The Internal Revenue Office at Chicago couldn't figure out today if the taxpayer who wrote this letter was unusually considerate or just unusually bitter: "My Dear and Good Uncle Sam, "For the first time in my long years of endeavor, I am really proud of the enclosed check of $2,183 as my share toward your welfare and many needs for this year. "Take care of it and use it wisely, remembering that many a day I had to sweat for it and cuss often—as long as 18 hours per day. But for you, Dear Uncle, I don't mind a bit."

The Jaycees, still talking about fixing their wind damaged stock barn, agreed at their meeting last night to grant Frank Mariani the authority to secure a speciality act for the rodeo, if the act is available for the rodeo dates.

President Charlie Milliken said the Jaycees were going into action Sunday on their damaged barn. Seems they are all going to pitch in and get the job done.

They were also shown a picture last night dealing with the need for blood in Korea, "Blood and Bullets." The film is a lead to the Blood Mobile which will be in Ranger March 4-5, to take blood from donors for the Armed Forces.

We are enjoying spring again after the short-lived cold spell has gone its way. The temperature rose to a high of 73, and a low of 50 in the period ending at 8 p.m. this morning.

As revealed by Eastland County Manager L. C. Heck at the Eastland Rotary Club yesterday that Eastland's bond issue to raise $25,000 for work on the spillway of the lake has been declared null and void.

Attorney General Price Daniel was quoted as saying there were a few irregularities over some technical points in the bond issue that governed his ruling.

The article in the Eastland Telegram telling of Mr. Heck's speech before the Rotarians sounded very optimistic and stated that Eastland would soon have an adequate water supply with the new lake, which they have joined us in building.

Harley Sadler To Speak To Joint Meet Lions-Rotarians

Harley Sadler, well known to Texans as owner of Harley Sadler traveling stock company, and more recently as a dynamic member of Texas' Legations from Abilene, will speak to members and guests of the Rotary and Lions Clubs on Wednesday, Feb. 20, 1952.

Harley's parents moved to Cleman County, Texas, from Pleasant Plains, Ark., one year after he was born in 1892, and in 1905 the family moved to Jones County for more elbow room.

The R. E. Fox popular players came to Stamford minus a trombone player. Harley offered his services and was promptly accepted. With showmanship in his blood he toured the country, almost every state in the union, as a trombonist.

Harley Sadler

His first acting experience came in Ft. Worth at the old Savoy Theatre. In 1912 he appeared in Waco at the Alma Theatre in a comedian's role. With the Renfro Jolly Pathfinder Players in Texas City in 1913 they were detained there for 27 weeks due to border trouble, playing to approximately 25,000 soldiers.

In 1914 he played comedy roles with the Torbett and White Stock Company, and then moved to Waco with Billy House, Jimmy Allard, Pat Patterson and Margaret Lillu, all of whom became popular in the movies, radio and stage work. He played aboard a showboat on the Mississippi, and then joined the Brunka Comedians, opening in Wichita, Kan.

The big day came in 1918 when Harley Sadler formed his own stock company and prepared to play in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado. With an organization of more than sixty people he played under the auspices of the Shrine, American Legion, local fire departments, and played in both tents and theatres.

At one time or another until its closing in San Angelo in 1947, there appeared in his company such personages as Phyllis Isley (Jennifer Jones), Chill Wills, Monte Hale, and others. His musical director, Merle Evans, later became the featured musical director of the Ringling Brothers Circus.

Harley's marriage was no less dramatic than his shows. In 1917

Attorneys Plan Defense Young Husband Killer

EL PASO, Feb. 19 (UP)—A battery of attorneys for socialite bride Mary Jean Parsons today mapped their strategy on how to defend her against charges that she murdered her sleeping husband.

Mrs. Parsons spent a quiet night in her cell at El Paso County Jail. A small Bible lay beside her bed. Yesterday, however, she seemed nervous and paced the floor.

She was visited through the day by members of her family, prominent in social circles at Tulsa, Okla.

Mrs. Parsons killed her husband with two shots from a revolver after an argument over the financial help she and her husband had received from the family.

The first note Mrs. Parsons wrote was found in a wastebasket in the couple's El Paso apartment where Parsons' body was discovered. The note had been torn into tiny pieces.

It said that Mrs. Parsons "had no grudge against my husband, for he was the most wonderful man in the world, but he, too, hated me."

"I had no intention of doing him any harm—just killing myself—until I caught him telling people I was immoral, fattening and illegal."

NEW NATO Pact Would Commit U.S. To Germany

LISBON, Portugal, Feb. 19 (CP)—North Atlantic Council deputies completed today a draft agreement which would commit United States forces to go to West Germany's defense if she were attacked.

The agreement was drawn up after consultation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Military Committee. It will be presented to the full meeting of N.A.T.O. leaders which opens here tomorrow.

Subject to ratification by the signatory powers, it also sets out in detail the future over-all relationship between N.A.T.O. and the European Defense Community.

The agreement in the form of a protocol provides that an attack on any one of the six European Army nations would be considered an attack on the North Atlantic Pact member states.

The North Atlantic Pact already obliges all other members to go to the defense of any member who is attacked. Since West Germany is the only projected member of the European Army not in the N.A.T.O., the new protocol would have the effect of extending the protection of the pact to the Bonn Government.

City Files Suits To Collect Back Personal Property Taxes

The City Attorney of Ranger has filed eight delinquent tax suits for back personal property taxes in Justice of the Peace Charles Bobo's Court.

Justice Bobo stated that the citations had been issued and had been served, or were in the process of being served. He said that the defendants in the suits filed by the city would probably appear, Monday, March 3, if the citations were served on or before February 24. They read that the defendant is to appear on the first Monday ten days following the service of the citation, which in this case should be March 3.

