Planting More Fruit Trees In State Urged

The number of fruit trees in Texas is at an all-time low. That word comes from B. G. Hancock, assistant horticulturist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and he credits the unfavorable weather of the past few years as the major cause.

Moisture conditions, over much of the state, are now favorable for fruit tree planting and the specialist adds, the future for fruit production looks good from either the home or commercial orchard standpoint.

Selecting the orchard site is of prime importance, says Hancock. He says avoid a site where the soil is infested with nematodes or land that has recently been cleared and old orchards. The land should be cleared before the trees are planted and if terraces are needed, they should be constructed in advance of setting the trees.

Varieties should be chosen that have a cold requirement low enough to be satisfied by the average winter conditions in the area where they are to be grown. In the case of peaches, Hancock recommends that consideration be given to some of the newer varieties.

In Northeast, North Central and Northwest Texas, he says, the Dixired, Dixigem and Ranger have been tested at different experiment stations of the state and show much promise. Dixired ripens six weeks earlier than Elbertas. Its fruit is attractive, medium sized and yellow-fleshed clingstone. Chilling requirement is 1050 hours of temperature 45 degrees or lower. This variety has been thoroughly tested and is a prolific bearer of high quality fruit.

Dixigem ripens four and a half weeks earlier than Elbertas. It is the first high quality freestone peach to ripen and its fruit is medium-sized and firm. The flesh is yellow, fine textured and of high quality. This variety requires 950 hours of temperature of 45 degrees F or lower for chilling. It has been tested for several years and has produced regular crops of fruit.

Ranger ripens about three and a half weeks before Elbertas. The fruit is fairly large and very attractive. It is a yellow-fleshed freestone type and for several years at the West Cross Timbers Station has produced good crops. Cardinal is a variety that looks very promising however, it is still under test. It is a very early yellow-fleshed peach and a full cling. It ripens six and a half weeks before Elbertas and has the same chill requirement as Dixired.

For South Central, Central East Texas and the Stonewall area, trial plantings of Hiland, Redcap and Southland are recommended. Chilling requirements of all three are 750 hours of temperature at or below 45 degrees F. Hiland should be planted only where the winters are too warm for the Cardinal variety. It ripens about a day earlier than Cardinal but is not as attractive nor firm. It is a clingstone.

Redcap ripens about the same time as the Dixired. Is a clingstone of medium size; with yellow fleshing and good quality. It has been tested only in Georgia but shows promise for areas with mild winters.

Southland ripens about 20 days before Elberta and produces a large, firm yellow fleshed fruit. It is a freestone but reports indicate the buds may be cold-tender and subject to damage in severe winters. For more information on fruit production, Hancock suggests that copies of Orchard Management and Recommended Fruit Varieties be obtained from the local county agent.

Do You Contemplate Buying Home Freezer, Then Consider Its Costs And Benefits; Some Facts Given

Are you and your family figuring on a home freezer for 1953? If so, you'll be interested in the figures on the costs of the freezer which Mrs. Eula Newman, home management specialist for the Texas Agriculture Extension Service says should be included in your plans.

The freezer itself represents a substantial investment for most families, but in addition, the specialist says, there are additional costs for operating, repair and depreciation as well as the cost of packaging food for freezing. The purchase price of a home freezer is roughly dependent on its size. At present, a freezer of 18-cubic-foot capacity cost on the average about $30 per cubic foot. As size decreases below 18 cubic feet, cost per cubic foot increases. As size increases, up to 30 cubic feet or so, cost per cubic foot decreases. To a quoted purchase price are sometimes added freight, delivery, and installation charges.

You will need to decide whether interest on the investment will be included as a cost. If interest is included, the rate used to compute the amortization charge should be based on the return that could be obtained from some other investment.

The specialist says depreciation is a cost not to be overlooked. The life expectancy of a home freezer has not yet been definitely established, but a common estimate is 10 years.

The annual cost of repairs also can be only an estimate because of the limited period in which home freezers have been operating. Two percent of the initial cost is suggested as a fair estimate.

Cost of packaging materials runs around 2 cents a pound of food, even when outer wrappings are used more than once.

