MacArthur Changed The Japanese Mind

(United Press Staff Correspondent Frank Tremaine covered Gen. Douglas MacArthur's arrival in Tokyo after World War II. Today, he helped cover his departure. Below, Tremaine compares the two scenes.)

TOKYO, April 16 (UP)—The Japanese wept when Gen. Douglas MacArthur entered Tokyo Sept. 5, 1945.

They were the humiliated tears of the defeated, shed behind doors of war-blasted homes. No crowds lined the streets to see the American "conqueror." No flags flew. The new ruler had banned all displays of the rising sun emblem.

The Japanese wept again today upon MacArthur's departure for the United States. Hundreds of thousands lined the eight-mile route to the airport. And the flags of the rising sun blazed forth by the thousands in the brilliant morning sunshine.

The tears of 1951 were hugely different. They spoke of love, respect and faith in a tall, stern American who had become their unofficial emperor.

MacArthur's attitude towards the Japanese had changed too. Before the surrender ceremony aboard the battleship Missouri Sept. 2, he stood grimly on the deck while a tiny launch chugged alongside with a Japanese delegation.

The defeated foreign minister Mamoru Shigemitsu, with top hat and frock coat, limped up to his wooden leg ready to deliver a polite address.

MacArthur cut off all speeches. He brusquely showed Shigemitsu where to sign, issued a terse statement, delivered a brief prayer and closed the ceremony.

At the American embassy, three days later, he raised the Stars and Stripes over what was to become his home for the post-war years.

The only Japanese present for the ceremony on that crisp September morning were a few gardeners working in the embassy compound. They hardly glanced up for the historic flag-raising ceremony.

Japan trembled for fear of the orders it expected from the stern Supreme Commander in the Embassy. But one by one—with safeguards—he restored their rights and taught them the ways of Democracy.

Movement Grows For MacArthur To Be President

SAN ANTONIO, April 16 (UP)—Strong public sentiment for Gen. Douglas MacArthur has been shown in mail and telegrams flooding in on "MacArthur-for-President" headquarters here, the movement's organizer said today.

John Johnston, real estate operator and oil broker, said he had more than 10,000 letters and telegrams endorsing his plan to present MacArthur's name to the 1952 Republican National Convention as a presidential candidate.

That step "definitely" will be taken, Johnston said, and if the Republicans don't take MacArthur as their nominee "then we'll run him as Douglas MacArthur, American."

The presidential boom for MacArthur was originated by Johnston at an informal session in a downtown hotel here last Wednesday, within a few hours after President Truman relieved the general of all his military commands in the Far East.

Johnston said the movement would be expanded nationwide, but headquarters would stay in San Antonio. "Our next step," he said, "will be to secure managers in each of the 48 states."

LEGAL MINDS TAKE DALLAS

DALLAS, April 16 (UP)—More than 1,000 attorneys and judges from five states began week-long conferences here today in the Southwestern Regional Convention of the American Bar Association.

Delegates from Texas, New Mexico, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma gathered to hear addresses by some of the nation's outstanding jurists, including United States Supreme Court Justices Tom Clark and Robert H. Jackson, and Federal Judge Harold R. Medina, who presided in the famed trials of Communist Party Leaders in America.

Also to speak during the week are Cody Fowler, of Tampa, Fla., President of American Bar Association; Glenn R. Winters of Ann Arbor, Mich., Secretary of the American Judicature Society; Henry R. Luce, Editor-in-Chief of Time, Fortune and Life Magazines; Maj. Gen. C. P. Cabell, Intelligence Chief for the Air Force; and Carol M. Shanks, President of Prudential Life Insurance Company.

A number of other dignitaries will visit the convention, including Atomic Energy Chief Gordon Dean, members of the Supreme Court of Texas, and Dr. Antonio Quevedo, Ecuador's delegate to the United Nations.

The convention opened Monday to run through Saturday.

