secret weapon.

The Kefauver committee, however, has the unique authority to borrow any of the personnel and facilities of any of the federal agencies to help it in accomplishing its mission—to expose organized crime in the U. S. Under its able chief counsel, Rudolph Halley—veteran of the through political corruption, which the syndicates have bought have made them that impregnable. Halley reveals that his group will not operate from any master plan or master timetable. During the first week of operation he received hundreds of tips, hunches and offers of information on various criminal activities around the country. He will begin investigating what looks like the hottest leads first, wherever they happen to point.

Investigations in the various cities will be quiet, fast and sure, he promises. All sources, newspaper reporters, local police, informers, public officials and private citizens who have information will be given an attentive ear. His men will use the element of surprise whenever possible.

Members of the committee themselves might hold open hearings in various cities. And that most powerful of all congressional will be used to bring any persons involved straight to Washington for hearings.

Two U. S. agencies have already taken big steps to aid Kefauver's group. The Federal Communications Commission has requested all telephone companies to keep a permanent record of the details of all long distance lines for gambling operations. The telephone is a very necessary instrument in the bookie business and numbers racket.

The Department of Justice has asked its attorneys all over the U. S. to start collecting all available information on a list of 150 underworld characters, for use by probe weapons, the subpoena, the committee. The full list has been kept a secret but it has revealed that the names on it include Frank Costello, Joe Adonis, Ralph Capone, brother of Al, Mickey Cohen of Hollywood, Marty Krompner, Joey Rao Meyer (Socks), Lansky and his brother Jake, Waxie Gordon, Charles Fichetti of Chicago, "Trigger Mike" Coppola and Anthony Garfano.

Other members of the committee are Sen. Charles Tobey (R., N. H.); Sen. Herbert O'Connor (D., Md.); Sen. Lester Hunt

LONG THOUGHTS

Who can measure the length of a thought! Especially the thought of a child! A good thought is like the acorn, which becomes the Live Oak tree, which may live for a thousand years. Some thoughts are much longer than that. Aristotle urged upon men the 'golden mean,' and many business men today are following him; he lived three hundred years before the beginning of our era. The decalogue, or Ten Commandments, are long thoughts about how women and men should live. Perhaps the thoughts stirring in this child's mind have been dropped there by a parent or by a teacher or by a neighbor. Isn't it rather wonderful that you and I can start a train of thinking and of living, in a child, that may go on forever? How long is "forever?" That is how long some thoughts are.

Can you remember a word spoken to you in the long ago? Some of us treasure what seemed a chance thought passed to us by a careful teacher many years ago. When the soil is right and a mind is eager to know, seeds are precious. Have you learned a lesson that you count of great value? Do you wish that someone had passed it to you when you were young? Then why not do for some other child what you wish had been done for you? Would you not like to live forever in the esteem of another? Perhaps the child is our opportunity for some worthwhile immortality. Help her leave for posterity some long thoughts. What a pity that a good thought or a bit of wisdom we have garnered through many years should die with us! It does not need to die. The child near you is the good soil into which you may drop the good seed thought. "A sower went forth to sow." Every woman and every man is a sower. Is the seed good that we sow? What will the harvest be, for the thoughts we are putting into the minds of retentive childhood? Your thoughts and mine may become inspiring or discouraging thoughts to these precious persons that we love. Is it important then that we think straight, clean, sweet, kind, loving thoughts? These should be long thoughts. Attend your church regularly.

YOU IN THE CHURCH THE CHURCH IN YOU

Character is a by-product of the church. It is here that young and old alike are showered with benedictions that fortify and influence for a better citizenship and a sterner democracy. In the church the ministerial and a stranger alone can furnish leadership to handle the affairs of state in these perilous times. These we with our children should go to the church of our choice on Sunday. "You in the Church and the Church in you"—form a combination for good. Be a regular CHURCH-GOER and a daily BIBLE READER.

New Sox Boss Says Boston Will Come Out

By Stan Mockler

ST. LOUIS, June 24 (UP)—Stout Steve O'Neill inherited Joe McCarthy's headaches today with a mile-wide grin, a shrug and the prediction that the Boston Red Sox "would come out of their slump and get going soon."

The 59-year-old former Cleveland Indian and Detroit Tiger pilot, who assumed command of the disappointing Sox after McCarthy's resignation yesterday, said no immediate changes were planned and that the Sox still had a chance to win. His new charges immediately gave him a full vote of confidence after pausing to salute the out-going manager.

"The ball club is sound," O'Neill said. "We're getting better pitching now and the club is bound to straighten out and get rolling."

O'Neill was still stunned at the amazing events which gave him his third opportunity to manage a major league team. Only a few months ago the likeable and portly Irishman was fired by the Cleveland Indians, with whom he had served as one of Lou Boudreau's assistants in 1949.

The Red Sox hired him as a farm supervisor but appointed him coach after Kiki Cuyler's sudden death just before spring training.

Ted Williams, Vern Stephens and Al Zarilla spoke for their mates in greeting the new manager.

McCarthy was a good manager," Ted said. "And he always treated everybody swell. I never had any trouble with him and all the boys will certainly miss him."

Then the towering slugger said, "O'Neill is a great fellow and we'll all play for all we're worth behind him."

"I'm sorry to see McCarthy go," Zarilla said. "But O'Neill is the logical choice."

"It's tough to see Joe go," Stephens said simply. "But I'm glad O'Neill got the job."

O'Neill — one of four brothers to play in the majors — admitted his complete surprise.

"I knew McCarthy was sick, of course," he said. "But I expected him to return in a few days."

O'Neill was only one pennant — with the Tigers in 1945 — but has a reputation as a great handler of men. His greatest managerial fault — in contrast to McCarthy — is said to be his patience with some players who should be disciplined.

On the other hand that same patience had understanding nature aided Bob Feller and Hal Newhouser, both of whom came to O'Neill as undeveloped youngsters with strong arms, to develop into all-time great pitchers.

McCarthy Does What Said Would Never Do, Retire While Under Fire

BUFFALO, June 24 (UP)—Joe McCarthy, the most successful manager in baseball history, delivered his farewell address in characteristically blunt and straight-from-the-shoulder style today.

"When a man can't help a club any more it's time to quit," he said. "That's all there is to say. I'm sick and weary and I'm entitled to quit."

Thus did the man called the greatest manager of all time, who won more world championships than any other pilot, announce he had "retired for good this time."

McCarthy announced his resignation as New York Yankee manager in 1946 under severe pressure from Larry MacPhail but was persuaded to come out of retirement to pilot the Red Sox only a year and a half later. "This time it's for good," was the final statement from the man who despite his overwhelming success, was a cold and aloof figure. And as McCarthy bowed out, many of his former players rushed to his defense.

"I've always considered Joe McCarthy the best manager in baseball," said New York Yankee land Indians, with whom he had served as one of Lou Boudreau's assistants in 1949.

The Red Sox hired him as a farm supervisor but appointed him coach after Kiki Cuyler's sudden death just before spring training.

Ted Williams, Vern Stephens and Al Zarilla spoke for their mates in greeting the new manager.

McCarthy was a good manager," Ted said. "And he always treated everybody swell. I never had any trouble with him and all the boys will certainly miss him."

Then the towering slugger said, "O'Neill is a great fellow and we'll all play for all we're worth behind him."
