TRAVELING MEN DIDN'T KNOW WHAT HAD HAPPENED

FAIR RUNNING MERRILY

Sales Are Excellent and Total Receipts Are Increasing Steadily—Visitors From Dallas and Denton Are Expected to Be Present This Evening

Ten tired traveling men tell a strange tale of a touching trip they had last night. "We were standing in front of the Worth," said one, "and we weren't doing a thing, but talking," chimed in the second.

There were at least 10 or a dozen traveling men in front of the Worth last evening when the patrol wagon dashed up and before the salesmen knew whether it was an ambulance call or just a plain drunk, all were bundled inside and hauled quickly to the Elks' fair in progress at Ellis' hall.

LITTLE OF INTEREST IN VARIOUS COURTS

Judge Meek convened the United States district court this morning, but there being no cases ready for immediate trial, he adjourned the court until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

There was nothing of general public interest in either of the district courts, the county court holding the crowd about the courthouse.

The marriage license business is looking up—getting a holiday movement.

The tax suit department of the county attorney's office, in charge of Attorney Browning, has the delinquent list ready, and the copy is now in the hands of The Telegram machine operators, and will appear as a supplement to this paper in a few days.

The county court made a record for quick work today. A "con" man named Gray was captured by the city officials, taken to the county officials, demanded a trial, got it and was fined $250 and sentenced to one year in jail.

Court House Notes

In the court notes Wednesday afternoon the report was made to read "Belcher Land Mortgage company vs. Arch Moore et al, debt and foreclosure." It should have read "Belcher Land Mortgage company vs. Arch Norris, et al." Mr. Moore objects to being connected with the case, "because," he said, "I'm the biggest job printer in town."

The new office forces so far are handling the affairs of their respective positions like veterans in the work. Examinations for teachers' certificates are being conducted in Superintendent Moore's office today. These examinations will be continued until tomorrow.

Neither of the district courts were in session this morning. The jury in the Seventeenth district court yesterday afternoon found for the plaintiff in the case of M. C. Bowles vs. Helen Males, awarding the property in controversy and some money consideration. The county court is holding the more generally important sessions. Minor criminal offenses are being tried.

New Suits Filed Anna Haley vs. W. L. Haley, divorce. Agnes Bruner vs. E. A. Fletcher Copp, damages.

Marriage Licenses R. M. Jackson and Miss Blanche Collins. J. N. Board and Miss Beatrice Brimlage. S. E. Keener and Miss Ada Matthews. W. C. Weathering and Miss Nora Griffith. J. F. Carter and Miss Mary Francis Hicks.

DIES AT KELLER

J. H. Prewett Succumbed to an Attack of Pneumonia J. H. Prewett aged about 45, died at his home at Keller last night. He had been ill some time from an attack of pneumonia. Deceased was a brother of Attorney Charles T. Prewett of this city, was a merchant at Keller, and was slated for a position under County Clerk R. L. Rogers. He leaves a family.

Charles T. Prewett went out to Keller last night, and County Clerk Rogers and other friends went out today.

PRESIDENT IS ALARMED

IS BACKING DOWN IN HIS SOUTHERN POLICY

WILL LAY IT ON CONGRESS

The Stir in the South That the Publication of His Intentions Brought on Has Caused Him to Abandon His Method of Procedure, With the Same End in View

(Telegram Special Service.) WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Alarmed by the amount of sentiment aroused by the announcement that President Roosevelt would sanction the movement to cut down the South's representation in congress, Postmaster General Payne is again attempting to offer explanations of the president's attitude. It will be remembered that the day after the announcement of Roosevelt's intentions appeared in The Post, Mr. Payne said there was "no authority for the use of the president's name" in connection with the reduction in representation plan. He did not, however, deny that the president was really in favor of the plan. The publication of the facts in the case created a stir in the South, especially in view of the subsequent announcement that Representative Crumpacker and other advocates of the plan would hold a conference as soon as possible after the convening of congress for the purpose of outlining a campaign for the winter.

Mr. Payne has evidently had his ear to the ground, as it were, and is therefore in a position to know something of the manner in which the announcement of the administration's intention has been received. His latest announcement is that the president had no intention of calling upon congress for legislation reducing the South's representation in the house.

Expects Congress to Do It

The tone used left the impression that Roosevelt expected the Republicans in congress to take the action in question without any prompting from him, and in well informed quarters there is little or no doubt that the matter will be brought up as soon as possible after the beginning of the short session. The postmaster general made no secret of the intention of the administration to attempt to reduce the representation of Southern Republicans in the National congress: "I have no doubt that the next congress will seriously consider this matter," said he. "The whole question will hinge on this: There are 120 votes in the Republican National convention from states in the South which do not poll as many Republican votes as are cast in the single state of Minnesota. Minnesota has only 20 delegates in the convention. I do not think this is fair, and I believe there ought to be a change so as to regulate the matter as it is regulated in the local conventions of all the states where the number of the votes cast is made the basis of representation. There could be no valid objection to the states themselves establishing the precedent. I hope to see some action in 1904."
