Gen. Backs Long-Range Bombing Force

Lemay Says US Contribution To Defense Is Strong Air Power

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 (UP)—Lt. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay said today this country's "major contribution" to European defense should be a long-range bombing force capable of destroying Russia's industrial power.

Lemay is commanding general of the U. S. strategic Air Force whose mightiest weapon is the long-range atomic bomber, the B-36.

Lemay and other top Air Force generals were called before two Senate committees to testify on the administration's plans to send an additional four ground divisions to Europe for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's North Atlantic Pact Army.

Lemay's testimony appeared to constitute at least partial endorsement of proposals that the United States base its defense on powerful air and sea forces rather than ground troops stationed overseas. Chief proponents of this view are former president Herbert Hoover and Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O.

On the other hand, the U. S. Joint chiefs of staff's concept of our role in helping defend Europe always has been that we should provide the bulk of the air power, much of the sea power, and only a small part of the land power.

Lemay told senators that the strategic bombardment arm is the "greatest deterrent to Russian aggression at the present time."

Questioned by Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry, R., Neb., who seeks a build-up in air strength rather than ground troops, Lemay made these points:

1. U. S. strategic bombing power is not yet fully developed. But it will be. It is planned to build the air force to 95 combat groups, a sizable number of which will be new long-range bombardment groups.

2. Strategic bombing was "decisive" in Lemay's opinion—in both the European and Pacific theaters of World War II.

3. Long-range bombing is the "only effective weapon we have at the present time."

4. Strategic air force of "proper size, properly supported" could destroy the industrial potential of any nation, and "that includes Russia."

Correction

It has been brought to the attention of this paper that an error was made in a story published Monday, Feb. 19. The wire story concerned an award for outstanding humanitarian service presented to Jack Benny during the regional conference of the United Jewish Appeal.

This paper inadvertently published the account of the conference as being attended by "11,000 Jewish Communist leaders." This paper called the United Press in Dallas today and this is how the story was released: "An award for outstanding humanitarian service was presented to Jack Benny during the southwest regional conference of the United Jewish Appeal which was attended by 11,000 community leaders from Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas."

Man Dies In Gas Station Explosion

AMARILLO, Tex., Feb. 21 (UP)—An explosion and fire yesterday wrecked an Amarillo service station, killing one man and injuring two others.

Glen Dale Flowers, 21, of Claude, died in a hospital yesterday. Joe Murphy, 17, of Quanah, another employee of the service station, is in critical condition today from burns. The owner of the station, V. Talkington, was burned on the face and hands.

The explosion was attributed to gas fumes.

Chuchon, Once Prosperous Farming Korea Town, Turned Into Shambles

BY WILLIAM BURSON
CHUCHON, KOREA, Feb. 21 (UP)—This east-central Korean village was an abandoned, flaming shambles when Negro Rangers and tank-riding G.I.'s captured it for the third time in the war.

Once a prosperous farming community by Korean standards, Chuchon had been empty of enemy troops all along. And only a handful of civilians were left there.

But the pilots in the Shooting Star jets and Corsair dive bombers didn't know that. They hurled rockets and searing napalm on the innocent hamlet.

American artillerymen for behind the lines didn't know that the Reds had pulled out either. They helped blast the area to ruins.

I watched the occupation yesterday from the shadow of a Shinto shrine atop a hunchbacked hill overlooking the town and the Chuchon river valley. It was like a front-row seat at a horror movie.

Billows of angry smoke puffed up from the town and shrouded the valley. Orange flames licked up into the thatched-roofed houses. The center of the town was leveled.

The only thing resembling enemy activity was an exploding ammunition dump.

The war planes riddled everything in sight. They either didn't see or ignored white flags waved by three scared civilians standing in the open. Bullets kicked up dirt at their feet. Almost miraculously they escaped unharmed.

