TEXANS WANT SHIVERS TO OPPOSE TOM CONNALLY

AUSTIN, April 28 (UP)—The Gen. Douglas MacArthur President Truman dispute is having a notable effect on Texas politics.

Nearly, many Texans are urging Gov. Allan Shivers to oppose Sen. Tom Connally for re-election because they disapprove of the nation's present foreign policies.

Letters and telegrams urging the governor to seek Sen. Connally's post have been pouring in at a rate of between 30 and 40 a day, it was revealed yesterday.

Before the MacArthur episode, only about one letter a day was received in that vein, an aide of the governor said.

Several petitions have been sent in from East Texas. Two came from Palestine and one from Jacksonville. Their signatures numbered from 160 down to less than 12.

Shivers, now in Santa Fe, N. M., attending a meeting of the Inter-State Oil Compact Commission, is making little comment about the sudden demand for his entering the senatorial race.

"I'm not running for office, I have one," he said yesterday.

He also denied knowledge of reports that a Dallas oilman offered to raise $100,000 for a campaign fund if Shivers should choose to oppose Sen. Connally.

"I don't know anything about it," he was quoted as commenting to an assistant.

Other sources close to the governor said several other offers of campaign assistance have been made but none approached the $100,000 mark.

Even in the answers which Gov. Shivers sends each of his backers, he does not commit himself to any campaign.

Service Pipe Is Increasing

SUNDAY, April 29—Pipe line outlet for increasing oil production in Stonewall, Haskell, and Knox counties, Texas, will be available with completion of a new system to be built by Service Pipe Line Company.

Gathering systems will connect production in the Old Glory, Kio Peak, and North Aspermont fields of Stonewall County, in south Haskell field of Haskell County, and in north Knox City field of Knox County, J. L. Burke, president of Service Pipe Line Company announced Saturday.

A 135-mile line of 8 and 10-inch pipe will be built from the vicinity of the Old Glory field to Service's present system at Bowie.

"Although the new line is being built to serve new development in the Stonewall-Haskell County area, the line to Bowie will traverse an area where active exploration is under way," Burke said. "We are confident that this area has a bright future."

In describing plans for the new artery Burke said, "this is another step in our program to provide pipe line service for West Central Texas producers. Our first line from West Central Texas north was built in 1919. But we have not been a major gatherer in the area since the days of Ranger flush production. In 1951, we have reentered this increasingly important area."

Service early in April began gathering oil produced from 1633 wells on 320 leases in Throckmorton, Shackelford, Stephens, and Haskell Counties. Gathering systems from several new fields in Runtels County are now under construction.

Survey parties are staking out routes for the sections of this program to be laid first. Construction will begin as soon as pipe and equipment can be moved to the area.

"The pipe for this project is available," said Burke.

TEXANS AND FEDS DISAGREE ON NATION'S OIL FUTURE

SANTA FE, N. M., April 28 (UP)—The Federal Government and Texas were disagreed today on the future of the nation's oil industry.

Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas told the spring meeting of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission here that the nation's oil reserves dropped 60 per cent in the past eight months and added: "We are fast approaching the point where the valve can't be opened any wider."

But Richard G. Lawton, Director of the Government's Production Division of the Petroleum Administration for Defense, told the delegates the oil industry will

He held a news conference here delivered a message to the White House this morning suggesting that "a reconciliation" be brought about between Truman and MacArthur "for the good of the country."

"If the disagreement runs its bitter course to the end, whatever its outcome may be," the message said, "it can do no good for our country."

"The grave world situation requires above all the building of greater strength for America with which to face the world-wide threat of Communist imperialism."

VIENNA, Austria, April 28 (UP)—Communist Hungary today freed Robert A. Vogeler, American industrialist serving a 15-year prison sentence as a western spy, and announced that the U. S. had granted four major concessions to gain his release.

