STRANGE CASE OF NELLIE CORCORAN

DIES IN HOSPITAL AFTER SLEEPING 20 DAYS

Hundreds of Physicians Examined Her and Every Effort Was Made to Awaken Her, but With Little Success—Once or Twice She Was Aroused but Spoke Only a Word

(By Associated Press.)
New York, Nov. 8.—Nellie Corcoran, who for 20 days lay in a mysterious state of coma in St. Vincent's hospital, has died. Her case was an extremely puzzling one to medical practitioners throughout the city. The girl fell into her state of unconsciousness October 18 at the house where she was employed as a servant. At the hospital where she was taken heroic efforts to determine the cause of her condition met with little success. Hundreds of physicians examined her and every known method was tried to awaken her, but with little success. Two or three times she was aroused and spoke a few words, saying she was sleepy, and again became unconscious.

FATHER TRIES TO STOP AN AUTOPSY

His Daughter Had Slept 20 Days Without Waking—Science Proved Stronger Than His Claim on Her

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—An autopsy was performed late this afternoon on the body of Nellie Corcoran, the trance girl, who died today after a sleep of 20 days. Michael Corcoran, her father, went to the hospital and tried to stop the autopsy, but failed.

Result of the Autopsy
The autopsy on Nellie Corcoran showed that she was in perfect health, yet she was changed to a wrinkled old woman in 21 days' sleep. Dr. Janeway says that it is one of the most remarkable cases on record.
Dr. Herzog thinks that the dissection was hasty. It would have been better to have waited and made sure she was dead.

IS THE VICTIM OF A VENDETTA

BODY OF AN ITALIAN STONEMASON FOUND IN NEW YORK

Had Been Covered Over, and Every Pocket in His Coat Had Been Cut Out, Except One, and in It Was a Decoy Letter Luring Him to His Death

(By Associated Press.)
New York, Nov. 10.—An Italian stonemason, believed to have been the victim of a vendetta, has been found dead near Yonkers. Several bullet holes through the head and body showed how he met his death. The body was discovered by the supervisor of the Bedford Reformatory while he was hunting. It lay in a most unfrequented spot and had been covered with underbrush. Investigation showed that every pocket had been cut from the man's clothing except one. In this was found a letter purporting to have come from the victim's brother.

It told him to come at once from Port Chester to a town near Yonkers for work which awaited him.
No trace of the man's brother can be found and the police believe the letter was a decoy. The victim showed evidence of having been prosperous and had dealings with well known Italian bankers in this city.

ELECTION OF COUNT BONI IS REJECTED

HE IS ACCUSED OF GROSS IRREGULARITIES OF CONDUCT

French Chamber of Deputies Turns Him Down and All Sorts of Trouble Ensues—Castellane Leaves the Room With This Parting Shot: "Gentlemen, I Will Be With You Again"

(By Associated Press.)

Paris, Nov. 8.—After an exciting debate in the chamber of deputies Friday, by 278 to 235 votes the election of Count Boni de Castellane as a member of the house, was invalidated.

Emile Chauvin made a bitter attack on Count de Castellane, declaring he had been guilty of irregularities, and saying that the count had accused his opponent of being of German descent and a Dreyfusard.

Count de Castellane replied, classifying the charges as false. He said he had been accused of buying the election and practicing charity for election purposes. Nothing of the kind had ever been proven he declared.

He closed his defense with an appeal to the chamber to uphold his election, which he asserted truly represented the wishes of the inhabitants of the district. The vote was then taken.

In the course of his speech, M. Chauvin declared that Count de Castellane, in order to warm the enthusiasm of his partisans, abandoned all reserve and through his agents, gave unlimited credit in hotels, inns and drinking places until the district was gay with the magnificent fetes and merriment during the campaign. The count delivered his reply in vehement tones and indignantly repudiated the accusations of H. Chauvin, which he declared were attacks upon the integrity and honesty of his constituency. He explained further that he had asked nothing in return.

When the president of the chamber announced the result of the vote Count Boni arose and started for the door. His friends crowded around him shaking his hand. The business of the chamber was suspended temporarily while the count was escorted to the exit. Just before he left the chamber he turned and shouted defiantly: "Gentlemen, I will be with you again."

TEXAS BAPTISTS IN CONVENTION

TWO NOTABLE GAVELS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Nearly 100,000 Was Raised as an Endowment for Baylor University, the First Churches of Both Dallas and Waco Contributing $5000 Cash, Mexican quartet a Feature

(Special to The Telegram.)

Waco, Nov. 8.—The Texas Baptist convention elected the following officers: R. C. Buckner of Dallas, president; G. W. Carroll of Beaumont, W. B. Denson of Gainesville and J. C. Burkhardt of Midland, first, second and third vice presidents; F. M. McConnell of Brownwood and A. E. Baten of Amarillo secretaries.

Rev. Dr. B. H. Carroll, during his address of welcome, presented the president with a gavel manufactured from the old live oak tree under which the Baptists first met at Waco. "Beneath that oak," Dr. Carroll said, "the earliest Christian anthems sounded when its leaves no longer trembled with the chaffings of the red men, their squaws and their papooses."

In accepting the gavel President Buckner told the story of another one presented by Rev. Dr. A. J. Holt, made from an olive tree that grew in Palestine on soil so often pressed by the feet of the Savior.

The feature was a quartette of Mexican Baptists singing a Spanish hymn. At Friday night's meeting nearly $100,000 was raised as an endowment for Baylor university. The First Baptist church of Waco and the First Baptist church of Dallas each gave $5000.

PLAN TO BUILD LABOR TEMPLE

PROJECT ON FOOT AMONG LOCAL LABOR UNIONS

PRESENTED THIS WEEK

Trades and Labor Assembly Will Discuss Matters Thursday Evening but no Definite Action is Likely to be Taken Until More is Learned About Idea

If a plan, as yet not fully developed among members of local labor unions, is carried out, Fort Worth will be one of the few cities in the Southwest to have a labor temple, or a building devoted exclusively to the interests of labor organizations.

Trades and Labor Assembly, which is recognized as the proper body to take action regarding such a matter.

At the next meeting of the assembly, Thursday evening, the matter will be brought up, and while no definite action is expected at that time, nevertheless the project will be presented and thoroughly discussed at the meeting.

If the plan seems favorable to the majority, action will probably be deferred until the return of F. C. Southern from the meeting of the State Federation of Labor at Houston, which convenes there the morning of November 17. Mr. Southern is the Fort Worth delegate to the meeting, and as there is a labor temple in that city he will look into the conditions there and endeavor to get matter on which to report to the local assembly.

C. H. DuBois, editor of the Union Banner is the assembly's delegate to the National Federation of Labor, which convenes in New Orleans, Nov. 13. On the return of Mr. DuBois and Mr. Southern from the two conventions, a union mass meeting will probably be held at which the reports of both delegates will be heard.

The various labor organizations of the city are all in prosperous condition, and increased interest shown in them is gratifying to all who are working for the cause of organized labor.

HALF TRUTH TOLD BY F. VANDERLIP

FINANCIAL INTERESTS GIVEN A SUBSTANTIAL SHOCK

HIS INTERESTING CAREER

A Few Years Ago He Was a Reporter on The Chicago Tribune—Now He is Vice-President of the Strongest Banking Institution in the United States.

(Special to The Telegram.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The dinner speech delivered by Frank Vanderlip the other night at Wilmington, N. C., sent chills coursing up and down the spine of the Wall street anatomy. The crux of the speech (misleading in its half truths, as shown in a subsequent paragraph) was that in the four years last past credits in this country have increased about $4,000,000,000 without any increase of actual cash, and that we have in the same period rolled up a floating debt to Europe of possibly $200,000,000 besides. It must not be supposed that Mr. Vanderlip was the first to discover these things. On the contrary, nearly every point that he made in his speech had been under discussion privately in the financial community for months. Bankers were not disguising the situation to themselves, nor to their large Wall street clients.

The significance of Mr. Vanderlip's speech was that he made it. He is presumed to have reflected therein the views of the most powerful banking interests in this country. He is vice-president of the National City bank, the largest bank in the United States, and so closely dominated by the Rockefeller influences as to be called and generally known in Wall street by the name, "Standard Oil Bank." It is understandable to suppose that Mr. Vanderlip's speech was made without the approval of the banking interests with whom he is associated.

Another View of It Right here there is admitted the interesting thought that perhaps that was precisely the thing they wanted people to think. In plainly spoken language the story is told by insiders that the motive of the Vanderlip speech was to induce the sale of long stocks in order that the Standard Oil people might accumulate more of their specialties at the best figures possible. They are known to have immense sums of available cash awaiting investment, and as buyers will naturally want to get property as cheap as can be obtained. Hence the pessimistic expression by the person they have apparently delegated to voice an opinion designed to influence sentiment. This view of the case takes from Mr. Vanderlip's utterance the sting, which to the casual observer appears to be obtrusively present. It also gives entirely different insight into actual attitude of the Standard Oil crowd from that seemingly intended to be conveyed by the ostentatious announcement of their ordained orator.

The Personality of Mr. Vanderlip Mr. Frank Vanderlip is an interesting person. Only a few years ago he was a reporter on the staff of the Chicago Tribune. He became financial writer for that paper and then its financial editor, in which capacity he attracted the attention of Lyman J. Gage, then president of the First National bank of Chicago. When Mr. Gage took the treasury portfolio in Mr. McKinley's cabinet he brought Mr. Vanderlip to Washington and made him an assistant secretary of the treasury. Big Wall street interests conceived a high regard for Mr. Gage's young assistant. Several attractive offers were made to him by Wall street financial interests. He resigned without indicating his future designs and spent several months traveling in Europe, where he made an exhaustive study of commercial and financial conditions.

On returning to this country he was promptly elected vice-president of the National City bank. His observations abroad have proven valuable to the banking interests with whom he is now associated and in all probability were made with that end in view. Mr. Vanderlip has a striking personality. He is very big and tall, and although young his hair is touched with gray.

He is about as handsome a man as one would be likely to find in Wall street. He travels much, only lately attending the industrial conference at Oostend in a semi-official capacity. His present work is significant of the new methods that of late years have been adopted into banking. His chief office is to promote the reputation of the National City bank at home and abroad. He attends bankers' dinners, makes speeches and writes on financial topics, and wherever he eats or speaks, and in whatever he writes the name of the National City bank is somehow in evidence. That's advertising.

Referring Again to Mr. Vanderlip By the way, there is one part of Mr. Vanderlip's speech that is misleading. The bank statistics that he gives are not all there is to the money situation. The government reports of the Treasury department show that during the last six years there has been an actual increase in circulation in this country of about $630,000,000. If this increase does not show in the bank statements it must be in active circulation among the people. It is afloat somewhere. It is neither put away in the stockings nor lost. It may be depended on the money is in live employment and it is getting action as earnestly as though it appeared in the daily movements of banks and reflected in the clearing house figures. It is the retail supply of the country. Banks deal in money and it is natural that they should desire to make the goods they handle and own valuable by producing the impression that it is scarce and that they have a monopoly of the available surplus.

Tom Reed in Wall Street Unnoticed Somebody once said that great men gravitate to Wall street. The thing was not unapparently said. Men who at one time or another have been conspicuous in the public eye pass hourly in Wall street and go unnoticed. A few examples may be noted. There is former Speaker of the House Thomas Brackett, ("Czar") Reed, now a member of the law firm of Reed, Simpson, Thatcher & Barnum, corporation attorneys. His office is at 25 Broad street, in one of the newest and biggest skyscrapers of the Wall street district. He comes and goes without anybody's turning to look after him. Even in Washington, where the throng is used to the sight of celebrities, Reed was always noticed, partly on account of his conspicuous personality, but in Wall street nobody pays him the slightest heed as he passes to and fro.

John G. Carlisle Lost in Oblivion Complete oblivion, so far as the throng is concerned, has befallen John G. Carlisle, who, now bent and old, is jostled in eating and drinking places, in elevators and busy corridors like any ordinary person without fame. He is practicing law, too, but indifferently from all accounts. There is former Vice-President of the United States Levi P. Morton, now president of the trust company bearing his name. Mr. Morton, of course, was a big man in Wall street before he became a big man in politics, but nobody in the financial world pays any the greater attention to him now for his having once been vice-president. Former Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage would serve as another example. In Wall street today he is not differently more prominent than any one or two hundred other bankers, and not half as prominent as either of four or five who might be named.

Affairs of U. S. Steel Co. The affairs of the United States Steel corporation are attracting a great deal of attention at the moment and are likely, many think, to attract more before long. Entirely aside from the speculation over the possibility of a successor to President Charles M. Schwab (and by the way it is not at all likely that he will retire, as his health is very much improved) the trade situation is assuming interesting and unexpected phases. The giant corporation is taking measures to protect itself against competition of independent concerns and being enormously strong in resources it will no doubt be quite as able to command the situation on any decline on iron and its products as it was on the upturn.

THE NEWS FROM DENTON

Short Personal Matters of Interest From That City

(Special to The Telegram.) DENTON, Tex., Nov. 8.—Hon. Alvin C. Owsley, a leading barrister of Denton, who for some time has been suffering intensely with an eye trouble, is in Dallas for treatment. According to the diagnosis of the oculist an abscess has formed in Mr. Owsley's eye, the result of being struck in the eye some time ago by a kissing bug. An operation was to have been performed yesterday, but it was deferred on account of the sudden illness of his wife, who is with him in Dallas. His many friends in Denton keenly sympathize with Mr. Owsley in his affliction.

The state and federal election passed off very quietly in Denton and Denton county, the only noteworthy feature about it being the tightness of the vote. In the Third ward there were only 196 votes polled where there were only 400 polled in the Prohibition election 60 days ago. Although prohibition has only been in effect in Denton county since October 23 there have been three arrests made for violating the law: one of the parties arrested being a Dallas saloonist and the third a colored man of Denton. The Dallas and Fort Worth men pleaded guilty to shipping whisky C. O. D. to Denton as "oysters" and "glass," respectively, and will each have to serve a term in the county jail, as the law will not take money in settlement in full. The colored man is languishing in jail awaiting his trial.

City Marshal W. S. Fry of Denton followed the returns for the package of "glass" from Denton back to Fort Worth, saw the saloonist sign for the returns from the express company, made the arrest and brought the violator of the law back to Denton with him.

From the way the thing starts off it looks like prohibition is going to prohibit, if the violators don't overtax the capacity of the jail. A. G. LEE.

Best Liniment on Earth

I. M. McHany, Greenville, Tex., writes, Nov. 2, 1900: "I had rheumatism last winter, was down in bed six weeks, tried everything, but got no relief, till a friend gave me a part of a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment. I used it, and got two more bottles. It cured me and I haven't felt any rheumatism since. I can recommend Snow Liniment to be the best liniment on earth for rheumatism." For rheumatic, sciatic or neuralgic pains, rub in Ballard's Snow Liniment, you will not suffer long, but will be gratified with a speedy and effective cure. 25c, 50c and $1 at H. T. Allow me to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I had a very severe cough and cold and feared I would get pneumonia, but after taking the second dose of this medicine I felt better, three bottles of it cured my cold and the pains in my chest disappeared entirely. I am most respectfully yours for health, Ralph S. Meyers, 64 Thirty seventh St., Wheeling, W. Va. For sale by N. E. Grammer, druggist.

GOVERNOR SHARP ENDORSES PE-RU-NA

PE-RU-NA

Isaac Sharp, ex-Governor of Kansas, in a letter from 1227 I street, N. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I can earnestly recommend your Peruna as an excellent tonic. Its reputation as a cure for catarrh is firmly established by my friends, who have been benefited by its use, and the public should know of its great curative qualities."—Isaac Sharp.

Mr. Edwin F. Whitten, 3 Otis st., Worcester, Mass., writes: "I am pleased to add my testimony relative to the great benefits which are derived from Peruna in cases of catarrh."

"March last I was taken ill with congestion of the lungs and bronchitis, which left me with a severe case of nasal catarrh. The discharge from nostrils and throat was vile and sickening. In May I began taking Peruna, and in less than ten days the discharge had ceased, and before the second bottle was used the soreness back of nostrils, over eyes and head, generally, had disappeared."

"It has prevented the annual attack of hay fever and my general health is by a large per cent. better than it has been for many months."

"Peruna, certainly, if taken wisely and faithfully will in a very short space of time do good work in ridding one of catarrh."—Edwin F. Whitten.

Congressman Thompson of Kentucky. Ex-Congressman Phil. B. Thompson, from Kentucky, writes:

"My friends have used your remedy, Peruna, and I take pleasure in testifying to the merits of your medicine. Besides being one of the very best tonics, it is a good, substantial catarrh remedy."—Phil B. Thompson.

Clean, Mucous Membranes. Anyone who has taken Peruna has clean mucous membranes.

Anyone who has clean mucous membranes is not liable to catch cold, cannot have catarrh and need not fear catching the grip or having malaria or contracting any contagious disease.

As the skin protects the outside of the body so the mucous membrane protects the cavities of the body, that is to say, if it is a clean and healthy mucous membrane.

A congested or catarrhal mucous membrane, a mucous membrane dotted with little ulcers or spotted with canker sores will not protect the body.

Such people always have colds, are sure to have the grip and would acquire any contagious disease that is going in spite of all antiseptics and precautions.

Peruna makes diseased mucous membranes clean. This not only rids the patient of catarrh but fortifies the body against the reverses of all climates, epidemics and contagious diseases.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium Columbus, Ohio.

Expense Account for October
The expense account for the month of October was allowed. It has been printed in full in the Telegram. It amounts to $28,247.76.

Want's Better Pay for Fire Boys
Fire Chief Maddox asked the council to increase the pay of the fire boys, saying that day wages in the city are in excess of that paid the firemen, and for this reason he claims it is a difficult matter to keep good men in the service, and pointed out the necessity of having trained men at all times. The matter was referred to the committee on fire department.

A number of miscellaneous bills for school house repairs, for paving contracts, viaduct estimate, official expenses were allowed. A number of petitions for reduction in taxes prayed for by citizens were referred to the finance committee.

Additional Rooms Ordered
A resolution passed that an additional room be erected for the school building in the Third and Ninth wards, neither to exceed in cost $200.

A resolution from Alderman Henderson calling for weekly work reports

TRY THIS TEST And See if Your Kidneys Are Diseased.

