

Weekly Drawing Extension Needs Final Approval

Although approved by members of the Trades Day Committee, extension of Ranger's highly successful weekly Saturday drawings for six more months—through July, 1953—has not been formally approved by all merchants and members, it was announced Monday.

The extension, which will earmark another $2,600 for award in $100 apportionments each Saturday afternoon, must be approved by members before it is final and completely official.

The executive committee late Monday released this statement: "It was reported this morning from the office of the Retail Merchants Association that there has been some misunderstanding over the decision to continue the trades day drawings into next year.

"A meeting of the executive committee handling the details of the drawings was held recently at which time the committee agreed that the extension of the trades day drawings would be taken under consideration and committees were appointed to contact the merchants who had been participating to get their approval. All the committees have not yet reported, but each merchant will be contacted in the near future in regard to his participation in the continuance of the program.

"It is not the business of the executive committee to extend the trades day program, according to Mae Belle Oylar, secretary-manager of the association, without first consulting the merchants who participate.

"The committees reporting on the project so far state that a large majority of those contacted are very much in favor of continuing the trades day program and the committee feels sure that they will have the full cooperation of the merchants, as they feel that the drawings have been a wonderful stimulant to business in Ranger by bringing in so many rural people every Saturday."

More Tots' Letters To Santa Due As Christmas Nears

An increasing number of epistles, addressed to Santa Claus, were due to be penned by Ranger's smaller fry as Christmas loomed nearer.

Early this morning, little Miriam Milmo wrote: "I am six years old and have been a nice girl. For Christmas I would like for you to send me a large doll house and a radio for my room. And some pretty dresses. "Don't forget," the letter concluded, "all the other little boys and girls."

The demand for products from the farms and ranches of Texas is expected to continue high during 1953—especially the first half. Farm costs are expected to edge upward in the months ahead, containing the cost-price squeeze on farm operators.

Cisco UT Co-ed Aids In Quest For New Drug

Will the next great "wonder drug" be found in the soil of Texas?

That's an interesting and intriguing question.

And should the acres of the vast Lone Star state be tapped for a valuable contribution to medicine, a young Eastland County co-ed, a student at the University of Texas, will share in credit for such a discovery.

Miss Betty Lennon, pharmacy student from Cisco, was given considerable publicity today in a dispatch from Austin. Her picture, showing her gathering a soil sample from the campus of the University of Texas, appeared in the Tuesday morning edition of The Abilene Reporter-News and several area newspapers. Looking on in the news photo were Dr. Nestor Bohonos, Lederle Laboratories scientist, and Dr. C. C. Albers of the College of Pharmacy of the university.

This week samples of soil from the campus of the University of Texas were on the way to Pearl River, N. Y., for assay by scientists of Lederle Laboratories. There it will be determined if they contain molds from which a new life saving antibiotic, such as aureomycin, may be produced. The samples of campus soil were prepared by Betty Lennon of Cisco, a pharmacy student at the university and presented to Dr. Nestor Bohonos, director of Mycology research at Lederle.

While there are no reliable formulas for predicting whether soils from here, or from any other particular area, are likely to produce antibiotic molds, scientists are interested in the samples from the university campus because they represent a distinct type. And all types of soils are being tested in the worldwide search for new wonder drugs. Certain soils not

City Cops Bag Three Drunks Over Weekend

With the help of John Barleycorn, the coffers of the City of Ranger were $65.70 richer over the weekend.

The arrests of three gentlemen overloaded with alcoholic spirits—two of them Saturday night and a third Sunday p.m.—brought a temporary break in a long, boring lull on the law enforcement front and also gave needed exercise to rusting locks on the jail tanks in the City Hall.

A Ranger resident was bagged at 9 p.m. Saturday in the initial arrest by Ranger police officers for the weekend. Charged with drunkenness, he was released Sunday morning on payment of a $15.70 fine.

Slightly more than an hour later Saturday night—at 10:40 p.m.—the same two Ranger patrolmen arrested another Ranger man in a highly intoxicated state in an automobile. He posted $25 bond and was released Sunday morning.