City Attorney J. M. Neusale had prepared 15 suits to be filed; seven of them were paid before they could be filed on Saturday.

Mayor Price Crawley stated that "the city regrets having to file suits, but they felt morally obligated since they had told that everyone would be assessed and he went to the County Clerk's Office at Cameron, Tex., to obtain a license to open on a Thursday, meeting Miss Billie Massengale. They were married two days later on Saturday and she quickly became one of the lead actresses in the show. The Sadlers made their home eventually in Sweetwater.

In 1943 the Sadler's interest in show business began to wane. Harley won the race for the legislature in 1943, and was again re-elected to the 49th and 50th legislatures, but in 1948 when he ran for the Senate he was defeated. Asked about his change to politics, Sadler stated: "I guess I enjoy the legislature because of its drama, running from the sublime to the ridiculous. It's a grand body."

Having moved to Abilene, Sadler was elected to the 52nd Legislature there.

Mammoth Gas Well Flames Again Sunday

RENOVA, Pa., Feb. 19 (UP)—A mammoth new natural gas well burst into roaring flame again last night and fire-fighting experts planned to try to extinguish the fire today with nitrogen charges.

For the second time in less than 48 hours, gas from the nearly 7,000 foot deep shaft sent flames spurting more than 150 feet into the air in the rich Leidy gas fields of the nearby north central Pennsylvania mountain range.

The pillar of fire was described by workmen as even bigger than that which resulted last Friday when the well "blew in" and captured its cap and 10-ton tools into the 90-foot derrick. The fire sputtered and died down just as suddenly on Sunday.

The flare-up occurred unexpectedly as two well-fire fighters from Texas and a crew of eight men prepared to cut a broken underground pipe from the well and seal off escaping gas. No one was injured.

The crew has cleared the area of wooden supports and twisted metal left after the first fire. Fire experts Paul (Red) Adair and Donald (Toby) Tobias, who flew here from Houston, to battle the initial blaze, said they could not determine the cause of the second fire.

Adair said, however, it might have been caused by static electricity from machinery.

Since the new effort to cap the well by Adair, signs warning against striking matches have been posted on mountainsides in the area. Firelines thousands of feet away were set up by volunteers and state police.

Adair attributed a "slug of underground ice" with putting off the first fire, which consumed natural gas at the rate of more than 50,000,000 cubic feet a day.

Local Poultry Growers Will Visit Kaufman

The following bulletin has been issued by J. M. Cooper, county agricultural agent, and mailed to quite a number of poultry growers in the county. For the information of others we reproduce the bulletin.

"Monday, March 3, has been named as the date for our trip to Kaufman County to see some of their broiler plants and to learn more of the broiler business.

"Terrell is on Highway 80 about 30 miles east of Dallas. Regan Brown, County Agent there is cooperating in helping us work out the details of the trip.

"Due to the uncertainty as to the number who could go we now plan to go in private cars instead of on the bus as was originally planned.

"We will meet at the City Hall here in Eastland that morning at 7:00 o'clock sharp and take what cars are necessary. A number have promised to take cars.

"We will assemble at Chris' Cafe in Terrell at 12 o'clock. Please let us all eat together. Some of the business leaders there will discuss financing of broiler houses and equipment either just before or right after this meal.

"After lunch we will go to the Poetry-Campground Community nearby to inspect some of their broiler plants. We have been informed that due to the fear of disease we may not be able to go into the houses. We can however look through the windows. We will be able to see the inside of an empty house also.

"We also plan to go through the broiler processing plant in Terrell.

"We will stop by Ratliff's feed store in Ranger for others to join us.

"Anyone in Eastland County interested in the broiler industry is invited to go on this tour so please help us to spread the word around."

One Dies In Dallas Blaze

DALLAS, Feb. 19 (UP)—One man burned to death and five others were injured early today in leaping from the second floor windows of a flaming rooming house here.

Ray Denton, 35-year-old Chance Vought Aircraft Corp. timekeeper died of burns and suffocation, according to attendants at Parkland Hospital where all the victims were taken.

Several other persons escaped unhurt from both the first and second floor. The five injured were being examined at the hospital, but preliminary checks showed no serious fractures or other serious injuries.

The fire department had no report immediately on the cause of the early morning blaze, but one of the injured men, Jesse Whittier, 20, said the fire came up the stairs from the vicinity of a first floor entrance to the basement.

H-Bomb May Be Exploded

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19 (UP)—Highly-qualified sources indicated today that the nation's first hydrogen bomb will be tested at Eniwetok Atoll this spring.

There was no official confirmation. The Atomic Energy Commission refused to go beyond its terse announcement yesterday that preparations are now underway for a new series of test explosions at the mid-Pacific proving grounds.

But it was learned that the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee has called top AEC officials to a secret meeting Thursday to report on progress in carrying out President Truman's two-year-old directive to build an H-bomb.

Thirty-Three Seaman Still On Broken Ship

TWIN DISASTER DEATH TOLL HIGH AFTER SHIPS BATTERED

By David Pickman
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHATHAM, Mass., Feb. 19—Thirty-three seamen were found alive aboard the storm-shattered stern of the oil tanker Fort Mercer today, and the Coast Guard prepared to attempt to duplicate the rescue operation that saved 32 others from the broken stern of the tanker Pendleton last night.

The possible death toll in the twin disaster off Cape Cod rose to 15 when five, and possibly six, seamen jumped into the sea to their deaths from the bow of the Fort Mercer, and the bow of the Pendleton ran aground with no sign of life aboard.

The two 10,000-ton tankers snapped in half some 25 miles from each other yesterday when a fierce nor'easter caught them off the treacherous coast.

