Memorial Day Rites Set For Sunday

Veterans' Organizations Are Sponsoring Special Tribute To Ranger's Dead of Four Wars

Men, women and children in Ranger and the surrounding area will pay homage to the gallant dead of the Spanish-American, World War I, World War II and the present Korean conflict during special Memorial Day rites to be solemnized at Evergreen Cemetery Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Price Crawley, prominent business man and former Ranger mayor, will serve as master of ceremonies.

The program for the memorial service, arranged by members of both posts, promises to be one of the most impressive ever presented to pay homage to Ranger's war dead.

Following the rendition of "God Bless America" by the Ranger High School Band, Rev. Garland Lavender, pastor of First Methodist Church, will offer the invocation. This will be followed by a scripture reading by Rev. Lynn Robbins, pastor First Christian Church.

Then the Gold Star Mothers flag will be presented by Mrs. Ruby Greer, president of the Auxiliary of the American Legion, and Mrs. Oleta Kelly, president of the Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Members of the auxiliaries of both organizations will place poppies in front of the white memorial crosses.

Following these ceremonies, Rev. Ralph Perkins, pastor of First Baptist Church, will offer a prayer, and Mrs. George Rogers will render a reading of the immortal poem, "Flanders Field."

Bill Bullock, music director of First Baptist Church, then will sing a solo, "My Buddy."

The featured Memorial Day address of the afternoon will be delivered by Cyrus B. Frost, prominent Eastland attorney.

The tribute will be followed by a special roll call of the Ranger war dead with Bob Jansford presenting the names of Spanish-American War veterans, Joe Todd with those of World War I, and Dr. Marshall Jolly with World War II and the Korean War.

Members of the Ranger unit of the National Guard will end the stirring roll call with taps, presentation of the colors, and a volley by a TNG firing squad.

Then will come a rendition of the National Anthem by the Ranger High School Band.

Rev. D. D. Brian, pastor of Second Baptist Church, will close the memorial tribute with a benediction.

The general public is cordially invited and urged to attend this special Memorial Day service.

All In Family --Who Pays Bill?

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. — The city council rejected collision insurance for its new $14,000 fire truck. Members agreed if the truck were wrecked, the city could sue the driver of the other vehicle.

But the truck suffered $3,000 damage in a crash with the city's only police squad car. The police car was insured. The only way the city could recover for the fire truck under the terms of its policy was by suing the owner of the police car.

The council is trying to figure out how it can sue the city to pay for damages to its own property.

Final Report of Grand Jury Goes To Judge Collie

To the Honorable T. M. Collie, Judge of the 91st District Court, Eastland, Texas:

We the Grand Jury of the 91st District Court of Eastland County Texas, have been in session for three days deliberating on all matters brought to our attention by the district attorney and others. We have examined eighteen witnesses, and as a result of which we have returned five indictments, two no bills and have passed one case.

In view of the fact that the Justices of the Peace are the only remaining public officials in this county who are compensated on a fee basis, it is strongly urged and recommended by this Grand Jury that the County Auditor call in all of the Justices of the Peace at the earliest possible date, and assist them in setting up a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping and instruct them in the proper procedure for keeping said book of account in order at all times. It is suggested that such accounting system include among other things, the writing of duplicate receipts for all sums collected, regular and itemized bank deposits, accurate and uniform dockets and monthly reports and such other items and matters as seen necessary and necessary to the County Auditor in order to maintain complete uniformity and accuracy.

This Grand Jury is especially concerned about the large volume of dog poisoning cases that are returned from all sections of the county. This concern is not only because of the loss of family pets but also because of the serious danger to small children involved.

U. S. Casualties In Korean War Climb to 135,221

The Defense Department said today that 212 U. S. casualties in Korea were recorded last week and that the total since the start of the war is 135,221.

The net increase for the week was only 66, the lowest for any week since the start of the war, but this was due to the fact that the Army found that 146 men formerly listed as wounded in action were actually non-battle casualties.

The losses recorded last week included 56 dead, and 156 wounded. Because of the errors discovered in examining hospital records, the number of wounded increased by only 10.