A very simple way to determine whether your kidneys or bladder are diseased is to put some of your urine in a glass tumbler and let it stand 24 hours; if it has a sediment of a cloudy,ropy or stringy appearance, if it is pale or discolored, you do not need a physician to tell you that you are in a dangerous condition. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy speedily cures such serious symptoms as pain in back, inability to hold urine, a burning scalding pain in passing it. Frequent desire to urinate, especially at night, the staining of linen by your urine and all unpleasant and dangerous effects produced on the system by the use of whisky and beer.

In speaking of the good done him by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, the Rev. Aaron Coors, D. D., pastor of the M. E. Church of Rhinecliff, N. Y., says:

"I most sincerely believe that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best kidney, liver and blood medicine made, and urgently recommend it, for I know by experience it will do all that is claimed for it."

"Favorite Remedy" is a vegetable help to the stomach and bowels in performing their duties properly. It overcomes and permanently cures dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness and rheumatism. It is absolutely harmless and purely vegetable. It contains no narcotics or minerals in any form, no dangerous stimulants, no mercury or poisons, and is the only kidney medicine that does not constipate.

All druggists sell Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy in the New 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles.

from the street commissioner, went to the street and alley committee.

Pertaining to Prisoners
An ordinance was introduced, providing that all male prisoners against whom fines are assessed in the city court and who shall work out said fines on the city streets, shall be allowed a credit of 50 cents for each day so working, and a credit of the same amount for each rainy day that may prevent them from working. Rules were suspended and the ordinance passed.

Must Have Watchmen
An ordinance was introduced providing for the employment of a watchman on all railway street crossings day and night, and providing a penalty of not less than $1 and not more than $50 against each railway company failing to maintain such watchman, each day of failure to constitute a separate offense. The ordinance also provides for the assessment of a penalty of not to exceed $50 on each watchman failing to perform his duty. The ordinance passed.

Miscellaneous Matters
A communication from the trades assembly, inviting the mayor, members of the city council and the city government to attend a trades meeting at the city hall on Sunday afternoon was accepted.

The street commissioner was ordered to construct a sump at the corner of Front and Terry streets to dispose of the surplus water in that vicinity.

Other miscellaneous matters were disposed of and the council adjourned.

HAVE YOU ANY OF THESE Symptoms of a Very Common Trouble?

There is no disease so common in the United States as Catarrh because it appears in so many forms and attacks so many different organs. It is a common mistake to suppose that catarrh is confined to the nose and throat. Any inflammation of the mucous membrane wherever located accompanied by abnormal secretions, is catarrh. Catarrh of stomach or bladder, or intestines is nearly as common as nasal catarrh and much more serious, although it is true that stomach catarrh and catarrh of other internal organs is the result of neglected nasal catarrh.

A new remedy has recently appeared which so far as tested seems to be remarkably effective in promptly curing catarrh, wherever located. The preparation is sold by druggists generally under name of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, and in addition to being very palatable and convenient, possesses extraordinary merit, in many cases giving immediate relief from the coughing, hawking and constant clearing of the throat and head, those symptoms with which everyone is familiar who has ever suffered from colds in the head and throat.

Catarrh is simply a continuation of these symptoms until the trouble becomes chronic and grows gradually worse from year to year.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are composed of Hydrastin, Red Gum and similar antiseptics and catarrh specifics, from which it will be seen that no secret is made of the ingredients and also that no mineral poisons are used, as is the case with many well known catarrh medicines.

For catarrh of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes, for catarrh of stomach, intestines or bladder no preparation is so safe and gives such rapid and permanent results as Stuart's Catarrh Tablets.

All druggists sell them at 50c for full sized package. You can use them with assurance that you will not contract the cocaine or morphine habit as the results from this catarrh cure are apparent from the first day's use.

THE JOHNSON MURDER CASE

NOW IN THE HANDS OF THE TWELVE JURORS

STEPHENVILLES' ELECTION

Declared Void by the Court of Civil Appeals—Criminal Docket in Federal Court Set for Tomorrow—Commissioners Will Canvas Election Returns—An Acquittal in County

The closing argument was made in the F. M. Johnson murder case last night at a night session. County Attorney Lattimore was the last one to speak. The court delivered its charge, and the jury retired.

There is no way of figuring whether or not a verdict will be given today. One week ago today a verdict was returned in this court in a murder case—and it read, "Life of 99 years."

The criminal term expired for the present last night. The murder cases have strung out to such length as to leave much unfinished criminal business.

Mr. Lattimore will make an effort to prevail upon the court to allow him some extra time. He says there is much criminal business that ought to be cleaned up.

Court of Civil Appeals
The following proceedings were had in the Court of Civil Appeals for the Second Supreme Judicial district of Texas yesterday:

Motions submitted—Wyatt vs. Jones, for rehearing.
Motions submitted—Wyatt vs. Jones, for rehearing.

In the case of Ahe T. Oxford vs. L. N. Frank et al., from Erath county, being a local option contest case, the judgment is reversed and here rendered declaring the election void.

In the case of J. M. Dickson et al. vs. Alice Holt, from Montague county, the motion to dismiss appeal was overruled, and the judgment reversed and rendered for appellant for $500.

Cases submitted—Chambers vs. Gallup et al., from Tarrant county; Dale et al. vs. Friberg, from Clay county; Taylor vs. Rose, from Martin county; Fort Worth and Denver City Railway company vs. Ramp, from Donley county; Fort Worth and Denver City Railway company vs. Lock, from Hardeman county; Pacific Express company vs. Stegall, from Erath county.

Cases set for November 22—Smith vs. Smith, from Tarrant county; Shetter vs. Fort Worth and Denver City Railway company, from Clay county; Garrison vs. Sparks, from Floyd county; Blethen vs. Bonner et al., from Bosque county; Parks vs. Brummett, from Armstrong county; Slaughter vs. DeVitt & Flato, from Lubbock county.

An Acquittal in the County
Only one case was tried in the county court yesterday, that of the state vs. Charles Gomer, aggravated assault; acquitted.

Commissioners to Meet
The county commissioners will meet in regular monthly session tomorrow. Among other things on the agenda is to canvass the recent election returns.

In Federal Court
The morning hour in the Federal court was consumed in argument of demurrers in civil cases. The court adjourned at noon for the week. Monday the criminal docket will be taken up, as previously printed in the Telegram.

Suits Filed in District
In the district clerk's office two suits were filed yesterday, those of T. B. Ray vs. the Texas and Pacific Railway company; action for personal damages to wife, now deceased, $2000; C. M. Steger and wife vs. the Fort Worth and Denver Railway company et al., action for alleged personal damages, $5000.

MILEAGE SYSTEM GAINS SUPPORT

GRADUALLY BECOMING MORE POPULAR

ANTICIPATE ITS ADOPTION

Stated That Within a Few Years it Will be in Use All Over the United States and on All of the Many Railroad Systems

The interchangeable mileage system which was first put into operation by the railroads in Colorado, then in the district of the Transmissourian Passenger association and finally by the Transcontinental Passenger association, will likely be put into effect by all of the leading roads of the United States by the first of the year.

Representatives of the different roads in Denver are very much pleased with the new system and see in its universal adoption the doing away finally with all 1000-mile tickets. The use of the interchangeable scrip has not been generally adopted yet, although it has been on sale for several months. This, however, is looked upon as being due to the general public not being familiar with its operation and the very favorable round-trip rates which are adopted by the Colorado roads. It takes a long time to educate the people up to such a radical change, but railroad officials are confident that it is one of the most advantageous innovations made in recent years and that it is only a question of time when the general public will take to the new plan.

A meeting of the general passenger agents of most of the Eastern trunk lines was held in New York last week to consider the adoption of the interchangeable mileage for their territory. The matter was considered of such vital importance, however, that no decision was reached and the meeting was adjourned until November 11, when the question will be finally decided.

The only difference between the plan as contemplated by the Eastern roads and that now in operation west of the Missouri river is that scrip books will be sold for $30, good for 1000 miles of travel on any road in the interchangeable territory, while in the West books are issued for 2000 miles only at $60. These books consist of scrip equal in value to the price paid for it in the purchase of tickets from any road using the system. When the book is finally used up, the cover is returned to the bureau and a refund of $10 or $20, is made to the purchaser, less a small fee for the maintenance of the bureau.

Railroad men predict that inside of three years men can buy scrip books in Denver which will be accepted as payment for tickets on any railroad in the United States.

At a recent meeting held in the East for the purpose of adjusting existing difficulties regarding freight rates from Chicago to Colorado and Utah on iron articles, a decision was reached whereby the old rate of 77 cents will be restored in place of the present 27 cent rate from Chicago to Colorado. The fact that nearly two months remain in which the cut rate will hold good will cause dealers to take advantage of it and heavy shipments for goods that will be affected by the changes, are expected.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

A CURE FOR ALL

Not a Patent Cure-all, nor a Modern Miracle, but Simply a Rational Cure for Dyspepsia

In these days of humbugbery and deception, the manufacturer of patent medicines, as a rule, seem to think their medicines will not sell unless they claim that it will cure every disease under the sun. And they never think of leaving out dyspepsia and stomach troubles. They are sure to claim that their nostrum is absolutely certain to cure every dyspeptic and he need look no further.

In the face of these absurd claims it is refreshing to note that the proprietors of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have carefully refrained from making any undue claims or false representations regarding the merits of this most excellent remedy for dyspepsia and stomach troubles. They make but one claim for it, and that is, that for indigestion and various stomach troubles Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a RATIONAL CURE. They go no farther than this and any man or woman suffering from indigestion, chronic or nervous dyspepsia, who will give the remedy a trial will find that nothing is claimed for it, that the facts will not fully sustain it.

It is a modern discovery, composed of harmless vegetable ingredients acceptable to the weakest or most delicate stomach. Its great success in curing stomach troubles is due to the fact that the medical properties are such that it will DIGEST WHAT-EVER WHOLESOME FOOD IS TAKEN INTO THE STOMACH, no matter whether the stomach is in good working order or not. It RESTS the over-worked organs and replenishes the body, the blood, the nerves, creating a healthy appetite, gives refreshing sleep and the blessings which always accompany a good digestion and proper ASSIMILATION of food.

In using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets no dieting is required. Simply eat plenty of wholesome food and take these Tablets at each meal, thus assisting and resting the stomach which rapidly regains its proper digestive power, when the Tablets will be no longer required.

Nervous Dyspepsia is simply a condition in which some portion or portions of the nervous system are not properly NOURISHED. Good digestion invigorates the nervous system and every organ in the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists at 50 cents per package.

REMAINS OF COL. HUNTER ARE SENT TO ST. LOUIS

Brief funeral services were held over the remains of Colonel Robert D. Hunter at the family residence Friday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Junius B. French, pastor of the Broadway Presbyterian church. There was a large crowd of sympathizing friends and acquaintances present. Mrs. Maud Peters Ducker, assisted in the services by singing a solo. There were many beautiful floral offerings, among them one contributed by the delegation from Thurber, Tex., attached to which was a card, on which was written "From the boys at Thurber."

Following the services the remains were conveyed to the Texas and Pacific Union station and placed on the train for St. Louis. The burial will take place there today in Bellefontaine cemetery, after funeral services in the First Presbyterian church. The Masonic order will have charge of the funeral.

The pall bearers from the house Friday included Judge E. R. Meek, J. B. Collins, Martin Casey, M. B. Loyd, G. H. Greene, Colonel E. W. Taylor, J. W. Wray and G. P. Meade.

The remains were accompanied to St. Louis by Mrs. Hunter and Mr. and Mrs. Phelan.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Marston were en route to Fort Worth when the colonel died, and met the remains at Dallas Friday evening and joined the party en route to St. Louis.

The Thurber Delegation There was a delegation from Thurber at the funeral, who also accompanied the remains to the depot. This delegation of twenty came in at 4:15 p. m. and went immediately to the house. Prior to their coming the following telegram was sent Mrs. Hunter:

"Hundreds of the Colonel's old employees and his 'Boys' join me in heartfelt sympathy in your bereavement. We loved him. Mart A. Williams."

In the delegation were: Colonel S. Mims, secretary Texas and Pacific Coal company; M. A. Williams, auditor; Charles W. Mims, assistant auditor; Ed. S. Britton, mercantile manager; A. B. Marston, assistant mercantile manager; N. W. Willett, assistant secretary; Thomas R. Hall, cashier and paymaster; J. H. McLure, superintendent; V. A. Grafton, editor Journal; Captain William Johnston, chief of police; A. H. Miller, superintendent buildings and construction; Dr. Charles Binney, company physician and surgeon; Rev. Father Dolje, priest in charge of Catholic church; F. H. Back, manager market and cold storage; R. M. Loflin, manager hardware department; John Tancred, master machinist; J. E. S. Lee, chief electrician; James Nichols, depot boss No. 7 Shaft; Robert McKininn, fire boss.

A majority of these men, and hundreds of others, were active lieutenants of Colonel Hunter from his first operations in the great Thurber properties, and, as was indicated in the Manager Gordon was prevented from coming because of serious illness, and hundreds of others because of the late hour of receipt of the news of his demise, thus being unable to catch the train which left there at noon. Thurber is 80 miles west.

Colonel Mims of the delegation that came in has been secretary of the company since its formation, and opened up the first set of books in 1887.

When the news was received at Thurber all the shafts and the brick plant shut down for the day; the schools were dismissed, the stores all closed from 4 to 5 p. m., and the bells of all the four churches tolled during the funeral hour. The general offices and the stores were draped—all this as a mark of respect to the memory of their dead friend and former chief officer of the company.

Dr. Charles Binney accompanied the party to St. Louis, because of the fact that both Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Phelan were ill.

Scores of telegrams have been received at the home here from friends in and out of Texas.

Will Go for a Trip Abroad

After the funeral and burial in St. Louis Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Phelan will accompany Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Marston to New York city, going in Mr. Marston's private car. From New York they will on next Wednesday take a steamer for a short trip abroad, accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Marston. Mr. Phelan will probably go as far as New York, and then return to Fort Worth.

Mr. and Mrs. Marston were en route to Fort Worth from New York. When they reached Texarkana they received a message notifying them of Colonel Hunter's demise. They came on to Dallas and there met the funeral party returning to St. Louis.

Mr. Marston had just returned to New York from a tour of Texas.

MASS MEETING OF UNION LABOR MEN AS FRIENDS

John B. Lennon will arrive in the city today at 11:30 o'clock. He will be met at the depot by a delegation composed of members from the Trades assembly, among them being Editor DuBois of the Union-Banner, Messrs. A. A. and F. H. Hoff, and Messrs. Reeseke Walsh and Jones of the Tailors' union. Mr. Lennon is one of the executive officers of the Journeymen Tailors' union of America, headquarters at Bloomington, Ill., and has been for thirteen years. He will be taken charge of by members of the local tailors' union at 1 p. m., and later given a carriage ride over the city. At 3:30 p. m. there will be a mass meeting at the city hall. Mayor Powell will deliver an address of welcome, following which Editor DuBois will talk for ten minutes, he being chairman of the meeting. Mr. Lennon will then be introduced and will talk for probably an hour on the necessity for organization and the benefits to be derived therefrom.

The Union-Banner of this city says of Mr. Lennon: "John B. Lennon was a working journeyman tailor for many years in Denver and other Western cities, taking a very active part in the labor movement. He was president of the Denver Tailors' union in 1885, and in 1886, was elected president of the Journeymen Tailors of America. The presidency was abolished and Mr. Lennon was elected general secretary in 1887, attending to all financial and other correspondence and business. He also edits the Tailors' Journal, which goes to every union tailor in the country. His headquarters are in Bloomington, Ill., and for the past thirteen years he has been treasurer A. F. of L., being elected each year without opposition. He gives his whole time to the work, and his salary is $24 a week. J. P. Curran of this city has known Mr. Lennon for about 13 years, and he says that he is a whole-souled thorough-going trades unionist and a brilliant speaker. Through his efforts, combined with others, the sweat shop system has been made odious and almost wiped out. From the time Mr. Lennon came into office wages have advanced about 40 per cent. The present wages in Fort Worth are 35 cents an hour. Mr. Lennon's latest work has been securing for tailors, what is called 'free shops,' and the establishment of a ten-hour work day. The increase in membership from the time Mr. Lennon has taken control has been from 5000 in 1887, to about 15,000 at this time."

BUSINESS MEN ARE INVITED

ANNUAL MEETING OF FORT WORTH BOARD OF TRADE TUESDAY

ELECTION IS TO BE HELD

Directors Are to be Chosen for the Ensuing Year. Interest in the Local Organization is Urged by the Officers Who Are Now at Its Head.

The annual meeting for the election of directors to the Fort Worth Board of Trade will be held Tuesday evening, November 11, at the office of the Board of Trade in the basement of the Hoxie building.

Secretary B. B. Paddock urges that attention be called to this gathering as it is of the greatest importance to the city's interests that the representative citizens and business men should be present and exhibit an interest in the selection of the men who are to look after the Board of Trade business for the coming year.

Many business men have not yet returned the postal cards mailed them recently by Secretary Paddock, and so have not signified their intention or wish of becoming members of the board at this time. From this it would appear that there are a large number of Fort Worth business men who are either not alive to the city's interests or else who choose to ignore the existence of the Board of Trade.

The Board of Trade works purely for the interests of the city and for no particular business or special enterprise.

The last work done by the board was the entertainment of the party of Chicago visitors who reached the city Friday and it is safe to say that no plan was carried out more perfectly than that arranged by the local committee, even though they were hindered by the bad weather.

The result is that the party took away a pleasant impression of Fort Worth and its business men. Had there not been an organization of the nature of the Board of Trade, the entertainment would have been conducted by volunteers and would doubtless have proven only a partial success.

Business men and especially those who are already members of the board are urged to be present Tuesday evening and to show an interest in the organization, and in the best interests of Fort Worth.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. The party traveled in the special private cars "Bally Clare" and "Grasmere" and remained in the city only enough to change from the Fort Worth and Denver City tracks over which they arrived, to the Missouri, Kansas and Texas. They left for Mexico via Waco and San Antonio.

EXTRA CONCERT AT CITY HALL

Herbert Butler, Glen Hall and Katherine Hoffman Please Audience

The audience at the city hall last evening enjoyed the concert given by Herbert Butler and Glen Hall, with Katherine Hoffman as accompanist. Mr. Butler's work showed excellent technique and he graciously responded to two encores. Miss Hoffman's work was pleasing and was appreciated by the audience perhaps more than the singing of Mr. Hall, who, while possessing a fine voice, still shows a tendency to strain after effects that takes away much of the charm. As a whole the concert was satisfactory and was well attended despite the fact that it was given on Saturday evening.