Operating costs vary, depending on such factors as size and design of the freezer, capacity of the compressor, freezer location, and the local electric rate. To freeze a pound of food and lower its temperature to zero degree Fahrenheit for storage, about one-tenth of a kilowatt-hour of electricity is required. Energy for maintaining zero temperature in a freezer for 24 hours can be estimated at twenty-five cents for an 18-cubic-foot size.

So if your family is figuring on a home freezer from a straight dollars-and-cents standpoint, the answer is not so clear. The specialist

Farm Women Now Playing Important Role

It was not long after the first farm demonstration commenced in Kaufman county in 1903, that the Extension method of teaching began to include the women of the family. Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, the founder of this idea which has become international in its scope, early in his teaching believed in having the women and girls take part in demonstrations in the home.

Lucille Cox, acting state home demonstration leader for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says the first Texas home demonstration agent, Mrs. Edna W. Trigg was appointed for Milam County in 1912. In the beginning, emphasis was largely placed upon teaching skills in canning, cooking, and sewing. Through the years, the approach shifted to the family as well as the individual, and the program included health and health facilities, economics, consumer education and marketing, family relationships and recreation, in addition to foods, clothing, home management, and home furnishings.

Miss Cox, advisor to the Texas Home Demonstration Association which has more than 3,500 affiliated clubs with 44,000 members, says through their organizations the rural women participate in county program planning, not only studying community and civic problems but devoting considerable time to state and national affairs. They study agricultural resources and local, state and national conditions that affect agriculture, and they are increasing their efforts to acquire an understanding of world problems.

Home demonstration club women are making plans for the observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the Extension Service. Miss Cox says Mrs. B. M. Harris, H&C County, president of the Association, will represent its members on the opening program at the Porter Farm in Kaufman County, February 26.

TRAFFIC HAZARD
 ELKINS, W. Va. — A Nitro, W. Va., couple was stranded here overnight after a nine-point buck made a three-point landing on the front list says the figures show that the cost of freezing and storing a pound of food is a considerable item. Whether, in the long run, the family's food budget will be reduced or increased by use of a home freezer, depends on whether food is home-grown or purchased, the kinds and qualities of food frozen and how the freezer is used. Best practice, as figures indicate, is for rapid turn-over of food in the freezer. This means using stored food, not saving it—often one of the hardest lessons for the freezer owner to learn.

BEHIND THE WALLS OF TEXAS STATE HOSPITALS

Upstairs the noisy hospital day has started. From the kitchens come the sound of dishes clattering against one another. In the vegetable preparation room machinery whirrs, while the laundry room "whooshes" with the sound of steam and water. In the ward there are noises of murmuring voices, shuffling feet, the squeak of bedsprings.

But downstairs in the laboratory all is very still. Dr. C., in his white coat, works silently in the spotless laboratory, dissecting a brain. His eyes are fastened intently upon the specimen; his square fingers work nimbly.

In another section of the hospital a team of experts studies the charts of patients in the geriatric ward. One by one they talk with the old men classifying their backgrounds, their previous work, their treatments in the hospital.

The two layers of work continue simultaneously like two express trains speeding along an overlap and an underpass to the same station. Along the upper layer of the work cure goes relentlessly on. Here in the hospital, surgery is being performed in the lighted operating room. In one ward, patient after patient waits for his treatment of electro-comma. In the hydro-therapy room disturbed patients are quieted. And in the occupational therapy department patients sew and paint and build pieces of furniture.

Like a time rocket, conquering space, research probes the "whys." Young men, trained and vigorous, work steadily to discover the key which can unlock the mysterious door. Why did this old man, silent, working sums on his hands, break down? What brought the blank forgetfulness to the old woman in the checked dress? These workers collect pages of figures, hundreds of case histories. Check their findings against those of Dr. C., probing the sore of mental disease as a surgeon would probe for a hidden bullet.

Other teams work with the attendants, studying what factors make a good hospital attendant, what kind of people can aid men-

Washington

"As it Looks From Here"

President Eisenhower in his first Message to the Congress said in effect, "We are going to fetch our city halls and courthouses away from Washington and send them back to Main Street, U.S.A."

