FORT WORTH TAKES GAME FROM CORSICANA

Good Batting at the Right Time Gives the Visitors the Best of It—Dallas the Winner from Paris

Fort Worth was the winner in yesterday's league game at Corsicana, the score being 3 to 2. Good batting at the right time was responsible for the victory. Corsicana scored six clean hits, all of them going toward getting the team its two runs. Fort Worth was fortunate in taking only two hits and upon them scoring three runs. The summary: stolen bases, Maloney, Hill 2; Plummer; three base hit, Maloney; double plays, Hill to Alexander, and...

Dallas is a Winner

Dallas took another game from Paris yesterday in a score of 5 to 2. The Paris aggregation was handicapped by an accident to Moore, its catcher, and this is said to have been responsible for the defeat.

A NEW WAY TO FIRE CANNON

This Man Has Novel Invention Ready to Test

Army ordnance officers have been asked to give their attention to consider a remarkable invention of an Ohio man, who believes he has discovered something which will contribute to the deadliness of armament, says the Chicago Tribune. The model which is submitted was a nickel plated affair, efficiently convincing in its operation in miniature. The inventor places six guns between upright wheels, suspending them after the manner of the carriages in the Ferris wheel. By a simple mechanism different angles of fire, the same for all the guns at one time, may be obtained. It is supposed to rotate the guns, loading he guns in succession from a conveniently placed platform. The inventor believes that any caliber of gun may be placed in his wheel. He had left to the experts, however, the details of construction and such problems as the distribution of weight. By the most casual calculations it was found that the twelve inch guns which he proposes to be thus placed and his wheels would weigh three million pounds. This does not take into consideration the axle and the other incidental mechanism.

SOME FACTS AND FIGURES

PREPARED BY COUNTY JUDGE HARRIS ON THE CONTROVERSY

In Which the City and County's Care of Small Pox Patients is Involved — A Reply to City Attorney Williams

Judge M. B. Harris of the county court, feels that a reply to City Attorney Williams' letter recently published in the Telegram is necessary in order that he may be placed aright before the public, and at the same time answer some of the assertions made by the city attorney which the judge claims, and undertakes to prove, are erroneous, and also to make some corrections in figures furnished him in a former communication by both the city auditor and county auditor. The judge's letter follows:

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 28. Editor Telegram—In replying to Mr. Williams' article of Aug. 26, about the only parts worthy of notice are: 1. The fact that he goes back of the contract between the city and county made in January, 1902, for evidence of the assertion that there is a controversy between the county and city as to care of smallpox. 2. That he charges that my statement as to the expenditures of money by county and city were incorrect. 3. That he charges me with having announced as my policy that the county should spend nothing to protect the city from smallpox. 4. That I have shocked his modesty by an indecent reference to him.

As to the first we observe that he admits there was a contract between the county and city dated January, 1902, and that contract is still in force. The question raised, is there any controversy between the city and county justifying the action of the city council in rescinding, etc., and Mr. Williams' assault and charges on the county judge and commissioners as shown by his article in the Register Aug. 19 and 26. Mr. Williams says there is a controversy justifying his assault, and the city council's resolution. I say there is not. He refers to evidences prior to the date of the contract to support his contention. I demur to his testimony, and contend that the contract settled all existing controversies. Now, who is right? If the agreement admitted by Mr. Williams to have been made and yet in existence did not settle all existing controversies so long as that contract is in force, then nothing can be settled by agreement. The fact is, no controversy exists; because of the existing contract, and Mr. Williams knows it, but seeks to feel the public by trying to offer evidence behind the contract, which he knows, as does every one who thinks for a moment, is not permissible.

Now, since the contract settled all matters, what right did the council have to try to stir up agitation about something that did not exist and what right has Mr. Williams to make his charges and assaults as to a legal opinion which he knows I never entertained, and the alleged action of the commissioner's court, when there was no cause for a legal opinion either by Mr. Williams or myself, all things pertaining to the care of smallpox being settled by contract between the city and county. I say there is no excuse for either. It is easy to resolve, and the city council, without consideration, proceeded to do so. Mr. Williams appears to be full of spleen and vented his name in the paper, and he evidently thought the smallpox question a tender spot, and he could get unto himself public applause and possibly belittle the county judge.