Confederate Vet Is Honored By Friends In Austin

AUSTIN, April 16 (UP)—Thomas Evans Riddle, one of Texas' three living Confederate Veterans, was 105 years old today and he had a big party to add to his memories.

Riddle, the only veteran who lives in the state's old Confederate Home here, was honored by more than 100 friends yesterday—24 hours before he hit the 105 mark.

Still carrying a heavy growth of wavy gray hair, he stowed his cane away for the day and "had a wonderful time" as he blew out "an awful lot" of the 105 candles on his huge three-tiered birthday cake.

He wore a dark blue suit and pale blue shirt and blue tie—his favorite "dress-up" garb. And of the crowd, he was about as active as any, including the kids.

A seven-piece orchestra from the state school for the blind played for him, as they did for his birthday last year, and Riddle had news for them:

"I'll be looking for you fine folks next year—but if I miss you, I know we'll meet in heaven."

Pearson Will Attend Hearing

L. R. Pearson, Ranger, a member of the State Public Health Committee, will attend a hearing Wednesday before the State Legislature for House Bill —o. 208 which would outlaw advertising by chiropractors in the state of Texas.

The bill authored by Representative Wood of Crockett who introduced the bill at the request of the medical profession to attempt to "allow one group to dictate the ethics of another group," according to a news release from the Texas Press Association.

STATE OFFICIALS WILL PLAY A SLOT MACHINE IN DALLAS

AUSTIN, April 16 — A Senator, the Attorney General of Texas and the Director of the Department of Public Safety will play a slot machine this week in Dallas, but it will be for demonstration purposes only in a television broadcast over Station WFFA-TV.

The program will be carried Friday, April 20, from 7:45 to 8:15 p.m.

Mex Official Says Conference Was Successful

LAREDO, April 16 (UP)—Manuel Tello, Chief of the Mexican Foreign Office, told newsmen here that the Inter-American Foreign Ministers Conference recently concluded in Washington was "truly a success."

Tello stopped off briefly in Laredo yesterday, enroute to Mexico City from Washington, where the conference ended a week ago.

"The conference doubtless will result in greater collaboration among the American Republics," Tello said. "It will benefit the collective security and will help solve, in larger part of the economic problems created by the international situation."

Tello praised a resolution aimed at preventing intervention of international Communism in the American countries. But he said, "In Mexico the Communist party has almost no significance. We have laws that guarantee internal security and laws against espionage, sabotage and all other acts of social disruption."

U. S. Ambassador and Mrs. William O'Dwyer will honor Tello and his wife, Senora Guadalupe Macias De Tello, at a reception in the U. S. Embassy at Mexico City Wednesday night.

MORE ARREST EXPECTED

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 16 (UP)—An FBI spokesman said today he expected more arrests "at a later date" in an alleged conspiracy to defraud a Syracuse Bank of $308,521.22. He did not elaborate.

"First we've got a lot of work to do," he said, referring to an FBI investigation of accounts of the Syracuse Trust Co. handled by two jailed bookkeepers.

The two were charged with conspiring to defraud the bank over a five-year period while they lived in comparative poverty.

Negro School Wins Awards

The Slaughter Ward Colored School, Ranger, entered the Texas Interscholastic League of Colored Schools District Meet and walked off with five certificates and one trophy.

The trophy school was awarded the trophy for their outstanding work in literary events. Walter Baker was victor in the Sub-Junior Spelling Contest and was awarded a certificate from the executive committee of the 21st District League. He took first place in his division by defeating a number of other spellers from all over the district.

Barbara Nadine Lewis took first place in the Sub-Junior Girl's Spelling contest. She was awarded a similar certificate. The Ward School won first place in the Arts and Crafts division.

Barbara Lewis also won first place in the piano division. Luther Woodruff made a speech on "If" which won him the first place award in the Sub-Junior Declamation division.

The winning students were coached by Mrs. B. C. Lyons, a teacher at the Negro School in Ranger. A great deal of time and work have been put into the teaching of these students and they are due credit for their achievement.