At the same time, Hungary announced that the U. S. had agreed to grant these Hungarian demands in return for Vogeler's release:

U. S. Commissioner Robert W. Newlon set Gaudlitz's bond at $2,000.

Two letters, mailed in Columbus, were picked up immediately because of the way they were addressed, Gaudlitz put his return address on both and signed one.

One was addressed: "to that who lives in the White House, Washington, D. C."

It read: "You traitor! This is what I think of you."

The blast shook the town, throwing residents from their beds and breaking half the more windows in the downtown district eight blocks away.

Flames engulfed a three-story girls' dormitory, 900 feet away, on the campus of the Northwest Missouri State College.

Half of the 100 girls asleep in the dormitory were burned or cut as they fled from the building in their nightclothes, walking barefooted over slivers of glass from the three-story building's shattered windows.

Daylight Saving Time Goes Into Effect Sunday

Millions of Americans from New York to California will set their clocks an hour ahead when they turn in for bed tonight.

Daylight saving time—the annual device to get more sunshine out of summer—will go into effect in part or all of 34 states.

It brought grumbles from farmers and Western Union Telegraph Co. employees.

The farmers complained the change would upset their work schedule. The Telegraph Company employees faced the staggering task of setting about 75,000 clocks ahead.

Despite the grumbling, more of the nation decided to make the change over than last year. It will take effect at 2 a.m. tomorrow in most states.

"Mighty Mo" Comes Home

NORFOLK, Va., April 28 (UP)—The battleship Missouri brought her crew home from the Korea war without a casualty yesterday and received a tremendous reception as she sailed into port here past the mudbank where she was stuck for three humiliating weeks 15 months ago.

Five thousand wives, relatives and friends of the sailors were on the docks to welcome the "Mighty Mo", which had been in action eight months in Korean waters. There were no casualties aboard during the engagement.

Capt. George C. Wright said the Missouri's bombardment of shore installations with her 16-inch batteries showed that "an enemy army cannot operate within range of a battleship's guns."

R. C. Balderree Receives Promotion

WITH THE 7TH INFANTRY DIVISION, U. S. ARMY.—Pvt. R. C. Balderree, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Balderree, Route No. 2, Eastland, recently received a promotion to Pvt. First Class for his outstanding performance of duty in ground combat against the enemy.

Balderree's unit, the 31st Infantry Regiment (The Polar Bears) made two amphibious landings in Korea, at Inchon and Iwon, North Korea, and later took part in the evacuation of the Hungnam beachhead, the largest water evacuation in American military history. During more recent action, his unit took part in "Operation Rugged."

lost since they started their offensive last Sunday.

The Communist attack on Seoul was typical, infiltrators slipped through the UN line to strike from the rear while the main force hammered from the front.

The U. S. 8th Army announced officially the fall of Seoul, which 11 miles north of which abandoned fighting Friday cost the Reds an additional 4,760 killed and wounded Friday to add to 37,500 casualties suffered in the first five days of the offensive, the 8th Army communique said.

The Reds' frontal assault on Seoul was made from the north-east, along the highway from Uijongbu. Enemy units in company strength hit the UN line in close quarter fighting with rifles and machine guns. These first assaults were thrown back.

All along the line to the east the Allies kept up their retreat, leaving an open space between the lines where artillery could reach out and blast the Reds at little cost of Allied lives.

A dispatch from the Eastern front around Inje said the Reds appeared "dazed and disorganized" for the continuous rain of shells during the past six days.

It said the guerrillas made surprise landings April 22 on Langwang and Pangshih Islands 15 miles east of Yungkiu, seized control of them and sent a raiding force across the bay into Yungkiu's suburbs.

The guerrillas captured a number of Communist supply boats and 50 tons of rice and killed or wounded 400 Communists, the agency said. The raiders returned to secret island hideouts after the attacks, it said.