The heroic crew of a Coast Guard lifeboat braved mountainous waves to pluck the 32 men from the Pendleton's drifting stern as additional rescue vessels stood by the other halves of the tankers.

It was one of these vessels, the Navy cargo carrier Short Splice, which paved the way for a new rescue operation by reporting that 33 storm-shattered seamen still lived aboard the Fort Mercer's stern.

"We have just contacted stern," the Short Splice radioed. "There are 33 survivors aboard stern. Seem to be okay. Stern riding good."

The radio message was the first word of the fate of those trapped aboard the shattered stern, bobbing in the sea some 25 miles off this Cape Cod fishing port.

The two 10,000-ton tankers broke in half yesterday in the midst of a violent northeast gale and snowstorm that took at least 30 lives ashore in New England.

An estimated 43 men were aboard the Fort Mercer when the tanker broke in two. It was not known how many men remained aboard the drifting sections, which bobbed like corks in the heavy seas.

The Yakutat reported that it floated rafts downwind to the bow section of the Fort Mercer and that "five or six" men jumped overboard into the icy waters in an attempt to reach them. When the cutter pulled the rafts back, no one was aboard them.

The Yakutat immediately abandoned rescue operations until daylight when it was expected that a second cutter, the Eastwind, would be alongside to help. The Eastwind was 30 miles from the scene but was proceeding at only four to five knots because of the heavy seas.

The 32 men rescued were plucked off the icy stern section of the tanker Pendleton two miles off Chatham Bay.

They scrambled down ladders and leaped into the water when a Coast Guard motor lifeboat came alongside and were taken to the Chatham Coast Guard station. One man, identified only as George Myer, missed his footing and drowned during the rescue.

Another Pendleton crew member was seen to leap from the bow of the stricken ship five miles away and disappeared in the churning water before the Coast Guard cutter McCulloch could pick him up.

The McCulloch said there was no other sign of life aboard the bow section, indicating that the captain and six others including three mates and a radio operator probably had perished.

Raymond Sybert of Norfolk, Va., the Pendleton's chief engineer, said all the deck officers were forward at the time that the tanker split without warning after hours of bucking the violent storm.

He said the Pendleton split without warning and he couldn't tell how the accident happened. Another crewman, J. E. Young of (191 40th Street) Galveston, Tex. said he was just getting out of bed when he heard what sounded like a crash.

"It sounded to me like the Pendleton was hit by another boat," he said. "The chief told me to go on deck and see what had happened. I went up and saw the bow setting off away from the rest of the ship—about 1,000 yards."

The Fort Mercer was bound from New Orleans, La., to Portland, Me., and the Pendleton was enroute to Boston.

COP-KILLER RECAPTURED—Robert Hugh Barber, who overpowered his guard at St. Joseph's Hospital in Ft. Worth, Texas where he was recovering from wounds suffered in a battle with police in which he killed a Ft. Worth detective, escaped from the hospital in a stolen automobile trading shots with two policemen as he fled. Weakness from his wounds apparently robbed him of the will to fight as he was surrounded by officers and recaptured 15 miles south-east of Ft. Worth. Here, he is returned to a police cell by detectives who captured the desperado. (NEA Telephoto).

Schools Get Patrolmen Belts Under Lions Safety Program

The Ranger Public Schools are in the process of completing the last steps in the Ranger Lions Club Safety Program. All that is lacking for the actual enactment of the program is the schools appointing or electing patrolmen to handle the traffic and safety duties at Ranger high school, Hodges Oak Park and Young elementary schools.

White patrolmen's belts were presented to each school by the Lions Club last week. Chief of Police W. G. Pounds visited each of the schools, presenting the belts and giving the faculty and the prospective patrolmen briefing as to the safety practices to be used while acting as patrolmen.

Previously the Lions Club had secured safety signs which were placed near the dangerous intersections of the schools; and will now be used in the middle of the street by the schoolboy patrolmen as an added warning to motorists.

Chief Pounds stated this morning that the patrolmen have been given the authority to take the license number of speeders or reckless drivers that endanger the safety of the school children as they are going to or from school. The chief assured that a report by one of the patrolmen would lead to a conviction and a fine by the city authorities for the violators.

Young elementary school is holding an election of members of the sixth grade for the patrolmen's posts. Principal Morris Jefferson said the first election would be held Wednesday, with a runoff probably Friday. The number of candidates for the posts making two elections necessary.

Principal Paul Rogers at Hodges Oak Park stated the initial members of the patrol at his school will be Bill Cramer, Jimmy Don Burnett, Ronnie Jumper, Robert Veal, and Hubert Foster.

These five young men of the sixth grade will serve until others can be appointed to aid them with their duties. Mr. Rogers said that patrolmen would be stationed at all intersections leading to the school from the intersection of Main Street and Lulla, and also at the northwest corner of the school.

FBI's Most Wanted Man Is Captured

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 (UP)—Captured bank robber Willie (the Actor) Sutton, No. 1 pinup boy on postoffice bulletin boards, faced questioning by FBI agents today about the $1,500,000 Brink's stickup at Boston in 1950.

Sutton's arrest yesterday on a Brooklyn street by two alert patrolmen ended one of the nation's biggest manhunt. He has been sought since he escaped a Philadelphia prison in 1947.

The slender, neatly-dressed bandit was identified positively last night by officials of a Manhattan Bank branch on Long Island as a robber who took $64,000 on March 9, 1950.

But Sutton denied he was one of the men wearing hollow-keen masks and sailors' pejsackets who staged the greatest cash holdup in the history of crime in 1950 in taking $1,500,000 from Brink's Armored Service guards.

