SHOWS LIFE IN BRAZIL

Given in Memory of the Arbitration Between France and Brazil—King Edward Will View it in Private Exhibition and Then it Will Be Sent to Emperor William

BY PAUL LAMBETH

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(Special Cable to The Fort Worth Telegram.)—The current negotiations for the settlement of the Venezuelan difficulty by arbitration leads additional interest to an international arbitration object lesson which will shortly be brought to the notice of both Emperor William of Germany and King Edward.

On the base of the casting is a medallion portrait of the recipient of the center-piece—Baron Rio Branco, Brazilian representative in the arbitration. The decorations are of plant and animal life. Surrounded by water, in which the Victoria Regia lily of the country is prominent, are panels showing the council chamber of Berné, a chart of the disputed territory and inscriptions. The central group illustrates the aboriginal life of Brazil.

THE QUEEN HAS MADE DAIRIES

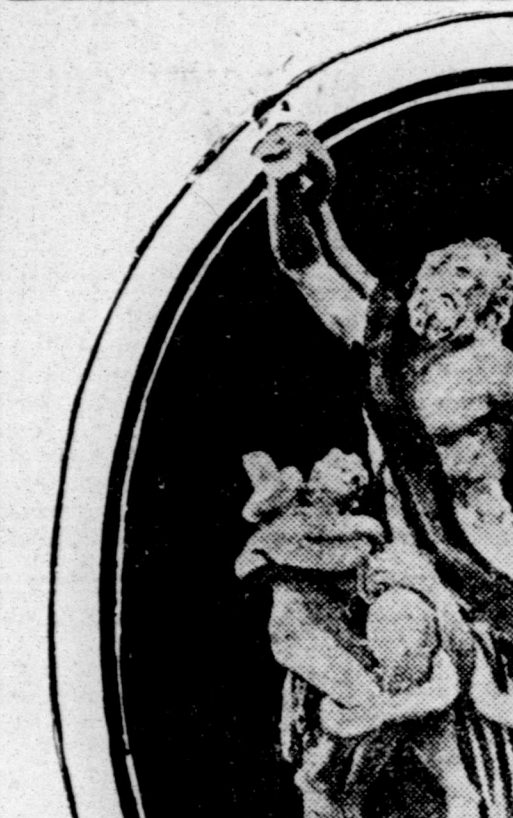

LONDON, Jan. 17.—(Special Cable to The Fort Worth Telegram.)—Queen Alexandra is giving a great deal of attention this winter to her model dairies at Windsor and Sandringham—a pursuit of which she is as fond as was Queen Victoria.

On one of the walls, in a niche built for it, is a bust of Queen Victoria. In all other respects the dairy is eminently practical in all its appointments. It is constantly visited by English farmers, who never fail to declare it above criticism. This is one thing which makes the king and queen so popular with the English people.

THE POPULARITY OF KING EDWARD

REMARKABLE CHANGE IN SENTIMENT TOWARD HIM FORMERLY WAS DISLIKED

People Began Thinking Better of Him When He Nearly Died From Fever Years Ago, and His Conduct at Mordant Divorce Case Strengthened His Hold on Popular Affection

BY PAUL BLOUET

PARIS, Jan. 17.—It is strange to reflect to what relatively insignificant incidents sovereigns may owe their great popularity. Up to about thirty years ago King Edward, then prince of Wales, was anything but a favorite among the people of England.

Then he had an attack of typhoid fever and got so near death that people began to realize what a loss they were threatened with. The consequence was that his recovery was the signal for an outburst not only of national rejoicings, but also of great sympathy for the future king of England.

Then came the famous mordant divorce case. The prince of Wales was one of the correspondents. Nobody imagined for a moment that he would appear at the trial, for no member of the royal family can be compelled to appear in the witness box.

But he did turn up, and of his own free will asked to be examined and cross-examined; and then there, in the presence of a judge, of a jury and of an astonished crowd, he swore that the lady was innocent and that his relations with her had always been of the most platonic and proper character.