The new total consists of 24,119 dead; 98,216 wounded; 2,410 missing and known to be prisoners; 8,935 missing and unaccounted for; and 1,541 men who were missing for returned to duty.

The Army has now suffered 104,800 casualties, while the Marine Corps has reported 26,962, the Navy 2,000 and the Air Force 1,459. The Marines, who recently were withdrawn to a rear area after months in the front lines, reported only six casualties last week.

The VFW poppy sale campaign is being directed under the direction of Mrs. Oleta Kelly, newly elected

Ranger, Breck Nines To Meet Next Monday

The scheduled contest for Saturday afternoon between the Ranger Eagles, local nine, and a Breckenridge diamond crew has been postponed until Monday night. J. A. Estes, Eagles' manager, announced this morning.

The Ranger-Breck tangle—a 7-inning affair—is now scheduled for Monday night at 8 p.m. in Ranger.

The general public is cordially invited to attend the game. Admission is free.

Estes also reported that two other baseball clashes have been made for next week. The Eagles will tangle with Goldthwaite Wednesday night. The Goldthwaite nine is a formidable club having lost to Stephenville by only a hair—5-7—this week.

Estes said his Eagle benchwarmers—labeled the "Cubs"—are slated to play a Gorman youngsters' nine next Thursday night.

Banner Sells Area Holdings To Foremost

Affiliation of Banner Dairies with Foremost Dairies, Inc., was announced in Abilene Thursday.

No changes in management, personnel or policies are contemplated, O. D. Dillingham, Banner president, and Lloyd B. Hughes, Foremost vice president, said in a joint statement.

Banner will become a "wholly owned subsidiary" of Foremost. Its official name will be Banner division of Foremost Dairies.

Market area of the two firms includes 45 counties.

In addition to the Abilene headquarters plant, Banner at the time of the merger had main plants in Big Spring, Brownwood, Midland, and San Angelo, and distribution branches in Anson, Cisco, Coleman, Comanche, Eastland, Hamlin, Monahans, Munday, Pecos, Roscoe, Santa Anna, Seminole, Winters, Seagraves, Crane and McCamey.

The new Banner Division will use milk containers with the present Banner label until the existing supply of cartons is exhausted, probably in a few weeks. After that Foremost milk containers will be used.

Gov. Shivers Is Pleased Over Work of Solons

Gov. Shivers looked back over the Legislature's 53rd session and found it mostly good.

He figured he battled somewhere between 75 and 85 per cent on recommendations offered the Legislature.

The governor was disappointed because some of the things he urged were not accomplished, but he looked forward to a special session to fill in the gaps.

Some of the 53rd's negative actions in the governor's opinion were positive and highly important in estimating the worth of the session. These were no new taxes, no new expensive state services, no laws punitive either to labor or business. Shivers thought legislative committees had done an extra good job in weeding out bad bills this time.

The governor would not say what he thought the "worst failure" of the session was.

Among the failures were no action on the Election Code, no judicial or congressional redistricting, no teachers pay raises, no additional highway funds, no buildings for cancer research, the prisons and other state institutions.

He also listed these accomplishments:

New space for tuberculosis patients, eight water bills, toll road legislation, pay raises for state employees and a job classification survey, making the Auto Inspection law "more workable," strengthening of the narcotics and liquor laws, establishment of a plan to combat alcoholism, toll road legislation, several constitutional amendments, revision of the Economic Index law determining the local amount of school support, a commission to study higher education, abolition of useless boards and bureaus.

Shivers said he was sorry the Legislature got embroiled in a row over cross filing which kept election law changes from being made. The law needed some non-controversial correcting, he said, and this should have been done. The governor said he didn't consider cross filing important one way or another.

TOURIST TRAFFIC IS REALLY 'BIG BUSINESS' IN LONE STAR STATE, ENGINEER DECLARES

A total of $776,844,000 was spent on all types of recreational travel in Texas last year, D. C. Greer, State Highway Engineer, revealed in an address to the 27th Annual Convention of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce in College Station recently. This is nearly three times the total income from the cattle industry, Greer said.