Congressman Burleson Supports Farmers Protesting Peanut Plan

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The stand taken by Mr. Burleson coincides with the ones outlined by the farmers of this area engaged in peanut farming toward the proposed 1952 peanut program. The farmers have held and are planning more meetings to deal with this program.)

"The peanut farmer in Texas is not getting fair treatment if the program now proposed by the Production and Marketing Administration is put into effect."

This was included in a statement made by Congressman Omar Burleson in his speech to several hundred representatives of various segments of the peanut industry recently meeting in Washington.

Informed sources believe that the Department of Agriculture will announce its 1952 peanut program in the near future, and Congressman Omar Burleson of the 17th Congressional District of Texas has expressed his deep concern over the ideas which he says will place him in a straitjacket and destroy his independence.

"The government tells the farmer how much he can plant, where he must sell, how much he can be paid, what he must pay to sell his produce. After that, another part of the government tells him how much he can keep, for he must pay a few high taxes also," Burleson said to the group meeting in Washington. "I do not think the farmer in my area is going to be very happy under these conditions if they are imposed upon him, as now suggested by the PMA."

"If the farmer is required to place all his peanuts in the last program and he is docked 20 dollars or more per ton as a service charge, he is not receiving 90 percent of parity, which the law provides and which he has been promised," said Congressman Burleson.

In his speech and in a follow-up letter of Feb. 9th to Mr. George Pritchard, head of the Pata and Oil Division of the Production and Marketing Administration of the Department of Agriculture, (Continued On Page 2)

MORE PRECIOUS THAN RUBIES

By Nina Wilcox Putnam

THE STORY: Alma Conroy believes her husband Tommy when he says he has a responsible, but confidential, new job with the Jewell Bros. of Frankfort & Company, where both are employed. The next day, having been told that Tommy will be out of town, she drops in at the Blue Star Club with Joe Denton, a friend of the Conroys, to tell him the news. There she sees Tommy in company with a beautiful girl. Joe says they must discuss it and takes her elsewhere.

THE VERY thought of food seemed to choke Alma Conroy but she was afraid to be alone just yet—alone with the bitter, heart-breaking thoughts which lay in wait for her in the dark hours ahead. If she controlled herself now, perhaps she would be able to think more sanely, later.

"All right," she told Joe. "We'll eat at the Italian place."

It was not until the after-dinner coffee cups were on the table that Joe released the thing he had been saving up through an interlude of forced small-talk and shop gossip.

"Look, Alma!" he began abruptly, his handsome face tense. "How fond are you of Tommy?"

"That's something I should not have to tell you. You've seen us together for years."

"Do you really love him—or is he just a form of self-indulgence? Do you want to go on forever being a martyr to your ideal of him? Be honest, Jewels!"

She raised large, straightforward eyes to his.

"I don't know," she said simply. "After what happened tonight, I don't know."

"All right then, I can wait until you do know," he spoke with a dignity she had never seen in him before. "Personally, I'm sure about how I feel. I've been in love with you ever since I first saw you. But Tommy is my best friend. While he was on the level with you I could manage to keep my mouth shut. Now, I can't do it any longer."

"Stop it, Joe! Please!"

"I can't stop it. It's come to the bursting point. You can't go on as you are. We both have a right to live, while as for Tommy—can't you see he's just no good? For heaven's sake, why don't you forget him? I want you more than anything on earth!"

"Joe!" she said, horrified. "I don't play that way. Tommy's being seen with another woman doesn't justify..."

"Alma, you've got me wrong. I don't want to marry you. I wouldn't dream of anything else."

"It was profoundly disturbing. She felt slightly groggy, like a sleeper awakened too suddenly. For the moment she could not resist herself to what he was saying."

"All these years I've been watching you wanting you. But I know you were on the level and I couldn't have made a pass at you even if Tom hadn't been my pal. You must have known. Women always do."

"Yes, I suppose I knew. I pretended to myself that I didn't because we three were so comfortable."

"Because it gave you two men?"

"Maybe."

"But what do you think I've been dreaming about? A home, a comfortable, conventional marriage with children by a wife I could be true to. And at last I feel free to say so. Will you marry me, Alma?"

"I—never thought of such a thing, Joe!"

"Well, think of it now. Think hard."

"It would mean a divorce," she said miserably. Much as she had suffered through Tommy, divorce was a word which had not even occurred to her. She had married for better or worse and had meant just that.

But she had wanted a decent home. She had wanted children—she still wanted them. So long as she had been the family's only real money-maker, these things had been impossible. One of the first thoughts which had come to her when Tommy told her that he was going to be making real money was that now they might revive these plans and make them realities.

And here was Joe offering her all of them, just as they seemed lost to her for good and all; and for an instant, in her hurt pride as a woman, she was tempted.

"If you want time to think it over," said Joe, "I can understand that. But the next move will have to come from you, my dear. You must make up your mind which one of us you want. You have three days before I go away, you know."

"Go away?" She was startled. "Where are you going, Joe?"

"To Mexico," he smiled faintly. "Isn't this rather a sudden decision?"

"Yes, it is," he replied. "I'm going on my vacation and my mother is going with me. I planned to go later but she insists she needs a change immediately and of course it's a physical impossibility for her to go anywhere alone. I'd be a lot happier while I'm away if I knew there'd be something real to look forward to when I come back."

Mrs. Denton could not go without Joe. She was an invalid.

The wistfulness in his voice touched her deeply, but she shook her head.

"I'm afraid there can only be one answer, Joe," she said. "I—well, I'm married to Tommy. Nobody, not even you, seems able to understand what that means. I'm not just married to his body, to his shell, which makes silly mistakes, but to the spark of life in him that is Tommy. The man of him that, like the same spark in all of us, is a little piece of God and so cannot be anything except good."