Fourteen Killed In Air Accident

Hard to Imagine Anybody As Good as Mickey Mantle

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Mickey Mantle walks with a slight limp. The Yankees' story-book 19-year-old was asked if osteomyelitis four inches above his left ankle ever gives him trouble. "Only when I play a double-header," replied young Mantle, "and go to a carnival and walk and stand around for two or three hours." The callow tow-head was asked what he thought when he first saw Yankee Stadium.

That was last September when the Yankees brought me in from Joplin," he said. "It looked easy to hit homers near the foul lines." He was asked how he felt opening the season with the Yankees. "I sure had butterflies in my stomach," he said, "but Joe took care of me." He never takes his eyes off DiMaggio, and the Clipper keeps both bulbs on him. The entire Yankee club has adopted the big, smiling kid from the lead and zinc country.

Coming Struggle for Power Highlights Foreign Aid Fight

BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—The coming battle over who is to run the $10 billion to $13 billion foreign military and economic aid programs will be a struggle for power in Washington. President Truman has attempted to settle this argument before Congress gets a crack at it. By a letter to William C. Foster, present administrator of the Marshall Plan, the President has issued a directive that the State Department shall have the major voice in deciding which country gets what aid and how much.

When the original Marshall Plan legislation was before Congress, Gen. George Marshall, who was then Secretary of State, wanted the program run by his department. Congress would have none of it. So ECA was set up as an independent agency. Paul Hoffman, its first head, was given cabinet status. Any differences between the State Department and ECA were to be settled by the President.

ON the committee are Charles H. Bonesteel 3rd for State Department, Col. George A. Lincoln for Defense and Ambassador C. Tyler Wood for ECA. While this looks like a predominantly civilian committee, all three were general staff officers during the war. Colonel Bonesteel, a West Pointer, did much of the original work on MDAP—the North Atlantic Pact Military Defense Assistance Program. Colonel Lincoln, a brigadier general during the war, has been an instructor in social sciences at West Point since 1947. Colonel Wood, a New York stock broker in civilian life, is now deputy administrator to Ambassador Milton Katz for Marshall Plan operations in Europe.

Crimson Holiday

THE STORY: The murderer of Lavinia Grenable was most certainly someone close to her. No one else could have saved the brake of her wheel chair, which resulted in Lavinia plunging to her death in a ravine. Lisa Farwell, who was engaged to Court Grenable, Lavinia's son, witnessed the death in company with a young lawyer, Angus Kent. Lisa's father, who had opposed the engagement, and Miss Elizabeth Stratton, the dead woman's sister, also were near the scene. Other suspects include Andrew Grenable, another son, and Marion Carson, a daughter, and Marion's husband, Philip. Girl Palmer, the dead woman's secretary, took the notes on the questioning. The sheriff has found Lavinia's diary and wonders if her family seem disturbed over what it might reveal. Several days after the first questioning, Lisa tells her father that he was right—marriage to Court would never have worked out.

HENRY FARWELL smoothed his daughter's hair gently, looking down at where Lisa sat on the ottoman at his feet. "That diary of Lavinia Grenable's brought everything out into the open," he said. "I don't see how more harm can come from discussing it. I just didn't want to say too much—I know how you must feel."

Lisa looked at her father quickly and then realized he didn't mean her feelings toward Angus Kent. Henry Farwell thought it was her fear for Court Grenable, of course. "You actually talked to Lavinia that afternoon?" Lisa asked.

He nodded. "Elizabeth telephoned me and I went over immediately. She and Lavinia had quarreled over Court Grenable's asking you to marry him and Lavinia pulled her old threat about committing Elizabeth to an institution. I think Lavinia believed that if she frightened Elizabeth thoroughly she would call me and she did."

"But why did Aunt Elizabeth...?" Lisa slipped into her childhood title for Lavinia's sister. "She didn't want to see you get entangled with the Grenables," her father said harshly. "She suspected the very thing Andrew Grenable brought out yesterday. I think he knows more than he's telling." He was thoughtful a minute, then continued: "After leaving Lavinia I started home, Elizabeth walked with me as far as the coach house and then she went back to the house."