Out-of-state tourists spent $378,844,000 in the state of which $333 million was spent by 8 1/2 million visitors who traveled by automobile. Greer reminded the Chamber of Commerce officials that tourism was "big business" in Texas, representing one of the larger industries in the state. However, he said that last year there were 8 per cent fewer visitors who left 12 per cent less money in our larders than in 1951. We know that 96 per cent of the tourists in this country travel by personal conveyances. Therefore, the highway system is the very backbone of the recreational travel industry.

These millions of out-of-state visitors, plus the 3 and one-third million registered in Texas, are fast breaking the back of our highway system. He continued that the economy of travel and the good roads found in Texas were a great drawing card for tourists. Greer warned, however, that unless adequate funds were obtained from some source, Texas highways would no longer be an asset in attracting tourists. We are permitting the goose that lays the golden

LEGAL NOTICE

TO THE PUBLIC:
The Trustees of the Carbon Independent School District hereby give notice that it will receive sealed bids on the following described properties, said bids to be opened on the 5th day of May, 1953, it being specifically understood and agreed that any or all such bids may be refused by the Board of Trustees of said school district if such Board so desires.

The properties covered by the notice are described as follows:
Two 48 passenger 1946 Ford Bus.
One 48 passenger 1941 International Bus.

Greer added that the people of Texas have an investment of over $1 billion in their highway system which should be protected by in-erant planning for the future. Texas motorists have long enjoyed the benefits derived from an adequate highway system. However, they are fast approaching the forks in the roads. One leads to safe, modern highways while the other route offers unsafe and deficient roads. It will be up to the people to choose wisely the route of their preference.

Greer expressed his faith in the people rising to meet the highway problems by reminding the group that "history shows that Texans, in the past, have risen to meet and solve their highway transportation problems, and our past speaks well for the future."

Proper Seed Bed Necessary When Planting Grass

Mr. S. A. Chambers, who lives just out of Williams, Texas, on the farm to market road, is a cooperator with the Brown-Mills Soil Conservation District and has had assistance from the Kising Scar work unit in planting about 70 acres of native grass mixture. Right next to his house he has 30 acres of grass that was planted in the spring of 1950. The planting is a mixture of big bluestem, Indian grass, Upland switch grass, Little bluestem and Sand foot grass.

This thirty acre planting is an excellent demonstration of how types of seed bed preparation. The grass seed used to plant this field all came from the same place. It was all planted with the same drill and planted at the same time.

There is a tremendous difference though in the looks of the stand on the different seed beds. On one seed bed you can see every drill row and there is a perfect stand of grass. On the other seed bed you have to dig down in the weeds and needle grass to find the grass seedlings and when you find them they show the effects of the competition that the weeds and needle grass has given them.

How did Mr. Chambers prepare the seed beds? Where he has the excellent stand of grass he broke the land the year before he planted the grass and planted Heeria in rows. The rows were kept clean and when the grain matured it was harvested and all of the stubble left on the field. Nothing more was done to the seed bed. The grass seed was just drilled into the stubble. Results—perfect.

What happened where the grass doesn't look so good? The land was broken just before planting time, leaving the seed bed loose and hard to plant properly. It also provided a seed bed that was more suitable to weeds and needle grass. One trip over Mr. Chambers field is most convincing.

Farmers and ranchers who plan to seed old fields to pasture grass should give very careful consideration to the seed bed that they are going to plant their seed in. Many grass seedlings have failed or have been very slow to make a stand because the seed preparation was not given to the seed bed.

Many people seem to feel that because a grass will grow outside the pasture they should be able to get it started in an old field just by scattering out a few seed. Nearly everyone that has tried just scattering the seed has been disappointed.

Grass will respond to good treatment just like a crop of cotton or corn. Only grass requires a different seed bed. Grass likes a firm, almost hard, seed bed. Grass seeds cannot stand to be planted over a quarter of an inch deep.

Speedless Speed Cops For Safety

William M. Greene, director of the Connecticut Safety Commission, thinks police shouldn't catch speeders by speeding themselves.

In these days of radio and teletype communications which permit road-blocks to be established promptly, Green questions whether it's worth while for police to "stake such chances with their own lives and the lives of people on the street and highway."