BISHOP COLEMAN IS VERY BUSY

IN CHARGE OF SERVICE AT ST. ANDREW'S PARIS HOUSE

HIS PROGRAM FOR TODAY

Includes Six Services to All of Which the Public is Invited... Meetings Will Continue During the Week Four Times Daily

Services at St. Andrew's Parish house, conducted by Bishop Coleman of Delaware, are attracting good crowds every evening and interest in the meetings is increasing.

Bishop Coleman is an indefatigable worker, and his daily program covers more than the usual work done by clergymen who conduct special meetings.

Services yesterday began with Holy Communion at 7 o'clock, followed by a second celebration at 10 o'clock, which was followed by a meditation on "Repentance." At noon, Bishop Coleman paid a visit to the Masonic Widows and Orphans' Home and was the guest at lunch of Dr. Rainey.

The bishop addressed the boys and girls of the home at the chapel, and gave them much sound advice interspersed with pleasing illustrations, told in his usually interesting manner. Among other things he told them he had been a Mason for more than 40 years.

He is a Knight Templar and has taken the 32nd degree, so his remarks were of more than ordinary interest to the children at the home.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the children's service was held at St. Andrew's Parish house, and Bishop Coleman delivered one of his characteristic addresses to children. Last night at 8 o'clock, the regular evening services were held at which the bishop gave an interesting address.

Program for Today
The program for services today, is as follows:
Holy communion at 7 a. m.
Morning prayer, litany and sermon, at 11 a. m.
Children's service at 4 p. m.
Service exclusively for women at 5 p. m.
Service for all at 8 p. m.

Address in the Standard theater, corner Twelfth and Rusk streets, at 9:30 p. m.

To all of these services, the public is cordially invited.

Services This Week
Services will be held daily this week at 7 and 10 a. m.; 4 and 8 p. m. Monday noon. Bishop Coleman will deliver an address to the students of Fort Worth Medical college and Prentiss' Business college. Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, he will deliver a special address on the subject: "Some Popular Misconceptions of the Episcopal church."

Thursday night, he will deliver an address on "Temperance Reform from the Church's Standpoint."

Bishop Coleman will also deliver an address at the Texas Brewing company's plant, Thursday noon. Friday afternoon, Bishop Coleman will take a short vacation for three hours and pay a visit to Dallas as the guest of Bishop Garrett, returning to Fort Worth in time for evening services.

The subject of Bishop Leighton's evening address at St. Andrew's parish house last night, was "The Practical End of Faith." The sermon was based on the 9th verse of the first chapter of the First Epistle General of Peter: "Receiving the end of your faith even the salvation of your souls," and was as usual, very interesting to a good-sized audience which was present at the service.

BOOKS FOR THE LIBRARY

Fifty-Cent Donations Have Not Been as Many as Expected
On account of the inclement weather the amount received from the 50-cent donations to the library book fund, was not as great as it would have been had the weather been better. Very many have expressed a willingness to help the good cause along, feeling that the appeal is for so small a sum it will fall lightly on each individual.

The following will show the popularity of the library, and not a little of the credit there is due our most efficient librarian, Mrs. Scheuber, who works early and late for its success.

The library was opened Oct. 17, 1901, and up to Oct. 31, 1902, there have been 6556 registered cards issued and 62,579 books circulated. Fifty card holders have sent their 50-cent donations, making a total of $25. Respectfully, MRS. D. B. KEELER.

THE CHESS TOURNAMENT TABLE

Standing of the Different Players at Beginning of This Week
The only change made by the players in the chess tournament of the Fort Worth Chess club during the past week was a general decrease in percentages. Nearly all of the leading players fell off, due to more evenly matched contests and consequently more exciting games. The interest in the tournament is unabated and every Tuesday evening finds a busy gathering of chess lovers in the club's meeting place.

Following is the percentage of the different players at the beginning of this week: Wm. Monnig, 80%; I. Carb, 71%; S. M. Furman, 62%; Dr. Furman, 56%; Prof. Witt, 56%; M. O. McNeely, 50%; O. S. Lattimore, 52%; Prof. Plum, 50%; Jon Bardon, 50%; H. D. Holland, 46%; A. G. Walker, 46%; H. D. Holland, 43%; M. Bushong, 19%.

In Swedish towns the average marrying age of males is 30½ years and of females 27½.

SOME FIGURES ON THE RECENT ELECTION

Chief Clerk Williams of the county clerk's office, has the returns of the recent election all footed up ready for the county commissioners to canvas tomorrow.

The figures show only 6,830 votes cast in the county and city combined. There was only one contest in the county—that between O. S. Lattimore, Democrat, and Dodge, Republican, for county attorney. Lattimore received 4,202 votes and Dodge 2,327. So, it will be seen, both received 301 less than the total vote cast by 301.

The county vote was 3,864, while the city vote was 2,966. Thus it will be seen that the county cast about 1,000 votes more than the city, while it is a fact that the city proper should cast about 2,000 more than the county. Mr. Lattimore's majority, county and city, over Dodge is 1,875.

Governor Lanham received a total of 5,992 votes. There were 3,389 votes cast for the constitutional amendment, while 2,223 were cast against it. Thus it will be seen that the amendment carried in the county by 1,156. There were 1,208 amendment votes scratched, or else both left unmarked. If the latter they would not be counted.

There was a "stock law" election held in nine voting precincts in the county—Marine, Keller, Birdville, Dido, Smithfield, Haslet, Riverside, Wayside and Saginaw. There were 280 votes cast for and 195 against—a majority of 85 for.

NEW RAILROAD LINE.

The South and Particularly Texas Is to Do Considerable Building. Baltimore, Nov. 10.—The south constructed last year 2254 miles of steam railroads. In Texas there have been planned since the beginning of this year new lines and extensions aggregating 3797 miles, according to figures present in the last issue of the Manufacturers' Record. Of these 2423 miles represent the plans of established companies and 1274 are entirely of new undertakings, nineteen in number. In addition other plans are reported as under consideration at various points to build an aggregate of 1000 more mileage. The process under way in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and other parts of the southwest is an intensified form of that which has wrought so mightily in the upbuilding of older states of the south, assembling coal, iron ore and limestone, uncovering copper, phosphate rock and other minerals, building cotton mills and other industries, making diversification in agriculture both possible and profitable and attracting a wide stream of healthy immigration southward. Diversification of industry is widening with diversification of farming.

AT PORT VICTORIA.

The German Emperor Arrives There and Is Most Royally Welcomed. London, Nov. 8.—The German imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with Emperor William on board, accompanied by escorting German cruisers and a flotilla of British torpedo boats, has reached Port Victoria. The arrival of the emperor was made the occasion of an imposing naval display. All warships were dressed, their crews manned the decks and the usual salutes of welcome were given the imperial visitor.

Wishes Miss Gilman Added. New York, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Helen Potts Hall, who is suing the blood heirs of George F. Gilman, who died at Bridgeport, Conn., has filed an application in the Brooklyn supreme court for permission to add the name of Anna K. Gilman as a party defendant. Miss Gilman, it is alleged, is at present confined in an asylum in England, and the applicant alleges she has just learned of this through similar action on the part of attorneys for the Gilman heirs.

IN SHARES AND BONDS.

Copenhagen, Nov. 8.—The commission from the Danish West Indies company has announced that the company now had at its disposal a capital of about $1,000,000 partly in shares and partly in bonds. The company will purchase three 5000 ton steamers for the principal routes of its West Indian service and several smaller steamers for local service.

Shot Sweetheart and Self.

Columbus, O., Nov. 8.—Homer Cramer attempted to murder Miss Almada Burk, former landlady, with whom he was in love. Then he blew out his own brains. The crimes were committed at Miss Burk's residence. Cramer fired two shots, one grazing her cheek, the other taking effect in the left breast. The ball glanced and passed out under an arm. She will recover.

En Route to Mexico.

San Antonio, Nov. 8.—President Walsh and the directors of the American Smelting and Refining company, including ex-Secretary of the Navy Whitney, arrived here en route to Mexico.

Increase in Imports and Exports.

London, Nov. 8.—The October statement of the board of trade shows increases of $12,514,500 in imports and $5,831,000 in exports.

Followed by Several Arrests.

Barcelona, Spain, Nov. 10.—The discovery of another Carlist plot has been followed by several arrests.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty
Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

At Budapest the municipality has opened a registry office for domestic servants.

Windsor Castle has been used as a royal residence for 784 years.

SPANISH GENERAL AT SANTIAGO GONE DAFFY

New York, Nov. 8.—General Toral, who commanded the Spanish army at Santiago de Cuba at the time of the town's surrender, lost his reason in this way, cables the Madrid correspondent of the Herald.
A few days ago, while at Alharia, in the southwest of Murcia, he received instructions from the Spanish government to draw up a full account of the surrender of Santiago. From that time he showed great signs of agitation and was frequently heard repeating the words, "Surrender! Surrender! Surrender!" The news has created a sensation in Madrid.

Mrs. M. A. Chamberlain gave an informal tea Wednesday, complimentary to her visitors, Mrs. A. L. Holland of Chicago, Mrs. Lydia Putney of Lexington, Mass., and Miss Frances Walker of Boston. The interior of the home was tastefully decorated with American Beauty and La France roses and chrysanthemums. Those who assisted Mrs. Chamberlain in receiving and entertaining were Mesdames L. J. Goetz, Jordan, Hoover, Beard, Massie, and Misses Alice Lathrop, Cornelia Vogel, Emma Zane Cetti, Ferguson, Haggart, Davis, Louise Zan Cetti, Louise Vogel, and Ethel Chamberlain. The punch bowl was presided over by Misses Louise and Cornelia Vogel, and tea was poured by Mrs. A. S. Goetz.

Mrs. Robert S. Moffett and Mrs. Lewis Foster, at the residence of the first named, on North Burnett street, tendered a few of their intimate friends a luncheon last Wednesday at 1 o'clock, in honor of Mrs. George K. Williams of Oklahoma City. The place cards were hand painted and were pretty souvenirs of a pleasant afternoon. Those present were Mesdames A. S. Dingee, Frank Gayle, William G. Turner, Frank Mullins, Martin Staude, George K. Williams.

Another special meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy is called for next Friday afternoon, at which time it is hoped by the officers of the association that all members will be present on hand. The session will be held as usual, in the basement of the court house.

One resignation was read and accepted, the member resigning being Mrs. Ella Hills; and as there was already one vacancy in the club Mesdames A. J. Lawrence and Burger were elected to membership. It was announced that the Woman's Wednesday club had agreed to unite with the '33 club in bringing to this city the famous art lecturer, Lorado Taft, some time in the near future. Mrs. W. H. Bibb as alternate. It was also decided Monday afternoon by the members of the club to act in conjunction with the other clubs of Fort Worth, the board of trade and the mayor of the city, to present an invitation at the meeting of the State Federation of clubs at Beaumont November 17, to hold their next annual session in Fort Worth. It can be said that indications point to a favorable response to the invitation.

The first trophy, a decorated Japanese plate, was awarded to Mrs. Jas. D. Davis, and the second souvenir, a silver filigree perfume bottle, while the consolation prize, a large bunch of violets, was cut for by Mesdames Will McLean, Jr., W. M. Massie and J. P. COMPOUND INTEREST

The trouble with most advertisers is that they expect immediate returns of large proportions. One prominent advertiser illustrates the principle of advertising in this way:

"The money expended for advertising is the same as if placed at interest. The profits from the advertising are virtually the interest on the investment."

"The sums spent for advertising are properly chargeable to capital account because the resulting good will is something that has value, which, if the advertising has been properly done, can usually be sold for the face value of the investment."

"The rate of interest is determined by the skill with which the investment is made."

"Just as the quickest way to increase invested wealth is by compounding the interest, just so the quickest way to realize results from advertising is to compound the returns.—Advertising Experience."

Advertisers get good returns on the amount invested in our columns. We reach the people.

NOVELTY IN HOLIDAY RATES

Roads This Year Adopt New Plan to Secure Increased Business
The Frisco announces dates of sale for holiday rate tickets this year as December 13, 17, 21, 22, 23, 26 at a rate of one fare plus $2 with a limit of thirty days. Sales on December 13, 17 and 26 are a new departure and is expected to prove popular in many respects. Sale of tickets will be for points in the southwest as in former years and to Arkansas, Kansas, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois.

A change in the manner of through cars is noted this year and they will be run only to the three gateways, Memphis, Shreveport and New Orleans. Formerly they were run to points beyond but this caused trouble in securing and handling cars so the custom was abandoned this year. This action is the result of a meeting held in Dallas by representatives of Texas roads this week.

UNCLE SAM'S RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE MEN

W. L. CATE.

Few people there are who can conceive of the amount of tact, knowledge of territory, of the geography of the country, of railroads, of towns, of railway schedules, of connections, of an the detail and ability necessary to fill the positions of superintendent and assistant superintendent of a great railway mail service division. Men who have the ability to fill these positions have all the things mentioned above before them like a chess or checker player has his "men" before him, or like a chief train dispatcher has his trains running. Not only this, but they must know just where each and every man of the service is, and just how well he is performing his work. They must know what connections were made and those missed; note the weak points in the service, and devise and improve same; trace lost mail, ascertain how and where it was lost and who is responsible; receive, consider and act upon innumerable "kicks."

There is unquestionably no part of the governmental service that is more thoroughly systematized—in fact, it is upon the system carried out in this service that all other systems are effective. Then it is that upon the railway mail service it all depends.

Eleventh Division at Fort Worth.
There are eleven divisions of the service. At Fort Worth is located the headquarters of the Eleventh division. This division was established on November 15, 1883, and will soon celebrate its fourteenth anniversary. The Eleventh division comprises Arkansas, Louisiana (west of the Mississippi river), Texas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma. Think of it—a territory larger than any several of the others combined, in a growing territory, a territory in which railroads are building, towns are building; in fact a territory that is growing faster by far than in any other part of the country. When the division was created, there were but 275 men in service in it—now there are over 650, and by July next the number will overlap 700. These men gain their positions through civil service examinations.

The record of the Eleventh division is among the best made in the United States. The average per cent correct by perfect clerks on examination last year was 99.12 per cent.

Chief clerks are stationed in this division at Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, Texas, and at Oklahoma, Okla., Little Rock, Ark. and St. Louis, Mo. The superintendents are George N. Hunter, J. S. Weaver, O. L. Teachout and S. M. Gaines. The latter is in charge at Fort Worth.

Mr. Gaines was first appointed to the service on March 20, 1882, at the age of 23, having been born in 1859, at Madisonville, Tenn. He was appointed on the line between Corpus Christi and Laredo, Texas, and remained there about three months. He was transferred then to Palestine and San Antonio R. P. O., and remained on that line about five years, and was transferred to the chief clerk's office at Dallas, where he acted as assistant chief clerk and stenographer until the establishment of the Eleventh division R. M. S. at Fort Worth. He was stenographer in this office at first, and then put in charge of certain correspondence. Following this there were several promotions, and he was made assistant superintendent under Mr. O. L. Teachout, and when Mr. Teachout resigned in 1897 Mr. Gaines was made superintendent of this division. Mr. Gaines travels over the division quite a good deal, and often branches out in the other divisions. These trips are on strictly business purposes, and as a result the records show a betterment of the service, a personal knowledge of the routes, the men and the territory in which they work.

During his absence, and during his time at home as well, he is ably assisted by Mr. W. L. Cate, his assistant, and a veteran in the service, and who is in charge of the force at headquarters office. Mr. Cate is 62 years old, having been born at Chatata, Tenn., on June 10, 1840. Mr. Cate entered the service in 1861, February, class I. His first run was between Little Rock, Ark., and Fort Smith. After a year he was transferred to the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern, taking a run between St. Louis and Little Rock. Here he remained, filling different grades, until May of 1888, when he was promoted to be chief clerk and was stationed at Little Rock. In 1895 Mr. Cate was transferred to St. Louis, Mo., and placed in charge of Eleventh division interests at that point.

In June of 1898 he was promoted to and stationed at Fort Worth. Having begun in the lower grades and worked his way up, Mr. Cate is thoroughly familiar with every possible detail of the railway mail service.

Mr. Cate was married at the age of 28, March 25, 1868, to Miss Elizabeth Julian of Chatata, Tenn. Mr. and Mrs. Cate have four children living—two boys and two girls. One son is assistant postmaster at Little Rock and the other is stenographer for a law firm in South McAlester, I. T.

Mr. Cate served the government for about three years in the early 60s, in the Departments of the Cumberland, Mississippi and Gulf, including a taste of prison life in 1861 and in 1864.

Though he has passed the sixtieth milestone in life's journey, Mr. Cate is robust, hale and hearty, putting in full time in taking care of the routine of his office. He is a home-loving man and a student, and at the same time keeps well posted on the current issues of the day.

TROUBLE, HOW TO MAKE IT AND HOW TO AVOID IT

There was a bunch of them sitting around a long table in the district clerk's office waiting for the argument to commence in the Bob Goettsche murder trial. He came in all in phases was being discussed by witnesses, attorneys, bailiffs, and two newspaper reporters and others who had gathered around just out of curiosity. One of the bunch—a railroad man from a Texas town here as a friend of those closely interested on one of the other sides of the case—entertained by discussing trouble makers.

He said that most people spend their lives trying to get out of trouble, and to keep out. A few, on the contrary, seem bent on getting into trouble and staying in. "It takes both kinds of people to make a world," he declared. "Trouble is the most horrid, and yet in one respect the most beneficial thing in life. It must not be confused with sorrow. Sorrow is regret for what is past and done and irremediable. Trouble is anxiety about what is to come or what is present and may be remedied. Sorrow softens and diminishes in time. Trouble hardens and enlarges until the event with which it is concerned is determined one way or the other.

"Sorrow is much easier to bear than trouble. Criminals, troubled by the thought of being caught, have given themselves up in order that the matter might be settled once for all. They preferred sorrow in jail to trouble at liberty.

