DiSalle Shows How to Win Friends in a Critical Congress

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Price Director Michael DiSalle, in his first appearance before a Congressional committee, demonstrated the perfect technique for getting along on Capitol Hill. He had such sober-minded senators as O'Mahoney, Taft, Flanders, Frear and Benton and Congressmen Hart and Buchanan laughing all over their faces and chucking in their stomachs. If it's possible to make price controls popular, the jovial ex-mayor of Toledo is the guy to do it. The main secret of Price Stabilization Director DiSalle's technique seems to be that he always obeys what should be Rule Number One for any public official—Never take yourself too darn seriously. When DiSalle first appeared before the Joint Congressional Committee on Economics, Chairman O'Mahoney seated him in the television and newsreel spotlights, before the microphones. The hint was that Mr. DiSalle should say something historic. He didn't bite. He wouldn't say anything because he didn't have anything to say, then. Reporters nearly fell out of their chairs and their jaws start yackety-yacking automatically. Mr. DiSalle merely observed that Chairman Cyrus Ching of the Wage Stabilization Board has been on the stand for an hour, but it wouldn't take him nearly that long to tell what he knew about price control.

NEVERTHELESS he does know something about price controls. He appears to be one of the few officials in Washington who have been studying the 20-volume history of OPA. This massive work was compiled at a cost of several millions of dollars, just so there would be a record of what mistakes had been made in the past, and how to avoid them in the future.

DiSalle has been conferring with the three past price administrators—Leon Henderson, Chester Bowles and Paul Porter. "They offered to elect me a member of their ex-OPA Administrators' Club," DiSalle observed with a big grin.

When Mr. DiSalle first came to town and showed himself, there were predictions that he wouldn't last long. These predictions were increased when Defense Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson cancelled DiSalle's first attempted price freeze order.

The way in which DiSalle was recruited for service as Price Stabilization director is not without interest. The story goes back to the 1930's, when Toledo was having its worst labor troubles. One of DiSalle's classmates was killed in the Auto Lite strike riots. Later on, after he had become a lawyer and gone into politics, DiSalle started to organize Labor-Management-Citizens committees to deal with industrial relations problems in the area.

AT first he couldn't get any public support. But one of the men who worked with him was Edward T. Cheyfitz, an official of the diecasters' union. He was a good labor leader and a good thinker, according to DiSalle. He accepted time studies and other measures for increasing labor productivity when most unions fought shy of them. The two worked closely in setting up the so-called Toledo labor plan.

Later Cheyfitz was hired by Eric Johnston as a labor adviser and brain trust. It was Cheyfitz who suggested to Johnston that DiSalle would make a good price administrator. Johnston relayed the suggestion to Dr. Alan Valentine, former head of the Economic Stabilization agency. Valentine had a plane flown out to Toledo to bring DiSalle to Washington for an interview and hired him on the spot.

The previous link through Eric Johnston now gives additional indication that DiSalle will stick around, now that Johnston is head of SSA. "But I'm still only five hours from Toledo," says DiSalle.

When Senator Taft started kidding DiSalle about building up an organization of 50,000 on 50,000, he said, no, 30,000 would be all he'd need for price control. "Some congressmen have been very helpful in suggesting people I might hire," DiSalle said with a smile. They got the point.

Shrink-Proof and Color-Fast
Washable Wool Slacks and Blouses
For Easy Sailing in Leisure Hours

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Washable wool, cut into slacks and blouses, has an obvious practicality. It can be laundered without worry over shrinkage. A new process that makes wool washable also makes it color-fast. Thus, it can be laundered often and still turn up looking fresh and new.

Washable wool is used by designer Carol Caldwell of California for the slacks and blouses that are so typical of California and so right for leisure hours elsewhere, too.