XXXI
MIDGE was struggling with the schedules when we hit the village. I made a quick circuit of the train stop and the drugstore that served as the bus stop. We found no sign of Dave. I parked, grabbed the timetables and ran through them. The next thing scheduled was a bus due into Stroudsburg at 2:50, continuing on for New York at 3:05.

I wiggled the car through the criss-crossing swarms of souvenir-shoppers, got clear, and streaked into the broad concrete highway that unrolled down the mountain-sides to Stroudsburg.

"I wish I had a gun," I said. Midge gave a slight sniff. "Why do you need a gun, with all our muscles?"

"I want to give the other guy a gun to make things a little more even."

I hoped Healey was hot on my trail. I wanted some law around, some armament. I jammed the accelerator down to its roots and put my elbow on the horn and kept it there. If I'd done that at any other time, a police car would have been on my tail in 20 seconds. This time, nobody heard me.

"I can't figure you out. I go chasing desperate characters just to indulge you, and you give me a hard time."

"She didn't answer. I was too busy shaving the point off other cars to look at her."

"Maybe there still hasn't been enough excitement for you—maybe you're still bored," I said. "Tell it to the other girls, will you?" she flashed at me. "Your voice thrills them."

"Nah, they're used to it—it doesn't give them a quiver any more."

"Blow the horn again, will you, please? I'm much rather hear that."

WE were there in a moment—the curbside bus station. Two buses were waiting there. It was 3:02, three minutes before departure time. I parked behind the last bus and hopped out. The passengers were scattered along the sidewalk, smoking or chewing the last of a quick lunch. Dave wasn't among them.

I stepped up into the second car. Only three passengers were in there. The paper second from the last contained a newspaper, stretched wide in the air. The only thing visible behind it was a hat. A man's felt hat, perfectly horizontal.

I walked quietly up the aisle, just past the seat, and slapped the shoulder behind the paper.

"Got you!" I said. Dave's shoulder turned to butter under my hand. The paper rustled wistfully down around his feet. I felt along his pockets, found no gun. "Get your luggage and let's go," I said.

He reached up on the rack and pulled the square suitcase down and faced me for the first time. If he was surprised to see me instead of a cop, he didn't show it. His eyes looked as if they were coated with shellac.

I piloted him to the door and out past the goggling bystanders. Midge ran ahead of me and opened the door of the station wagon. I pushed Dave into the front seat and told Midge to get behind him.

"Give her the handle," I said. "I don't need a diagram," she said.

I pulled away from the curb and headed into Main Street. "I confess everything," Dave mumbled.

The State Police sub-station was close by. Inside, at the complaint desk, a trooper was typing. Dave seemed to wilt completely at the sight of the uniform.

"This is the man Sergeant Healey is looking for," I told the trooper. "His name is Dave Fields."

"I confess everything," Dave said to the floor.

The trooper hurried several white sheets and carbons into the typewriter roller.

"I wanted to do something for my brother—to put him on his feet so he could help out the family. I'm his mother—she's always worrying about him. I did it, mostly for her..."

"Tell us how you did it," I prompted.

"I went in Kemmer's place to find something with his name on it. I broke the lock on his trunk and got out some old checks so I could copy his signature. Then I went to that room upstairs from the dance floor and typed out a will."

"When did all this happen?" I said.

"BETWEEN 3 and 4 a. m. While all those people were around the office." His gaze still stayed on the floor. "I first found out about it when I was woken up by people taking a nap in the hall. What happened over in the office. They said Kemmer looked as if he was gone and Eddie was hurt—they didn't know how serious—and I got the idea all of a sudden that if Kemmer didn't leave a will, it would be a nice thing for Eddie to get the money. I knew there might be a real will, but there was no harm in trying, as long as nobody knew I did it. But while I was coming out of Kemmer's place, some man was walking across the field slip in the hall. He saw me. I kept thinking later that if the police ever found out this was a manufactured will and they started looking for who did it, the man would say he saw me coming out of Kemmer's place. So I kept the will in the hall and I was with her till 4 o'clock, in case anybody said they thought they saw me, we could say they must have made a mistake in the dark."

"Okay, Dave. Now let's go back to the very beginning, so the man can take it all down in order. Start with the murder."

Dave looked at me with deep surprise. "I didn't do THAT! Is that what you wanted me to confess?"