Sunday night, an inebriated Latin American resident behind the steering wheel of an automobile created quite a commotion when he rammed into a dwelling and aroused some of the occupants from otherwise peaceful slumber.

The car-house collision occurred about 6:30 p.m., and a few minutes later the drunken driver was arrested and booked at city police headquarters charged with driving while intoxicated. He was assessed a $25 fine.

With the arrival of another week Monday, however, activity at Ranger police headquarters again quieted, according to Police Chief W. G. Pounds, and a new series of manly again began Monday with no arrests reported Monday, Monday night, nor up until mid-afternoon today.

The jolly, bewhiskered gent will be in Ranger Saturday afternoon and will be the stellar attraction in a gala Christmas parade to be staged in the downtown area at 1:30 p.m.

St. Nick will be whisked into Ranger aboard one of the trucks of the Ranger Fire Department, and he'll begin his parade journey at the site of the old derrick and Commerce and Main Streets and is scheduled to parade down the city's main downtown artery before an assemblage of hundreds of boys and girls who are expected to line the streets.

Following the parade, Santa will retire to the offices of the Ranger Retail Merchants Association—next door to City Hall—on Main Street, and there he'll personally greet tots who desire to meet and talk with him.

Children visiting Santa at the RMA office will be given sacks of candy, according to Mae Belle Oylar, secretary-manager of the Retail Merchants Assn.

The Ranger High Band, earlier planned for an appearance in the big Saturday Christmas parade, will not be present since the high school bandsters are due to attend an important clinic at Sweetwater Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Oylar said.

Fair And Mild Weather Seen For County Area

You can hang up those heavier garments—needed at intervals the past week—but don't pack 'em away.

Old Sol was beaming brightly this morning, and the weatherman forecast "continued fair with little change in temperature for Tuesday and Wednesday."

There was a hint, however, that tomorrow—Wednesday—may be cloudy. But no rain appears imminent at this time.

The mercury is due to soar up to 65 before today ends, and tonight's lowest level probably will be around the 40-degree mark, a considerable margin over freezing.

Fair, mild weather is seen for Wednesday, too, with a high of 65 forecast for Wednesday afternoon.

County Officer Arrests State Officer At Breck

Deputy Sheriff A. Ramsey of Breckenridge literally "took the law into his own hands" on Thanksgiving Day—last Thursday.

The Stephens County officer arrested Texas Ranger John T. Cope, who of Breckenridge, and charged the state law enforcement officer with driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated.

Cope, who has been stationed in Breckenridge for some time, plead not guilty and bond was set at $500.

Judge Floyd Jones of 91st District Court said the case was passed with the appearance bond still in effect.

That was Texas' toll in the period that began Thanksgiving morning and ended Sunday night.

Highway accidents led the list—28 traffic deaths.

A terrific explosion and fire at the Nederland Refinery of the Pure Oil Co. Saturday night brought sudden death to seven men.

The worst traffic accident occurred Saturday when six members of one family were killed near Palestine. Their car crashed into a tree.

Among the latest deaths reported to the Associated Press: Abraham Collins, 43, was killed in Houston Saturday night when struck by a hit and run vehicle.

Rodney B. Leach, 29, Port Arthur, killed in a head-on collision Saturday near Beaumont.

John William Head, 24, Waco, killed when thrown from a car out of control, then hit by a hit and run vehicle near Burleson.

Santiago Flores, 52, San Antonio, hit by a truck in San Antonio.

At Amarillo, a 14-year-old boy, Elvin E. Gibson, was found dead in an overheated, unventilated room. A coroner's inquest verdict was death of suffocation from gas fumes.

BETTY LENNON, pharmacy student, gathers a soil sample from the campus of the University of Texas. Dr. Nestor Bohonos, right, Lederle Laboratories scientist, and Dr. C. C. Albers, of the College of Pharmacy faculty, look on. The soil sample will be tested to see if it contains a new antibiotic mold, such as produced aureomycin.