When the air and artillery had finished, Negro Rangers plumed waist-deep into the icy, bridgeless Chuchon River. Big tanks walled through the stream behind them. Up the river bank and into the town they crept cautiously—every gun spitting fire.

Troops in the hills to the south, east and west laid down covering fire over the advancing Rangers.

Company, battalion and regimental commanders searched in vain for buildings or command posts for the night. Nothing was useable. They settled for tents and the infantrymen holed up along the ridges north of town.

Only one structure stood in the midst of the ruins. A little white church, its white steeple thrust up into the smoke, was unscathed atop a hill just outside town.

Smoke which billowed from the town dissipated into lazy halos over the steeple. It was a symbol of hope among the rubble of war.

Agents Seize 81 Stills In Texas

AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 21 (UP)—Bootleg stills were still in fashion in Texas last year, the Texas Liquor Control Board has reported.

Liquor agents seized 81 stills in the state and confiscated 258 gallons of illicit booze. Other parts of the board's report, released yesterday, showed 142 bone dry counties in Texas. The remaining 112 are wet in varying degrees, ranging from barely damp to soaking.

Ninety-one counties permitted the sale of all distilled spirits. Two counties restricted sales to spirits containing 14 per cent or less alcohol and 19 counties allow the sale of beer only.

THE WEATHER

Splotches of heavy clouds and fog dotted the Texas skies today and the weatherman predicted the cloudiness would form a near-solid blanket over the state tomorrow.

Warmer temperatures were forecast for tomorrow in all except the Panhandle and South Plains where a new mass of cooler air was expected.

Some stations reporting heavy clouds today included Houston, Galveston, Lufkin, Corpus Christi, Dallas, Abilene and Ft. Worth. Both Fort Worth and Lufkin had fog.

Temperatures by mid-morning included Dallas 44, Waco 42, Lufkin 47, Corpus Christi 55, Childress 38, Lubbock 30, Amarillo 54, Abilene 36, Texarkana 56 and Austin 46.

College Sophs Hold Party For Queen Nominees

The Sophomore class of Ranger Junior College will hold a Canasta and Forty-Two party on Tuesday, February 27, at 7:30 in the Student Union Building which is on the Campus of Ranger Junior College. The public is invited to attend this party which is to be held to raise funds for the Sophomore candidates for Queen of Ranger Junior College. The candidates of the Sophomore class are June Ann Morton, and Laura Mitchell, both of Ranger.

Although the money goes to a good cause the purchase of a ticket is not a donation. The Sophomores are equipped to take care of over a hundred participants and would welcome more. Prizes will be awarded to the high players and a door prize will be given. This party is to be an affair of friendly competition so bring your neighbors and meet your other friends at the party.

WELL ON VAN NORMAN SURVEY SCHEDULED TO DRILL FRIDAY

Five Die After Taking Drinks Of Anti-Freeze

OAKLAND, Calif., Feb. 21 (UP)—Two soldiers and three crewmen died and nine other men became seriously sick when they drank anti-freeze smuggled aboard a freighter during the Hungnam evacuation in Korea last December, it was disclosed today.

The story was told by officers aboard the liberty-type freighter Tainaron, which arrived here Monday. The Tainaron, owned by the Actium Shipping Corp. of New York, is operated by the Navy's military sea transportation service.

Chief Officer Alvin W. McGee, 27, of Houston, Tex., said the Tainaron took on 148 exhausted and half-frozen American troops from the embattled beachhead at Hungnam Dec. 18.

"We didn't know about the anti-freeze until after the men began showing up sick," said McGee. "Then we searched the ship and found a big barrel of it."

"We threw it over the side and warned the men to lay off the stuff if they wanted to live."

McGee said the barrel was aboard an Army truck which the Tainaron was originally supposed to have landed.

The first victim died the next day while the ship was still tied up at Hungnam. McGee said the men looked so bad they broke radio silence and asked the hospital ship Haven how to treat the victims.