Burleson said that, of course, theoretically the farmer could still sell his peanuts on the open competitive market, but anyone familiar with the operations in the Southwest will know that as a practical matter the farmer will have little choice to do anything except to place his peanuts in the loan program and pay approximately 20 dollars per ton for storage, etc.

"The buyers of peanuts in Texas, at least in my Congressional District, are engaged in big business. To operate, they must have financial backing, to expend a tremendous sum of money at the height of the season. He goes to the local bank for his funds. The loan is usually 90 percent of parity and to this extent is guaranteed by the government. "Under the loan program," Burleson stated, "as proposed by the Production and Marketing Administration this arrangement is ended. What can the buyer do? It takes a huge sum to buy peanuts to produce. He can only purchase in small lots at a steady operation. If he cannot do so, and few if any can, amounts and is not guaranteed a steady operation at a time when that is necessary."

According to Congressman Burleson, this leaves the farmer with no real choice. If forces him to do business only with the government, "it robs the farmer further and further and destroys his freedom of action, and aside from the dollar-and-cents standpoint, I think this is exceedingly important and basically wrong," said Burleson.

Richard Pallas, 43, had threatened Consul General Camden Melain of Goodview, Va., for three hours in Melain's office yesterday while demanding a visa authorizing a visit to the United States.

Pallas, one of a group of Estonian refugees who landed in Florida some years ago, had been deported by U. S. authorities 10 months ago. Chilean police were investigating how he arrived in their country.

A consulate employe finally managed to call police. Pallas tossed the bomb when police arrived and then jumped from a seventh floor window to his death.

French Assembly Approves Army For W. Germans

PARIS, Feb. 19 (UP)—The French National Assembly put aside its fear of a rearmament Germany today and approved a program that would put 400,000 West Germans into uniform under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The assembly thereby also voted its confidence in the month-old government of Premier Edgar Faure, who gambled the life of his cabinet to push the European Army plan through the house.

The official vote was 327 to 287.

The vote ended a week-long stormy assembly debate which for a time threatened Faure's government. It was the first time since the war that the life of a French government had hinged on a vote of confidence on a foreign policy issue.

The assembly approved a compromise socialist-government motion endorsing the European Army plan on condition German recruiting is delayed until the pact formally is ratified. The compromise was forced by the Socialists, who oppose the army plan because they, like many Frenchmen, mistrust a revived German Army.

In addition to delaying recruiting of West Germans, the compromise proposal bars Germany from immediately becoming a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It also repeats a French request that Britain join the European Army and stipulates that national troop contingents be incorporated in the Army progressively at the lowest possible Army unit level.

The assembly debate delayed the meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers in London for 24 hours. The Assembly approval will permit Foreign Minister Robert Schuman to attend the meeting of NATO in Lisbon Wednesday with the backing of the French Parliament.

U. S. Consulate In Chile Bombed

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 19 (UP)—Police said today fragments of two home-made bombs exploded in the U. S. Consulate here by an Estonian refugee who then jumped to his death from a window containing bits of scrap metal including bent teaspoons.

Richard Pallas, 43, had threatened Consul General Camden Melain of Goodview, Va., for three hours in Melain's office yesterday while demanding a visa authorizing a visit to the United States.

Pallas, one of a group of Estonian refugees who landed in Florida some years ago, had been deported by U. S. authorities 10 months ago. Chilean police were investigating how he arrived in their country.

A consulate employe finally managed to call police. Pallas tossed the bomb when police arrived and then jumped from a seventh floor window to his death.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

By Merrill Blosser

In his speech to the group meeting in Washington and restated in his written communication to the Department of Agriculture, Burleson said that he certainly would not support any kind of a program which was proving expensive to the taxpayers, but to place this sort of burden on the farmer was not the way to correct the program's weaknesses.

"Certainly these expensive and money losing programs should be changed after they have proved themselves as failing. We in the Congress who have the interest of the farmer at heart will do him an injustice if we make unfair and unreasonable demands. We cannot sell over and over a hoodwinking proposition, and I do not want to try. In the case of the government's peanut program, I am convinced it is a matter of administering it, and if we are to have a program at all, let it be fair to those whom it is supposed to benefit."

Burleson said that experience should teach us something and it should have taught a better handling of his program, which should not now severely penalize the peanut farmer of Texas.

Gals Take Over Football At N. C. University

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Feb. 19 (UP)—Black eyes and charley horses were as much a part of the feminine stock in trade as the poeple cut at the University of North Carolina today.

Sorority sisters, apparently motivated by a desire to extend women's suffrage to the gridiron, mauled each other all over the grass of Kenan Stadium yesterday as the Tar Heel powder bowl made its debut before 1,500 fans.

The feminine fracas went down as a 19 to 0 win for the Pi Beta Phi's over the outgrilled (sic) Delta Deltas.

Play-of-the-day honors went to Miss Marilyn (Crazy Legs) McKinnon of the Tri-Delta. Crazy Legs dropped a pass and her blue-jeans, almost, to bring a rousing cheer from male fans. There was an official time out for adjustments.

Mrs. Ralph Perkins discussed "Prayer" and led the group in a period of silent prayer followed by everyone repeating in unison the Model Prayer.

The song "Sweet Hour of Prayer" was sung by those present and the testimonies of five missionaries were heard. Mrs. Earle Pittman reported on the Mexican mission work in San Antonio; Mrs. A. Guests Dressed As In 1927

The Love Class of the First Baptist church held an old-fashioned Valentine party Friday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. D. C. Singleton.

Mrs. W. H. Gay, presided over a short business meeting and Miss Anne McEver, teacher of the class, led the opening prayer.