What's the Use of an Abstract—
. . . if it doesn't cure the title? Is another puzzling question to some abstractors, but we have never worried much about this one. Neither does the doctor's prescription cure human ills in all cases, but it may help. The abstract never was designed to cure anybody's title, but the better type of abstract will reveal the condition of the title and place it in position where it may be perfected, if necessary, by the examining attorney.

Largest Capacity Combine

Two of the greatest problems facing farmers during the harvest season are labor shortages and rising production costs.

In today's age of mechanized operations on the farm, the nation's farmers are turning to the self-propelled combine principle to reduce these critical problems.

Recognizing the need for increased harvesting capacities, the Massey-Harris Co., Racine, Wis., has introduced three new self-propelled combines, including the largest capacity combine on wheels. Use of these machines helps the farmer get the most out of his crops and his land with less labor and at lower cost.

The largest capacity combine, produced by the firm which pioneered self-propelled combine design, is a full-width machine providing more separation area and a greater degree of separation efficiency. A hydraulic speed selector and live axle drive makes possible complete speed adaptability to specific field and crop conditions and a safe, fast road speed of 14 miles an hour.

Other features include more convenience and comfort for the operator, larger separation areas and a hydraulic table lift control for cutting heights up to 33 inches, as well as skimming the ground.

Adult Delinquents Outnumber Youth

There are two adult delinquents...

for every juvenile delinquent in a community, a vocational education coordinator said at Racine, Wis., recently.

youth are "the challenge of our land. Don't sell them short. They are living and growing up in times of great discovery and change. They face more temptations in a short walk to school than did many of their forbears in a month."

TePooten said education cannot be overemphasized in preparing youth for the struggle to keep America great. He added that the education system must be concerned with all of the nation's people.

TOMBOY by ED BARCELO. Copr. 1952 by NEA Service, Inc.

THE Kendall Detective Agency was not bustling with activity. In fact, it was not bustling with anything and George Kendall was sadly contemplating a bankruptcy and the eighty-second floor of the Empire State Building.

"Things couldn't be any tougher. No clients and we've got one foot in the bread line."

"Maybe I should've been a plumber," he said dejectedly. "Somebody always needs a plumber. But farming is really the life."

Verna Denton, his secretary and Girl Friday, closed the stenographic pad in which she had been doodling.

"Cheer up, boss." She rested her hand on his shoulder. "Maybe somebody'll get murdered."

This, he found of little consolation. He particularly avoided tommy guns, gangsters and missing bodies, leaving these to the more gallant and heroic species of public and private detectives. He considered himself physically capable of protecting himself, but there was no sense in fighting with lead pipes and sawed-off shotguns if you didn't have to.

"Verna, do you realize we haven't nibbled on a client for over three weeks? Honest, kid, I'm about ready to throw in the towel and go back to milking cows."

"That's the trouble with you, boss," she said, beginning to massage his shoulders. "Things get a little tough and right away you want to fold up."

He spun the swivel chair around and faced her. "A little tough? They couldn't get any tougher. No clients, we're a month behind in our rent, we owe a two-month phone bill, and we've got one foot in the bread line."

She opened her compact. "Didn't Emerson or somebody say that into every life a little rain must fall?"

"Don't drag out those corny proverbs. Besides, this is a cloudy burst." He pulled a slip of paper out of his coat pocket. "Look at this. Our net profit for six months is a minus one thousand three hundred and fourteen dollars."

"And three cents." She moistened her eyebrows. "There was postage due on that farm catalog you ordered."

"Yeah, and you paid it." He watched her as she deftly applied the lipstick and he felt a little sorry with himself for not possessing some deeper feeling for her. He hadn't paid her any salary for two weeks and by now he suspected that her staying with the sinking ship amounted to more than loyalty. He admired her jet black hair, the prominent dark eyes, her full mouth and all the good things that went with it, but the admiration was only lukewarm. Perhaps, he thought, he SUDDENLY, they both heard the door of the outer office open and shut. Verna shoved the compact into her skirt pocket and hurried to the outer office. Meanwhile, George Kendall grabbed a batch of papers and assumed a suit of spirit of industry.