"They kept on drinking after the first man died," he said. "And they kept on even after the second man died, in spite of our warnings."

Mules Could Be Used In Korea

ON THE CENTRAL FRONT, Korea, Feb. 21 (UP)—Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of the U. S. Army field forces, hinted today that the Army could use some mules in Korea.

Comparing the Korean campaign with the one he directed in Italy during World War II, Clark said:

"Over there we had mules to carry our supplies over the mountains instead of machines and mule packers."

"And the nice thing about mules is that you can eat them when you get hungry."

Army Getting Raw Deal Because Air Force, Navy Gobble Up More Than Share Of Intelligent Men

By Lyle C. Wilson
WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 (UP)—What the mums and pops should know about the quarrel over manpower among the armed services is that their kids who go into the Army are getting a very raw deal.

This is not the Army's fault. Blame lies with the selfish policies of the Navy and Air Force in grabbing far more than their share of the more intelligent young men eligible for military service.

The Army kids get a raw deal because the enlisted personnel of the Army as a whole is of inferior stuff. Not all foot soldiers are inferior—not by a long shot. But the Army is being compelled to accept more than its share of less intelligent men and gets much less than its share of the more intelligent.

That means that the average of intelligence among the Army's enlisted men is too low for the Army's safety. Many squad and platoon leaders in the Army are smart as paint. Yet the Army must draw its non-commissioned officers from what is available.

After the ablest men have gotten their stripes the Army must promote men less able. These non-com leaders, of the small units really run the battle once the shooting starts. They can save lives or waste lives. The mums and pops should know that their kids do not have as good a chance to live under leadership of an inferior

THROUGH THE MIST OF FEAR
By Forrest W. Seymour

Chief Editorial Writer, Des Moines Register
It just happened that during recent days there drifted into our acquaintance, long enough for brief chats, an Anglican from Australia, a Moslem from Pakistan, a Catholic from Austria, a Lutheran from Sweden, a Moslem from Iraq, a Protestant from Holland, a Jew from Israel, a Catholic from Argentina.

In every case these persons had been reared and educated in cultures quite different from our own—some of them markedly different. Yet as we recall these pleasant conversations now, we realize that we found ourselves immediately "at home" with the visitor, and talking about the simple things which all human societies face in common—problems of health, and better education, and security, and respect for law, personal family problems; the values in our respective traditions and historical experiences, as nations and peoples; and so on.

The whole world is akin in these things. Differences of religion, of color, even of political creed, dissolve and are forgotten because they are but mists that sometimes blur our vision of the common hopes and common characteristics of the human family.

If this is true of peoples as diverse as the globe at its farthest reaches can provide, how wide is the area of agreement among us who live in the same environment of freedom, who respect the same laws, who worship the same God, who enjoy incomparable comforts and conveniences together, and who have toiled and fought side by side for so long to preserve our common security and ideals?

In this Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, let us all take the opportunity to step through the mist of prejudice and fear and shallow habit, and see our neighbors for what they truly are—Americans, family groups, humble citizens, as anxious as we for their children and their ideals, as willing as we to sacrifice and share in our common purposes.

Why Small Business Worries About Place in Defense Plans
BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—The television industry today offers as good an example as you can find to show why small business is scared by the defense production outlook.
The government has not yet issued any orders cutting back or shutting down on TV set manufacture directly. Through its grapevine, however, the industry has been anticipating that such an order may drop before March 1, to be fully effective about July 1.
National Production Administration refuses to confirm or deny this rumor. All N.P.A. has done so far is limit the amount of a few critical materials, like cobalt, which can be used in non-defense manufacture. Anticipating that a cut-back or shut-down order will come eventually, however, Belmont Radio Corp. of Chicago has recently been promoting a plan thought up by its vice president, W. L. Dunn. Purpose of the plan is to save TV distributor, dealer and repair organizations from destruction by defense production competition.
Main idea of the plan is to have the government let its contracts for new electronics equipment to the companies now making television sets. These manufacturers would in turn be required to let sub-contractors for parts assemblies to the TV dealers.