Now, as to the charges that my statement of the expenditures by county and city were erroneous, I stated as follows: "The annual showing of the finance ledger of Tarrant county ending Feb. 1, 1902, shows the county paid out for smallpox expenditures alone $5212.05, and since that date up to April 1, 1902, an additional sum of $969.95, a total for the last smallpox year of $6182. Mr. Prosser, county auditor, says my statement as to county expenditures is correct. See his statement." "The statement made by Judge Harris that Tarrant county expended $5,212.05 on account of smallpox during the year ending February 1, 1902, and during the three months ending April 30, 1902, is correct as shown by the records of the commissioner's court, and that the above amounts do not include the salary of the regular county physician." JAS. F. PROSSER. "I stated as to amount paid out by city for smallpox since February, 1901, that Mr. Nunnally, city auditor, said the amount was about $363.45, and Mr. Nunnally did say so, but from the ledger I only gave you the amount since Feb. 1902, to-wit: $363.45, instead of the amount from Feb. 1901, which is $1112.90.

"I am exceedingly sorry that I made this error as to dates and trust this communication will show clearly that you were not attempting to misrepresent the facts as to figures, etc. I have the honor to remain, yours respectfully, J. J. NUNNALLY, City Auditor." "This was not fault of mine, and Mr. Williams was aware of that fact when... he prepared his article, because Mr. Nunnally told him that it was his mistake, and that I stated the amount as he gave it to me. Why did not Mr. Williams have the fairness to state that fact, instead of stating that "the city auditor is confident he made up the city statement exactly as the judge desired to have it made." Mr. Nunnally's statement as well as his letter above quoted shows Mr. Williams' statement was incorrect, and that Mr. Williams had reason to so believe. Mr. Williams stated: "The total sum of the $5212.05 paid for smallpox expenses under the contract, appears to have been $2,500." He evidently intended to have the public believe that only $2,500 has been paid out by the county on account of smallpox since the existence of the contract between the city and county. But see what Mr. Prosser says about it: "Smallpox account allowed by county, 1902—Feb., $189.10; March, $251.79; April, $425.15; May, $290.20; June, $117.35; total, $1377.59. This does not include regular monthly salary of county physician."

"(Signed) PROSSER." "You got that statement from Mr. Prosser, Mr. Williams. Why did you not have the fairness to publish it instead of the misleading statement you did publish? There is evidently only one answer to that question. You did not want the whole fact published. Will the public believe my statement, supported by Mr. Prosser, or will they believe Mr. Williams, supported by nothing but his bare assertion? Mr. Williams further stated "the county figures include the county physician's salary." Mr. Prosser says they do not. Who will the public believe? Mr. Williams says: "Judge Harris compares the county figures since Feb. 1901, with the figures of the city since Feb. 1902." Owing to the mistake of Mr. Nunnally, that appears to be true in figures, but not in facts. Mr. Nunnally's letter above quoted is sufficient explanation with reference to that charge.

The third charge by Mr. Williams, to-wit: That it was my announced policy not to permit the county to spend any money for the protection of the city against smallpox. Mr. Williams knows he never heard me make such an announcement, nor did any one else. But he has heard me announce that the city was entitled to the same protection at the hands of the county official as the county. He further knows that I cannot control the commissioner's court on all questions, having no vote except when there is a tie by the voting of the council. I only referred in my former statement to the care of smallpox by Arlington to refute the unjust and erroneous charge by Mr. Williams that the commissioner's court had discriminated in favor of Arlington, etc., and produced the facts to show there had been no such discrimination. It appears Mr. Williams has abandoned that charge. Mr. Waggaman, Mr. Henderson and Mr. Moreland and other members of the city council know I have always stood for protecting the city the same as the county against smallpox. Why should Mr. Williams charge me to the contrary, except for the fact, that he has either willfully or ignorantly made an erroneous charge and hasn't the fairness or manhood to admit his error? Never has the commissioner's court discriminated against the city in favor of the county in any manner by my vote or wish, yet I will refute any unjust charge against the commissioner's court as to any action taken by that court. Mr. Williams says he has had his "say." True, he has, and he had said it was, if Mr. Prosser and Mr. Nunnally are to be believed. He says he has done what he could to state the law and facts.