"Do you think Elizabeth killed her sister?" Lisa asked helplessly. "Certainly not!" her father retorted vigorously. "That damning bit of evidence that she was in near the coach house was purely circumstantial. The same could apply to me," he said gloomily.

Lisa recalled her father's bitterness toward Lavinia Grenable. He had opposed Lisa's engagement to Court. He had warned Lisa that to marry Court would mean unhappiness at the hands of Lavinia.

Again his words returned to her with a powerful sinisterness. "I would give my life..."

She looked away quickly. "Lavinia hated you because of her accident," she mused. "I wonder if the kindest thing to think would be that she was a little insane herself."

"There was in that woman a thread of evil beyond understanding," Henry Farwell said. "But if Elizabeth didn't do it and I didn't, who did? And he looked at his daughter with a terrible intensity. She stood up suddenly. "Court's upset," she tumbled with the ivy on the window sill. "I... I think I'll walk over there to see him!"

INSTEAD of walking, Lisa decided to take the car. Just as she turned out of the driveway another car swept around the curve and she waited for it to pass. And then a warm rush of relief ran through her, Court was coming to see her after all. The familiar green roadster swerved on the turn and the dark head never once turned toward the low rambling house half hidden by trees. Amazed she watched him drive past her, cross the driveway, and take the right fork toward the Grenable house.

With a quick thrust of anger that she couldn't quite explain, she followed Court. He was halfway to the door when she drove in the driveway and deliberately honked at him.

"Lisa!" He wheeled and came back to her, his face softening as he took her hands. He was more the old Court when he acted like that, but she was no longer the other Lisa. She was completely unmoved. The experience saddened her. "I was just going in to telephone you," he told her.

"I—I wanted to talk to you, too," she said. "We can't go on like this, Court. You've shut me out completely. I—I feel like a stranger. I want to help but I don't know how. You won't let me."

"It's because of your father," he said unhappily. "You're angry with me for telling the police about seeing him on the ridge. You didn't understand my position."

"But Court, you knew that my father would never murder!"

SHE tried to keep her voice gentle, knowing that if he were the man she loved nothing he could say or do would disturb her and knowing, too, if he were the man she loved he would not be saying or doing any of these things.

She recalled that Angus Kent had told her that, "Men like Henry Farwell do not commit murder." But she pushed the image of Angus Kent away from her and said, "Court, we can't find out who did this thing by accusing each other. We've got to all work together, don't you see?"

He leaned toward her suddenly. "Lisa, you still love me? Lisa, you can't let me down now. There's too much piling up that you don't know about yet. Lisa, you've got to marry me!"

THE VERSATILE STOLE

This Summer It's for Dress-Up, for Beach

BY GAILE DUGAS, NEA Staff Writer

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The stole (left) is turned into a sunbath dress, because it is versatile, is important again for summer. The stole sometimes tops a sheath, sometimes serves as a cover up for a bare-top dress. It's pretty and entirely useful. It's a handy cover up, providing protection against too much sun, too sudden breezes or the chill of a summer evening. Stoles are dress up but they are also dress down. They have pockets, fringe or flower trim, and match or contrast with the costumes for which they're companions. Lavender cotton broadcloth (right) is turned into a sunbath dress with slim straps by Langel. The matching stole can be worn scarf-fashion about the shoulders, tucked into the belt or draped loosely about the arms. It has pockets. The dress is simple, its bodice pin-tucked, its belt (right) tailored. The stole (right) appears again (right), this time in green-and-yellow two-tone with matching stole. The dress has a fitted bodice, single strap and fly-away bow. Belt is narrow and tailored, skirt has easy lines.

Chapter VI

A troop of Yankee riders drew to a halt and faced the oncoming riders. Lance and Dan rode straight towards them while Patnocho and his men cut into the woods to get behind them. The Yank officer raised his hand. Lance raised his in accordance and rode beside the trooper.