BREAKFAST over the next morning. I was still feeling queasy about the letdown I'd gotten from Dave Fields, but everything around High Hill had a strong urge to get back to normal.

The dining room waiters were planning a water carnival, some girls were getting up a bicycle outing. But I sat beside Al Kemmer's desk and stared at his chair. And it was as if in a dream that Kitty Lane appeared and silently moved to his chair and sat down in it.

"First thing, I want to go over the financial records," she said. "Where are the bank statements and things like that?"

I stood up. I walked around, prodding my brain into motion. There was something wrong about all this. Werent't these formalities that had to happen first—probate, court order?

But I knew: phone number that would give me a quick answer to all that. "Excuse me, Kitty, I'll be back in a couple of minutes," I said.

I walked across to the rec hall and went upstairs to the phone booth. I put in a long distance call to Alex Craig, an old high school classmate of mine who had become a well-heeled Philadelphia lawyer.

His high, excitable voice splattered a greeting into my ear. "Some free legal advice, if you have a moment," I said. "Shoot, chiseler."

will. Just before he dies, he tells Mr. B he wants the estate to go to some third party. Now, what do you have to do to make that legal?"

"Is anybody present beside Mr. B?"

"No."

"For a noncupative will to be valid, there have to be two witnesses. Furthermore, the amount of the bequest can't exceed $500. At least, that's the law in this state."

"Then who gets the man's property if those conditions aren't met, and there aren't any known relatives?"

"The good old Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, son."

KITTY greeted me with a frown. "How do you open this safely?"

"Search me," I said. "There must be a note of the combination somewhere."

word-of-mouth will won't stand up."

"You don't know what you're talking about!"

"Okay, wait till you get it officially."

"Get out of here."

"Don't be silly. I just explained you're not boss around here. I think it'd be a better idea if you got out yourself—you're only messing things up. Why don't you go to your room and rest it off?"

Abruptly her face weakened. Part by part gave way—even her engraved eyebrows got a crumpled look. She lifted herself out of the chair. "I'll fix you for this."

I went to the side window and watched her go across the cinders toward Chicken Alley.

A question hammered at me: If Kitty had slugged Al, would he have tried to leave her his dough in his dying moments?

And there one. A question that seemed to have been poking at me for some time without my paying attention: Why had it taken Eddie so long to report what Al had said?

It was a funny thing. Eddie hadn't said a word about it when Healey quizzed him the night of beating.

I SNATCHED the phone off the window sill and called the hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Fields had already left, the reception clerk said.

"This is Sergeant Morrison—" I said, "special investigator, State Police. I want you to look at your visitors' record."

"You mean the sign-in sheet, sir?"

"That's right," I snapped. "Yesterday's. Tell me the names of any visitors Mr. Fields had before 2 p. m."

"Oh, none, sir—visiting hours start at 2."

"I know that. Wasn't there anybody before that?"

"Oh, wait a minute—I'm sorry—someone did go up at 8:30 a. m. on a special pass. Katherine Lane."

"What?"

"What? Sometimes let a visitor in that early if it's important."

TEXAS SHACKLES IN MENTAL HEALTH BELL

Clarence L. Barnhart, editor of the Thorndike-Barnhart Comprehensive Desk Dictionary, said future editions of his dictionary will carry this definition: COFFEE, a social gathering, often in the morning, at which coffee is served. The decision to include the additional definition was made Barnhart said, after his staff had studied newspapers for months. "Dictionaries do not invent words," he explained. "They are included in standard works only after evidence is found that such words are in common usage. Our staff studied newspaper clippings from 43 states, each clipping containing such references as 'a coffee was held,' 'an informal coffee is planned' and, like, I felt that this documentation was such that no editor of an adult American dictionary could fail to consider inclusion of the social meaning of the word 'coffee.'"