If that is your best, a poor excuse you are when it comes to facts, if Prosser is correct. And when you claim that the law does not make it discretionary with the commissioner's court as to when, where, etc., they shall authorize quarantine by the county physician, you are as far off as you were on the facts. And when you announce that the law would hold the members of the commissioner's court and county judge liable for a judgment rendered, although it be erroneous, you expose your insincerity, not your ignorance, for you doubtless know better. The fourth charge is where Mr. Williams claims that my reference to his assault on me is a "filthy article," and assumes to be insulted. He knows that my reference was not intended as a personal insult, but by innocently stating the fact that he had been left according to newspaper reports, to keep house, etc., for some weeks, and as a result his digestion had become deranged, which I suggested, must have prompted his assault on me, instead of the same having been the product of his better judgment. Perhaps he thought it was a good time to pretend that his modesty had been shocked because I referred to his stomach being out of order. To those of the most delicate modesty, this might have been a shock; but I had no thought that Mr. Williams was so delicate, since he had just charged, in effect, that I, as county judge, was willing to permit the good people of Fort Worth to "rot with contagious, loathsome diseases" rather than expend the county's money to protect them. Does not the charge made and language used by Mr. Williams toward me, and that unprovoked, tend more towards indecency and insult than my reference to the fact that he had a stomach and I thought it bad condition prompted him to make the assault, and perhaps made him feel like he needed the care of the county physician or some one else?

"Charging me with being willing to let the people be sacrificed in the manner he stated, is not insulting, and the language he used shocking to modesty, then what is it? Yet I did not pose as one so sensitive and charged the slur to his physical condition rather than as an intended "indecent" insult emanating from a deliberate mind. No, his modesty was not shocked. He is assuming the role of an affecting the public mind. But if I had been so unkind as to interpret him to be, from the language and charge used against me, might I not have been justified in feeding him out...

of his own spoon, paying insult for insult? If Mr. Williams insists in interpreting my remarks as indecent and a personal insult, when he knows they were not, he has that privilege and the interpretation he puts upon it emanates from a mind as indecent and insulting as the interpretation itself, and if I do not beneath the standard of a gentleman, by personal reference, as claimed by him, I only got low enough to reach the subject referred to. I invite the public to search the records for a verification of my statements. I will show the facts any time you may call to see them. I briefly refer to the statement in the Register of the 24th inst. The Register says in the so called interview "The judge construed the law differently, and said he would never consent to have the county pay the expenses so incurred." Again it says: "There is no statement (referring to the supposed interview) that Judge Harris did discuss the legal phase of the matter, and therefore no grounds for his denial." If the Register did not claim I discussed the legal phase of the matter, why did it charge this statement up to the reporter? Here is what the Register claimed the reporter said was a part of my interview: "The judge construed the law differently and said he would never consent to have the county pay the expenses so incurred." If the reporter did not so report, then the Register has done its reporter an injustice as well as myself. How does the Register reconcile the statement quoted from the so-called interview, with its own statement, to-wit: "There is no statement that Judge Harris did discuss the legal phase of the matter and therefore no grounds for his denial." and where did Mr. Williams get a pretext for his assault except from the Register? The two statements are in conflict with each other. I leave them for the Register to reconcile. I trust it will be more careful in the future. As to Mr. Williams, I do not suppose there is much hope for him. We will wait and see.

GATHERED IN THE MARKETS Save for Cotton, Trading is Reported Somewhat Dull The weather is the greatest sauce known. More appetites are affected by it than by any other condiment. Hot days deaden the palate, while a cool one following will make the heart of the marketman leap and rejoice because people are hungry. That is the reason the dealers give for a slow business in the local markets. Vegetables for the most are dry and discolored, looking, except cucumbers, radishes and asparagus which show up fresh and give off the heat the lie. Egg plants have lost their crispness and no longer puffed up, lie wrinkled and unnoticed in the market baskets. The cauliflower bluff has been called, and there is no more temptation in the white "flowers" because they, too, are dried up. Good things are potatoes, both Irish and sweet. Cabbages are not unattractive to utilitarians, especially if the utilitarians are hungry. Late peaches have begun to appear on the markets, and there was a good array this morning. The maidenly fruit have been gazing so long at the sun, however, that they have lost their blishes and appear slawly. You can have them for $1 per bushel. In the grain markets new corn is scarce, there being little offered. Cotton is coming in better every day, the price still being held at about 8c. Cotton seed is higher this year than common, 27 1-2c per bushel, being the price paid at the north square. WEEKLY COTTON STATISTICS. trusted and compared. Both are for the purpose of regulating competition, one of markets and the other of laborers.

The power and usefulness of labor unions in this country is not few, but the greatest labor combination in the world today is not one union, but eighty-two, having a total membership of 1,250,000 men all working for the cause of labor.

While many of the trades are successfully and powerfully organized, it has been found practically impossible to organize some kinds of labor, principally in those lines where a low standard of efficiency is required.