"Who are you?" demanded the officer.
"Name's Lance Runyon fella, do you like it?"
"Unhook your gun belt and raise your hands. You aren't under arrest. We have you out numbered."

"Are you sure?" asked Lance.
"Of course I'm sure," the officer snapped. "I have 32 men and there are two of you. Now do as I say."

"You know Lance," Dan spoke for the first time. "That makes only 15 apiece. What will Pauncho and the boys do?"
"Oh, Lance laughed. 'I guess you boys have a couple of 'em."

"Sergeant," roared the officer. "Place those Reds under arrest!"
"I wouldn't try that fella," snapped Lance drawing with lightning speed and falling six men before hitting the ground with a slug in his side. Dan had drawn both pistols and accounted for 10 troopers before falling in his heart.

Pauncho and his crew had ridden in from behind and accounted for five men who remained alive after the Mexicans and Texans lay dead or dying.

"Wow," panted a Yank Pfc. with a slug in his arm. "Those guys are hard to kill. All dead except this Runyon, though. Well he'll sure as daylight hang on the village square."

"Yeah," replied his buddy who was unharmed except scared half to death.

Two days later, the news had spread through the country like wildfire, that Lance Runyon had been tried, found guilty of every crime in the book, and was to hang in three days.

A rancher near McAllen loaded his rifle, while a pincher at Edenburg cleaned up his pistol. Two "wetbacks" in Santander sharpened their knives, and an outlaw in Mission called in his band.

The sheriff at Raytownville gathered his posse, and cowboys left cattle standing in the fields.

In a southwestern town called Del Rio a rider rode like the wind, trying to make Brownsville in three days and nights. The Army could feel the pulse of the countryside beat a hostile note.

Rebel flags began to spring up once more on the courthouses, in the schools, and beside the bodies of murdered Yank soldiers. The guard around Lance's cell was tripled.

No one would take a second look at Wiley King when he rode into Brownsville. He was not unlike many who rode those streets. He wasn't tall but he wasn't short. Muscles rippled through his body when he moved, his face, arms, neck, and hands were sun-tanned. His eyes were cool, and he needed a shave. Just an ordinary critter. His Colt '44 was slung low and tied down at the leg. His beaten combats had known the sun, the wind, and the rain. He had once served in the Confederate Army.

Come the day of the hanging, and the streets were deserted. That's except for the hundreds of armed soldiers who guarded Lance. He had only been patched up enough to be hung. His body ached with pain and he faced death. But his head was held high. His eyes level, and his heart strong. He would die as he lived, reckless.

What appeared to be an old and bent Mex laborer hobbled across to where the hanging was to take place. He walked to a Yank officer and asked, "Is he the one you call Lance, Senior?"

"That's right," replied the Yank. "Wait to watch."

"I believe that I would like to see this," the man said as he pulled the Indian blanket tighter around him and hunched his shoulders.

Lance was placed on a horse and a rope was hung about his neck. His hands were tied behind him and a number of rifles stuck in his back. A troop of soldiers lined in front of him. His smile didn't water away.

Col. John Grant, his son, and his daughter stood by. Ann looked into his strong and somewhat sadonic face. She couldn't help but wish that he was not to die. Her father stepped out and spoke.

"Is there anything you want to say before you are executed, Reb?"

"Yeah, blue-belly," laughed Lance appearing amused at the whole show. "I thought you hoods shot prisoners of war not hung them. Well of boy, see you in hell. I'm going to be the water boy and you will pay he-k getting a drink."

"Hang him," Grant bellowed to the executor.

Suddenly, the blanket came off and what had looked like a Mex laborer suddenly became Wiley King, he sent one bullet into the man who was to release the horse another into the rope.

"Okay cowboy, ride your cord," he yelled as Lance took off. Before anyone could shoot Wiley, he was behind a barril and pouring lead at the Yanks who were in a state of confusion. Before they could group to surround Wiley or recapture the escaping Lance, an Army of wild Texans came riding out of nowhere slinging lead to beat the band. Lance rode to their ranks and when his hands were freed, rode back to pick up Wiley.