BUSY SESSION OF THE COUNCIL

MANY MATTERS DISPOSED OF AT FRIDAY EVENING'S MEETING

Council Decides to Fight the Bond Cases to a Finish and to Protect the City Against Higher Taxation if Possible—Resolution to Sell the Water-works

- Instructed the city attorney to file an appeal bond to fight the federal court decision in the bond case. Resolved to ask the legislature to change the charter so as to make sale of the city water works possible.

The foregoing were the most striking moves made by the city council at its regular session Friday evening. The meeting opened with a recommendation that the city marshal be allowed a warrant for $100 to spend in charitable work.

The street and alley committee reported interviewing the Northern Texas Traction company about the latter's switch under the front street viaduct.

The Gas Ordinances. The two oil and gas ordinances, granting right to bore for oil and gas and to pipe same, selling all products, etc., for a period of fifty years, were received and filed.

Huff Damage Suit. City Attorney Orrick reported the city's victory in the Huff damage suit, and expressed gratification at the result for two reasons.

Herbert Bond Suit. Mr. Orrick's report about the Herbert bond case and the decision of the court awarding the plaintiff $108.09, reviewing the case and the points on which the judge gave his decision.

Henderson's Position. On presentation of Mr. Moreland's motion, Alderman Henderson said that he was opposed to further delaying payment. He did not believe the city ought to continue piling up costs.

Replying to Mr. Henderson, Alderman Moreland said he believed the city ought to fight as long as it had a fighting chance. "Even if we have to go to the rack and be crucified, let us be crucified according to law," he urged.

Moreland's Resolution. Alderman Moreland introduced a resolution asking that the city's representatives in the legislature be asked to take such measure as would protect the city against an increase in taxation.

The resolution brought an inquiry from Alderman Henderson as just what its purpose might be, and Mr. Moreland replied that it was to protect, if possible, the city from a tax levy exceeding $1.75. It was evident, he said, that the bondholders against the city would take some action to force collection of the money due them and he believed the city ought to be protected against further taxation.

of securing an amicable settlement from the bondholders. Alderman Henderson said he didn't like the idea of a city of the size of Fort Worth, virtually saying "I can't." The word "can't" should not be included in the vocabulary of this city," said Mr. Henderson.

Water Works Resolution. A resolution asking that the city charter be amended so as to make sale of the water works possible, provided it be approved by popular vote, was passed.

To Pay Interest. A resolution to pay as much money as possible towards clearing the city of the debt of $101,980 due bondholders, providing the latter would withdraw their suit against the city and accept payment of the face of the coupons as total discharge of obligations, was presented and adopted.

Protect Property Owners. An ordinance drafted to protect property owners on Houston street, from Tenth to Front; providing that, in case any street car company be ever granted the right to operate a line over that much of the street, it be compelled to remunerate the property owners for a sum equal to what it would have cost the company to pave at the time the street was made.

Franchise Granted. The franchise asked by the Traders' Investment company, per G. W. Armstrong, granting permission to erect an electric light and power plant and all wires, etc., required, and to operate same for a period of twenty-five years, was granted.

The company has to file acceptance of the ordinance within thirty days, must have plant in operation within six months, and must pay the city 2 per cent of gross earnings for the first ten years and 3 per cent for the next fifteen.

A petition from the Traders Investment company for permission to lay steam pipes from the Natatorium to the Delaware hotel, was granted, the company agreeing to pay the city 10 per cent of its gross annual earnings and to replace the street in proper condition.

Mr. Moreland suggested that the lights were being operated according to moonlight schedule, and that these dark evenings it was annoying to have to wait sometimes several hours for the lights to be turned on.

Alderman Lehane promised to see that the matter would be attended to Saturday.

Alderman Lehane closed the business of the evening by expressing gratification at the recent meeting of the Board of Trade, and its interest in the city's improvements.