After the first difficulty of organizing labor was overcome, there followed the trouble of holding these men in the unions when they were tempted to go outside either by offers of higher wages or other advantages.

When one comes to think of it, Labor Day is for all people and not for the members of unions as a class.

So far the time has not been reached when strikes are wholly done away with, but diplomacy and arbitration are more and more taking their place.

The demands of the Federation of Labor are not only for the good of its million members. Among other things they ask compulsory education, a legal work day, municipal ownership, nationalization of telegraphs and telephones, railways and mines, sanitary inspection of workshops, mines and homes.

Let the children have a good time on Labor Day along with the parents. When the boys come to take the place of the father at the anvil, at the bench, the lathe, the saw and hammer, or come to positions of responsibility in the bank, or factory, they will see to it that the traditional good time of the day is enjoyed by all the people, whose lives they can influence.

CASE By... Emile Gaboriau

Synopsis of Case No. 113
The morning of February 23, a man introducing himself as Count Louis De Clameran, an iron maker of Oloron, enters the bank of M. Fauvel and announces that he has come to draw 300,000 francs ($70,000) deposited in the bank by his late brother.

On the other hand, in acting thus hastily he was insuring the safety of the principal villain, De Clameran. What proofs had he against him? Not one. He had strong suspicions, but no facts.

Under the name of M. Verduret, M. Lecoq takes up his abode with Prosper and attempts to find more clues. Prosper receives a letter, the words of which have been cut from a prayer-book and pasted on a sheet of paper.

Verduret finds evidence to assure him that Lagors is an impostor and that Count Louis de Clameran was very poor before the mysterious death of his brother who had been a rich iron maker.

He stood under a gas lamp to examine it. It did not appear to be dangerous, but the arm was cut through to the bone. He took his handkerchief from his pocket and tore it into four bands and tied his arm up with the dexterity of a surgeon.

"I must be on the track of some great crime, since these villains are resolved upon murder. When such men are only in danger of the police curfew they do not gratuitously risk the chance of being tried for murder."

He could not stay where he was. By enduring a great deal of pain he might still use his arm, so he started after his enemy, taking care to keep in the middle of the road and avoid all dark corners.

"I have to deal with desperate men," he muttered. "They do not even take the pains to conceal their pursuit of me."

He continued his way up the boulevard and, without turning his head, was sure that his enemies were thirty feet behind him.

"I must get rid of them somehow," he said to himself. "I can neither return home nor to the Archangel with these devils at my heels. They are following me to find out where I live and who I am. If they discover that the clown is M. Verduret and that M. Verduret is M. Lecoq, there is an end to my plans. They will escape abroad with the money, and I shall be left to console myself with a wounded arm."

The idea of Raoul and Clameran escaping so exasperated him that for an instant he thought of having them arrested at once.

The TOUCH of MIDAS

By Willis Emery

Copyright, 1931, by Frederick R. Toombs

BUDDS were bursting upon all the trees in the little park...

Last night's rain had filled a hollow in a stone. Within reach of it was young Dr. Denning...

"IF IS SOME MEDICINE THAT I NEED," HE REPLIED GRIMLY.

Looking up at her: "Brenda, isn't it an outrage that we two should feel like this on such a day and for such a cause? Look at the innards sky!"

"I don't believe he'll really turn you out," said Brenda. "You're only three months behind with the rent, and I've been as much as two months with mine sometimes."

Denning looked across the park toward the brownstone house wherein were his office and Brenda's studio. All their pretty romance had been under that roof.

"At that moment a tall, elderly man, elegant in dress and manner, who had been sitting on a bench nearby opposite, arose and advanced toward them."

"Pardon me if I observe," said he, "that you are in some sort of trouble. In the hope that I may be of service may I ask you what it is?"

"In that case, sir," said Denning, "we may be in a position to exchange confidences."

"I take your meaning perfectly," replied the other, "and you are quite right. It is for me to state the reasons by which I justify this liberty."

"I have not the least desire to intrude upon you," said Denning hastily. "As for my trouble, it is a mere matter of money. I see my whole life, both past and future—all that I have learned with great labor and all I have hoped to accomplish with that knowledge—in danger of utter wreck and ruin for the lack of a hundred dollars."

"It is a small sum," rejoined the stranger. "I fear that you underestimate your need. It is an error that nullifies all the help that is rendered by one man to another in this world."

the coin and leave the sum of want in the world precisely where it was before. "Upon my soul," exclaimed Denning, "that is the wisest saying on the subject that I ever heard of."