REPAIRMEN and salesmen—even their wives if the men themselves were called into service—would be put to work making these sub-assemblies in their stores and shops. The completed sub-assemblies would then be shipped to the factories for final assembly.
This is the essence of the "Electronics Dispersed Manpower Plan," as it's called. It is something like the "bits and pieces" production plans employed to a limited extent during the last war.
From the TV manufacturers' and dealers' standpoint, the beauty of this plan, on paper, is that it would leave their sales and service organizations intact. They would be instantly ready to go back to selling TV sets to the eager customers as soon as production curbs were lifted.
From the Defense Production Administration viewpoint, this plan is now looked on with a somewhat fishy eye, for several reasons.
In the first place, new electronics equipment wanted by the armed services is now described as little more than "a gleam in somebody's eye." What is meant is that some general thinks he would like to have some fancy gadget like a radar that will permit a jet airplane flying 1000 miles an hour at night to find a submarine at the bottom of the ocean, aim a rocket at it as soon as the sub gets in range, then fire automatically so it never misses.

BEFORE any such Alley Cop time-machine gadget can be built, the electronics engineering companies have to go to work. There are only a few of the 40 TV set makers who have research departments of say 100 scientists competent to tackle such assignments. So naturally, they get the prime contracts.
The TV assemblers, who buy licenses under a couple of patents, buy the sets from one party's maker and the wooden cabinets from another, may do a better merchandising job and may sell more sets than the manufacturers. But they can't produce new equipment.
Sub-assembly methods employing labor in scattered repair shops are considered so costly by comparison as to be impractical. Costs would be piled up by having to send instructors around to train workers, delays in shipping materials out and sub-assemblies back, extra inspection and repair of equipment damaged in transit.
What this all adds up to is a case history which shows why small business may have particular reason to feel glum over the defense production outlook, as now being planned in Washington. Usually, they get the prime contract.

"The death benefit payments in this state last year were made under 34,876 policies, compared with 33,194 policies in the previous year and 23,128 policies in 1941," the Institute reported. "Of the aggregate 1950 payments in the state, $34,443,000 was under 12,450 ordinary policies; $9,377,000 was under 4,361 group life insurance policies; and $4,828,000 was under 18,065 industrial insurance policies."

THE STORY: Paul Twing took justice in his own hands when he kidnaped Harry Twing, small daughter of his dead brother, from her unworthy mother, May Jenkins, a girl from West Virginia, insists on accompanying Paul and Judy, even though Paul is charged with kidnaping. They go to New York, where Paul has a friend, a sea captain, who can help him get out of the country. But in New York Judy inadvertently exposes her identity while she is with May. Paul, meanwhile is trying to contact the sea captain Martin Jaboe. When May and Judy return to their room and Judy is playing with a little boy who lives in the rooming house, May sees plainclothesmen draw up outside the place. She pushes Judy, who is dressed in boys' clothing, into a closet and then turns on Harry, Judy's playmate.

THERE was a heavy knock at the door. May gripped Harry's arms and whispered with fierce urgency. "Not a word. Do as I say!" Her eyes pleaded for his obedience. Then she strode to the door and opened it.
The men walked right in, brushing past May. One removed his hat. The other didn't bother. Instead, he gave May a quick look, then optically inventoried the room. The one who had removed his hat pulled his wallet out and showed May an identification card with his picture on it.
"Just doing some checking, lady. Nothing to get scared about. What's your name?"
She had given the landlady her right name and there were things in her purse that would identify her. There was no use lying.
"May Jenkins."
"Where you from?"
"Wheeling."
"How long you been here?"
"Since last night."
He gestured towards Harry.
"This your kid?"
"Yes."
He walked over to Harry.
"What's your name, son?"
Harry gulped and looked at from her as the men came out of the building. One of the detectives looked up at her and winked. They pushed their way through the people and made for their car.