"The majority of people like peace. They do not mind work, but they do mind worry. They wish to be let alone, and when they are comfortable they are content. They cannot see the divinity of dissatisfaction. They deem the trouble-maker, big or little, a pest, not a hero. People in general are pleased with the status quo, if it is at all tolerable. They seek to avoid friction, and they hate the reforming busy bodies who, with mistaken zeal, push and shove and bustle them from one comfortable chair to another, though more comfortable or from one good enough form of government to a better form. Change always means trouble to somebody. 'Let us be' is the motto of the majority.

"In small affairs women are the greatest trouble makers; in large affairs men are. The average woman has more quarrels with her friends than a man has in a year. In society the average woman goes about with a chip on her shoulder. She is forever snubbing somebody or being snubbed, or giving the cut direct to some dear friend who, in a fit of abstraction, passed her on the street and, not seeing her, failed to bow. A woman will become estranged from a friend over the question of which owes a call to the other. Men do not worry about such trifles. When they make trouble for themselves or others it is generally, but by no means always, about more important business.

"Trouble is not pleasant, and it makes one unhappy, but it is the accompaniment of progress. The man who fears trouble or is loth to make trouble, either for himself or others, stands still.
"It is only through divine dissatisfaction that we advance, and the dissatisfied, though nearly always in the minority, are the trouble makers, and they it is who push the world along. All the great thinkers and doers were trouble makers and kept themselves and all about them in hot water, or was every man that, right or wrong, his cause, has tried to stir humanity, to improve conditions, political, religious, scientific, social or otherwise."

MRS. MAY WHITTAKER, SAVANNAH, GEORGIA.

President Savannah Woman's Improvement Club.

No. 604 Thirteenth Street, West, Savannah, Ga., May 14, 1902.

THERE are but few families that have not from time to time serious illness in the home. At such times the first question is what is the safest and quickest way to regain the health of the sufferer. In my home and among women relatives and friends we have come to the conclusion that doctors are an expensive luxury. Their prescriptions may sometimes relieve, but for real, permanent cure I know of nothing which I can so surely depend upon as Wine of Cardui. It must be a skillfully prepared medicine for it seems to answer the purpose in numerous complaints peculiar to women. I learned of its value personally three years ago when two bottles cured me of periodical pains, and I was so pleased with the results that I recommended it to a number of friends. I have known of severe cases of inflammation and ulceration which were cured in a few weeks by the faithful use of this remedy. For the general toning up of the system it has no superior; and if tired out, sick women would use one or two bottles of Wine of Cardui instead of dragging wearily through weeks of suffering it would not only be sure to cure them but they would avoid the serious results we daily see around us caused by neglecting nature when she cries out for relief and succor.

The nominal cost of this remedy compared to doctors and prescriptions is another great item well worthy to be considered, especially as in my opinion the results with your remedy are far surer and more lasting. Being firmly convinced of its superior medicinal value I heartily recommend it.

May Whittaker.

Mrs. Whittaker is a highly intellectual woman, and as president of a prominent Savannah woman's organization her words are worth consideration. She has made up her mind that doctors are an expensive and often unnecessary luxury, and that Wine of Cardui is a medicine that can be depended on. Besides being surer and more lasting as a remedy the trifling cost of Wine of Cardui commends this great remedy to every suffering woman. In every woman in the land today would study existing conditions as Mrs. Whittaker has studied them she would come to the same conclusion regarding Wine of Cardui. Every woman has friends who have paid doctors' bills for years with no particular result. Many families have been dragged down to poverty in this way. At the same time over a million women have secured health by taking Wine of Cardui, purchased from druggists at a nominal cost. Wine of Cardui cures menstrual disorders and drives weakness from the female system. You can get the same good health as Mrs. Whittaker by securing a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui today.

The THEATRE

Nov. 11—Matinee and night, Mrs. Brune in "Unorna."
 Nov. 12—Matinee, "Il Trovatore," night, "Faust."
 Nov. 13—Night, Marguerite Sylva company, "The Strollers."
 Nov. 14—Night, La Shelle company, "The Princess Chic."
 Nov. 15—Matinee and night, "The Black Vipers."

The past week at Greenwall's opera house was visited by some excellent attractions, "Human Hearts," played to good business, and seems to be still clinging to the hearts of its admirers. Miss Helen Grantly at once made an instantaneous hit in "Her Lord and Master," her business being phenomenal for a new star.

Al G. Fields' Minstrels played to the largest crowd of the season, some 300 people being turned away, and to close the week, "Browns in Town," played to good business, and had a good show.

This week has undoubtedly more large attractions than has ever been associated together in one week's time before, three operas, one grand and two comic. The week opens Tuesday, matinee and night, when Wallace Munroe presents Mrs. Brune in the fascinating romance, "Unorna," a creation of F. Marion Crawford, and prepared for the stage by Espy Williams.

incident in "The Witch of Prague," by F. Marion Crawford, one of the foremost writers in the world. Espy Williams has collaborated in its dramatic construction, and Mrs. Brune, that clever and brilliant actress, who will be remembered by her marvellous impersonation of the imperious "Theodora" last season, will be seen here as "Unorna." Tuesday matinee and night, Nov. 1, at Greenwall's opera house.

The production is to be a regal one, and one of the finest Fort Worth people will have the pleasure of witnessing this season.

The Richmond News said:—In "Unorna" the play produced at the academy Espy Williams has enriched the stage with a beautiful love story. Strangely enough, like the great love story of the world, "Romeo and Juliet," "Unorna" is based upon an Indo-European myth. Mr. Crawford, from whose book "The Witch of Prague" the play is taken—and Mr. Williams, the dramatist—together have given us in "Unorna" a matchless analysis of sentiment; a large, simple, lyrical love story, neither philosophic nor analytic, nor moral, but celebrating, with the directness of a ballad or folk tale, the potency for life or death of the divine illusion. Mrs. Brune's personation of "Unorna" stamps her as one of the most finished and powerful actresses opened its engagement for three performances yesterday matinee at the Grand, and to say that this company proved a musical treat is a mild way of putting it. Not only is the company a good one, but by far the best we have had in Galveston in the last seven years. The principals are artists and the chorus exceptionally strong, and contains splendid voices. The bill at the matinee was Verdi's "Trovatore," with Helén Noldi as prima donna. This lady possesses a magnificent soprano voice and both in voice and looks makes an ideal Leonora. Her higher register is clear and true, this being especially noticeable in the aria, "On Rosy Wings of Love," and in the "Miserere." At night Gounod's ever-popular Faust was the bill, and was beautifully sung and magnificently staged. The company carries its own scenery and mechanical effects, all of which are very similar to Lewis Morrison's production of the drama of the same name. Miss Rose Cecilia Shay was the prima donna, and as "Marguerite" she looked and sang the part as it has not been sung here in many years. Her voice is a rich soprano of the dramatic order, and is eminently fitted for this sympathetic role. The applause she received at the close of the celebrated jewel song in the garden scene bordered on an ovation, and her work in the last act, both from a musical and dramatic standpoint, was exceptionally clever.

MARGUERITA SYLVA IN "THE STROLLERS"

he enjoyed or be expected to receive the support of a discriminating public. There is no longer any novelty in these representations except at the hand of a consummate artist. Shakespeare said that "the play is the thing," but the public now-a-days prefers to read his immortal dramas rather than witness them maltreated upon the stage.

It is different with comic opera, since there is so much that contributes to a proper and pleasing production—the music, the scenery, the costumes, pretty faces and shapely figures—not to mention the voices. This may not all be very intellectual, but it is pleasing, diverting and restful. It fulfills all that may rightfully be expected of the theater—wholesome entertainment.

There are nineteen characters required to tell the story of the "Black Vipers." The new melodrama depicting the seamy side of Chicago, comes to Greenwall's opera house, Saturday matinee and night, Nov. 15. The story begins to be told as soon as the curtain rises on the first act. It is a story of intense interest, involving as it does the mysterious deeds of a band of robbers known as the Black Vipers, and the efforts of an ex-chief of detectives to unearth the criminals and ing for some plump peaches. Harvest's over in our back yard. I visited most all the places of business, but they watch me too close. Lovely morning this."

(Signed) CHARLIE Mc—
 Miss Stahl was glad to leave Detroit, not liking the idea of having an insane admirer.

Virginia Drew Trescott is the "Alpha" and "Omega" of the excellent production of "Lord Strathmore," under David Tait's management. Miss Trescott is credited with acting the marvelous love story of "Lady Vavasour," the heroine, in a marvelous way, scoring a triumph as great as the play itself, and as great as Ouida scored when, this, her most famous literary production first appeared.

A too-loving wife, a literary man and his female amanuensis, are prominent characters in Haddon Chambers' comedy, "The Tyranny of Tears," which will be seen here soon with Paul Gilmore as the star. The wife discovers her husband's secretary looking admiringly at a portrait of her husband, with whom the secretary has been in close association daily. She resorts to tears, threats and entreaties, mostly tears, to persuade her husband to bring them to justice. Through an error on the part of Donald McTavish, the life of this ex-chief of detectives was sacrificed, and his task was taken up by his little daughter Jennie. Around this brilliant creature clings the intense interest of the play. There are three distinctively novel and thrillingly sensational effects in the Black Vipers, but it could be depriving the spectators of an enjoyable surprise to tell here the character of these sensations. Possessing these merits and presented in the sumptuous manner, and by the excellent company which has been supplied through the liberality of McDonnell and Huton, it is not to be wondered at that the Black Vipers has scored instantaneous and brilliant hit.

Plays Coming Here

Rose Stahl, while playing last season in Detroit, was the recipient of two rather extraordinary postal cards. The first one was addressed to her and read as follows:

"My Dear Miss Stahl, Thou shalt not steal My P. O. address tomorrow is Eloise, Wayne County, Michigan, care of Dr. B. W. James, and I am still your obedient servant."

(Signed) C. M. COBB.

The other postal card was directed to Dr. B. W. James, who happens to be the superintendent of the Detroit Insane Asylum. It was even more peculiar than the first, as the following copy of it shows:

"Friend Dr. James: I have not stolen anything; have to keep tolerably straight when one's in the motortop! Wish you would please allow me an extension of two days time. Rose Stahl here now and I am look-dismiss the secretary, who afterwards explains the dominant sentiment in her mind while gazing upon his picture, was pity for a man subjected to the tyrannical appeal of his wife to tears as a weapon with which to subdue him.

It has been a long time indeed since the South has seen a more accomplished and pleasing artist and a more delightful singer in light opera, than Miss Della Niven. She has won not alone the admiration of her audiences, but the esteem and devotion of those with whom she has come in contact in her private life. It is the exception rather than the rule that a soprano's voice, especially one of sufficient volume to occupy a conspicuous place in the operatic world is marked with any great degree of feeling, of softness. But in this, Miss Niven's voice is pure and carries itself unerringly to the hearts of the listeners, when she renders love songs.

In "For Her Sake," the play which comes to patrons of Greenwall's popular theater will undoubtedly find a piece of sterling dramatic merit for a play of the sort, for it has been warmly commended by dramatic critics in other cities. It is a four-act melodrama descriptive of Russian official life and the conduct of affairs in the Siberian convict mines. It tells a pretty love story, and, according to all accounts, is enlivened by some original comedy. Some of the climactic episodes, as described, are of thrilling dramatic effect. The company is an unusually large one, and carries a big stock of special scenery. It is to be played at popular prices, and from all points of view ought to prove one of the most satisfactory engagements of the season.

GREENWALL'S OPERA HOUSE

MATINEE AND NIGHT TUESDAY, NOV. 11 MATINEE AND NIGHT
 Wallace Munroe Presents "MRS. BRUNE" In the Fascinating "UNORNA"

Creation by F. Marion Crawford, prepared for the stage by Espy Williams SUMPTUOUS PRODUCTION. Notable cast includes Errol Dunbar, E. R. Spencer, Frank Henig, Claus Bogel, Percy Warde, Leon Henry, J. W. Armstrong, Isabel Pengro Spencer, Hilda Vernon, Ida Werner, Alice Forbes and others.

They say Mrs. Brune is the American Bernhardt. She is more than that—she is the only actress in the country today who could have taken "Unorna" to the sweeping success it achieved last night. She is not great as Mrs. Fiske is great, she is not great as Mrs. Leslie Carter is great, she is great in her own right. She has an individuality which is strong and trembling, vivid and human, tense and coquettish. This is not talent, it is genius. It can't be acquired, it is in-born and inbred. Then in "Unorna" the stage has a new bit of literature. It will become a standard in its way; it is the greatest emotional play written since Sardou turned his pen to one. And it is novel. It is built along a new line.—Richmond Ledger.

Many inquiries have been made as to what or who is "Unorna." The question can be easily answered. "Unorna" is a play founded upon an of the stage. That a player of her precocious quality and of a method as delicate, precise and certain, should have been kept so long from her proper place in the theater, is an interesting anomaly, as well as a pregnant commentary on the stupidity of the dominant superstitions.

The Gordon-Shay Grand Opera Company will be heard at the Greenwall opera house for the first time in this city, Wednesday, Nov. 12, in a special matinee performance of Verdi's beautiful and wonderful "Il Trovatore," and at night, Gounod's immortal Faust. Manager Greenwall, knowing of the merits of this truly great organization, induced the management of the company to play an extra matinee here for the benefit of Fort Worth music lovers. Nothing that could be written would give a better idea of the excellence of this organization than to reprint the criticism from the Galveston News of Nov. 3, on the same two operas which we are to hear. Of this company the Galveston News says: The Gordon-Shay Opera company

KINDNESS

Kindness pays. If you are one of those persons who like to get full value for every investment of labor or capital you make, you will find that nothing gives better returns than kindness.

Did you ever throw a bone to a stray dog that you did not get full measure of pleasure in the sound of the hungry little beast gulping it down? Did you ever stop to stroke the back of a lonesome cat that its pair of gratitude did not reward you?

Did you ever drop a coin in the cup of a blind organ-grinder that his murmur of thanks didn't ring pleasantly in your ears for a block? Libraries are filled with books on ones duty to his fellow men and the creatures of the earth. Preachers there are—and the term is used in a broad sense—that always can be found to tell you that you ought to do this or that because it is your duty.

Don't read such books. Don't listen to such preachers. Duty is an unpleasant word, and when one hears it too often it raises in him involuntarily a spirit of something like contrariness. Besides, duty is only skin deep.

Just look at the whole subject as a man does who has money to invest where it will give him the most return. Figure it over as if it were a tax title to be bought or a note to be discounted.

Then, as becomes a timid investor in something new and untried, risk a small outlay. Pat the nose of the first tired horse you meet or give a helping arm to some one infirm or an inquiry to another in trouble.

Do this a few times and the first thing you know you'll take advantage of every opportunity that comes up to invest money and labor in that way.

There are lots of people who do. They are in on the ground floor, as it were. Their holdings are many, which are constantly being added to. As a result they are kept busy clipping coupons of satisfaction.

Kindness pays. Try it. The election last Tuesday practically assures the selection of "Uncle Joe" Cannon of Illinois for speaker of the house. The West supported the Republican ticket to a man; the East was lukewarm, inclining toward the Democrats. Naturally then the West will have the say as to the speaker-ship. Cannon's ability and statesmanship are not of the spectacular kind. He is a good, safe, conservative careful man with a life time of experience in politics and affairs.

THE SUNDAY TELEGRAM

The Sunday Telegram goes to its readers this morning in twenty page form. The advertising patronage extended to the paper by the business men of Fort Worth warrants the increasing of the size of today's paper. It is hoped that a paper of this size can be sent to Sunday Telegram readers each week.

Every reader of the Sunday Telegram is asked to note carefully the advertising pages of today's issue. There are bargains galore offered to the thrifty buyer and to miss reading the displayed columns of the Sunday Telegram means not to stretch out your dollars to their greatest buying capacity. Telegram readers will be doing a great favor to the management of the paper if they will call the attention of the salesman or saleswoman to the fact that they are readers of the firms advertising in The Telegram. Such a favor costs the customer nothing and simply lets the merchant know that his advertising is being read. And it would be a great help to The Telegram.

In the third section of the Sunday Telegram will be found some choice Sunday reading. There is matter there to interest everyone.

Today's issue of the Sunday Telegram is but another link in the improvements that are planned for the future.

COL. R. D. HUNTER

In the death of Colonel R. D. Hunter, the grave has claimed a great man—truly a man of affairs; a man who has left his mark not only upon Fort Worth, but the state at large, so largely that it will be discerned to the last. It was no combination of circumstances that made Colonel Hunter what he was—it was the indomitable man that caused him to do so much for the state and the city of his adoption—Fort Worth. To decide and to execute were with him one and the same thing.

With most people decision, being the result of impulse, requires long delay in fulfillment, and often fails altogether. Not so with Colonel Hunter. He decided only after mature consideration, and, having once decided, his action was immediate. He had no ear for the small talker, nor for indefinite people. The most astute and experienced prevaricator found himself at sea in his presence. Small talk and gossip were as gall and wormwood to him. He was a leader and director of men and of affairs; he was a man among men. His church edifice was the world, and all mankind the congregation that worshiped therein.

In considering the character of Colonel Hunter one is compelled to acknowledge that the loyalty of man to the sovereign man is one of the most remarkable features in human nature. Men of his stamp compel obedience. To obey him was not an unreasonable obedience. It was to acquiesce in the will of the leader whose course had always been directed toward the advancement of his fellow man, and the record of whose life the word "success" is written in the largest and boldest type. Men of his peculiar stamp must necessarily possess an independence of character, an independence that will assert itself at all times and places.

Emerson refers to just such men when he says: "It is easy for man to preserve his independence of character in solitude, but the thoroughly independent man is he who in the midst of the masses preserves the independence of solitude." This quotation, brief as it is, illustrates accurately the character of Colonel R. D. Hunter. The attributes of this class of men outside of their business qualifications, are admirable. They are like the oak: which while withstanding the blasts of the hurricane, still shelter the tiny bird. They are gentle and kindly, and human misery appeals far more strongly to them than to the weaker mortals.

When one considers the charity and forbearance, the boundless generosity that has characterized the management of Colonel Hunter's interests in Texas, one cannot help but draw comparisons. "By their acts ye shall know them." "Faith without works is dead."

Reciprocity was the key note of all the talks made by Fort Worth and Chicago business men Friday. We have things that Chicago wants, and that city has things that we want. If we buy of her and she of us, as far as possible, the needs of both will be well served, and there will be no waste of capital anywhere.

One cannot help wondering what the Chicago business men will think when they get into Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee after having been through Texas. Possibly, though, they will lay the impression they get of those states to the fact that they have been living for ten days in railroad coaches.