"Such being your courteous view of my humble philosophy," said the stranger, "tell me frankly what you wish." "I owe $100 rent," replied the doctor, "and I would like to pay it."

"You can have no real desire to pay rent," said the stranger, smiling, "except as every honest man would like to pay a debt. I fancy you did not take the rooms for the purpose of paying rent for them."

"Hardly," rejoined Denning, with a laugh. "My idea was to become a famous physician and make a lot of money."

"Precisely," was the reply. "And now tell me this: Do you wish to be a great physician in order that you may become rich?"

Denning leaned forward with his head in his hand, and there was silence while the great clock in the stou tower of the church struck 10.

"For some strange reason," said the young man, "I find it very hard to lie to you. The fact is that I am not wholly mercenary. I have a serious and strong interest in my profession. There is every chance that I shall succeed and do some good in the world."

"By heavens, it is!" exclaimed Denning in a sort of disappointment, as if there had been some chance of his getting it. "I need it worse than a starving man needs food."

"There is really very little use in feeding the average starving man," replied the stranger. "What he needs is not a meal, but a guarantee of daily manna from on high. Not being able to give this, I often pass such a man without heeding his plea."

"I perceive the application," said Denning, not without bitterness. "Pardon me, my young friend," said the stranger kindly, "you do not, my intention is to give you the hundred dollars which you fancy that you desire and also that which lies beyond it—the real wish of your heart."

"You trifle with me, sir," replied Denning stiffly. "Our philosophical discussion, like all other philosophy since the world began, has led us away from common sense. I can accept no aid of you."

"I think you cannot help it," was the answer, "though indeed you may refuse my hundred dollars. Let me be explicit. I am a very rich man and quite alone in the world except for my enemies, who, I do assure you, are numerous and inveterate. For many years my property has been devised by will for charitable uses. I had set my mind upon a hospital to perpetuate my name upon a new plan, but I will not weary you by description. And today, when the project is so near realization that I can almost hear the wagons rumbling along with the stone to build the walls, my wish has changed."

He turned more directly toward his hearers, and there was a hint of color in his pale cheeks as he continued: "Was any human creature ever made completely happy by means of a hospital unless, indeed, they killed him there and sent his soul to heaven? The patients are the poor mostly, and, being half cured, they go out to meet again the same evil conditions that sent them there at first. No, my friends, I was in danger of violating the principles of my own philosophy by trying to do a particular good. There is no such thing. Instead of this foolish attempt I resolved as I sat on the bench yesterday to make one person really happy. In this case it will be two"—he smiled at Brenda—"yet they will be one before long, I am sure."

Denning pushed back the hat from his damp forehead as he turned toward Brenda. "We must have fallen asleep here in the sun," said she.

"No dream, I assure you," said the stranger. "Why should I not leave my wealth to my pleasant friends of an hour? In forty-seven years that I have been on earth you are, truly believe, the only friends who have not betrayed me. But that is not the point. I have fortunately found the very man I would have wished to find and the very woman. Unless my faculty for reading the hearts of my fellow beings has deserted me, you are two who will be made completely happy by wealth. It is all I ask. You shall have mine and welcome."

"But to—turn aside one moment from the main absurdity," stammered Denning, "why do you speak of your bequest as if it would be paid tomorrow? You are neither old nor ill."

"You disagree with your distinguished colleague, Dr. Stendhall," said the stranger, waving his hand toward the northwest corner of the square, where many carriages were waiting near the famous doctor's door. "I have just come from him, and he has told me that if there is any good I wish to do in the world I must make haste, for the night cometh—a week hence, perhaps tomorrow. But that is of no consequence. It is a beautiful world this morning, and I would like to see some one really happy in it."

"I AM KING MIDAS, AND MY TOUCH TURNS EVERYTHING INTO GOLD."

"Stendhall," said Dr. Denning, "is an old"—he was about to say fakir, but professional courtesy checked him in time—"an old and eminent practitioner, yet it is possible you may be unnecessarily alarmed."

"I am not alarmed at all," replied the stranger cheerfully as he rose from his seat. "I am less disturbed than you were for a hundred dollars. Come, young people, let us go and make my will. I am King Midas, and my touch turns everything into gold."

He tapped Denning upon the region of the breast pocket, where the outline of a wallet (empty) was discernible. As he crossed to the other bench where he had left his cane he staggered slightly as if from weakness. The physician watched him narrowly.