AN OBJECT LESSON

In a Restaurant. A physician puts the query: Have you never noticed in any large restaurant at lunch or dinner time the large number of hearty, vigorous old men at the tables; men whose ages run from 60 to 80 years; many of them bald and all perhaps gray, but none of them feeble or senile?

Perhaps the spectacle is so common as to have escaped your observation or comment, but nevertheless it is an object lesson which means something.

If you will notice what these hearty old fellows are eating you will observe that they are not munching bran crackers nor gingerly picking their way through a menu card of new fangled health foods.

The point of all this is that a vigorous old age depends upon good digestion and plenty of wholesome food and not upon dieting and an endeavor to live upon bran crackers.

There is a certain class of food cranks who seem to believe that meat, coffee and many other good things are rank poisons, but these cadaverous looking individuals are a walking condemnation of their own theories.

MAYORS REPORT TO THE COUNCIL

REDUCTION OF CITY'S INDEBTEDNESS SHOWN BY FIGURES

Decrease in Interest on the Debt Amounting to $11,200 Per Year. Nearly a Half Million Bonded Debt Refunded—The City's Valuation Increasing

Appended to the report of ex-City Attorney W. D. Williams regarding the results of his trip to interview bondholders of the city's bonds, which was presented to the city council Friday evening, was a brief report by Mayor Powell.

To the Honorable City Council of the City of Fort Worth—Gentlemen: I herewith submit the report of Attorney W. D. Williams of his trip to New York to consult the representatives of the city's bonded debt.

These statements show that $416,000 of the bonded debt has been refunded at a lower rate of interest and that the said debt has been reduced $71,000.

On said first day of April, 1900, the fixed charges per year on said debt were $148,680. The fixed charges per year at present are $137,480, showing a decrease in fixed charges on said debt of $11,200 per year.

Table with 2 columns: Bond series/dates, Amount. Total $416,000.

Sheep In a Drought. The artificial feeding of sheep in an Australian drought, according to the Country Gentleman, has almost assumed the dignity of a fine art. In many a squatter's run the stock are dependent on what is given them, and the most approved ration appears to be half a pound of wheat and half a pound of hay per day, fed in the forenoon if possible, with a little cut scrub in the afternoon for them to munch over.

CLOSE OF THE POULTRY SHOW

FIFTH ANNUAL EXHIBIT AMONG BEST HELD IN STATE

Quality of Stock Above the Average. Strong Competition in Barred Plymouth Rocks, White Leghorns and Blue Andalusians—Some Large Transactions—Individual Birds Are Sold at Fancy Prices—The Awards

In many respects the fifth annual exhibition of the Fort Worth Poultry and Pet Stock Association, which closed last evening, was one of the most representative shows ever held in the state.

An extra exhibit which has attracted considerable attention is a pen of Abyssinian cavies entered by P. W. Hunt of Fort Worth.

The attendance at the show was kept down by the unfavorable weather of the past week, but professionally it was a most creditable exhibit.

The strongest competition was in barred Plymouth Rocks and White Leghorns. In numbers and ratings these fowls ranked better than at any show ever held in this city.

SAN ANGELO WAKES UP FROM ITS LETHARGY

SAN ANGELO, Tex., Jan. 17.—The business men and citizens generally of San Angelo, Tex., were stirred up last week to the extent that they put on their hustling clothes and are hustling livelier than they have in a long, long time.

They were confronted with the question as to whether San Angelo should make an effort to regain its old-time prestige as a cattle shipping point or lose the important patronage of the large number of cattlemen in the surrounding country.

The Frisco road had opened up a trail with holdover pastures leading from Brownwood down into the Sonora country and last year cattlemen who had formerly shipped from San Angelo drove their herds to Brownwood and Brady for shipment.

Naturally a great deal of business went to the latter towns from territory that

San Angelo once claimed entirely for its own. The country is so obstructed by fences that it has been almost impossible for a stockman from the lower country to reach San Angelo with a bunch of cattle or sheep.