There are old frame shacks on prominent corners of business streets in Fort Worth that would disgrace the meanest town in the Territory. They are gray and brown with age. There is not a straight line to be seen about them from any point of view. They are filled with yawning cracks, and cavities that a horse could walk through. They are infirm and rotten with age, and though they creak and howl dimly and totter with every passing zephyr, yet they come quite fall to pieces. Cyclones ordinarily are not to be desired, but if one could be induced to pass over Fort Worth, striking only here and there, in spots to be selected by some disinterested, public spirited citizen, it would fill a long felt want.

A Northern visitor in Fort Worth last week rather criticized the men of the city because they don't all wear "spike-tail" coats to the theater. There is justice in the criticism. The men all ought to put on their glad rags at 6 o'clock every evening, and regulate their morning and afternoon clothes to the hour; and no doubt we would if we had them. The plain, unvarnished, sad truth is that there are only seventeen evening suits in town, and this enumeration includes six Tuxedos worn by the aisle-seat Dickey bird crowd. What is to be done? A presentable dress suit, with the necessary attachments mercerized takes all the heart of a hundred dollar bill.

The hour of parting to us all must come: We cannot stop the moments as they fly. And while "farewell" we, weeping, say to some: To some (thank Heaven), we say "Goodbye."

IN ANCIENT TIMES "Friends, Romans, countrymen, give me your ears," thundered the orator.

Having delivered this challenge, the Praetorian football eleven madly charged into the line of their opponents and when they came out, had ten off no less than 15 auricular appendages from the enemy's heads as a sign that their captain's signal was hot stuff.

A NATURAL MISTAKE The little knot of Chicago visitors which had become detached from the rest of the party was found standing on the corner of Houston and Ninth streets, weeping softly.

"It looks so much like home," one of them sighed, and the others joined as weary sigh.

"But I don't see any bridges," remarked one who was less homesick than the others, and consequently less impressed with the sentiment.

"No," moaned the others "but otherwise it's so natural you could almost see the whale-backs and the tugs."

"It's as like the original as two peas," they finally murmured softly, and then sped away to catch the special train.

They had mistaken Houston street for the Chicago river.

A MATTER OF BEVERAGES "Ah was a goin' down Houston street this afternoon," puffessor remarks the end man. "When aheespees a lady with a dress on that would drive a man to drink."

"Drive a man to drink? Now tell me how could a lady's dress drive a man to drink?"

"Well she had on a coffee-coat over a wine-culled tea-gown and a cocktail in her hat. She suttin' looked rummy."

"But tell me, about that cocktail in her hat."

"Well then, roostan-feathah, if you wants to call hit that."

And then the tambourines get in their work.

Priscilla whispered in my ear; I trembled at the touch of her sweet lips. And felt her presence very near. It thrilled me to my finger-tips.

A FEW STORIES

A Modern Paladin Ex-Congressman John Allen, known as "Private Allen," because he was the only private in the Confederate army, was standing on Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, last week, watching the Grand Army of the Republic parade.

With him were two ladies. As the multitude of Grand Army men swept by Private Allen was visibly impressed. After several hours had elapsed Charles A. Edwards, secretary of the Democratic congressional committee, came along. Allen greeted him, stopped him, and said:

"Edwards, how long has this parade been going along?"

"Four hours and a half," replied Mr. Edwards, after consulting his watch.

Mr. Allen heaved a sigh, turned to the ladies, and said in a tone of melancholy pride:

"Just see what I held at bay for four years."—New York Times.

One on the Motorman He was too old to jump on a moving car with safety and was handicapped by a heavy bag of tools slung over his run their cars past the crossing at even greater speed than that with which they approached.

The old laborer didn't grumble or swear. He waited on one rail for the next car. As it drew near he signaled the motorman to stop. The power was increased to run by, as before, and the old man turned, as if to get out of the way. The heavy tools slipped from his grasp and fell on the rail. The motorman frantically shut off the power and set his brake hard. The wheel was within a yard of the obstruction when the car stopped. The old man picked up his bundle and smiled broadly as he climbed on the front platform.

"Think you're smart, don't you?" said the motorman.

"Much obliged," said the old man, still grinning. "You're the only accommodating motorman I've seen to-

Watching Miss Bingham

JUST at the present time men of influence who direct the destinies of the theater in America are watching with curious interest the efforts of Amelia Bingham, who opened her season a few nights ago in Chicago, producing a new problem play, "A Modern Magdalene." They are watching her for two reasons, first, because she is surrounded by the most expensive organization which ever accompanied an artist from New York, and they are watching her because she is her own manager and is directing, not only her own company, but a second organization presenting "The Climbers," in which she attracted distinguished attention last season. What will the end be? That is the question which these gentlemen who direct the destinies of the theater in America are asking each other. It is not an uncommon thing for a star to engage several clever people to assist in a production, but not since the days of the old Pitou stock company has such a company of players been gotten together as that which Miss Bingham is introducing this season. There is Henry E. Dixie, who has starred so many times and who was last season a remarkable Francois in that fantastic story which failed so signally in dramatic form, "The Strange Adventures of Francois." Mr. Dixie back in the old days was "Adonis." Mr. Dixie in later days became a distinguished comedian, and Mr. Dixie when last in this city was a charming picture of Garrick in Stuart Robson's production of "Oliver Goldsmith. There is another member of Miss Bingham's company well known to the theatrical world. It is Wilton Lackaye, whose Svengali in "Tribby" has become almost a classic. His work in late years has still further distinguished him. There is Joseph Holland, whose brother, E. M. Holland, is to represent Pope Leo XIII, in "The Eternal City." Joseph Holland is one of the best known actors in America. There is Hobart Bosworth, many seasons Julia Marlowe's leading man. There is also in this famous company Ferdinand Gottschalk, who has been many times a star, and Midge Carr Cooke and Adele Farrington, and Miss Bingham herself. To the man familiar with the theater the mention of the names above suggests rather a combination of stars than the support of a star. It also suggests a stupendous expense. For this reason the tour of Miss Bingham is being watched with more than usual interest. Contrary to all expectation, instead of reserving this organization for her New York season, Miss Bingham has plunged on the road with it, and on tour is doing her latest play with her New York cast, a thing unheard of in these times of cheap effort. Her finish has been forecast by the pessimist as a failure, but there is an optimistic view to be taken of the venture, and the woman who has shown herself to be so adroit in business matters may again score in her unprecedented undertaking.

there is Frederic Remington?"

"Where?" asked the pork packer.

"That man coming this way. Shall I introduce you?"

"Bet your life. No man I'd like better to see."

"I had no idea you cared so much for his work."

"Care for it? Nothing like it; knocks the spots off of everything else in the line."

The man of culture presented the Chicagoan.

"Proud to meet you. Remington is a great name with me."

"Indeed," said Remington.

"But—" "Let me anticipate any objections you might have, Mr. Brockman. I am of good family, I am not dissipated, I have a good business, and am abundantly able to support a wife. All I ask is—" "But, young man—" "I can bring testimonials to prove all I say. I have never wanted any other girl, and—" "And never shall want any other girl. From the first it has been a case of—" "Look here, young man, let me get in a word. Which one of my daughters is it you want?"—Chicago Tribune.

"A certain California girl was one of numerous applicants recently for a position in a New York Presbyterian church, which pays a very large salary. She has tact and good sense and is a neat but not showy dresser. After many had been heard it was finally her turn. Now she is a lady, with beautiful manners, speaking charming English, but none of this was evidence as she sat with 150 others in the back of the church. She met the committee, made at once a distinct impression through the above qualities—these are men of the world, who know culture and recognize refinement. So before she began singing she possessed their interest, she was so far above the others in these prepossessing qualities. She sang her best, but her voice was not the equal of a certain predecessor on trial. Nevertheless, she got the place. Why? Because the singing alone does not cover the ground; because this girl had tact, and exercised it at every moment of the proceedings. When told of the duties of the position she mentioned her mother in California, saying she wanted to go to her during the summer. This was innocent enough, but this chairman had just lost his own mother, and the affectionate reference hit him in a tender spot. Afterward, while waiting for a belated car, she was asked in at the house of the chairman by his wife, and here again she showed tact, sang some tender nothings for this lady, and so impressed her that this influence also was in her favor. A hundred and fifty singers had this opportunity, but she alone took advantage of events as they shaped themselves. Now she rides to California on her church, and is much appreciated in her parish." Don't imagine all singers obtain church positions in like manner, but all have opportunities for using tact and sense, and this must be inbred as well as cultivated.

Music lovers of Fort Worth will be greatly interested in the coming here of the Gordon-Shay Opera company, Wednesday afternoon and night of this week. At the matinee "Il Trovatore" will be presented and in the evening "Faust." The company is said to be a very capable one. Among those who will appear are Miss Rose Cecelia Shay, Mme. Helene Noldi, Miss Pauline Johnson, Eloise Bishop, John Dunsmore, Achille Alberti, and others. Giuseppe Tressi is the conductor of the company and he has ability of renown. No such company of world renown Lyric artists has yet visited Fort Worth, and it will be strange indeed if a great throng of theater-goers do not turn out. The company consists of fifty people, carrying its own superb orchestra, and a car load of special scenery.

The following program will be given by Arthur Van Ewe's baritone, at the Artion concert Wednesday evening:

- Edward Carl Loewe No. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7 from Diehelen.
- Idhe R. Schumann
- (a) Der Wanderer Schubert
- (b) The Lake Berger
- (c) My Native Land Hugo Kaun

A cable received from Berlin says: "Dr. Heinrich Steger, of Vienna, has just published a strong public appeal to the widow and son of Richard Wagner, in behalf of Amalia Materna, veteran artist, whose unparalleled impersonations of Brunhilde and other Wagnerian characters contributed so much to the composer's fame. Madame Materna is utterly destitute and in danger of ending her days in the poorhouse. Private appeals to the Wagner family have proved of no avail. "Everything dear to Madame Materna in the way of souvenirs of her artistic career has been taken away from her. Even the helmet, shield and spear used in her famous performance of Brunhilde at the opening of the Bayreuth theater in 1876 were seized and sold by auction last week for the miserable sum of 4 kronen."

Rollin M. Pease, barytone, will give a series of song recitals at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church every Sunday evening until December. No admission will be charged. He will be assisted by Mrs. Louise S. Allison pianist.

Rose Cecelia Shay, prima donna of the Gordon-Shay Grand Opera company, which is to appear at the opera house next Wednesday afternoon and night is above all other things versatile. The term is used in its broadest sense. Many singers can assume acceptably a large number of roles of different character, but there are few who can touch the heart in every portrayal. Miss Shay is equally effective in parts highly antithetical. The girl in quality between the passionate, vengeful gypsy mother Azucena in Verdi's "Il Trovatore," the gentle trusting Marguerite in Gounod's "Faust," the dainty sympathetic little Mignon in Ambroise Thomas' tuneful opera of that title and the fickle, wayward, cigarette girl immortalized in Bizet's "Carmen," is wide and deep. But Miss Shay spans it with a degree of musical understanding and histrionic intelligence which clearly differentiates her impersonations. She gets down to the soul of each character and then personified it for her audience.

The Mascagni Grand Italian Opera company will be in Dallas December 22. They are said to be giving the finest opera ever produced in America.

"Geneveva" an opera by Schumann will be given by the Boston Singing club this season.

"Tommy Rot" is the title of a musical piece recently produced in New York. The authors have disarmed critics by being their own critics. Such candor is refreshing, nowadays.

LITTLE WILLIE IS AN EXPERT

Will Tackle Any Kind of a Beast With His Lasso

El Paso Herald: Willie Pulliam is in from his father's ranch, visiting his home at 707 Boulevard. He relates many interesting adventures among the Sierras.

A short time ago he caught a deer galloping about among the mesquite. He mounted his favorite horse and with lasso in hand started after the deer. He finally cornered and lassoed it, whereupon the deer became vicious and made an attack on Willie, but putting the spurs to his horse Willie was soon dragging the deer, having fastened the rope to the saddle horn.

He dragged it a few yards, then dismounted and killed it.

A few days later he caught a huge mountain wild cat in the same manner and dragged it to death. Willie is only 15 years old, but is an adept with the lasso.

The porter on the Pullman car going on the Rock Island last night got left here. The cause of his getting left was due to the fact that he went into the lunch stand in the gentleman's waiting room to get a cup of coffee and a sandwich. He ate as rapidly as possible and went out to get on his train, but when he got outside the only thing he could see was the tail light glimmering at the lower end of the G. H. yards, a mile away.

In this connection it might be well to mention that the porter has not been the only one to get left recently. The trainmen think it sufficient to call out "All aboard" along the platform without going into the waiting rooms to notify the people in there.

STOCK NEWS FROM CHICAGO MARKETS

COMMENT ON END OF RUN OF RANGE CATTLE TO MARKET

Conditions in Texas Have Been Revolutionized. Colorado and Wyoming Have Been Heavy Shippers. Thereceipts of Sheep at the Windy City Market

A reliable Texas authority expresses the opinion that the big rush of cattle to the market from that quarter will have pretty well subsided within the next two weeks and the bulk of the movement seems to be already over. Oklahoma conditions are much the same, and the prediction seems justifiable that the Southwestern supply will dwindle down to little after the middle of November.

Colorado has shipped heavily of late. A dry summer and consequent scarcity of feed has been largely responsible for this. In Colorado as in the Southwest a radical change in methods is in progress. More cattle have been shipped out than formerly, but they are mostly of undesirable kind. Cattlemen in the intermountain region are putting their affairs in better shape, using less borrowed money, and going on a more substantial basis generally. Most reliable information is to the effect that 75 cent of the season's run from Colorado has been shipped out.

The Chicago Live Stock World in commenting on the end of the run of range cattle to market, says:

Just how long the run of Western grass cattle will continue, is a subject of speculation. Certainly an incredible supply of beef has been sent to market this year from trans-Missouri pastures. The Southwest has, for various reasons, unloaded a large number of cattle. She stock from that quarter has been numerous sent to the shambles and the breeding capacity of that vast region promises to be curtailed for years to come. That the effect will be beneficial admits of no doubt. This she stock has not been sacrificed, but sold at good prices. Probably it will be replaced by better grade stock. Certainly conditions in Texas have been revolutionized by the invasion of the great ranches by an army of settlers. The day of the small man in that quarter is at hand.

Wyoming Cattle Well In

Wyoming cattle are pretty well in. They have been able to get cars, while sheepmen have been generally stranded on route. Wyoming, like Colorado, has been very dry all summer, a fact that has necessitated heavier marketing than would otherwise have been the case. Few more Wyoming cattle are to come this season.

South Dakota has never shipped so heavily before. From Belle Fourche and in fact the entire country between the Black hills and the Missouri marketing has been continuous and heavy all through the season. South Dakota has, however, more cattle yet to come than any other section of the range, and they will straggle in until late.

Montana, from all accounts, is pretty well in. Ravages of grasshoppers have caused more stock to be sent to market than would otherwise have come. This has been a heavy shipping season for Montana, and when returns are in they will be surprising.

Big Sheep Shipments

But if range cattlemen have been heavy contributors to the market supply, they have not outdone the efforts of the sheepmen, whose demands for cars have fairly overtaken the railroads. Owing to the Colorado drought, New Mexico has marketed many lambs that would have gone into feed lots had feed been plentiful. Utah has sent out so many sheep that the movement looked like a drain, yet there is plenty of breeding stock left. Flocks have been cut down to such an extent, however, that there will be more feed for those left. This reduction was necessitated by drought.

Wyoming has still many sheep to ship. They would have been here long ago if the Union Pacific could have furnished cars. Owing to the lack of grass they must be disposed of. Idaho will ship for several weeks, but much stock that would have been marketed if the Oregon Short Line could have furnished cars is now too thin to sell advantageously and will be kept over another year.

Montana is pretty well in. A few straggling bands are still coming but no considerable volume of supply is yet to come from that quarter.

North Dakota ranges have sent less fat stock to market than usual this year owing to the waxy nature of the grass which did not make fat. The stock will, of necessity, go into the feed lots for a short time, at least.

But the end of the great 1902 run of range cattle and sheep is in sight. Already it has dwindled in volume perceptibly. While prices have not been as high as was expected at the opening of the season; on the whole, stock owners have little cause for complaint. The great volume of stuff marketed has been a boon to the consuming public which otherwise would have faced a meat famine.

RIGHT ONE WAS SLOW.

"Now, isn't that too provoking?" and the voice of the popular girl was heard just returned to her room from the parlor, whither she had been summoned by a servant.

"What is it, dear?" inquired her mother, gently, at the door.

"It's just what it always is—I'm to go to the club dance tomorrow night with the wrong man, simply because the right one was slow. Wonder why it always happens so; the man you'd rather go with has the idea that your company can be had at any time, like beer on draft at all hours."

"Perhaps that's why you think him the nice one because he isn't apparently so anxious about it as the rest," suggested her mother smilingly.

"He said he thought perhaps I'd go with him to a table 'tote uptown and theater afterwards—and it half-past 5 then! Of course, I had an engagement and couldn't go—would have had one, anyway, even if I had it!" With which feminine paradox she threw herself into a chair and frowned out of the window at a crooked world.

"It is very trying," agreed the mother sympathizingly, "but perhaps he thought he might presume on an old friendship."

"And it was presumption, too, in the first degree," declared the girl crossly. "Why don't men ever learn that a quarter spent for a messenger boy a day or so ahead goes further with a girl in the expression of admiration than $20 later in supper or roses?"

"He might not know himself if he can get away from the office in time," suggested the mother.

"Well, then, he'd better forswear girls altogether if he can't treat them with any consideration or delicacy. It has a suggestion unpleasant enough to any feminine consciousness that he couldn't get the girl he wanted in time, so he fell back on you as a last resort. And the messenger, even a few hours beforehand, would give you a chance to clear the book of immediate dates; and, besides, it has a twang of defence about it which suggests that she has other possibilities besides himself—and even the homeliest wall flower of a girl would be grateful for that. So I say, long live the messenger boy!"

WANTS OF THE CATHOLICS

UNITED STATES ENTITLED TO A DOZEN IF ITALY'S RATIO WERE TO PREVAIL

Entirely aside from the ambitions ascribed to Archbishop Ireland, it is considered absurd by Catholics of the United States that there should be only one Cardinal in this country. There should be at least a dozen, say some authorities on the subject, if the same ratio is to prevail here that obtains in, say, Italy.