ATTACK STALLED BY DRIVE AT WESTERN END OF FLANK

By Frank Tremaine
United Press Staff Correspondent
TOKYO, Tuesday, April 17 (UP)—United Nations forces launched a wide flanking attack around the eastern end of the Hwachon Reservoir in Central Korea Monday after murderous Red resistance stalled their drive at the Western end.

Flanking north after capturing the Red stronghold of Yanggu Sunday, the Allies routed a small North Korean force during the day and seized Yachon. The town is three miles East of the Reservoir.

Communist troops in Yachon fled before the attack. They took up positions to the north and lobbed mortar shells into the town. UN troops destroyed one 40-millimeter anti-tank gun found there.

A similar drive against Red troops west of the Reservoir an into murderous artillery and mortar fire from high stair-stepped ridges along both sides of the Pukhan River below the dam.

Stalled there for the sixth straight day, Allied commanders began massing forces all along the 14-mile stretch of the Reservoir's southern bank.

The Reds still controlled Hwachon's 18 giant floodgates, which could release a 60-foot wall of water on UN forces flooding up the River Valley toward Hwachon.

The massive dam wall itself must be breached to release the full fury of the floodwaters, however. Allied Intelligence reports said it was doubtful if the Reds could destroy the dam. They failed last week in trying to flood the valley by opening some of the gates by hand.

Allied warplanes from fighters to Superfortress bombers blasted the Reds all the way from the front lines to the Yalu River boundary within Manchuria.

The Reds sent planes into combat for the first time since their humiliating defeat four days ago, when 35 of their jet fighters were destroyed or damaged.

Again they lost. One of their planes was probably destroyed and two more damaged in a running battle that started 40 miles south of the border.

The sky fight opened when 16 American F-86 Sabrejets jumped an estimated 30 Russian-built MIG 15 Jets. It developed into two dogfights.

One lasted five minutes and the other ten minutes before the Communists fled to their sanctuary beyond the Manchurian border.

Maj. Harry R. Casleman, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was credited with probably destroying one of the MIGs.

Casleman said he attacked the MIG at 27,000 feet and hung on while it went through several sharp turns, climbs and dives.

"I scored several good bursts in his left wing and fuselage," Casleman said. "He started to smoke. I kept hitting him all the way down to 3,000 feet. He was really smoking when he went across the Yalu into Manchuria. I don't think he could make it back to Antung Airstrip."

B-29 Superfortresses blasted the Pyongyang Airfield during the day while light bombers hit the supply center of Haeju and fighters blasted frontline targets and bridges behind the lines.

The armored task force that captured Yanggu Sunday reported the town, once a big Red supply center, now was deserted.

ever negotiating and that their objective is to keep a U. N. Army tied up in Korea indefinitely.

Not being mind readers, neither side in this controversy can prove its viewpoint as you prove something by algebra. The minds they would have to read are those of Joseph Stalin and the dozen men who make up the Russian Politburo. They are the men who, in the final analysis, are going to decide when and where World III starts or whether there is even going to be one. If they decide to strike in Asia, MacArthur will have been proved right. If in Europe, Truman will have been proved right.

These general observations can be made:

Stalin would not hesitate for a minute to abandon the Chinese Communists to their fate if it suited Russia's over-all objectives. Moscow is flexible; never wedded irrevocably to any foreign policy.

If Russia plans an invasion of Western Europe, time now works against her and she had better strike quickly. An army is rising around Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

A discovery by a Russian scientist—one that would give Moscow what she would consider equality in atomic firepower—could change the whole picture abruptly.

The leadership of Red China is temporarily disorganized. Mao Tse-Tung apparently is seriously ill and his subordinates are trying to cope with considerable internal unrest. It might become bad enough that they would welcome a truce, but they are determined to try one more hard punch.