"This is like something out of a book," gasped the startled Ann to her father from behind their blockaid. "These people aren't licked yet. I'll bet there are two hundred men in this raid all to help one criminal."

"Never saw anything like this," the officer told her.

Hobby Tripped UP
NEW MILFORD, N. Y. (UP)—State police were called by an irate woman to catch the thief who took one of her prize turkeys. Officers visited a restaurant where the proprietor admitted a man had sold him such a turkey. On the proprietor admitted a man police found the seller to be the husband of the turkey owner. The law wasn't needed for the "punishment" that followed.

THE REBEL YELL

By Darrell F. Holmes, Jr.

"At Appomattox, God said to our Confederate souldiers, 'ABOUT FACE'. In obedience to their Chassen's order, there was a change of front; and the Gray Line faced the future, unashamed and unafraid." Robert E. Lee.

The beautiful and never-to-be-forgotten Stars and Bars weren't hoisted down by Yankee might, manpower, or fighting men. Factories, machines, and the burning of arms and crops were the means that brought about the end of the Confederacy. But in the heart of the South, the flag still flies high.

When the South's "Lost Cause" in the War For Southern Independence, died, the men who had served under Lee wept at his feet. Lee turned back to his home on the Southern Country side with only his horse Traveler and his memories of the heroic deeds of those who wore The Gray.

It was his sincere belief that the South should accept their fate with a proud toss of the head, and not humble in the face of superior machines and inferior manpower. This was shared by every man who had served under him.

For many years, the South held her head high. The antagonizing blade of the industrial sword did not destroy that pride. Without fur, cotton, homes, lands, or power, the Southern people built for the coming generations. Using sheer nerve and pioneer spirit, they developed the South to what she is today.

The future of America lies in the South and West. The industrial North has spent her wealth. Today through a socialistic program conspired by Democratic leaders who hate the South with jealous passion, they are taking that wealth from the South and West and are giving it to the North. This is being done in a round-about-way but never-the-less it is being done.

Some of the very school fund money which was stolen from the State of Texas by the federal government, will probably be used to tear down the state's segregated school systems. In the White State University there are several hundred negroes in the various university schools. Will our high schools be next?

The people of today's South are not showing the intensional fortitude which was shown by their forefathers. Today's Southerners are bending to the crack of the Federal whip and placing their necks in the yoke. They would support any candidate that the DEMO, CPS, I remn RADICAL-CRATIC Truman party would put in. Just look, they voted to put Harry Truman in the Office of the President of the United States.

We must wake up to the fact that this nation is headed straight to Socialism and destruction unless the people pull her out of it. Of course the party in Washington will attempt to keep our troops fighting in Korea. This will keep people stirred up about Russia and electing Truman because "it isn't good to change horses in the middle of a stream."

MacArthur was fired for two main reasons. The first was because he would have ended the Korean conflict, had he been allowed to use our full might. The other was that Truman wanted to divert public attention from the investigation of the RFC and other disgraceful bureaus of this been-dogging administration. But the president has suddenly found MacArthur a going concern.

Are you going to vote 'er straight in '52? If so you probably won't vote that way in 1956, because you probably won't be allowed or able to vote. Elect a Democratic, Socialistic, or Democratic, or what ever 'term' they use), president and you will elect your self to slavery.

Bob Estes, Baird, Texas, Rodeo Producer, former Champion Cowboy, has again been obtained to produce the 1951 Callahan County Rodeo. Last year's fans will remember the fast action packed performances. This year's rodeo promises to be bigger, better and more colorful than ever.

BLUE PRINT FOR LIVING

He is a wise builder who sits down to count the cost and make careful plans for the construction of his house. Rock and tree and mine and gravel pit, materials from many sources, are to be brought together and assembled into a unity. There must be a clear understanding of what is wanted. The plan must be drawn for all workmen to follow. The laws of nature must be obeyed. How important then that the builder shall sit thoughtfully before the drawing sheet, before he sets his hands to square and compass and rule and all the tools of the builder! Architect, contractor, carpenter, mason and all the rest must follow a common plan, if a good house is to be the result.