In that simple declaration is expressed a feeling which many of us have shared for a long time. Almost everyone has had something to say about the Message. One of the shortest comments came from a Southern newspaper editor who became so wound up on what the President had said that finally he threw up his editorial hands in despair and wrote a one-word column, "Amen, Brother."

Although my space here is short, I would not be content to simply add another "Amen" without qualification. While a few of his points are not entirely agreeable with my own views, his dominant and hopeful theme should bring encouragement to the hearts of all of us who seek relief from the "give-me" attitude and the "something for nothing" philosophy of Federal Government which has taken roots in this Country in recent years.

In short, the President has promised to work for a far-reaching program of decentralization of Government authority and responsibility. He stressed the need and necessity for each political subdivision—community, county, and State—to assume the authority which it has to look after its own needs, and for each citizen to do the same. He left the multiple problems of decentralizing Government squarely in the hands of the American people.

As everyone knows, at least a part of the responsibility for the enormous transfer of Governmental authority from local and State hands into the Federal Government has come about because of the willingness of many to sacrifice the old American principle of self-reliance, initiative, opportunity, and reward, for the sake of security. In the last several years the Congress has gradually yielded much of its power and responsibility to the Executive Branch of the Government in the name of expediency.

Generally, we have been so willing to "let George do it,"—and in this case, George is Uncle Sam—that we have reached a high state of dependency on Federal aid, controls and intervention of various kinds and sorts. Cases and instances can be cited on which a fair conclusion can be drawn that our Constitution itself has been endangered.

As self-government in the States, counties, and cities has diminished and moved to Washington, there has been a related decrease in participation by the individual citizen in his Government. We cannot transfer authority and responsibility away from home without in turn losing interest, and ultimately, participation in Governmental affairs.

Now the President promises to soft-pedal the Federal Government's role in many fields—agriculture, labor, business, social welfare, and even foreign aid. The program he outlined in his speech is not the expression of theory alone, but is practical, because it calls for a wholehearted resumption of responsibility by the individual citizen.

Examples of the President's resolution to reduce big Government are found in numerous places in his address to the Congress.

In the sphere of labor relations, for example, he made it plain that "American labor and American business can best resolve their wage problems along the bargaining table. Government should refrain from sitting in with them unless, in extreme cases, the public welfare requires protection."

He exhorted State and local groups and organizations of citizens to "restrain themselves in their demands upon Congress for funds."

Abandoning his earlier concept of "full parity" for farmers, the President said in his speech that "full parity" must be sought "in ways that minimize Governmental interference in the farmer's affairs . . . and encourage farmers to use initiative in meeting changing economic conditions."

In foreign aid programs, the President called for greater initiative on the part of our allies whom we have sought to help. "The needed unity of Western Europe cannot be manufactured from without," he declared. The President's address reminds us that man throughout the ages has sought security, and upon attaining it, has wound up losing some of his freedoms. The oyster, enclosed in its shell, has the highest degree of security. On the other hand, the eagle exists by his own initiative and self-reliance, foraging for food and building his own nest in the rocks. One has security. The other has not. Yet when our founding fathers sought an appropriate emblem for the young United States, they chose the eagle—not the oyster.

tal patients to get well. Like a vein of coal running underground, research continues in every phase of the hospital operation.

In mental disease, as in polio, cancer, tuberculosis, research is the foundation of future cures.

Knowing this, the Texas State Hospital System has set up an objective of finding new methods of diagnosis, care and treatment in tuberculosis, mental illness and allied medical fields.

Already all hospitals have been encouraged to start research projects; a committee to review all proposed research has been established in the Central Office of the Board; methods have been developed to coordinate and control joint research projects involving State hospitals and university departments.

In the future all hospitals will be encouraged to increase their research activities, with special laboratories made available for research at the various State hospital teaching centers.

But three research projects of national importance in the mental health field and two in the field of tuberculosis are being held up for lack of adequate funds and trained physicians.

The money is badly needed. Research is a desperate "must" to help mental patients get well and to keep other people from breaking down.

Research is the key which may unlock the dungeon door of mental illness.

Ask Dr. C. He knows.