By Harry Ferguson

A week ago today there were three main issues between President Truman and General Douglas MacArthur. Now there are only two. The one that has been removed is the question of the General issuing statements touching on diplomatic matters while he is a United Nations Supreme Military Commander. His removal took care of that one.

The two that remain—and they will become hotter issues after the General lands in this country—are:

1. Should the Korean War be extended to Red China by bombing raids, an invasion of the mainland by Chiang Kai-Shek's troops and a blockade of the Chinese coast? Truman says no; MacArthur says yes.

2. Is Asia or Europe our main battle ground against Communism? Truman thinks Europe; MacArthur says Asia.

A quick military victory over Red China—one that would cause Peiping to abandon its Korean adventure—would be a triumph for the United Nations. But to obtain a quick victory, the U.N. would have to hit a harder blow than its army in Korea, under its present limitations is capable of delivering. MacArthur believes that blow should be struck and that we assume a calculated risk. The risk being that Russia would jump into the war herself.

Truman's policy is to try to keep the Korean war from spreading. Some of our Allies, notably the British, have been pressing us to try to settle the war by negotiation. Now they are to have their chance. There is a calculated risk involved in that policy, too. The risk being that the Chinese Communists may have no intention of

Children Taught To Punch Boards

AUSTIN, April 15—Children are being taught to use punchboards, Senator George O. Nokes of Corsicana warned as he urged passage of a bill to prohibit the manufacture or possession of punchboards.

He pointed out that a punchboard manufacturing company placed a miniature punchboard on the children's toy market, Christmas. It is not a gambling device, but contains question to be punched out and answered.

"It could serve to make punchboard addicts of our youngsters," he said.

Senator Nokes, who introduced the original resolution calling for a crime investigation in Texas, maintains that punchboards are the wedge inserted into communities by gambling interests.

"They are, moreover, in the hands of well-meaning but misinformed civic and fraternal groups. The gambling utilizes the boards to move into an area with other types of gambling devices," he said.

Senator Nokes explained that most people do not realize chances against their winning on a punch board range from 499 to one to 1,500 to one, depending on the type board.

"Some punchboard manufacturers," he continued, "sell boards in which the handler is informed of the winning punch and punches it out in advance so that he won't have to give a prize. This his profit is increased and the punch 'sucker' hasn't a chance to win."

Senator Nokes' bill outlawing the use of punchboards was introduced upon the recommendation of the Attorney General's Conference of District and Coun-

Plan To Change Name Of Town

TRUMAN, April 15 (UP)—This hamlet, just east of Dallas stood divided today on whether to change its name from Truman to, say, MacArthur.

No one suggested that it take back its original name, Mesquite Tap, but E. G. Cogburn was so upset by President Harry S. Truman's dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from the Far East Military Command last week that he considered petitioning for a change.

Cogburn said he had thought about changing the name of Truman to MacArthur, but he wasn't convinced it was a sound idea.

"There's a chance that Gen. MacArthur might be wrong in his dispute with Washington," Cogburn conceded, "and then we'd be out on a limb again." He said a lot of people share his antipathy toward the town's present name.

If Cogburn chooses to make a fight over the name of the town, he'll get some stiff opposition. Mrs. B. E. Thompson, a pioneer citizen of the community of about 200, said "some people are so

Crimson Holiday

By Jane Holsinger

COPYRIGHT 1951 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Uncompromising, hateful Lavinia Grenable rode to her death when her wheel chair, with the brakes sawed to iron, rolled off a terrace and into a ravine at her home. The engagement of her eldest son Court to Lisa Farwell had been opposed by Henry Farwell, Lisa's father, who wanted his daughter to marry Lavinia. The wedding ceremony, which would make her miserable, Lisa, who witnessed the tragedy, knows that her father was at the terrible place at the time, but has said nothing about it. The following day, Lisa, Angus Kent, a young Chicago lawyer who also witnessed the murder, and Mr. Farwell go to Lavinia's room for questioning by Sheriff Lane.