The United States, with 14,000,000 Catholics, has precisely the same representation in the Sacred College as England, where the members of the faith number only a few hundred thousand. There are nearly three times as many Catholics in the United States as there are in Ireland, yet both have the same numerical representation in the Sacred College, while Australia, with far fewer than Ireland, has equal weight.

Yet Rome moves slowly. Many living priests remember the astonishment of the Vatican when a polite intimation was received there from President Lincoln that it would be a good thing to have an American Cardinal. The Vatican up to that time had regarded the United States as a wild and irresponsible sort of place, (it is still a "missionary country" in the Vatican list.) and the idea of creating a Cardinal here had never occurred to anybody. It took many years for the advisability of such action as President Lincoln commended to sufficiently impress itself upon the Vatican to lead to the creation of the first American Cardinal.

At the present time those who most ardently desire to see the United States carry the weight in the Sacred College which the number of Catholics in this country entitles it to say that there ought to be two Cardinals in New York (with a division of the diocese) and one at each of the following cities: Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, Boston, New Orleans, Cincinnati.

Kodol

Digests what you Eat
Dyspepsia Cure

There is one certain way of curing indigestion and stomach troubles, that is: give your stomach a rest but still eat plenty of good food to keep up the nourishment for your body. You can do this by using KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE because it is the one preparation which digests what you eat without aid from the stomach. Nature will then repair your worn out digestive organs and restore them to healthy condition. It relieves that feeling of fullness, belching and distress after eating.

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY F. TENNYSON NEELY

The trial of Captain Nevins for delation and gross misconduct in the station of the army post where are stationed Captain Loring of the engineer corps and Lieutenant Blake, his friend. At the court martial in which Loring is the prosecutor, it develops that Nevins' wife who is in San Francisco, is the sister of the girl who broke her engagement with Loring and caused him, heartbroken, to ask service in the western plains. Nevins gives Loring his diamonds and valuables to send to his wife and then through a friend, Gleason sends for them to be returned. Gleason gets drunk and accuses Loring before the tent of the commanding officer. Loring tells him that the valuables have already been sent away.

The court martial adjourns and Blake and Loring with their troop leave the post, stopping on their way at the ranch of Sancho, a treacherous Mexican. There they get word to send an escort with two other troopers to Tucson, while they are to proceed to Yuma. The night before they leave, Lieutenant Blake, hearing the music of a guitar, goes out to interview Pancha, the sister of the wife of old Sancho's brother.

While he confronts her, the troop is suddenly attacked and before Blake can prevent Loring is surrounded, struck unconscious and wounded. The saddlebags bearing the envelope containing Nevins' diamonds and watch are slashed open and looted. After Loring recovers, he is in such bad condition, the survey of the Gila valley is given up and he starts on a sea voyage to San Francisco for his health, accompanied by Colonel Turbull. Blake is reduced to the infantry. As the ship bearing Loring stops at a port along the way, Pancha, who had lured Blake to her side on that disastrous night, comes on board accompanied by wealthy relatives. Loring learns she has neither father nor mother and is being taken away against her will.

He learns that a valuable package has been placed in the safe of the ship under care of the purser, Traynor, and while permitted to see it, cannot but guess that it contains the missing valuables of Captain Nevins. Then the ship Idaho is run down and sunk, and only the passengers are saved. The purser saves some of the valuables, but the packets addressed to San Francisco in Pancha's name are missing. Arriving at San Francisco, Loring is suddenly thrown under a cloud of suspicion of having stolen the valuables and is confined to his headquarters there under disgrace. Finally through the efforts of Captain Morland whose life he saved from attack by a ruffian of a sailor, the night the ship went down, Loring is freed from suspicion and an order came from Washington demanding that he be released and sent to his new post on the Platte. Mrs. Nevins, wife of the notorious captain, who is supposed dead, goes to live in a suburb of Sacramento accompanied by her sister, Geraldine. Allen, who years before had broken her engagement with Loring.

And several times again that long afternoon did Barleigh return to the charge and speak of Nevins, and more than once during the busy days that followed, but by the time they started on their return he had probably concluded that Loring really knew no more about him, and once or twice, when Blake and his love affairs were mentioned, Loring seemed unwilling to hear. Stone pondered over it not a little before they got to Reno, on the back track, and there it was that Barleigh had demanded to be sent right on to Frayne, despite fatigue, for something had come to him in this mail that filled him with dismay, as the major commanding told them a dozen times over. Moreover, Mr. Omaha Stone became gradually convinced that Loring was in partial possession of the secret of Barleigh's stampede. Unless Stone was utterly in error Loring had seen some where before the handwriting of the superscription of the envelope Barleigh had dropped in his nerveless collapse. But Stone might as well have crossed questioned the sphinx. Loring would admit nothing.

Yet it was of this very matter the engineer was thinking one soft, still evening soon after his return to department headquarters. His boxes had just arrived. He had found a fairly comfortable room away from the turbulent section of the new and bustling town, and equally distant from the domicile of Stone and his particular set. Loring never gambled and took little interest in cards. He was still "taking his rations" at the hotel, but much disliked it, and was seriously thinking of seeking board in some private family. The barracks were too far out and the roads deep in mud, or he would have lived and "messed" out there. The few boarding houses were crowded, and with an un congenial lot as a rule. Private families that took two or three table boarders were very few, but some one suggested his going to see the rector of the new parish, himself a recent arrival.

The sun had gone down behind the high bluffs at the back of the straggling frontier town. The plank sidewalks were thronged in the neighborhood of the hotel with picturesque loungers as the young officer made his way westward and soon reached the outlying, unpaved, deep rutted cross streets. He readily found the rector, a kindly, gentle-mannered widower, whose sister had come to keep house for him, and never before had either of them lived in a community so utterly primitive, if not uncouth. It was plain to be seen that he was a southerner, and in the joy of a few minutes' conversation with a young man, whose language and manners bespoke the gentleman, Mr. Lambert speedily made known to him that his health had suffered in New Orleans and his physicians had insisted on total change of climate, and the great northwest was a new, untrodden field for the sons of the cross, of his sect at least.

dows the lights were feebly shining stood just a few paces back of the fence, back of the gate where now the pair was standing, in low whispered talk, eager and impetuous on part of the man, doubtful and reluctant on part of the girl. Then the former became suddenly aware that two men were standing only a short distance away, observing.

"Then good night," he said. "You think it over." And without raising his hat he turned sharply and went striding back the way they came. Only one glance did Loring give that receding figure, but his eyes followed that of the girl, who skimmed lightly up the steps into the house, banging the door behind her.

The rector was clinging to his arm and looking into his face with much concern when Loring pulled himself together.

"This is Mrs. Burton's," said he. "Let us enter. Surely you need a glass of wine, or—water," he added vaguely.

"Thank you, Mr. Lambert, not—there. Let us turn about."

THE CASTING OUT

The Story of An Obstreperous Dog.

It was but a bit of a puppy, and a very black one at that, that lay shivering in his new mistress's arms; yet despite his size he was already sowing discord and dissension in the family ranks.

"Call him Jeffries or Fitzsimmons; I'll bet he'll be a corker in a scrap." This from the small boy whose tastes ran to things pugilistic.

"Might better call him Ink, or Egypt; he's black enough."

Elizabeth Ann, embracing the puppy almost to suffocation in the excess of her affection, had taken no part in the discussion, but now she announced in a manner not to be disputed that his name should be Midget.

"Midget!" jeered her brother, "Midget! Nice name for that dog. Why, I tell you he's going to be a monster. Look at his paws—Pooh! that's just like a girl. Midget!" mimicking his sister in withering tones.

While conceding that Midget was a perfectly suitable name for the present, her dotting relatives argued that in such matters it were well to have a bit of foresight; something more heroic. Nero, for instance. But the small rock of determination clung to her choice, and, the family meekly acquiescing, Midget became properly installed as a member of a well regulated household.

The child had had at various times all sorts and conditions of pets; yet never had her whole heart gone out to any of them in particular as it did to this lumbering booby pup. It was outside the range of possibility that his "forebears," maternal or parental, had in antebellum days tracked some hapless fugitive through the great swamps of the South, but seemingly Midget had inherited some of their vaunted savagery. His good nature was absolute; a cuff or a kind word was received alike with a pleased squirming from the end of his nose to the tip of his tail. As this made him a safe companion he was in high favor, and at 10 months he had reached the zenith of his popularity. From then dated his painful but steady decline from grace.

Complaints began to come in from the gardener that certain choice plants had been found ruthlessly torn up, while all around the soft earth bore the unmistakable imprint of a convicting paw. Next the stable man was heard from. The young chickens, "prime for broiling," were disappearing at an alarming rate. Suspicion first directed itself to a family of shiftless negroes that lived near by, until something apparently ruffled Midget's usual placidity. Investigation disclosed a small but stubborn quill feather wedged tightly between his teeth; so he was brought to justice, and howls as of battle, murder and sudden death rent the air. His punishment over, he lay on the grass, his canine heart heavy with anguish, whimpering for his beloved mistress to comfort him.

For a week he trod the straight and narrow path, and the family began to smile upon him again; he had succeeded in placating his enemies among the domestics, barring one. Mary, the cook, had been and was ever his relentless foe. Did he but show his nose around her domain, out she sallied upon him, broom in hand. "Midget yez are, is it? Well, it's an elephant yez is—git out o' this!" and Midget, escaping to a safe distance, would laugh at her, dog fashion. But it was through her, his Nemesis, that he again fell into the thorns and brambles of iniquity. About this time there came upon the land a plague of tramps. The family had congratulated itself that Midget, on account of his ferocious size, would be a great protection against their encroachment, and so make up in a measure for his depredations; yet Mary declared that she was more besieged that ever, and stoutly blamed Midget.

"But how can it be, Mary?"

"Well, mum, it's this way. Ivery

MAN IN MOTLEY AS MODERN MEDICINE MAN

toime wan iv thim good-for-naughts comes in begging me for a boite there's that black villain runnin, in front wid a 'come right along this way. Here's a friend of mine, Mary. 'Treat him foim—on of y're not believin' me, look there!" triumphantly.

Up the road limped a most disreputable knight of the highway, dirty, ragged, unkempt. Midget, lying on the grass with a bone, spied him. His ears cocked up, his great blacksnake tail commenced to beat a tattoo; then he sprang up and bounded out, with an unmistakable bark of welcome. Sliding up, he thrust a wet nose into the dirty palm, look long into his eyes, turned and trotted for the kitchen, the man following.

When the master of the house heard of this latest performance he gave his young daughter the choice of keeping her property tied up in future or of giving him away, and she was not slow to accept the first condition. Abashed and humbled, dragging his captive chain behind him, Midget slowly followed his stern but sorrowful mistress to the carriage house. Finding a convenient nail alongside a sleigh, well covered over until winter snows should come, she left him with a parting squeeze.

"Oh, Midget, if you only would be good!" The clanking of the chain lengths was all that broke the stillness of the big carriage house. Outside he could hear the voice of men, the neigh of a horse, the clucking of chickens. There was a scratching, and Tom, the big barn cat, stole softly across the floor and sat down at a safe distance, insolently washing his paw. Oh, if he could but get at him! Midget tore at his fastenings in vain. He gave one long howl, but it brought no relief; he tried again, and the doors flew open, the stableman put in his head and roughly told him to "Shut up!" The dog looked around dejectedly. If only he had something to lie on perhaps he could forget his troubles. He poked his nose under the sheet that covered the sleigh, and what he saw apparently satisfied him, for he leaped up and, with a deep drawn sigh, curled up in the bottom. But something was still lacking to complete his comfort; never in his life had he gone to sleep without a bone to gnaw on. Deprived of that, he set to work with his sharp white teeth on the polished side pane, of the cutter. Of course, the mischief was discovered, and that settled matters for Midget; the decree of banishment, respectively, were deputed to carry out FLOOSH, U—, ETAO SHR CMFN was pronounced, and against it neither tears nor prayers could prevail. John and Tim, coachmen and stableman, re-heard singing as she started. 6.... 2— Casting out the sentence. The master said: "Give him away, drown him, shoot him; I don't care what you do. Only get rid of that fool dog before I come home."

Two men, dragging a reluctant dog between them, crept stealthily down the shady lane that led to the river. A boat was drawn up on the beach; in to it they coaxed their prisoner, and pulled out. About 20 yards lay between them and the shore when down the lane there came a rushing of feet and a swishing of small skirts, as the child rushed to the water's edge.

"Where are you going with my dog?" she screamed. "Come back this minute. Here, Midget, Midget!"

The dog yelped and struggled, but strong hands held him by the collar. She stamped in impotent rage, and, as the laughter of the men came to her, picked up a stone and sent it skimming after the fast receding boat. Another and another followed, and then a dreadful word came from her mouth—a word that in all her short life she never had uttered. Frightened at herself, she turned and ran—ran until she came to great dim woods; then sank down, and, burying her head in the soft moss, sobbed her grief out.

Breakfast was served and the family were assembled. A strange peace seemed to have descended upon the place, eased of its black burden. Elizabeth Anna had not mentioned him, memory of that awful word sealed her lips. Down in the laundry Mary could be heard singing as she picked up her basket of clothes and started for the drying ground. Each in his way was giving thanks that the troubled household was at peace with the world once more. Suddenly a shriek rent the air, followed by others more shrill, more piercing. Nappkins were flung down, chairs pushed back and the family as one man rushed to the windows.

There was Mary, hugging her skirts close about her, and there—dripping, muddy, with the end of a frayed rope dangling from his collar—was Midget, racing around alkali mad and nipping at Mary's portly, white stockings as she ran. No banshee ever shrieked louder than did this daughter of Erin as she strove to protect her lower limbs. "Help! Murder! Yez black devil! Yez limb of Satan! Yez villain! Oh—o-h-h!" Exhausted, she sank on the ground, her starched skirts forming great billows about her ample form.

With one cry the child was out of the room. Midget saw her, and with a parting nip at Mary he raced toward her, knocking her down, licked her face, and then dropped panting at her side.

Here was a problem for the family to face, thus rudely wrenched from its dream of peace and quiet. The grand-mother was beginning to champion Midget's cause.

"It's a shame to send that dog away again. Just think of his devotion in swimming that great river!"

"Yes; it certainly is touching," said Elizabeth's mother; "but what about the servants? What about Mary?"

It was finally decided to send the cause of all this turmoil away on a farm, until his exuberance of spirits should have somewhat abated. Another blessed lull, and then one fateful morning there came a letter. "Your dog chewed through a two-inch rope, jumped a five barred gate and is gone."

Now Elizabeth is playing Sister Anne, and the servants in a body have given warning.

THE SAN VINCENTE VENDETTA

UP TO the time Sheriff Kittredge took charge of affairs in Nogales county every white official played into the hands of the cow boys, and as it was only Mexican blood that went in for sheep and goats the trouble between the fence faction and the range faction took on all the characteristics of a race war, in which the "white" herders, as lawless and audacious a gang as ever infested the border, had all the best of it. The Mexicans in and about San Vicente seemed to be pretty well cowed, but Kittredge may have encouraged them a little by promises of protection and assurances that the law would be enforced. The poor peons were just commencing to rebuild their fences and increase their flocks when Tom Daly and about four herdsmen came up from the Sour Bottoms with about 200 "long steers." Fences didn't stop him for a minute. Two of his men rode in advance, brazenly displaying their wire-cutters, and when they got to San Vicente to ship there wasn't a whole fence south of the town. The first night after Daly's gang got in they went down to the Honk-a-Tonk across the railroad tracks, got into a fight with some Mexicans and killed two. Well, Kittredge jailed the Daly outfit, all except Tom. The leader couldn't be found, and when the evidence was equally positive, including Daly's boys, swore that it was Tom himself who had done the murders.

That certainly was the easiest way out of the scrape for the four hired cowboys, and I suppose they took it for granted that as Tom hadn't "stood by" they were justified in saving themselves at his expense. His reputation could stand it, however, and the "greasers" who corroborated the evidence were equally positive. The queer part of the whole matter was that Daly had escaped without his horse. He never turned up again anywhere so far as the authorities could find out, and the most diligent search failed to show that he had ever left San Vicente after that shindig at the Honk-a-Tonk. Everybody was puzzled, especially Kittredge, about what should be done with the stock, or whether Daly had any "people" back east.

One fine morning, much to the astonishment of everybody a big, raw-boned, red-faced chap with a black Prince Albert coat and his pants in his boots, got off the train and went looking for the courthouse. Once in Kittredge's little frame office the newcomer promptly announced that he was Ed Daly, "sometimes nicknamed Jump," he said, Tom's older brother, come to San Vicente for the express purpose of prosecuting "his brother's murderers." He said that he was a lawyer, had studied law in the state penitentiary, where he had served "an unjust sentence" for cattle rustling, and that he meant to "square things up with the hounds that had made away with Tom." Kittredge noticed that the new Daly was well "garrisoned," carried a Winchester and had a "mean eye." So he welcomed the stranger to San Vicente's hospitality and vaguely warned him that, although the country had been but newly organized, he, Kittredge, had a reputation at stake, and meant to maintain the majesty of the law.

Ed Daly got as far into his law practice as hanging out a shingle, which he himself painted upon the lid of a soap box. Then he began to swagger about town, an avowed "bully" "looking for evidence" that his brother had been foully dealt with. Not finding any tangible clues and having a weakness for roulette, stud poker and craps, he became a regular at the Twin Republics, the Swan and the Acme, where his bluster soon terrified the Mexicans and discouraged the American gamblers. He "held up" the Acme dealer one night after losing about $30 and took all the money on the cloth. Kittredge made a bluff at arresting him for this, but he explained that the dealer had tried to "hurrah" him, and, as the latter made no denial, it was considered good justice to let Daly go free.

Thus encouraged, the "avenger" began to brow-beat and terrorize the town, so that Kittredge was afraid to go away a day at a time for fear Daly would cut loose. Some of the younger set from the Bald Knob ranges began to grow restive under the bully's harsh predominance, but Daly was either too smart or too cowardly to mix things with his own countrymen. He killed a Mexican one night as he was riding home from a dance at Greasy Mary's, but swore that he had been shooting at a jack rabbit, and as the victim was only a greaser the coroner let it go at that. But one morning late in August Daly failed to appear at the Twin Republics for his "morning's morning." He had "set in" at the faro table till past midnight, and after that nobody could remember having seen him. No freight trains had passed, and to further mystify the community it was found about noon that his horse, saddled and bridled, was grazing out on the Nogales trail about a mile from town.