"Those last words of his," he began, "sounded a little—Why, Brenda, what's the matter?"

The girl was frantically turning the pages of a newspaper. "Here, here," she whispered. "Isn't that the man?"

There was a two column picture, a halftone from a photograph. Denning stared at it open mouthed.

"Ah!" said the stranger, returning with so soft a step that he was looking over Denning's shoulder before the doctor perceived him. "My portrait, and quite good, is it not? But the account is, of course, wholly imaginary. I have read it. An irresponsible press, sir. A lunatic escapes from an asylum; his cousin, the wealthy Mr. Lawrence Allston, offers a reward of $2,500 for his capture. And this paper prints it, with my picture—mine! King Midas! Let us pay no more attention to such rubbish."

"I think, sir," said Denning, "that we should demand some satisfaction of Mr. Allston. We should go to his house at once. It is possible," he added, looking keenly into the other's face, "that he may invite us to breakfast."

The stranger leaned suddenly upon Denning's shoulder. "True, true," said he. "And I am famished, now that you mention it; imagination, of course, for I dined and breakfasted at my palace as usual. Let us go and eat with Cousin Lawrence. The food there may not turn to gold. The young lady will await us here? How gracious of her! Au revoir, then." And he bowed with the finest courtesy to Brenda as Denning led him away.

It was an hour before the doctor returned. "Here," he said, tapping upon his breast—"here, where King Midas touched me, I have turned to gold. Twenty-five hundred dollars, Brenda! Old Allston insisted. Upon my word, you should have seen our friend eat!"

"I pity him," said Brenda, with tears in her eyes. "Will he die soon?"

"That's a delusion," answered Denning. "There is nothing the matter with his heart, and he has not seen Stendhall. He's a hypochondriac with a special mania for making wills; hopeless, I'm afraid, and yet not wholly to be pitied. In his own mind he is a king, and surely he has had his royal wish this day. Through him there is one man in the world who is perfectly happy."

TROOPS AND STRIKERS IN ANOTHER CLASH.

LANSFORD, PA., THE SCENE OF THE ENCOUNTER

BAYONET THE MEN.

HALF A DOZEN LABORERS ARE HURT AS RESULT OF THE FRACAS

CAPTAIN HEIM IS INJURED.

Soldiers Escort Non-Union Men to Their Work and on Return Trip Mob Attacks Car With Fatal Results

Tamaqua, Pa., Aug. 29.—In an encounter between the troops and strikers at Lansford this morning Capt. W. H. Heim of Company K, Twelfth regiment, was slightly injured. Half a dozen strikers were bayoneted by the soldiers as a result of the fracas. Major Gearhart, in command of the troops here, states that he will appeal to the military authorities to put the town of Lansford under martial law. From daybreak the troops were active in quelling disturbances and protecting non-union men while on the way to work. As has been the case for the past few days the troops were jeered wherever they went. Officers repeatedly admonished the crowds not to insult or molest the soldiers, but their words had but little effect. At 5 o'clock Companies K and E were placed in two trolley cars. One of the cars was run in front of the car which carried the non-union men to work and the other was in the rear. While passing through Coaldale and Lansford the soldiers were hooted, but as no stop was made, the strikers did not make any violent demonstrations. At Summit Hill, about double the number of men availed themselves of the protection of soldiers and went to work. Pickets of strikers made efforts to stop them, but the warnings of the soldiers held them at bay. On the return trip the mob attacked the cars loaded with troops and non-union men with the result stated.

Comments Daily Bible Chapter Encourage Christian Work. We are very much gratified to know that some of our newspapers are helping the Christian cause in various ways, i. e., some of them publish a weekly sermon and many of them who could not be, or somehow they are not, persuaded to go to church, will read these sermons at home, and who knows but that by these means some of them are rescued from the awful abyss of destruction? And we are especially interested in the Christian spirit the Fort Worth Telegram is showing in publishing a chapter at a time of the Bible, and trust other papers will follow this example. This method of working for the Master will reach many a poor soul, both rich and poor, who would very likely never be reached otherwise. Why? Because the novelty of it will naturally cause hundreds of read it and the novelty of a new or noted preacher, or as they thought, a very peculiar kind of worship, etc., has caused many a man to soon be going for a different purpose altogether. We hope all in doing such work, do it in the true spirit, nevertheless it is the Christian's duty to encourage all such work, for the world is too ready to throw its sturs at every Christian undertaking (Satan has them trained almost as automatic machines). So let us as true to our Savior's cause stand up for Jesus in every place and on all occasions. Would a true soldier be still and let an enemy come and wound his companions, or would he not help his companions check the enemy's progress? How much more ought we to be soldiers for Jesus' work? R. L. NEVES, Terrell, Tex.