In a second, Verna was back. "Mr. Kendall, a Mr. Sutworth to see you."

"Does he have an appointment?" He winked at the girl.

"No, Mr. Kendall."

"Well—" He hesitated, and then raising his voice slightly, he said, "We'll try to squeeze him in, Miss Denton. Send him in."

Presently the doorway framed a short, puffy-looking man in his sixties and wearing a black overcoat and derby hat. His face was flushed and he seemed out of breath. "Mr. Kendall?"

"Yes, do come in." He came from behind his desk and greeted the old man with a warm hand-shake. When he had helped the man off with his coat, George drew up a chair. "Just make yourself comfortable, Mr. Sutworth."

"Sutworth," the old man corrected. "Albert P. Sutworth."

KENDALL settled into the swivel chair and clasped his hands across his stomach. The happy feeling of officialdom had returned and he found it difficult to contain his enthusiasm. With the agency on the rocks, he found Mr. Albert P. Sutworth, a most welcome individual.

Beginning his usual pep talk, he said, "Before we begin, Mr. Sutworth, let me say that you are getting prematurely old. Sudden friends. You can put your complete confidence in our little agency and don't ever forget our motto: Your problem is our problem."

"That's very comforting to know, Mr. Kendall. I feel better already."

Verna, who had been standing in the doorway, shook her head in mock disgust and quietly closed the door, leaving the two men alone.

"Well now that we have your confidence, how can we help you?" "It's about my daughter, Marilyn."

"The lines in his forehead deepened. "DAUGHTERS are our specialty," Kendall said reassuringly. "Suppose you start from the beginning and tell us just what she's done."

"It isn't what she's done that has me worried," he stroked his white hair with a trembling hand. "It's what she might do."

"And what might that be?" "I'm afraid she's going to get married," he answered.

"Is that so terrible?" "In this case, yes. She has some ridiculous notion that she's in love with Chief Big Bear and I'm certain that he's nothing but an unscrupulous fortune hunter. He operates a gymnasium—"

"Whoa. Let's slow down," George said. "What did you say the name of this person was?"

"Chief Big Bear, Mr. Kendall, he's much older than Marilyn."

"He slammed his fist on the desk. "I don't care how you do it, but this fortune hunter has to be stopped."

Dangers Carbon Monoxide Bared By Health Head

"You can't see it... you can't smell it... you can't taste it and yet it can kill you," said Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, referring to carbon monoxide. A silent enemy, it strikes its victims in closed rooms, garages and cars where wood, coal, gasoline, or natural gas is burning.

Some victims of this silent poison never knew their life was in danger. As others died, they may have realized that the killer was at hand, but were helpless to do anything about it. They were so numbed that they could not get out into the fresh air; they couldn't walk or even stand up. Those who escape death, once this silent killer permeates a closed room, garage or automobile, are rescued by someone who discovers their plight.

Carbon monoxide is given off when wood, coal, gasoline or natural gas is burning, but not all the gas is burned. Its danger is greatest in cold weather because people tend to close their houses and cars so tight that no fresh air can circulate. When this happens, carbon monoxide accumulates to a dangerous concentration. It kills because it prevents the victim from getting enough oxygen.

To help prevent such deaths all stoves should be vented, keep heated rooms ventilated, do not leave gas heaters burning while you and your family are asleep, do not entirely close all the windows in your car and do not run your car in a closed garage.

Whether your stoves, heaters and your car serve you and family usefully, capably and safely, or whether they become agencies of death depend upon how wisely you use them. Remember, ventilate at all times.

Labor Groups Back Sale of Christmas Seals

The American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations have called upon all members of organized labor to buy and use more Christmas Seals this year than ever before to support the tuberculosis control program of the National Tuberculosis Association and its 3,000 affiliated voluntary associations throughout the country.

James E. Perkins, NTA managing director, announced yesterday. The 40th annual Christmas Seal Sale, which began on Nov. 17th, will continue until Dec. 25.