Miss Anise Locke was in charge of the entertainment for the evening. Everyone came dressed as they looked twenty-five years ago, and in order to prove that they were dressed appropriately, each one brought a picture along. As the pictures were passed around for inspection, they told about their activities in 1927.

A number of games were directed by Miss Locke but the most interesting one was a display she arranged on a table portraying songs of 1927 and each one present was to see who could get the list completed first naming the songs.

Coffee, heart shape sandwiches and cake squares decorated with the valentine motif were served to Miss Locke, Miss McEver, Miss Effie Butler, Mmes. Lora Rushing, D. C. Singleton, A. L. Stiles and Mrs. Roy McCleskey, co-hosts.

Duncan lead in the opening prayer. "Jesus Calls Us" was sung preceding the reading of the scriptures by Mrs. Joe Calder, Mrs. T. M. Edwards and Mrs. Ida Coleman. Discussions were brought by Mrs. Betty Bush and Mrs. E. C. Ward. Mrs. Myrtle Rodgers gave the poem "We are somebody's Bible."

Rev. Jasper Massee spoke to the group on "soul-winning" and stressed the fact that this was the heart of community missions and instructed the women how they could lead out in preparation for the forthcoming revival March 30. Mrs. W. B. Crabtree lead the closing prayer.

Visitation Today For 1st Baptist

Today has been set aside by the First Baptist Church as all church visitation day, states Bill Bullock. It has been designated as an all church visitation day because every organization of the church is urged to participate in the program. The visitation day is being sponsored by the Sunday School organization under the leadership of Wilson Guest, Sunday School Superintendent. The group will meet in the Fellowship Hall of the lower Auditorium at 6:45 p.m. for assignment and instructions; then following a prayer the groups will go out to visit the prospects for the Sunday School, those who have been absent for various causes, and general visitation.

Officers and Teachers in the Sunday School are urged to contact the members of their department and tell them again that the visitation program is not limited to the membership who hold offices, but the visitation program is for everyone.

Personals

Visitors in the home of Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Perkins and family Sunday were Dr. Paul O. Parr and Dr. Bill Black of Oklahoma City.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Tankersley had as their guests over the weekend their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Bowles of Dallas.

Yes, we get a thrill out of every order and a real joy in producing it into a quality product.

Mrs. E. F. Peterson, of Harris county, Texas, receives trophy from John C. White, Texas commissioner of agriculture. Her flock of Hy-Line hybrids averaged 277.7 eggs per hen housed to win the national Hy-Line farm flock laying contest.

Texas Poultry Raisers Win 1st And 3rd Places In Egg Contest

Texas poultry raisers took both first and third places in a national flock laying contest in which 1189 farmers from 18 states competed.

"It's a real honor for you and for our state. We're proud of you," said Texas commissioner of agriculture John C. White, in presenting the championship trophy to Mrs. E. F. Peterson. The ceremony honoring Mrs. Peterson and her brother, J. E. Bloom, who helped with the flock, was held on the Peterson rice farm between Crosby and Baytown.

Mrs. Peterson's flock of 290 Hy-Line hybrid layers averaged 277.7 eggs per hen housed to win the national Hy-Line egg laying contest.

Second place in the contest went to Mrs. Paul Kaestner, Van Horn, Iowa, whose Hy-Lines laid 270.7 eggs per hen.

In third place, close behind, was the flock of Hy-Lines belonging to cotton farmer Clinton Harbers, West Point, Texas. His flock averaged 269.6 eggs per hen housed at the start of their laying year.

"This was a test of poultry management," Commissioner White said. "All 1189 flocks in the contest were of the same stock. So it's fair to say your triumph was earned by superior poultry practices."

High production records by Hy-Line hybrids are nothing new in Texas.

This last year they were tested side-by-side against Leghorns by 25 Texas poultry raisers. The hybrids came out ahead on 22 of the farms, averaged more eggs and less laying house loss. Nationally, there were 269 of these "divided flock tests" of Hy-Lines against Leghorns. Hy-Lines won 248 of the tests, Leghorns only 12. Hylines averaged 3800 more eggs per 100 hens.

At average egg prices for the year, that gives the Hy-Line raiser a profit advantage of about $138 per 100 hens over the Leghorn raiser.

Hy-Lines, introduced in 1942, were the first chickens on the market bred like hybrid corn. They were developed by geneticists of Hy-Line Poultry Farms of Iowa.

Today Hy-Lines are the most popular single strain of layers in the U. S., raised by over 50,000 farmers. Introduced in Texas four

New Cycla-Matic Frigidaire Food Freezer Arrives

The 1952 Cycla-matic Frigidaire food freezer and refrigerator combination features convenient "Roll-to-you" shelves on a new kind of cold called Levelcold, according to J. F. Killingsworth, who returned recently from a Frigidaire sales meeting in Fort Worth.

Every shelf glides out full-length on nylon rollers, bringing more food within easy reach than any other refrigerator ever built, he declared. In addition, there are 3 shelves on the door for handy storage of small items.

Levelcold is a safer cold for preservation of all kinds of foods because temperatures within the refrigerators do not "see-saw" with weather changes, heavier usage, or during automatic defrosting.

Through development of a revolutionary Cycla-matic system, Frigidaire engineers have made possible constant, safe cold automatically under all conditions, whether on the coldest night of winter or the hottest summer afternoon. This is assured by thermostats inside and outside the refrigerator. There is also a built-in Food Safety Indicator.

Emphasizing the importance of years ago, they've already been tried by 8,962 poultry raisers in the state.