LISA FARWELL glanced around the room at the others summoned to the scene of the murder of Lavinia Grenable by Sheriff Lane. The sheriff was a rather ordinary looking man in his early fifties. He was a big man, but he was completely at ease in the atmosphere of the Grenable home. He was new to his office, but as he shook hands with Lisa's father, he recalled that she had seen him before. Her father had designed the sheriff's new house out near the lake.

Lisa nodded to Marion and Philip Carson. Marion was Lavinia's only daughter, a rather acid-tongued blonde. A blonde by choice, rather than by nature. Her husband was a heavy, graying man with a look of the city about him.

Lisa recalled the Carsons only once a year at Lavinia's request. It was a strange custom. Court had told her only the other day, that his mother had innovated years before when the family began to break up. Once a year, on some holiday, she ordered them back to the nest for a kind of mocking surveillance of their comings and goings. "Constant pinpricks," Court had said gaily. But this one at Easter had ended in discord when by these people in the Grenable home. Watching them, Lavinia's children, her sister, her secretary, she was struck with the tragic lack of grief in all of them. And she knew that even to offer sympathy to Court would be like lamenting the passing of a catastrophe.

She looked around for Andrew Grenable and hesitatingly asked a crimson holiday—in Lavinia's death.

There had been trouble, Lisa remembered vaguely, between Marion's husband Philip, and Lavinia. She hadn't wanted them to marry. But then, she hadn't approved of Andrew's choice, either. Strange and with a little clutch of fear Lisa thought, she approved of me for Court. Why?

Elizabeth Stratton captured Lisa's attention for the moment. She was sitting very still and deathly white beside Gert Palmer and Lisa saw Gert pat the older woman's hand once.

Elizabeth tried to smile, but nothing resulted. She sat there in the needlepoint chair by the door. Lavinia's sister, and the naked terror in her eyes was like an advance admission of her guilt.

Lisa saw it and Henry Farwell knew it and before very long the police, if they hadn't already, would seize upon it, too. Lisa wanted to go to Elizabeth, for she had been very close to the Farwells during the years and Lisa herself was named after the other woman. As unlike Lavinia as love from hate, the thin core of devilry threading through Lavinia's nature had been equally matched by the sweetness in Elizabeth.

But Lisa was afraid to cross the room to her side, knowing the very act of comfort would mean danger by bringing attention to her manner.

LISA felt caught in the web of discord woven by these people in the Grenable home. Watching them, Lavinia's children, her sister, her secretary, she was struck with the tragic lack of grief in all of them. And she knew that even to offer sympathy to Court would be like lamenting the passing of a catastrophe.

She looked around for Andrew Grenable and hesitatingly asked

Court, "Where's Andy?" Court lit another cigaret unhesitatingly and threw her a sidelong glance toward his fiancée.

"Andy's sleeping off last night's binge," he said, scowling. The room, large and square, was a combination sunroom and music room. A grand piano filled the wall corner and a harp stood opposite it across the doorway. An ivory bust of Lavinia, made in the atmosphere of her twenties, leered at them from its onyx pedestal in the window area.

Sheriff Lane took the deep chair in front of the north windows facing them. Lisa discovered he had cleverly arranged the lighting to fall revealingly on their every expression. He said:

"As I told all of you, this is not an inquest. You will be allowed complete freedom for the funeral tomorrow, but I must remind you that no one will be allowed to leave Hilton until after the inquest, which will be set for sometime next week.

"As you know, Mrs. Grenable was murdered. The police have ascertained beyond doubt the wheel chair was tampered with and the emergency brake sawed in half. Right now I want a statement from each of you concerning the connection with the household and your activities the day of Mrs. Grenable's death."

HAVING said what he had to say, the sheriff plunged his hands in his pockets, nodded to Gert Palmer who was apparently taking notes for him, and leaned back in his chair.