Nina Foch, screen and radio-TV star, and Robert M. Heininger, executive director of the National Association for Mental Health, show how mental patients were formerly shackled with handcuffs, anklets, chains and leather muffs. The National Association sent out a call for these restraints in order to cast them into the Mental Health Bell which will be rung in New York to usher in Mental Health Week and ring in the start of the Mental Health Fund campaign.

most of which stand no higher than man's waist, is obscure. They are believed to have swum ashore long ago from some forgotten ship wreck and became gradually smaller through the years because of the scarcity of forage on the windswept banks. The seaside roundups, to be held this year in June, July and August, are also an old story. Islanders say they began in self-defense when the growing herds began to damage property. However, the roundups have now become more of a sport than anything else and the ponies are usually freed to forage for another year.

Paymasters Even 'Hit Silk' To Pay Troops

The U. S. Army these days is getting paid by many means. Sometimes the cash comes right out of the sky. Paymasters of the Finance Corps travel by foot, rickshaw, jeep, airplane, helicopter, submarine and ship and even "hit the silk" to see that the boys are paid.

The job of paying the soldiers here at home, in Europe, the Far East, and remote outposts is not always an easy one.

Diet Has Much To Do With Life And Happiness

If life insurance statistics are any indication, Jack Spratt probably outlived his wife. Studies of the last twenty-five years or so have exploded several notions. First to go was that the "hale, hearty, stout man was a good insurance risk. Now it is known that excess weight, not only reduces the life span in general but actually sets the stage for disease.

The patient who is too fat (obese) is likely to fall heir to heart or kidney disease, diabetes, or high blood pressure. In addition, because of his appearance he may develop an inferiority complex, a serious personality problem, or mental disease. Why, then, is it so hard for him to stick to a diet even when he realizes the odds he's up against, radically speaking? Some scientists believe that overeating is a way of finding satisfaction denied in other ways. Others think there must be something in the heredity or physical make-up of the obese person that makes him store fat more easily. Regardless of the exact cause, authorities agree that 95 per cent of the estimated 15,000,000 Americans who are overweight get that way because the body takes in more food than it can spend in energy. Even if the "glands" are to blame, the patient usually overeats.

Diet, therefore, is the most important part of treatment. Physicians recommend more liberal diets today in the hope that patients will follow them better. Medically supervised diets usually allow more food than those patients may dream up for themselves. Exercise has a limited place in weight reduction; it is useful mostly for keeping good muscle tone. Reducing pills may or may not be a part of treatment. The doctor will not prescribe them if he feels that because of individual circumstances they may be harmful.

Some time ago he and his son, Jimmy, purchased an implement company there, and they will be associated together in the business. They are to carry a complete line of Ford tractors and Dearborn farm implements.

Mr. Chambliss and the children will likely leave next week.

Scottish Rite Bodies Plan For Memorial Hour

A little child will place a wreath of flowers before the statue of Texas Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children in Dallas, Sunday afternoon, June 7, to symbolize the gratitude of hundreds of little patients to the men and women, now dead, who made their treatment and care possible.

The occasion will be the sixteenth annual memorial services of the hospital, honoring nearly 200 benefactors who left bequests to the institution in their last wills and testaments.

The services will be broadcast by the Texas Quality Network from 2:30 to 3:00 p.m.

Masons will come from all parts of the state to attend the ceremonies, James R. Temple, president of the hospital's board of trustees, said.

Placing of the wreath at the foot of the statue by one of the patients is traditionally a dramatic climax to the services. The symbolic statue, showing a nurse giving comfort to a crippled child, surmounts a base which is inscribed with the names of the men and women who have bequeathed gifts to the hospital. The services, while honoring all benefactors, are especially dedicated to the nineteen who died during the past year.

The program will be broadcast from 2:30 to 3:00 p.m. by the following stations: WPRC, Houston; WOAI, San Antonio; KRGV, Waco; KRIS, Corpus Christi; KGNC, Amarillo; KCTD, Lubbock; and WACO, Waco; and from 3:30 to 4:00 p.m. by WFAA, Dallas and WBAP, Fort Worth.

Mr. Temple explained that the hospital, which treats crippled children from all parts of Texas without regard to race, creed or color, derives a major part of its financial support from bequests. However, the gifts are invested and only the earnings go into the operating funds.

The doctor can prescribe a diet, help change bad eating habits, and perhaps help readjust an unfavorable emotional or mental outlook so that the patient won't be so badly tempted to overeat. However, the main responsibility for reducing lies with the patient, his family, and friends.