Their popularity may be judged by the fact that Kazmeier-Sherrill Hatchery, Bryan, Texas, distributors of Hy-Lines in the Southwest, reports sales are 52 per cent of last year already.

constant, low temperatures in the middle of the safety zone, Mr. Killingsworth pointed out that tests have shown that in some foods there is 776 times more bacteria growth in four days at 50 degrees, the top of the safety zone, than there is at 40.

The Cycla-matic system is found in the three Imperial models of the 1952 Frigidaire refrigerator line. Each of these models has a separate food freezer completely insulated and sealed from the refrigerator portion of the cabinet. There is no defrosting heating device in the food freezer, and temperatures are maintained at a constant zero-zone safe level for preservation of frozen foods for months.

There is a handsome 10.8 cubic foot Imperial with two exterior doors, featuring a food freezer that will hold up to 73 pounds of frozen foods. The other two Imperials have single, full-length exterior doors. One has a total capacity of 10.6 cubic feet, including a food freezer holding 49 pounds of food, and the other is a nine cubic foot model with a food freezer for 43 pounds.

In addition to the Imperial Cycla-matic Frigidaire, there are ten handsomely styled Deluxe, Master, Standard and Special refrigerators models from four to 17 cubic feet.

Other Frigidaire products include a complete line of electric ranges in 40, 30 and 21 inch widths, some featuring the revolutionary "Wonder Oven".

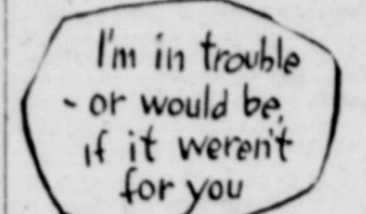

There also is a line of home laundry equipment, including an automatic electric clothes washer, dryer and ironer; a line of food freezers with capacities from 9 to 18 cubic feet, a complete line of electric, automatic water heaters, and an electric dehumidifier.

We Can Save 20,000 Lives A Year, So Why Don't We, Magazine Asks

At least 57 per cent of the men, women and children we are going to kill in traffic accidents during 1952 will be killed needlessly. Each of those 20,000 needless deaths could be prevented with the traffic safety tools we now have at hand, according to Murray Teigh Bloom in the March issue of Pageant Magazine.

What's holding us back? It's simply our resistance against giving up a small measure of our freedom behind the wheel. We're extremely jealous of our "right" to drive cars with poor brakes, to drive even though we've never properly learned how to drive though we've clearly shown by repeated accidents that we're a menace on the road; to drive though drunk; to drive at any speed we think "prudent and safe."

Take the proven life-saver of compulsory inspection of motor vehicles. In the 12 states that have had periodic checkup laws since 1939, points out Pageant, deaths in auto accidents are 14.7 per cent below the national average. Which means—on a national scale—that about 3,000 lives could be saved annually if all states had mandatory car inspection. Why don't we have those 3,000 lives? Well, for one thing, it's a great nuisance. It makes busy people waste their time waiting to get their cars inspected. And it adds employees to the state's already swollen payroll.

In 1950 13,300 people were killed because of too much speed. But the tickets people try to fix most, says Pageant, are speeding tickets. Too many of us want strict law enforcement—for the other guy. Too many prominent local businessmen think it's their due to have some tickets overlooked. The trouble is that the fixing system costs lives.

Every year jaywalking accounts for around 4,000 lives. But most of the hundreds of cities that have

THE STORY: Alma Conroy, designer for the exclusive House of Trombali, a jewel firm, has been rejecting over her husband's recent promotion in the same firm. She goes to a club to tell the good news to Tommy's and her friend, Joe Denton, and there she sees Tommy with another woman. She thought Tommy had told her he was going to be out of town. Joe takes Alma elsewhere and there confesses that he is in love with Alma and wants to marry her if she leaves Tommy. Alma believes there is another explanation for Tommy's conduct and does not give Joe her answer.

IX

THERE was a little silence between them as Alma Conroy finished speaking. Then Joe Denton shook his head and laughed abruptly—a half-angry, half-tender sound it was.

"You're hopeless!" he said, arising from the table. "Come on, I'm going to take you home—and leave you alone till you come to me. But no matter what you decide about us, Alma, I want you to remember that I'll always be there when you need me, for no matter what purpose!"

When Alma got home, she felt that the apartment had ceased to be a haven of rest. As she let herself in, the place seemed almost dreary in spite of the gay furnishings. It was empty, dead, too tidy. With a rush of mingled emotions she wished it filled with the signs that her husband Tommy was home—safely home.

She wanted to see newspapers on the floor, soiled shirts to be sent out, a dinner to cook, dishes to wash. Anything which meant their habit of life together, imperfect as that life had often been.

But the little flat bore no imprint of anything except the impersonal care with which she had set it in order that morning. Worst of all, was the silence.

She turned on the radio and the familiar voice which had blazoned out at this same hour last night, filled the room: "... Courtesy of the Mammoth Gold-Mining Company. Sell your old gold and jewelry with confidence." She snapped it off again. This is where Tommy came in last night. She thought. Last night. Came in. The words had painful significance now.

Tommy would not come home tonight, she felt certain. Undressing in the dark she crawled into bed and lay there thinking. What if Tommy were untrue to her? Well, she had Joe—why couldn't she make it even? If she was going to be left alone like this, lied to, deceived, why not console herself? Aunt Pleasant's grim mouth and tender eyes seemed to come close in the darkness. "It's not being true to Tommy that counts," said the nasal voice, "it's being true to yourself!"

Then Gran' Bijou's wrinkled mischievous old face pushed its way into the picture. "Alors! Be realistic, my little cabbage! Love is not important enough to torture one's soul about. Do not worry about your husband's behavior, nor copy it. We French have a sound family life and we do not allow a thing like this to break it up."