Suddenly, Lisa discovered that Sheriff Lane was looking at her. Quickly she repeated what had happened while she and Angus had witnessed the scene.

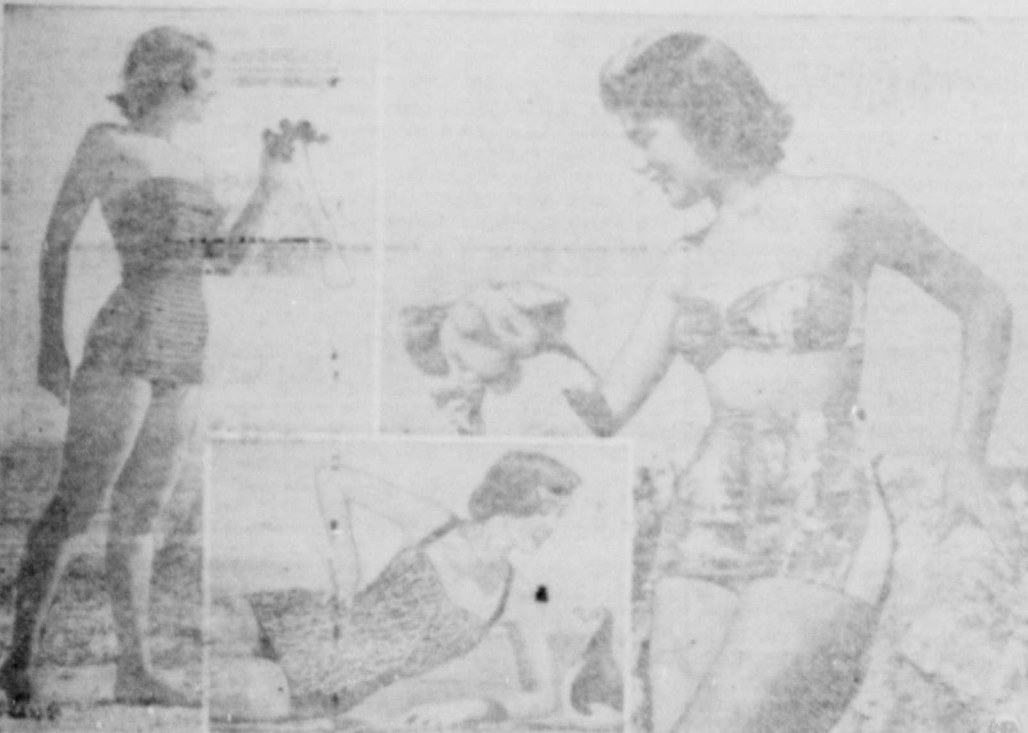

Angus Kent took up the story, for it was he who had told Lisa to telephone for help, and he had assisted the doctor and the police in finding Mrs. Grenable's body.

With these details established, Lane asked quickly: "Miss Farwell, while you were on Old Elm Road, or within the boundaries of the Grenable property, did you see anyone nearby prior to, or immediately after the murder?"

NEW YORK—(NEA)—A bathing suit need not always be what it seems. A suit made of rayon, for example, might appear to be leopard or calfskin.

elasticized rayon. A halter neck and shirred bra top make for maximum figure flattery.

A length of fabric, if it's elasticized rayon jersey, can be turned into a tubular bathing suit in a twinkling. A metallic stripe woven into black and pastel colors makes handsome fabric and, therefore, a handsome suit. Add black tights and the suit's ready.

Ex-Coach At Illinois University Is Still Raising Some Dandies

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., April 16 (UP)—Bob Zupke in 29 years of coaching football at the University of Illinois reared some dandies, including Red Grange. He has done mightily well too in other fields, like hog-raising and painting.

The salty old mentor, who is rushing 72, sort of parlayed pigs and a paint brush into a daily double. You might say that he made champions of both.

His hogs won prizes and most everyone who knows an easel from a pot of paint agrees that his pastels and oils are good.