MANY ATTEND REVIVALS IN A TENT

Large Crowd at Opening Services Held Last Evening

In a big white tent, pitched on an inviting place near Texas street, and just west of the city pound, revival services are being held nightly under the auspices of the First Baptist church by Rev. Luther Little and Rev. E. B. Morgan. The big tent was nearly full last night when the services opened and much interest was shown in the services, which were the second of the kind since the tent campaign has opened. Those conducting the revival are impressed with the favorable outlook and they were much encouraged by results last night.

THE LAST CAR OF STEEL IS EN ROUTE

Viaduct Material Should all be Here Early Next Week—One More Shipment is Necessary for Completion

The last car of steel which is important in the construction of the Jennings avenue viaduct is on its way to Fort Worth. Tracers sent out by the Texas and Pacific yesterday located the shipment "en route" between Chattanooga and Shreveport, and by the closest calculations it should arrive here Tuesday or Wednesday. One more car is necessary to complete the structure, but its delay will not necessarily retard the opening.

CASTRO PREFERS TO WAIT FOR AN ATTACK.

ONCE MORE VENEZUELAN STAGE-WARFARE COMES TO THE LIMELIGHT

New York, Aug. 29.—News from Venezuela received by partisans of the revolutionary cause in this city is to the effect that President Castro maintains his lines from Cua to San Juan De Los Moros, but that it will be impossible for them to avoid the entry of the revolutionary forces when General Luciano Mendoza and General Segundo Riera join them. General Matos occupies a parallel line from Sombrero through Ortiz and Morocoyos to Parapara, awaiting the arrival of Mendoza and Riera, who have 4,000 men. Matos has with him 8,000 well equipped men and holds very strong positions. He will not advance toward Caracas until the reinforcements arrive. Meanwhile, he is ready for any attack which Castro may make on him. The latest advice says Castro will not advance and prefers to await the attack from the revolutionary forces.

A FATAL MISTAKE MADE IN MEDICINE

"High Life" Swallowed for Peruna by a Farmer Near Mansfield Last Tuesday

A gentleman here from Mansfield today said that the death near there last Tuesday of J. H. Light, a farmer, was peculiarly sad. Mr. Light swallowed a liquid known as "High Life," mistaking it for Peruna. He had a bottle of each on a shelf, the "High Life" being in a Peruna bottle. Some members of the household had moved the bottles while arranging the accumulation of articles on the shelf, and at noon Mr. Light took a draught of what he supposed to be Peruna. He lived only two or three hours.

CONNECTION FROM TEXAS.

DENVER LIKELY TO FURNISH IT FOR ROCK ISLAND

Work of Arranging Schedule Begins Next Month — Fresh Batch of Names for New California Train Received This Morning

Work will begin late next month arranging the schedule for the Rock Island's new California train, which service will be among the fastest in the transcontinental business. Ample connection will be afforded from Texas, it is said, with the Fort Worth and Denver via Dalhart, and in addition the latter road will carry a Denver-Mexico sleeper. In this event it is not believed that the Denver's schedule out of Fort Worth will undergo material change, unless a radical departure is made from the figures originally proposed for the Rock Island's train. A fresh batch of names for the new train in the $100 prize contest were received here this morning. Among them being from Fort Worth. Among the suggestions are: "The Gila Monster," "The Fast Flying Lizard," either of which is recommended for the speed to be denoted. "The Rock Island Chaparral," is entirely a new one, in the last word being the name of one of the swiftest running ground birds of the southwest. "The World" and "The Wing of the West" are two new ones which may receive marked consideration. "The Golden Star," "The Lone Golden Star," "The Mammoth Star," "The Golden Alamo" and the "Mammoth Steed," are also submitted as winners.

RATES REMAIN UNCHANGED. At noon today no change had been made in the Chicago and St. Louis rate announcements of yesterday. All roads gave notice of using the $20 rate to Chicago and $18.50 to St. Louis as given by the Rock Island. Considerable complaint is made that no business appears in sight even at a reduction. The St. Louis rate, which is the result of an excursion rate between Kansas City and St. Louis, is only 90 cents under the Texas tariff, which is hardly enough to induce any one to travel.