The landlady hurried after them. When they were seated in the car and the motor had been started, the one sitting nearest to her, she pushed her way through the crowd and made for their car.

WHEN Paul Twing woke that morning he had momentary difficulty orienting himself. The small, sickly yellow room and the narrow bed were totally unfamiliar, but then the fuzziness of sleep cleared from his mind and he recalled the hotel he had checked into late at night.
After crossing the river he had wandered New York's streets for several hours and then found a room in the theatrical district. He dressed hurriedly and went out. He bought a newspaper and scanned the headlines as he walked to the corner. Nothing new.
After a brief breakfast at an orange juice stand, Paul crossed the street and went into a drug store.
While walking about downtown New York the previous evening he had debated the safest approach to Martin Jaboe. He had no idea where his friend and the ship would be at the moment, but he did know that he could get that information by going to the office of the New York agent of the small oil company Jaboe worked for. Phoning seemed to be the safest expedient.
Paul found the number in the telephone directory and dialed it.

The crowd's attention was torn.

Blood, Taken From People In States, Ends Journey To Korea To Save Life

By H. D. Quigg
A HOSPITAL IN KOREA, Feb. 21 (UP)—The receiving room is large and high ceilinged and filled with the chugging of the motor of a blower which sends hot air into the room through two big canvas tubes lying on the floor.

The ambulances back up to the receiving room door and the wounded come out on canvas litters, covered with olive drab blankets, their faces showing dust-caked heads, their arm lying limp. It's hard to tell whether some of them are alive or dead.

Ten soldiers lie on litters on the receiving room floor. Some smoke and gaze at the lights dimly on the high ceiling. Some just lie, their eyes closed, faces sick and grey. They're waiting to be checked in, screened and treated. Many still wear their green field caps. Dried blood mottles their stiffened clothing. Here and there a first aid splint shows on an arm or leg.

Other wounded, starting to get treatment, are on a row of Army cots. An attendant with knife and scissors cuts off their clothing. Two or three are getting whole blood from pint bottles hung above them on iron frames. If you watch them you can see the pink blush of life coming back to their faces.

Survey Lists Top 25 Records

Surveys made among music publishers, composers, bandleaders, disc jockeys and music stores showed that records made by Bing Crosby, Artie Shaw and Glenn Miller lead a list of "The Top 25 Records All Time."

Results of the poll, which are published in the February issue of Cosmopolitan magazine, list three of Bing's records among the top 25, with Shaw and Guy Lombardo winning two places each.

Crosby's "White Christmas," sold over eight million copies, was named most popular in the survey, and his "Jingle Bells" was runner-up.

The next four platters, listed in order of their popularity, are: Glenn Miller's "In The Mood"; Artie Shaw's "Begin the Beguine"; Les Brown's "Sentimental Journey"; and Shaw's Stardust.

Guy Lombardo's "Winter Wonderland" and "Humoresque" were in 17th and 24th places, respectively. The oldest record on the list is Gene Austin's "My Blue Heaven," made in 1927.

"The airtime hits," says radio and TV columnist Jack O'Brian, who reports the survey, "as a rule, are not flash favorites. The recordings that endure are those people genuinely like to listen to—not the bizarre or novel."

Families Urged To Guard Against Gas Dangers

Gas in its natural form is odorless. In order to protect the public, utility companies or sellers are required by the law to include a scent. This is so persons can distinguish the gas when it is leaking, and prevent injury to themselves and others and personal property.

Unfortunately, most persons refuse to recognize the dangers inherent in breathing even small quantities of fuel gas—either natural or manufactured. Bothering headaches, a rundown feeling, low body metabolic rate are all indications of having breathed gas.

More than frequently a person will enter a business establishment or a home or an office and be struck immediately by the sometimes faint, sometimes strong, but always definite odor of escaping gas.