After he retired from coaching, Bob bought a farm at near-by Mahomet, Ill. There weren't any hogs around, but it didn't take the old guy long to fix that.

The former coach gave a friend in Ohio a couple of pastels in exchange for two Hampshire sows about to become mothers.

"I named one Illinois and the other Ohio. I was a little unhappy when Ohio won that one, 12 pigs to nine."

Anyhow, Zupke was in business. He bought a boar and before he knew it, his transfer from pigskins to pork chops was about to run him off his property.

He sold the farm twice what he paid for it and went back to his comfortable place here to sit around and relax and paint and bask in the memory of those great Illinois football teams he put on the field.

"I don't try to sell my paintings for money," he said.

But on occasion he puts them on exhibit—or makes some fancy trades—like the recent swap of an oil for a fine Hereford heifer. The heifer brought a fancy price.

Zupke has a cluttered back room in his apartment where he dabs at a canvas. He does mostly landscapes and almost all of them are conceived while he is traveling around the country in search of a climate that will help his sinus.

If he sees a scene that might make a good picture he stops, draws out paints and brushes and makes a rough sketch. At home, he fusses around until he gets an enlargement, that suits him.

Zupke has quite a reputation as a humorist on and off the field and confessed to a secret delight in being called a "screwball." He loved to shock championship society at white tie and tail function.

"Want to see my society hat?" up old topper, which he used to wad up and hand a hat-check girl. "This hat," he always told the bewildered girl, "isn't worth a quarter tip. If you don't give it back to me for nothing, you can keep it."

He always got it back.

REBELS TAKE YANK HOTEL

Confederate raiders captured a strong point in New York this morning, with the aid of a Fifth Column when the Rebel national flag was hoisted beside the Stars and Stripes over the 42nd and 43rd Street entrances to the Hotel Dixie, 250 West 43rd Street, which promptly was declared Northern headquarters for the 61st and Final Reunion of United Confederate Veterans, to be held in Norfolk beginning May 30th.

An Air Force bugler, properly guarded by the WAAF and an Air Force Sergeant, sounded the appropriate calls, while Kentucky Colonels and other Southern partisans hauled the halyards. Miss Catherine Frericks of Quannah, Texas showed her patriotism, among other things, by facing the cameras without flinching.

On Friday night, April 13, at 9 p.m., the two social clubs of Ranger Junior College, the Debs and Pereginty, had their third annual spring formal in the Recreation Building.

The decorations were in keeping with a spring theme. On the stage were baskets of white gladioluses flanked by candelabra holding white candles which were lit at the beginning of the dance. On the floor were baskets of peach blossoms and bridal wreath. Pink roses and pink candles in crystal candelabra were used on the refreshment table.

Fred Woolridge and his orchestra of Abilene played for the dance, which was attended by over one hundred guests, including students from Eastland High School, Ranger High School, Texas Technological College, Texas Christian University, and Ranger Junior College.

Believe Death Came From Love

JACKSON, Miss., April 16 (UP) — Police believed today a young geologist may have murdered the attractive daughter of a wealthy oilman and then killed himself because she failed to return his quickly developed love.

A close friend of the family said it "was evident" that John E. Watson, Jr., 25, oil scout from Shreveport, La., was in love with blue-eyed, 19-year-old Victoria (Vicky) Bilberry although they had been going together only a short while.

They had been on one of their few dates to the swanky Heidelberg Roof Night Club a few hours before their bodies were found in Watson's locked car on a country road yesterday. Miss Bilberry, popular music-major sophomore at fashionable Belhaven College for Girls, had been shot in the back of the head and Watson in the temple with a .35 caliber automatic pistol.

One of Vicky's friends said she had never even heard the girl mention Watson's name and "I think she would have said something to me if she loved him."

Wants To Fight Charles

"I'll just quit trying to win back the title if I can't get Charles in the ring with me by at least November. I don't figure I can keep a good edge on past that time," Louis said.