How much more important is the building of a home! Persons are here to live together. Minds and wills are to be harmonized, women and men and children are to get on in sympathy and understanding. The builders of a home need a plan, a blueprint, a guide for all to follow, if there is to be a genuine home. The Bible has served as the sacred blueprint for Christian homes for eighteen hundred years. Differing minds and wills work together better, if each knows the other to be seeking to follow the divine will. Forgiveness flows from love and trust which have been inspired by common prayer and worship. The Bible in the hands, love in the hearts, prayer upon the lips, a common purpose to do His will; these are the promise of a good home. These are our blueprint to living.

YOU IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN YOU

Character is a by-product of the church. It is here that young and old alike are showered with benedictions that fortify and influence for a better citizenship and a stronger democracy. In the church the ministerial are molding religious character. Statesmen today declare that the church alone can furnish leadership to handle the affairs of state in these perilous times. Then we with our children should go to the church of our choice on Sunday. "You in the Church and the Church in you" form a combination for good. Be a regular CHURCH-GOER and a daily BIBLE READER.

Okra HDC Meets In Davis Home

The members of the Okra home demonstration club met in the home of Mrs. Oral Davis, Tuesday, April 24 with Mrs. Jim Cawley hostess.

President Mrs. Jim Cox led in the pledge and prayer. The roll call was answered with various topics. Two visitors, Mrs. McCloskey of Okra and Mrs. Davis of Rising Star were recognized.

Two letters were read and acknowledged, one from the chairman of the Red Cross thanking the club members and people of the Okra community for helping in the Red Cross drive. The second letter was from Mrs. Crowell of the North Star Club thanking the club for the lovely gift which was given to her for helping our club make metal trays. The gift was a piece of needle work made by one of the club members, Mrs. Mike Morgan.

Announcement was made of the luncheon in recognition of National Home Demonstration Club week, which will be at the First Methodist church in Eastland, Wednesday, May 2, from eleven until two o'clock. The members voted to take their part of the foods and stay for council.

Mrs. Oral Davis gave the council report. Mrs. Cawley and Mrs. Jim Fox resigned as food demonstrators and were replaced by Miss Winona Childers and Mrs. Gene Hill. Both of these ladies attended the demonstration given by Mrs. Ethel Sparks on planning an interesting menu. The club voted to run a queen in the Queen For A Day Contest. Miss Peggy Grisham (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Grisham) was nominated for queen and Miss Patzy Hicks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Hicks was nominated duchess. The club nominated Mrs. Jim Cawley as our club mother. Mrs. Cawley is our oldest active member and we feel that she is very deserving of this honor. The club adjourned and Home Demonstration Agent Mrs. Ethel Sparks give a very interesting program on the upkeep of our Woolens, their storage and the repair of our clothing.

Refreshments of cake and punch were served to the following members, Meses. Mik Morgan, Douglas Burns, Robert Burns, Fred Breezidine, Charles C. Walker, Gene Hill, Paul Cawley, Jim Cawley, Jim Cox, J. H. Burns, Vernon Walker, Mrs. Oral Davis, and Miss Winona Childers. The visitors, Mrs. McCloskey and Mrs. Davis.

Brothers to Serve Long Sentences

Montreal, Que., April 28 (UP)—Two brothers began serving long sentences today for raping 36 women in their taxicab during an 18-month reign of terror in fashionable Montreal suburbs.

Rene Vaillaint, 29, was given a 125-year sentence and 16 lash strokes on 22 bare counts. Ovide Vaillaint, 27, was sentenced to 85 years in jail.

The interesting observation is made that, one-tenth of the world's population, mostly Orientals, are betel-nut chewers, a mild form of drug addiction.