It is odd that after all of the safeguards provided for people that there should be so much carelessness in the handling of this dangerous product. Within its limits and safely used, gas is an undeniable necessity. Carelessly used, individually, it is more dangerous than a rattlesnake and many times more powerful.

Because of the intensity of the recent cold wave and with the prospect of more to come in the ensuing weeks, the Associated Plumbing Contractors of Texas is issuing from its headquarters in Austin, a broad and emphatic warning to everyone. Guard your homes, your lives and your families by careful and meticulous care.

See that stoves are adjusted properly and are not giving off carbon monoxide gas. See that all connections, especially old dangerous rubber hose connections, are checked and renewed. See that valves are tight and that there is no leakage.

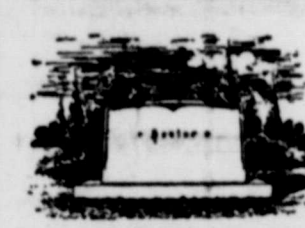

The recent flurry of gas hot water heater explosions, gas pocket explosions and destructive fires should be ample warning.

A&M Takes Over First Place In SWC Standing

United Press Sports Writer
The Texas Aggies ruled the basketball roost in the Southwest Conference today.

A&M turned in a convincing, 49 to 43, victory over Southern Methodist's Mustangs last night, while the Baylor Bears upset Texas Christian, 61 to 53.

The results left TCU, Texas and Arkansas all tied for the No. 2 spot.

No other games are scheduled until Friday night, when TCU plays SMU at Fort Worth and Baylor takes on Texas at Waco. The Aggies trailed, 29 to 22, going into the second half. However, they tied the count with nine minutes to go. Center Buddy Davis dropped in two quick baskets as A&M grabbed the lead, then stalled for time until the clock ran out the final two minutes.

Davis led scoring with 19 points. SMU's Derrell Murphy scored 18.

Baylor dumped TCU into a second-place tie in a game that saw the lowly Bears outshooting their favored opponents every step of the way.

The Frogs led briefly in early stages of the game, but Baylor forged ahead to take a 35-33 half time lead. The Bruins had little trouble in the last half.

Huge Map Lends Background For Korea Newsmen

BY H. D. QUIGG
SHINMUN ALLEY, KOREA, Feb. 21 (UP)—Every morning a giggly Korean girl makes the rounds of correspondent's rooms and emits what sounds at first like a polite belch.

"Brrfin," she says. "Ffin meen-utes."

In 15 minutes, she is back. "Brrfin naw," she says.

And the correspondents covering 8th Army headquarters troop downstair for their morning briefing on the state of the war.

This building—this firetrap of a Korean schoolhouse—is the hourglass through which all the news from Korea to the outside world must pass.

Here the censors work. Here the news comes in by Army telephone and teletype from the war correspondents covering the fighting here the 8th Army gives out "the big picture."

The Korean girl is an employee in the office of the correspondents' billet. There are three phones in the office, one for incoming calls to Tokyo, where the news fans out by wireless to the rest of the world. The phones are almost always busy, and many times correspondents are waiting in line to get at them.

For the briefing, the correspondents sit behind desks in a long narrow schoolroom. The briefer, an army captain with a pencil tucked behind his right ear, stands before a map using a long wooden pointer in the manner of an old-fashioned school marm.

The map is twice as high as he is and nearly 20 feet wide and virtually covers an end wall of the room.

It shows a segment of the waste of Korea where the fighting is going on. At a point below the fighting front on the map is a jagged line of purple tape extending across the peninsula from sea to sea and looking like a financial page graph in a period of rising prosperity. This line marks the jump-off point of the Army's "limited offensive" which started Jan. 25.

The briefing officer reads information from a situation report covering action the preceding day and night. The newsmen take notes. When the briefing ends, the men from five press associations start beating their portable typewriters. The speed with which the pages are turned in to the censor governs the order in which they may be read over the telephone to Tokyo.