Of course Kittredge got busy again, but he never could find out what happened to the second of the Daly brothers. Pete Swinton, who kept a dairy, bought the horse a few months later, and then gave it away because it wouldn't work in harness. That is, the horse would work, but had a trick of balking at the same place in the road and standing there till all human effort to drive it on was exhausted. The horse was a good looking and went pretty well in the saddle, but every time it came to Romero's hut at the end of Main street, the stubborn beast would stand stock still, nor budge except when a fire was built beneath, and then only got out of danger. Pretty soon nobody in San Vicente would have the Daly horse, Romero, who was a sheep herder, moved away and the miserable horse was left to wander about the old shanty, unfed and unwatered till its bones almost stuck through the hide.

Sheriff Kittredge and the new marshal, a fellow named Magruder, came riding past one day and found the old horse stark and stiff right in the middle of the road. Magruder was a good deal of a tenderfoot, all stuck up on San Vicente and full of queer ideas about "civic pride" and sanitary precautions, and so forth, so as soon as he got back to the courthouse he sent Patricio Miramontes and his son to bury the dead horse. They picked a corner of Romero's deserted field for the grave, but they hadn't dug two feet into the loose, dry sand when they came upon Ed Daly's Prince Albert. Patricio fetched the coroner and they dug both the Daly boys out of the same hole in the sand. Kittredge made a strong play to fix it on Romero, but the old man only grinned and shook his head, and as there was no apparent reason for the poor old chap to murder, and as both Tom and Ed had not been robbed, the coroner came to a "reason or reasons unknown to us" verdict, and the matter was dropped. But thereafter the "bad men" of Nogales and of Sour Bottoms and Bald Knob "pestered" the peon sheep men of the valley not at all—

USE OF THE COMPLEXION BRUSH

BY ELLA ADELIA FLETCHER.

Not every complexion will be benefited by the use of a complexion brush. The firm, fine grained skin that has never known the bluish of comedones or acne or enlarged pores, even in the region of the nose, would better let well enough alone, and secure cleanliness with hot water and soap and the milder friction of a raw silk face cloth.

For a neglected skin, however, one that has never been more than half washed, the complexion brush is a radical renovator. With the most righteous regard for cleanliness and every intention to secure it through the mistaken ideas of both the needs and the hazards of the face skin many women have failed utterly in their attempts to attain this hygienic state.

There are physical conditions, principally disorders of the digestive functions, which cause facial blemishes, but in many cases, especially of enlarged pores and comedones, commonly called "blackheads," or "worms," uncleanliness is the originating cause. The doing the good accomplished. Moreover, some skins are slow to show improvement, and the utmost perseverance is necessary to train them properly.

THE BEST BRUSH.
A medium-sized brush, of moderate firmness, softer than the ordinary bath brush, but with greater power of friction than the soft camel's hair ones, should be chosen, and night is the best time for its use, as for every cleansing face-bath. The water should not be too hot to be agreeable to the hands, and if it is not soft it should be made so with benzoin or an aromatic vinegar; lacking these, lemon juice or borax should be used.

A pure hygienic soap is needed, and the brush should be well lathered with it. Wet the face first with a face cloth, then begin the scrubbing on the sides of the nose, rubbing downward from the bridge in two or three short, brisk strokes that reach out the crevices at the sides of the nostrils, as clogging of the pores of the skin encourages cutaneous irritations and defacing eruptions, which is the basis of many poxes, cannot escape through their natural outlets afford the opportunity for which the mischievous microbe of disease is ever on the alert, and inflammation ensues as a natural consequence.

Incalculable harm is done the skin through the use of face powders containing mineral substances of a dangerous character. Bismuth, arsenic and mercury are active poisons, the continued use of which jeopardizes life itself. The common habit of retiring without removing the "makeup" of the day increases the danger of these harmful preparations, misnamed cosmetics, allowing them, with the day's soil, the whole night in which to work their mischief.

For the above conditions and for a skin that is naturally coarse and oily or one roughened and reddened by exposure, the complexion brush, used regularly and discreetly, will accomplish wonders. Don't look for a magical improvement in your skin, if you attend to the careful night toilet only two or three times a week. Every time you omit the care you are undergoing with a longer motion that sweeps out and upward upon the cheek toward the cheek bone, a crevice-like movement.

Next, scrub the temples in the upward, circular motion directed for massage. At the same time the fingers of the other hand can rub the opposite temple, as shown in the illustration, so that these muscles are exercised together, which is beneficial, and also in economy of time. Follow this with a similar rotary movement just in front of the ears. The forehead will bear a brisk running back and forth and up and down in the middle. This is the only downward movement advisable on the face, except the slanting one on the nose. Rub the brush vigorously around the forehead close up to the hair, where its cleansing office is especially needed. Scrub the cheeks with an upward rotary movement, and then bring the brush down from the chin in a long, sweeping motion over the throat toward the shoulder. Rub the neck also in the same manner from the jawbone in front of the ear downward and backward. These movements wage effective warfare against the ugly marks left by stiff collars and the wrinkles which run forward from below the ears.

USE SOAP FREELY.
Use plenty of water and soap, dipping the brush frequently into the basin, that the full effect of the hot water may be felt by the skin, for the brush cools in a moment, and the more water that is used the more quickly the soil and hardened excretions are softened. Rub with sufficient vigor to stimulate and cleanse the skin, but not to irritate it.

The face cloth is best used for the rinsing, which must be thorough, and may be in cooler water, but not cold. Wipe upon a fine towel, with the same upward motions used in massage. All washing and wiping of the face should be done with these upward rotary movements, as they are a valuable aid in overcoming sagging lines and wrinkles, and the practice will retard the disposition of the muscles to sag.

The complexion brush can also be used to great advantage on the arms when they are red and rough. The scrubbing should be upward in a rotary motion from the elbows to the shoulders, and downward to the wrists. If the growth of hair is unpleasantly vigorous upon the arms and dark in color, bathe them with ammonia and water small tip and takes the elevator or stairs to the flats that are the nearest to the street. If they are pleasant to look at, then this woman goes up higher, but not until she is satisfied that these are of the shape and size to probably suit her.

"Do not ramble over the whole premises, peering into dark corners and measuring," says she further, "but take a look from the front door, and if interested, go further."

That hunting gets to be a mania with some women, but the systematic woman will never allow it to become a dramatic necessity to her.

"While you muse over what you don't want," said the woman, "the really lovely flats disappear as if by magic, and you find yourself at the end of the term no nearer than at the beginning, and then have to put yourself off with any old thing that happens to come along. No, follow my plan and you will have it reduced to a science.

"Examine your list every spare minute; familiarize yourself with the localization of the available—and, above all, make haste."

Now, she does not mean to run around and wear yourself out without any purpose, but to follow the original routine to the letter and not take in side issues that never lead to anything but a regular dissipation. That's what flat hunting can become if it is slipped at, but if it is taken as an evil that must be got over as quickly and as lightly as possible it will be found that system makes the whole thing a comfort, if not an actual joy. Thousands of miles are wasted by women every fall in looking up their quarters, and all the time a few little cautionary plans would have simplified the whole thing.

In amplification of these general rules, let it be said that flats of four rooms and bath and with exposed plumbing can be had for as low as $20 a month. They range from that to six rooms at $40, but a seven-room they immediately become "apartments" and as such are subject to an entirely different set of prices, rules and requirements. They are also run upon another basis and require to be furnished with better furniture, have a local hall boy, elevator and a lease.

Therefore apartments are out of the category of the flat hunter's line of business.

Last, the woman who knew how said that you must measure and you must take a foot rule along in your pocket, as she did, to be really an adept at the business.

Then you will know how large the rooms really are, how much you will need to put in them and where to bestow the family heirlooms without running clear down town to find out.

No human being has ever found a perfect flat, but finding a suitable one can and should be made a matter of earnest thought before a step is taken outside the door, and after that it should be the "quickest way round."

and then apply peroxide of hydrogen. The latter will bleach the hair so it will be less noticeable, and the action of the two is to discourage the growth of the hair, if not to destroy it.

Following the bath with the complexion brush, if you are engaged in an earnest campaign of self-beautifying, the skin should be massaged with a cream or lotion adapted to its peculiar condition. For enlarged pores, when the sebaceous glands are too active and the inconspicuousness of an oily skin is suffered, use cucumber milk. Be sure in making any cucumber cosmetic that the cucumber juice is strong, for it is the natural wonderful refining and whitening power. When the skin is dry and rough it needs something more emollient. The following is excellent:

CUCUMBER CREAM.
Almond oil..... 4 ounces
Spermaceti..... 1 ounce
White wax..... 1 ounce
Cucumber juice..... 2 ounces
Salicylic acid..... 1/2 dram

The manner of making all cold creams is the same. The fats and oils are warmed by gentle heat in a double boiler till they can be smoothly creamed together. As only sufficient heat to favor this mingling is required, an earthen bowl placed in a basin of boiling water answers all purposes. The part of the process requiring most skill and practice is the uniting of the other substances, aromatic or astringent tincture, perfumed waters and essences, with the fatty base. The perfumed water must be poured slowly, sometimes drop by drop, while the mixture is steadily beaten with a silver fork. Sometimes an egg beater is used with success. Theatres and extracts are added last in the same way while the mixture is cooling.

Coarse, wrinkled or flabby skins are also benefited by the use during the day of an astringent lotion. It will hasten improvement. If a little benzoin or aromatic vinegar be added to the morning bath water, and the lotion should be used before applying powder to the skin, and also for any cleansing required through the day.

APPLYING THE BRUSH TO THE NOSE.

Dainties From The Brown October Nut.

A pean to the brown October nut need not be a song with only vegetarians and nut faddists to pipe its claims to approval. At this season everyone feels himself once more skin to the squirrel, without the formality of consulting his teeth—incisors, canines, bicuspid, molars or even "store." In the city streets the smell of roasting chestnuts comes seductively to the passerby, and the nutman reaps a silver harvest, regardless of the price of coal.

In the suburbs each Saturday morning one sees "de gang," armed with clubs and gunnysacks, on its way to the assault of some chestnut or walnut tree known to the fraternity, while in the real country Farmer Jones keeps a watchful eye on his shagbarks and butternuts, his black walnuts and chestnuts, until Jack Frost sends them rattling down in the bed of brown and crimson leaves carpeting the ground.

Until recently the wild crop has been relied on wholly for the home supply, and we have gone on importing chestnuts from France and Japan, English walnuts from France, Madaga, Spain and Portugal; almonds, from the high, dry plateaus of Europe and Asia; filberts from Italy and the British Isles; Brazil nuts from South America and lyche nuts from China.

Today nut culture in America is "on the boom."

Whether farmers are finding out that there is money in it or whether the slogan of the vegetarians, "For in the nut kind nature placed the fats for humankind," is bearing its legitimate fruit is immaterial.

From Southern California come English walnuts of finer quality than even the greable, and nuts that bring a higher price. There in bearing a walnut plantation is said to be one of the best paying properties under the sun. After the nuts are shaken from the trees they are dried in the sun or artificial heat to prevent their turning rancid.

Arizona holds the palm for almond culture, possessing the largest almond orchards in the United States and the earliest bearing, the crop being gathered six weeks earlier than that in California. When correctly gathered and cured the fruit is practically imperishable. While the trees do not get into full bearing until they are eight or ten years old, they usually pay for all expenses and afford some profit during the fifth year. Once in full bearing they ought to produce 20 pounds each.

Nearly two-thirds of all the pecans marketed come from Texas. In some localities orchards of young pecan trees, embracing thousands of acres, have been planted within a few years. This nut requires but little attention, thrives without much irrigation, and once in bearing continues to produce for an indefinite period.

The pollen possessed by the pecan nut sold in this market is not its natural condition. When gathered the surface of the shell is rough. As nuts sent to the market in this way do not command the highest prices, pecan polishing mills have been established.

Chestnuts come from New York, Pennsylvania, North Carolina and Georgia, those from the Southern States being the largest and having the best flavor. Hickory nuts are still largely the wild fruit, though Ohio and Indiana are furnishing desirable stock for planting and nurserymen are grafting and working with the young trees. The American hazel nut is seen only occasionally. Black walnuts, which are produced as a commercial product. It grows wild over millions of acres in Indiana, Illinois and on either side of the Mississippi River on shrubs about as high as a man's head. A new species lately has come to light in the State of Washington, which runs along the ground like a vine and bears two nuts in every pod. Black walnuts, which are growing in favor for use in confections and salads, come from Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio, while the peanut or "goober" adds lustre to Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee.

While most nuts are at their best without cooking and food specialists say they are not indigestible if they are well masticated and accompanied by a little salt, they lend themselves to a variety of dishes, from soup to bon-bons or coffee. Here are recipes for their use, all true and tried:

VEGETABLE TURKEY.
This may be made of almost any nuts, although chestnuts or peanuts commonly are used. To make it mix together three cupsful of chopped nuts, three cupsful of dry bread crumbs, three cupsful of milk, one tablespoonful of nut butter dissolved in some of the milk, one and a half teaspoonfuls of finely pulverized sage, onion or summer savory and a scant tablespoonful of salt; lastly, add a half dozen well beaten eggs; put in a well buttered mold, bake 20 minutes and serve very hot with cranberry sauce and a brown gravy. To make the latter add three tablespoonfuls of peanut meat to a cup of boiling water and thicken with browned flour; season to taste.

SWEETBREADS AND ALMOND SALAD.
Order a nice pair of calves' sweetbreads; wash in cold water, then throw in boiling salted water, adding a slice of onion, a sprig of celery and, if you like the flavor, a small bay leaf.

Cover the saucepan and simmer gently for half an hour. Take out the sweetbreads, throw in cold water, then pick apart, rejecting all the stringy membrane. Put on the ice until needed. Blanch two dozen almonds, put into the oven until thoroughly dry, then chop. When ready to serve cover the bottom of the salad bowl with white, crisp lettuce leaves. Mix the almonds with the sweetbreads, season with a half teaspoonful of salt, a sprinkle of paprika and a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Toss lightly, then mix with a good stiff mayonnaise, arrange on the lettuce leaves and

ORANGE, WALNUT AND CRESS SALAD.
This salad goes well with game. Peel tart oranges and remove the white skin. Slice thinly, cutting across the length of the fruit. Arrange in double rows on a flat dish and scatter walnut meats over them. Through the center of the slices and down each side put sprigs of watercress. Make a French dressing of four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, a half teaspoonful of salt and dash of paprika or a few grains of cayenne and pour over the salad. Set on the ice until ready to serve.

Chestnuts combined with celery and a French dressing or a mixture of chestnuts, celery and apple covered with mayonnaise are other excellent salads.

NUT SANDWICHES.
When one has to make nut sandwiches often for the lunch basket it is easier and quite as cheap to buy some of the nut but for use in the market and keep a jar in stock. Here are directions for some sandwiches that are a little more elaborate:

PEANUT AND MAYONNAISE.
Chop or grind roasted peanuts into a fine paste; mix with mayonnaise and spread combined between thin slices of bread. Other ed peanuts ground to a paste, then mixed with sherry, old port or madeira; chopped hickory nuts or English walnuts moistened with sweet cream for a salad dressing; chopped walnuts or hickory nuts and raisins, pounded peanuts and olive oil; equal parts of finely chopped celery and walnut meats, mixed with minced olives and a little mayonnaise, or nut fillings and cheese.

CHESTNUT SANDWICHES.
These are made by boiling the nuts until tender, then chilling and pounding to a smooth paste; season with mayonnaise, adding a slight sprinkling of grated cheese.

CAKE FILLING OF NUTS.
There are several good cake fillings made of nuts; for instance this, with almonds as a foundation: To two cupsful of ground or chopped almonds allow two ounces of melted sweetened chocolate, two tablespoonfuls of cream and a quarter of a teaspoonful of butter.

NUT AND FIG FILLING.
Blanch one pound of almonds, seed one pound of raisins; add to them a half pound of citron and three-fourths of a pound of sugar. Chop them all together until fine and chopped almonds allow two ounces of melted sweetened chocolate, two tablespoonfuls of cream and a quarter of a teaspoonful of butter.

HICKORY NUT CAKE.
Of all the nut cakes there is none better than this old-fashioned one. Cream together one and a half cupsful fine granulated or pulverized sugar and a half cupful of butter. Add three-quarters of a cup of sweet milk, two and a half cups of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and one cupful of hickory nut meats dredged lightly with flour. Lastly, add a half teaspoonful of vanilla and fold in the whites of four eggs beaten to a stiff froth.

FOR CROW'S FEET

WALKING INTO BEAUTY AND HEALTH

writing continuously is much greater from the shoulder and elbow being thrust out of normal position so long, and the impeding of the circulation invites writer's cramp.

Bending at the desk also should be from the hips when necessary to lean over, and never from the waist. Nervous prostration and brain fog are wooed by every hour in which the body is allowed to slump into this vicious posture.

As the act of ascending stairs is commonly executed it is the most dreaded and most fatiguing thing that comes into the routine of many women's lives. But the evil effects are due, except in a small minority of cases, where there is serious internal weakness, entirely to the harm inflicted upon the lungs and in lesser degree upon the whole body by the bent posture of the body usually indulged in. If one walks up stairs with figure held erect, legs and joints flexible, lifting the body from step to step upon the balls of the feet, with breathing not forgotten, it will prove a healthful exercise. Not even children should be permitted to run up stairs, as it throws too much work upon the heart.

For those who lead sedentary lives no regime of physical exercises is complete which does not recognize the importance of walking.

Of the many who think they can walk the majority are victims of a hallucination believing that they know how when they are as ignorant of the art as the baby essaying its first toddle. There is a right and a wrong way of walking, and perverse humanity oftener selects the wrong way. No benefit is derived from a dawdling, dragging gait, both of which entail exhausting fatigue because the body is out of poise and its flesh and bone are carried as dead weight, the spine bearing most of the burden. This sort of walking would tire an athlete, but one cannot look about without seeing countless examples of it.