Actress Virginia Mayo, who owns a ranch in the San Fernando Valley, likes washable wool for ranch life. It's easily cared for and it can take real wear. She likes it, too, when she goes sailing, since there's no harm done if the wool is soaked by spray. Miss Mayo wears (left) Carol Caldwell's washable red-and-navy wool sailing suit with boxy midly blouse and knee-length pants. The blouse, which slips over the head, has large, boxy pockets. Neckline made adjustable by a zipper closing.

Washable gray flannel slacks and gold jersey blouse worn (right) by Miss Mayo are neatly tailored. Slacks nip in at the waist, button sailor-fashion. Blouse buttons from waist to high neck, has sleeves with easy cut.

It just couldn't be true, but still, it had to be. "Don't you believe me?" he pleaded.

Her answer was slow. "I don't know. Why did you tell me who you are?"

He looked down at the chipped black glass of the table. His low voice was hesitant, doubtful.

"I don't know. Oh, I had a reason. Maybe I'm screwy. Maybe worry and lack of sleep have got me thinking cockeyed, but from the way you reacted to the broadcast, the things you said and the things you've let me find out about your life..." He stopped, then he tore his eyes from the table and looked up at her.

"You said that you thought I might be traveling with a woman—that my chances would be better if I were traveling with a woman and had Judy dressed as a boy. Judy is dressed as a boy, but there is no woman."

MAY knew what he was going to ask. Any doubts she had of his identity fled. This was Paul Twing. This was the man the FBI and the police of many states were searching for—a man with a price on his head—a man facing the death sentence for the crime he had committed, and he was about to ask her to come with him.

Why? Why should she go with him? The tumultuous hammering of her heart told her she was terribly frightened at the thought of it. Why should she give up the little she had. Tomorrow. Something might happen tomorrow that would... yet, something had happened tonight.

All week she had been thinking about this very man—thinking of him as a hero, a crusader. Here he was. She'd met him, talked with him, he seemed no less. Through the endless drudgery of her barren existence she had so often wished she had something to work for, even to suffer for, something that could lend her life some meaning, a cause. He was fighting a cause and he wanted her with him. He offered her that. He offered her adventure, excitement—maybe death.

THE SCOREBOARD

Champ Jockey Walter Miller Was 'The Daddy of 'Em All'

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—As Joe Culmone and Willie Shoemaker lashed themselves through the stretch in their spectacular duel for the riding championship, the name of Walter Miller kept popping up.

Culmone and Shoemaker tied Miller's all-time record, 388 winners, established in 1906, but the feat is not comparable. Miller had 1284 mounts to 1674 for Culmone, 1634 for Shoemaker. There were only six races in Miller's day, and in most cases one was a steeplechase. Winter racing was negligible. Miller was limited to a seven-month season. Culmone and Shoemaker even rode on Sunday.

Miller rode in all the great stakes, in competition where Culmone and Shoemaker wouldn't be given a mount. Miller tackled and licked what many old-timers consider the greatest collection of riders the turf has ever known. Joe Nutter, Carroll Schilling, Willie Knapp, Vincent Powers, Eddie Duggan, Winnie O'Connor, Herman Radtke, D. Nicol, Tommy Burns and E. Hildebrand were then among the extraordinary jockeys.

Not a few who saw Miller rate him the daddy of them all. "Only Tod Sloan could be compared with him at the barrier and finish," says James A. McDonald, who was a New York racing writer when Miller was booting them down in front.

MILLER, a tall, thin, dark-eyed Jewish boy out of Brooklyn, was the ace reingman of the fabulous James R. Keene, who with his son, Foxhall, dominated the American racing scene from 1905 through '08. The Keenes of New York and famed Castleton Farm, hard by Lexington, mopped up to the same extent as the Rancocas Stable did when Sam Hildreth teamed with Harry F. Sinclair in '21-'22-'23.

The starting gate was unknown in Miller's day. A web, or rubber band about a foot and a half in width, was stretched across the track. Horses were walked up to it. Miller relaxed when he saw there was no chance for a break, but when the field was about in a straight line he had his horse wide awake, got a step the best of it more often than not.