INTERNATIONAL TO SEND ENGINEERS HERE. The International and Great Northern will have an engine here Monday to care for construction work at the "front." Track laying is now progressing about two miles south of Fort Worth, and is being rapidly pushed from the Waco end of the line. Engineers say the road will not be completed and operating into Fort Worth until November.

STRIKE HURTS IRON TRADE.

General Tone of the Market Quiet Due to Banking Furnaces—Orders Are Taken Up Well Ahead for Next Year

Cleveland, O., Aug. 29.—The Iron Trade Review this week says: Comparative quietness has come upon the iron trade in the last week in August—a condition in sharp contrast with the first half of the month. The coke supply has improved slightly in some spots, but with other consumers the liability to sudden stoppage is as great as at any time last week. It is evident that there can be no increase in the supply of domestic pig iron, but rather a tendency the other way. The tendency in foundry iron is unmistakably upward, and the movement is more marked because of the refusal of some producers, particularly southern, to quote for any delivery in 1903. Micanite $18 Birmingham is the usual quotation for No. 2, though there have been sales as high as $20. Northern furnaces have been best the past week by foundry customers to whom the banking of a furnace means the suspension of melting. The effect of the anthracite strike is cumulative, and it may be months before it ceases to be felt in the iron industry. Contracts now being placed for next year are from a variety of smaller consumers. In the Pittsburg district it is reported that the producers of Virginia basic iron have made tenders of iron for shipment late this year at $21.50 to $21.75 and at future at $20.50 to $20.75. Foreign iron, Bessemer, foundry and basic, is coming in at an increasing rate, and quotations for Middlesboro iron at Atlantic seaboard are as low as $19.00 duty paid, for No. 2. Cargo lots of Middlesboro iron have been offered at $21.00 a ton, Pittsburg. The decline in foreign steel has led to waiting by some buyers. German billets can be bought at $30 duty paid, as against $32 and $33 for domestic steel. Some rail tonnage is still being placed, the mills booking about 50,000 tons the past week, including an order from the Wabash railroad for 25,000 tons. In the Chicago district quite a number of structural orders are pending and some German material has been placed in that market, and an eastern ship building company has shaped a round order for plates and plates abroad. One large plate mill is sold ahead to the middle of 1903.

BOTH NO BOTHER TO BRITISH MINISTRY.

Believed that Intrepid Leader Will Settle Down Readily

New York, Aug. 29.—There is no evidence in the colonial office or elsewhere that the ministry is deeply concerned over the results of the Boer conference in Holland or Sir Gordon Sprigg's exploits in Capetown, cables of the London correspondent of the Tribune. There is an optimistic feeling among officials here that General Botha, after separating himself from the irreconcilable Boers will return to South Africa with Fischer, Wessels, Dewet and Delarey and become the leader of a rational peace policy.

Laborers Unearth Bejeweled Sword and Other Relics

New York, Aug. 29.—Laborers employed in the subway excavation at Astor and Lafayette places have unearthed some interesting relics of the colonial times in the shape of a town crier's bell made of brass and with an ivory handle; the hilt of an officer's sword, and a bronze powder flask. The hilt of the sword evidently had been studded with precious stones and at its base almost obliterated were the initials "W."

STRIKE HURTS IRON TRADE.

General Tone of the Market Quiet Due to Banking Furnaces—Orders Are Taken Up Well Ahead for Next Year

Cleveland, O., Aug. 29.—The Iron Trade Review this week says: Comparative quietness has come upon the iron trade in the last week in August—a condition in sharp contrast with the first half of the month. The coke supply has improved slightly in some spots, but with other consumers the liability to sudden stoppage is as great as at any time last week. It is evident that there can be no increase in the supply of domestic pig iron, but rather a tendency the other way. The tendency in foundry iron is unmistakably upward, and the movement is more marked because of the refusal of some producers, particularly southern, to quote for any delivery in 1903. Micanite $18 Birmingham is the usual quotation for No. 2, though there have been sales as high as $20. Northern furnaces have been best the past week by foundry customers to whom the banking of a furnace means the suspension of melting. The effect of the anthracite strike is cumulative, and it may be months before it ceases to be felt in the iron industry. Contracts now being placed for next year are from a variety of smaller consumers. In the Pittsburg district it is reported that the producers of Virginia basic iron have made tenders of iron for shipment late this year at $21.50 to $21.75 and at future at $20.50 to $20.75.