Upon rising to the feet the whole body should be thrown into a state of gentle tension, putting every muscle which harmonious movement employs into vigorous, responsive action. In this balanced position every part does its work without perceptible strain. The abdominal muscles should hold that restrictive part in comely restraint; the shoulder, hip and ankle joints should be upon a line, the chest held high and head erect, but not tipped back. Test the head position by holding a book on the crown. In this position the body acquires its greatest ease and every muscle performs a maximum of labor with a minimum expenditure of force. Walking encourages deep respiration, but the more one accustoms herself to conscious breathing the better. The more the lungs are inflated the greater is the buoyancy of the body. This increases the pleasure and lessens the exertion of walking. Take a free and firm, but light, stride, balancing the upper part of the body alternately upon each hip, but without swaying it perceptibly, avoiding the vulgar roll of the hips affected by some. The step should be adjusted to the height, a happy mean between a mincing tread and a manish stride, and giving the impetus forward with a slight spring from the ball of the foot. This enables one to take a longer step with ease and grace than the leg naturally could span, and is a convenient expedient when she must adjust her step to that of a taller person.

The leg should be held straight, but not stiff, as there is a slight resilience in the knee, and the ball of the foot and the heel touch the ground almost together, though the heel receives the slight impact.

With the light, springy step thus acquired nities are not counted as fatigue, but as an exhilaration. The harmonious play of the muscles imparts a grace and brightness that are felt mentally as well as physically, and produces a healthy glow, showing that the sluggish blood is stirred to action in the most torpid channels. This manner of walking strengthens the body, gives tone to the nerves and produces the healthful fatigue which encourages sound, restful sleep.

ments, and may necessitate the calling in of an architect.

The conservatory should be arranged so that it will have an outdoor entrance, as well as one from inside, and it should be built so that it can be taken down in sections in the spring and converted into a pleasant bower for summer evenings.

It is possible for one to draw up his own plans with a little study, and an intelligent carpenter can execute them satisfactorily. The upper sashes, and some of the lower ones, should swing on hinges or iron pivots, so they can be opened easily for ventilation. One of the greatest drawbacks to house conservatories is that they are not prepared to give ventilation to the plants. Plants will not thrive in such places. They require almost daily change of air, and this can be accomplished easily by opening one or two lower and upper sashes, causing the wind to blow through.

A small conservatory should have a small stove in it, and if the house is heated by steam or hot water pipes should be run through to provide heat in ordinary weather. A fire in the coal stove may be needed a number of times in winter when the thermometer drops below zero. A good deal will be saved in fuel for heating the conservatory if double sashes and sides are provided on all sections, leaving a small space of dry air between. Such a conservatory can be heated almost by the extra heat from the dining room.

The sides and roof of this glass house should be thoroughly covered with dark and light curtains, which will easily draw up and down by pulling a string. One can then graduate the light to suit the needs of the plants, and at night time if the two sets of shades are drawn they will go a long way toward saving coal bills. Some plants cannot live in a light conservatory unless they are protected by dark curtains; and, on the other hand, on cloudy days all the sunlight possible is needed. The cost for providing extra shades and perfect sash ventilation will hardly be noticed in the end.

Formerly it was believed that only a few plants would live in conservatories in the winter, but florists will tell you today that there is hardly a flowering plant that cannot be raised successfully in such surroundings. One may select handsome tropical plants and palms, the gorgeous palms and palmettos, or the strange orchids and air plants of the woods. They will thrive if properly attended to, while the rest of the space can be filled up with ordinary garden plants. Annuals and perennials should be raised, while stately plants like the palms, orange trees, cacti and orchids should be cultivated in pots for permanent use in winter and summer.

Nourishment is given to the conservatory plants in the form of specially prepared liquids sold by seedsmen and gardeners, but the best nourishment is given in the form of rich soil in the pot in the fall of the year. If this is in good condition it will support the plants through the winter. The question of moisture is also important. Plants drink through their leaves as much as they do through their roots, and in an air saturated with moisture they can live for weeks without any root watering. It is well, therefore, for the conservatory to be arranged so that a spray of water can be played over the plants every few days, saturating the atmosphere.

BY ELLA ADELA FLETCHER.
As soon as they return to town many women undo the good work which a summer of out-of-door life has accomplished. They permit the maelstrom of town interests to absorb them, making themselves slaves to shopping and to the dressmaker, and then bind themselves to an exacting round of social duties.

That there are fewer wrecks nowadays is due to the fact that women bring to this existence a higher average of health than the women of other days enjoyed. But it is an iniquitous use to put this blessing to. In most cities, with their parks and suburbs of easy access, there are favorable conditions for maintaining something of the healthful out-of-door life enjoyed in the country. To this the present generation largely owes its immunity from the fragility which was the handicap of our mothers.

The Busy Woman of Leisure.
The so-called woman of leisure works quite as hard in her efforts to keep up in the social race as her self-supporting sisters. In both cases overwork is a kind of "constructive suicide," but in one it is an ethical crime; in the other often a necessity. There is no excuse for the former, and probably half of the latter cases could be avoided if the manner of living and habits of work were more wisely ordered and conformed to hygienic laws. Except in rare instances it is not the amount of work done which breaks men and women down, but their manner of doing it.

A sedentary life, whether due to selfincreased tasks and engagements or to the restraints of business, is a menace to wealth, and some time during every 24 hours should be devoted to such exercise as will counteract the evils invited by physical inactivity. A certain measure of activity is necessary to stimulate the interaction of the processes upon which health depends—the assimilation of nutriment and the expulsion of morbid products. The interruption of this process, called methodism, is the first seed to illness, and a manner of life encouraging it weakens endurance and lessens the power to do good work.

Evils Due to Posture.
An accelerating cause of all breakdowns and impaired health is the vicious pose of the body habitually indulged in, whether sewing or reading, writing or studying at a desk or engaged in household occupations.

The fatigue of sewing is tribed when a woman sits with bent and lopped shoulders, curving the spine over from above the waist. The resulting cramped chest compels sluggish breathing and depresses all the vital organs in position as well as condition, forcing them from one to three inches below their normal position. A weak heart, from the pressure put upon it, and a dyspeptic stomach, half-developed lungs, sensitive to every atmospheric change; an enlarged, protruding abdomen, with torpid bowels—these are only some of the usual and perfectly natural results which every human being woos by indulging in this relaxed and stooping pose. The resulting weariness, which so quickly becomes pain, is nature's resolute and warning against the wrongdoing.

Gain in Power by an Erect Posture.
Twice the work can be accomplished with the minimum of fatigue if the body be held in harmonious poise in all the occupations of life, and all, whether sitting or walking, sweeping or washing, or even scrubbing, are performed with greater ease and comfort if attention be given to the body's correct posture. It is throwing of double work on some muscle usually in a strained attitude and leaving others in idleness or cramping them into inaction that causes the pain of back and limbs from which many suffer.

All bending of the body when leaning over work or sitting at a desk should come from the hips, not the waist. It is the curving of the spine and treating the waist as if there were a joint there which causes aching shoulders and backs when women ply their needles for hours.

The desk or table at which one writes should be just the height of the elbow when it hangs from the shoulder. Most desks are too high, a worse fault than to be too low, for the strain upon waist and forearm when Aesthetic Value Of A Home Conservatory.

Foliage and flowering plants in winter brighten the interior of the home and add to one's aesthetic pleasures in nearly the same degree and way as fine pictures and books. A well-stocked conservatory is an art gallery of nature's pictures, rich in colors and delicate shadings, with a harmonious blending of forms and curved lines. The daily association with flowers and foliage plants tends to form our ideals fully as much as the companionship of persons, books, statuary or paintings. The artist derives his notions of the ideal from nature, and plants, even when artificially cultivated and trained, contain the lines, colorings and forms of the wild woods and fields. Though reared in hot-house or garden, they retain their primitive characteristics, which are their choicest possessions.

The conservatory is found in the windows of the poorest in our cities, as well as in the homes of the wealthiest, but it is in the country homes that it should reach its highest development. Everything is favorable there for its efficient improvement. Space, plants and time to devote to their culture are within the reach of the owner of a country home. When autumn scars the flowers of the garden there are favorites which must be abandoned to the frost of lifted for indoor cultivation. No person living in the country has all the conservatory room to accommodate all the plants that are worth saving, but a few select ones can be saved.

The home-made conservatory should be planned architecturally so that it will prove a pleasant place for the plants in winter and at the same time and rather than detract from the beauty of the house. This requires a study of the house and its environ-

New Girdles And Buckles.

The influence of the Oriental revival is noticeable in this season's belts and clasps, and the combinations which are achieved with softly crushed folds of the gown material and rich Byzantine, Egyptian or Indian bars are decidedly chic.

Pretty novelties are of solid ropes or chains of dull silver, the ends finished with long tassels of the same material, these being slipped through a series of jeweled slides or a set of large clasps.

Gay colors seem to be by no means undesirable in this detail of feminine dress. For instance, a beautiful and costly piece of workmanship is presented in one of the new chain belts. This is supplied with four handsomely carved, dull silver slides, one placed at the back, a larger one at the front and two at the sides, each having cut upon its face a Roman medallion head. Three oxidized silver chains are slipped through these ornaments, and at regular intervals the plain heavy links are set with cabochon stones in green, blue and red.

Green is a favorite color for belt stones, possibly on account of its comparative Early. There is the emerald matrix, which gradually is replacing the overdone variety in blue, besides genuine jade. When either of these stones is surrounded by the wrong pattern in art nouveau metal the effect is exceedingly good. Some of the curious Byzantine buckles and clasps are heavily incrustated with brilliant pave stones in blue, green and red, the dark, almost black ground, with its lighter relief work, making an ideal setting for such gems.

Scarabaeae are coming to the front as ornaments, and one of the loveliest belts is of reddish Burmese gold, in the form of several clasps, fastened close together by means of golden links. On each of the divisions rests a good-sized scarab in a rare and curious shade of copper.

Bluish tinted scarabaeae, though much more common, are effective when mounted on oddly shaped pieces of silver, and especially when surrounded by a beading of tiny blue stones.

Single belt clasps are seldom seen, for it has become as much a fashion to wear a ornament at the back of the waist as at the front.

Usually, where there are two in the set, the front ornament is shaped in a peler, while the mate carries out the same design in a square or oblong slide. Silver gilt and steel, or dull gold and tiny rhinestones make a pretty combination for either a black silk girdle or one of white.

Postilion tabs, while still popular, are of a different shape from those worn last season. The new ones are cut to form a point in the center and are much longer and broader.

Elastic belts and girdles, though liked by Parisiennes, are worn with discretion by the American women, the reason being that wide cinchures have a tendency toward increasing the apparent size of the waist. Some modish and novel silk elastic girdles are formed of strips of narrow white elastic, which, starting at the back from under a long, curved slide, are drawn to a point in front, where they are held by a small, triangular clasp.

Another belt, measuring about two inches, and the same width all around, presents a curiously woven basket effect. This is secured by interlacing slides of silver, which are ornamented with oblong pieces of coral or jade, with half-inch wide white silk settings. The buckle—there is only one in this case—is a square metal one, with stone settings to match the slide.

A curious belt made of elastic measured four inches at the back, and from this point both edges formed wavelike lines, gradually coming together as they neared the front, where the inch-and-a-half band was fastened beneath a richly cut steel clasp. The edges of the elastic were studded with tiny steel paillettes, the effect being unique.

Many belts, made of folds of moire or peau de sole, are drawn through large crocheted rings, while three or four of them are used in lieu of a buckle. Coats require heavier and frequently broader belts than do gowns, but they also have a slight accentuation of the point in front. Leather belts are seen less than formerly. Those that are shown in the shops are broader in the back, narrowing at the front and fastening with a small harness buckle.

WESTERN BEES IN A SOUTHERN HIVE.

BY A. FARNSWORTH DREW. CHAPTER V.

Saturday came at last, and they were gathered within the hospitable folds of the rambling old house on the mountain. Katy was intently watching some repairs that were being made in the fireplace. When the work was all finished she got on her knees and peered anxiously up the wide chimney, for it was down this one that Santa Claus always came.

ing coffee—too restless to take a proper interest in the possum with which Jo appeared. Jo had cut a split in a branch, and in the split was secretly fastened the tail of Mr. Possum.

"He mighty good eatin'," explained Jo. The little prisoner looked at them so hopelessly that the B's declared that they wouldn't, for the world, eat a morsel.

Calling Rover, the three friends started up the mountain. While Betty romped with Katy and Rover, Bonnie ascended into the gorge. She turned over pebble after pebble. She broke, with a hammer brought hidden in a black shopping bag, piece after piece from the surrounding rocks. At last she scooped up from the bottom of the fissure, close to the water, a heap of black sand and filled the bag. In the rocks and pebbles could be found not a trace of the precious metal, but in the sand was the same elusive flicker she had seen in the stalactite, and her hopes were high.

"For de Lor's sake," said Venus, as they reappeared at the house, "what you got in dat bag, honey? Simmons, I reckon, and dat Jo 'clare dey wa'n't a simmon on the mountain."

"No, they ain't perardimons," replied Bonnie, hurrying up to their room, to put the bag away in the grip, before more questions could be asked.

"Well," said Venus, looking disgruntled after her, "she mighty capstious this mornin'."

A CORNER IN MAGIC.

The Magical Glass.

Take a thin and high-sounding cut glass tumbler, fill it nearly full of water, and place on its borders, after drying them well, a cross of equal branches cut from paper. Turn down at right angles the ends of the branches of the cross, in order to prevent it from slipping off. If you now cause the glass to vibrate by rubbing some part of its exterior surface with your wet finger, as if you were going to make it ring, you will perceive the glass to emit a sound; but, more than this, you will notice the following phenomenon: If your finger rubs the glass under one of the branches of the paper cross, the latter will remain stationary; but if you rub a part of the glass situated between the branches of the cross the cross will begin to turn slowly, and will not stop until the end of one of the branches arrives over the part rubbed by the finger.

To Suspend a Ring by a Burnt Thread. Soak the thread in salt, dry it, and tie it to a ring. If the thread is now burnt it will be found that the ashes of the thread will suspend the ring. A much will break the thread and allow the ring to drop on the floor.

The Incombustible Fire-rod. Wind a fine wire tightly round a smooth pebble and secure the end; then, if you expose it to the flame of a lamp or candle the thread will not burn; for the heat traverses the thread without remaining in it and attacks the stone. The same sort of trick may be performed with a poker, around which is evenly pasted a sheet of paper. You can poke the fire with it without burning the paper.

To Break a Pole Placed on Glasses. Take two tumblers of equal size, fill with water and place at such a distance from each other that the ends of a wooden rod may rest upon the edges of the tumblers, with another rod strike sharply the one suspended between the two glasses, just in the middle, and the wooden pole, if not very strong, will be broken, while the glasses remain unharmed.

The Melted Coin. Place the coin in half a walnut shell and fill the shell with a mixture of three parts of dry, powdered iron, one part of flour of sulphur and a little sawdust, well sifted. Light it, and when the mixture is melted it will be seen that the coin is also melted, the shell not having sustained any injury.

How to Melt Steel. Heat a piece of steel in the fire until it is red hot; then, holding it up with a pair of pliers or tongs, take in the other hand a stick of limestone and touch a piece of steel with it. Immediately after the contact you will see the steel melt and drop like a liquid.

The Tumbling Egg. Fill a quill with quicksilver, seal it at both ends, with good strong wax; then have an egg boiled; take a small piece of the shell off the small end and thrust in the quill with the quicksilver; lay the egg down, and it will not cease tumbling about as long as there is any heat in it. Or, if you put quicksilver into a small bladder, blow it out and then warm the bladder it will jump about as long as it remains warm.

A VESSEL THAT SKATES.

A most curious vessel has recently been invented in Austria. The designer claims that it can go over the water in the same manner as a skater and that it can easily sail around the world in eight days.

He does not explain how he succeeds in transforming seas and oceans into mirrors, for this he virtually does, since no portion of his vessel penetrates the water, nor what motive power he uses for the purpose of attaining such a great speed.

He insists, however, that the vessel can do all that he claims, and, though most of the European shipbuilders seem to think his invention of little value, a few scientists who have seen the model say that it works wonders in the water.

There was once a young fellow named Calkins Who bought him some loud plaided stawkins. They cost more, he said, Than black ones or red, But showed off so well in his walkin's!

would be easier." Bonnie's lips trembled pathetically. "Dear girls, I like you a great deal, and I am sure it will all come right with a little patience." "So dose I morn-tongue-can-tell." The bug that accompanied Katy's remark left no doubt of its sincerity.

OUR FORMER PRESIDENTS.

Presidents and former presidents are human, just like other persons, and there is no doubt that they "keep tabs" on each other out of the corners of their eyes. To begin with, George Washington, of course, had no predecessor in the presidential office, and so he became the first and only former president when he retired, in 1797, and as he died two years later, his successor, John Adams, was the sole former president when Thomas Jefferson came to the White House, in 1801.

The Duck That Didn't Know As Much As Its Parents Did.

BY GEORGE E. WALSH.

There was a little duck born on the coast of Labrador which didn't know as much as its parents did, but they could not convince it so. When it was a very young bird it flew away from the nest and got into trouble with a pair of Sand Pipers which were teaching their young nestling how to swallow a worm at one gulp. They supposed the little duckling was a fishhook or a ravenous owl, and they fluttered with excitement. When they discovered that it was only a duckling they pounced upon it to teach it better manners.

Another time the young duck, which thought it knew it all, tried to fly across a stream of water that was too wide for its young wings. Its parents had warned it not to try such a venture, and when half way over it began to wish it had minded its parents' command, for when it tried to fly home again the wind blew it back twice as far as it advanced. It tried to rise in the air and shoot downward against the wind, but it again lost ground. Slowly and surely it was being blown out to sea. Then it began to cry, calling for the other birds to come to its rescue, but the wind carried its voice in the opposite direction.

and injured its head. The bill was broken and the body badly bruised. Otherwise the young duck was not severely injured. But it was a prisoner, and for two years it was kept, with clipped wings, as a pet on the beach. When the wings had grown out again it one day flew away. Then it was so much wiser and more patient that its own parents did not recognize it as their offspring, and the duck had to find a mate who would respect and love it, to keep from getting sad and lonely.

How To Draw An Oval.

Of course, you all know how to make a circle. That's easy, and there are numberless ways of doing it—with a pair of compasses, or a string, or a piece of paper with two holes punched in at the requisite distance apart, or in any other way that fancy may suggest. But how many of you know how to draw a perfect oval? That's a very different matter. It does not require any elaborate instruments to do it, however, and if you will follow the directions given below you will find yourself able to do it without any difficulty.