There are 99 county associations in Texas and the Texas Tuberculosis Association which conducts the TB control activity on a statewide level.

While progress is being made in preventing deaths from this dread disease, the late President William Green of the A.F. of L. shortly before his death last week wrote to the NTA, "It is regrettable that less progress is being made in preventing people from getting this disease with its physical, emotional, social, and economic problems."

Mr. Green urged support of the "battle against tuberculosis," which, he said, "is being waged on four broad fronts—education, case finding, rehabilitation, and medical research"—by the NTA and its affiliated state and local associations.

SAFETY COUNCIL LAUNCHES DRIVE TO SLASH ACCIDENTS DURING CHRISTMAS SEASON

The National Safety Council today announced a nationwide Christmas savings plan to stop accidents.

"If every American will join this savings plan before the Christmas holidays, a real yuletide bonus—but an life—will be paid," said Ned H. Dearborn, Council president.

The year-end holiday season is the most dangerous period of the year, Mr. Dearborn said, and accidents annually mark the celebration in thousands of homes. Traffic accident deaths on both Christmas eve and Christmas day are about twice as high as the annual daily average.

This year, with the holiday consisting of four days for many persons, the toll could be even higher than the 551 traffic deaths reported during the four-day Christmas weekend last year, Mr. Dearborn warned.

Travel is especially heavy over long holidays, which encourage traditional family get-togethers even when the members must drive considerable distance," he said.

"The festive spirit of the season, plus the normal winter hazards of bad weather, slippery roads and longer periods of darkness create added danger."

For a safe and merry Christmas, the National Safety Council suggests these precautions:

- 1. Driving or walking, put the Christmas spirit of "good will toward men" into practical use by being extra courteous to others.
2. If streets are icy or slippery, slow your speed down and your motion up.
3. If you imbibe Christmas spirit and get giddy, stay away from the steering wheel of a car.
4. Avoid home hazards, too. Don't use candles, be sure tree lights and wiring are in good condition and keep gift wrappings away from the fireplace or other source of heat.

First Baptist Lottie Moon Week of Prayer

The WMU and Brotherhood had a joint meeting last night at the First Baptist church to begin the Lottie Moon week of prayer. Mrs. Lloyd Clem, president of the WMU, presided at the meeting. The opening hymn was "Count Your Blessings" led by Bill Bullock and Mrs. Felton Brasher at the piano. A prayer by Mrs. Lloyd Bruce followed. Another hymn "Our Best" was sung.

The theme carried out was on Hawaii. Mrs. Ralph Perkins, acting chairman, placed leis around the necks of Mrs. Lloyd Clem, Mrs. David Fawcett, Mrs. A. T. Bruce and Bill Bullock.

Mrs. David Fawcett gave the devotional "Why Give", she brought out the fact that God had given us a commandment, mission and a reward. Her scripture was taken from Matthew 28:19-20 and Second Corinthians 9:6-8.

Mrs. Lloyd Clem welcomed the visitors and recognized Dr. Marshall Jolly, brotherhood president. Bill Bullock sang a solo, "I Give My Life For Thee". Mrs. Ralph Perkins introduced Mrs. A. T. Bruce, from Sweetwater, as speaker of the evening. The message

Mrs. Bruce gave was on her trip to Hawaii this past summer to the Baptist mission fields and of the work being done by the Baptist in the islands of Hawaii. Mrs. Bruce's talk was followed by slides showing the Baptist Churches, many of the missionaries and pastors. She also showed a lot of the beautiful flowers, scenery and buildings built with the Lottie Moon Christmas offering. Dr. Marshall Jolly showed the slides as Mrs. Bruce explained them.

After the showing of the slides, Rev. Ralph Perkins led a prayer. Mrs. Perkins invited every one to attend the week of prayer meeting all this week.

The Ann Margaret circle will be in charge of the program at 3:00 p.m. Tuesday afternoon and the Business Women's Circle will be in charge of the program Wednesday night during the prayer meeting. Dr. Jolly dismissed with a prayer.

Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. J. B. Houghton, Sr.