THE lumbering sound of early morning traffic, of heavy trucks pounding to the markets and the shrill whistles of night-club door-men hailing cabs for late-departing patrons had begun to break the mid-town silence when Alma heard the uncertain footsteps in the hall outside, and the fumbling at the keyhole of the front door. It was 2:30 o'clock and Tommy had come home.

He stood in the bedroom doorway, swaying slightly and grinning in a foolish manner. Alma sat bolt upright, wide awake on the instant.

attempted campaigns against jaywalking have abandoned them in the face of public outrage at being fined for crossing the street between intersections. In order to save 20,000 lives a year, concludes Pageant, each of us will have to sacrifice a share of the liberty of being able to drive as we please, regardless of ability, degree of intoxication or the state of our car. It will be a hard fought battle and a mere 20,000 lives may not seem worth it—unless you or some member of your family is included in the fatality list.

"Changed my plans," he said thickly. "Don't go out of town until tomorrow. Got home, after all!"

"After all what?" her voice was sharp. "You may as well know it now. Tommy Conroy I saw you and your lady friend at the Blue Cat."

"My lady friend? Darn it, I don't know what you're talking about."

"I probably shouldn't emphasize the 'lady part of it—but I saw you. Who was she?'"

"Oh, that!" he blinked amiably. "That was Bright's girl, Mysti Marehand."

"What were you doing going out with her?"

"Merely taking her a message from Bright." He said it with intoxicated dignity.

"Must have been a mighty lona message! If that's your important, confidential job with Bright, I don't want any part of what you get out of it!"

"All right, all right!" he shouted. "Do as you please but for heaven's sake shut up and let me get some sleep! I've had a tough night of it!"

ALMA buried her face in her pillow, her heart beating wildly, and presently Tommy stumbled into bed and snuffed off the light.

Tommy was still asleep the next morning when Alma went to work, her heart heavy and sick. The memory of his flushed face, his heavy, alcoholic breathing haunted her. He must stop it, she thought, he must, he must, before it becomes a fixed habit! If only something would happen to shock him into a realization of what he was doing to himself and to those who loved him best! But what would do the trick?

Should she threaten to leave him? She had done that before but the trouble was, she had not made her threat good and so now Tommy would not believe her! Perhaps she should simply go! At this, the thought of Joe swooped like a refreshing wind over the torrid suffocation of her spirit. Yet she was afraid to see Joe. If she saw him right now she might say "yes."

Hunters Mail Record Number Quail Wings

AUSTIN—Texas hunters this year returned 11,405 quail wings to the Texas Game and Fish Commission for study by wildlife technicians as compared to 7,632 last season.

Sorting and counting of the wings was completed this week. Figures will be used to help establish data concerning hatching success, survival of young birds, the effect of seasonal weather on annual populations, and other factors of importance in the management, conservation, and restoration of quail.

Noting the increase of returns, the director of Wildlife Restoration said, "If the response to our requests for wings continues to grow, the hunters will play an ever-increasing role in helping us to learn new ways to provide them with the quality of hunting they wish."

The 1951-52 season was the second in which the state's hunters were asked to return wings of birds killed in the field.

Compilation of data for this year is just beginning, but the director noted that in general the figures reflect the severe drought of last summer's hatching season, which dealt quail reproduction a severe blow in most parts of the state. This in turn led to relatively poor hunting success.

Late hatches were effected most, particularly in South Texas. In that area, just over 30 per cent of the young quail were hatched after Aug. 15 in 1950, while in 1951 the late hatch was only 1.2 per cent.

This year the best hunting was found in the lower plains of the Panhandle and in the Panhandle, where climatic conditions have been unusually beneficial during the quail hatching season for two consecutive years.

The poorest hunting was in South and Southwest Texas, although scattered spots in this area yielded good bags.

Train Delays Fire Engines; Warehouse Burns

HOUSTON, Feb. 19 (UP)—Firemen said a 10-minute wait at a train crossing kept 10 fire trucks from reaching a costly warehouse fire promptly here yesterday.

Two trucks passed before the train crossed, but 10 others had to wait until they could call a railroad yard dispatcher, who ordered the freight cars uncoupled, said the firemen.

The blaze destroyed a building and many lubricants and oils. One man was critically injured. C. M. Clark, 32, was burned about the face and hands and Parkview Hospital attendants termed his condition critical.

The Cities Service Co. corrugated steel warehouse, 50 by 70 feet, was destroyed. Nearly 300 barrels of oil, 1,400 cases of lubricants and about 350 new tires were burned.

Twelve engine companies of firemen answered the alarm. They were aided by a Coast Guard Fire Unit and a fire boat from the Houston waterfront.

Flames shot 150 feet into the air and firemen battled the holocaust for an hour. They soaked gasoline tanks with water and sprayed foam on the warehouse.

Mrs. Hobby, after reading the Bible from cover to cover, wonders if people chided Paul for saying "you all" instead of "you Romans," or "you Ephesians," but is sure the state of Texas is on the right side of God. Truman Won't Run; Bess To Happy Is Told OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Feb. 19 (UP)—Sen. Mike Monroney says that Mrs. Harry Truman is "much too happy" for her husband to be considering running for re-election.

He said yesterday he was so sure that the president had made up his mind not to run that he had laid a wager for a $25 bet on it.

"And 80 percent of the newsmen in Washington agree with me," the Oklahoma Democrat said.

"My wife tells me that Mrs. Truman is much too happy lately for Mr. Truman to be considering the race seriously."

Mr. Truman has admitted that Bess Truman wants to move out of the White House.

Monroney added that President Truman recently has been "burying his trademark" in speeches, ignoring the "vote-catching" subjects and "speaking on subjects more important for the future."