"He was a hard-bitten little fellow," recalls Jim McDonald, who still writes of racing. "He licked other jocks with his fists, cowed them. They were scared to death of him."

Growing too heavy to ride, Miller played baseball briefly with the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League. He was an outfielder and a good hitter.

Returning to New York, Miller, now in his 60's, peddled racing tips under the name of Masked Jockey until three years ago. A progressive ailment, reportedly caused by a fall in Germany, made him a psychiatric case, and he is now in a New York sanitarium.

The overland trails of the Indians, worn deep long before the white man came to America were remarkable for following the shortest and easiest way possible between various points. Most of today's transportation lines east of the Mississippi are based on HERO ACE WANTS IN—Lt. Col. Joe Foss, of Sioux Falls, S. D., has asked the Air Force to remove him from the "no combat" list on which he was placed because he won the Medal of Honor. As a Marine Corps pilot in World War II, he shot down 26 Jap planes. Foss now commands the South Dakota Air National Guard unit which will be reactivated March 1. Foss says he wants to remain with his outfit and if it goes overseas, he wants to go with it—as a fighter.

18 Year Old Commoner Weds Shah Of Iran

TEHRAN, Iran, Feb. 12 (UP)—Handsome Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, 31, ruler of strategic and oil-rich Iran, married beautiful 18-year-old commoner Soraya Infandiari today while seated in dazzling Arabian nights splendor.

Cannons boomed a 21-gun salute and thousands standing in a foot of snow outside the pink-marble golestan palace cried "blessed be it" when the couple was joined in matrimony.

The ceremony was simple. The trappings were expensive and dazzling.

With the king and queen seated in chairs and the Mohammedan holy book of Koran in the bride's lap, a priest came forward and said:

"Dost thou, Soraya, daughter of Khalil, grant me power of attorney to execute this marriage?"
"Yes."
"Dost thou, Soraya, daughter of Khalil, take Mohammed Reza, son of Reza, for thy husband?"
"Yes."

"I hereby marry my client, Soraya, daughter of Khalil to Mohammed Reza, son of Reza."

Mobarek had (blessed be it)," the priest said.

The Shah repeated the response and then slipped a wedding ring on the bride's finger.

The queen mother and the Shah's sister kissed it. And a squadron of Iranian air force planes took off to inform the countryside that "our beloved Shah and empress" had been wed, climaxing a true life Cinderella story.

Hundreds of princes, nobles and diplomats and other personages from all over the globe attended the ceremony.

They included the Moslem world's spiritual leader, the Aga Khan; his wife, and Vincent Lee Hillier of California, brother-in-law of the Shah.

Two thousand guests were invited to toast the new bride at a reception.

Reburial Rites Held For One Of Tokyo Raiders

KILLEEN, Tex., Feb. 12 (UP)—Reburial services for one of the famed "Doolittle Raiders" of World War II were held yesterday with military honors.

Capt. Robert Manning Gray of Killeen, one of the hand-picked group which made the daring first bombing raid on Tokyo in 1942, was killed six months later in a plane crash in India.

At yesterday's ceremony of reburial, representatives of both an Air Force base and a VFW post named in his honor participated. A squad from the Bob Gray VFW post fired a final rifle salute at the graveside services, attended also by a large group of airmen from nearby Gray Air Force Base.

Seven planes from the James Connally Air Base at Waco circled low over the cemetery and an eighth plane, symbolic of the dead hero, wheeled in tight circles at a much higher altitude.

Ralph Farnham, who as a lad of 19 fought at the Battle of Bunker Hill in 1775, died in Acton, N. H., 85 years later at the age of 104. He was the last survivor of the historic battle.

We Like To Talk About Abstracts—

... because making abstracts has been our business for many years. And it is an interesting subject. Every day people come to us with their title problems. Some cases are tragic. Take the example of the couple who have spent their all for a home to find out later they have no title. Most title problems are simple and the abstracts helps to make them simple.