On last Wednesday night the representative citizens of San Angelo "got together" and at the conclusion of the meeting it was virtually agreed to give the women anything they wanted in the way of accommodations.

Trails will be opened into the surrounding country and holdover pastures established at distances of a day's drive. Pastures near the town will also be leased and better shipping facilities provided.

After the matter of opening trails was disposed of, the business men were feeling so exuberated over the future prospects of the town that they organized a commercial club.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL. Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty. Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose. Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system. Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables. Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic. It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh. All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey. The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit. A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

The World of Today is a work that has no conflict with any other periodical or publication. Its plan is unique, its scope World wide and its value inestimable. The Telegram makes it possible for you to get this work by paying a small sum each month on delivery of the publication.

THE WORLD TODAY

By a special arrangement with the publishers The Telegram can offer this superb work, a regular monthly publication full of up-to-date matter by the world's best writers for a very low price. Drop The Telegram a card or send a telephone message and a representative of the paper will call and explain the proposition

GREATEST OF ALL OF THE PUBLICATIONS OF TODAY

Are you abreast of the World's Marvelous Progress in Science, Art, Industry, Literature and other fields of Human Knowledge and Activity? If not, let The Telegram solve the problem for you by putting in your hand at half the regular subscription price of $3.00 a year, a Great and Comprehensive Cyclopaedic Magazine.

We are living in the most wonderful era of the world's history. Scientific discoveries of the utmost importance and widest significance are of almost daily occurrence. Hard on their heels follow mechanical inventions that will revolutionize some department of human activity.

The Telegram now offers to its readers such a Monthly Cyclopaedic Magazine, containing the latest information on History, Science, Philosophy, Literature, Education, Politics, Industry, Religion, Legislation, Art, etc., in fact the work covers the whole range of human knowledge.

Prepared by a national staff of contributors, and fully illustrated.

The name of this publication is the World Today. Our arrangement with the publishers is such that we can offer it to subscribers of The Telegram at a cost of less than half the publisher's price. It is issued monthly and the twelve parts will comprise 1,600 pages and more than 2,000 illustrations making a complete current cyclopaedic record of the world's progress, with all of its varied information, almost instantly accessible.

It is a Unique Literary Undertaking.

The World Today is a treasure of information, Political, Statistical, Biographical, Scientific, Literary,

Religious and Educational

It is a Unique Literary Undertaking in that it combines the features of a periodical and a reference work. The task of reading all the leading publications of the world, that is admittedly too great for any one man, is undertaken by the staff of editors and contributors. It is their aim and endeavor to cull the valuable and omit the unimportant; in all cases seeking the original sources for verification of facts and figures to insure absolute reliability. Articles are written in a bright, attractive style. Dry technical terms and subjects lacking in common interest are avoided. The aim is not only to instruct but to entertain.

PLAN OF THE WORK.

The World Today comprises twelve numbers each year. Each issue is complete in itself, with the subjects arranged alphabetically from A to Z. A cumulative index is published in each issue and a general index at the close of each volume. The purpose is not only to make the work a storehouse of facts, but to make it a convenient reference book by the alphabetical arrangement of subjects and by the use of indexes and cross-references. Thus the reader may easily find the information for which he is looking.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

A feature of The World Today is its large and beautiful illustrations. Appreciating the educational value of pictures, special attention is given to the reproduction of photographs of notable events at home and abroad, prominent people, works of art, new inventions, famous scenes, etc. It is in fact a mirror of the life of the world in all of its different phases. Six numbers comprise a volume, making two volumes each year.

THE Mississippi Bubble

A NOVEL BY EMERSON HOUGH.

(Copyright, 1902, by the Bowen-Merrill Company.)

Synopsis

John Law, an adventurer and financier of Louis XIV's reign, and his brother are attacked by English robbers and are rescued on the road by Lady Catharine Knollys, a famous beauty, and Mary Conynge, Law and Lady Catharine are mutually infatuated, while Mary Conynge admires Law without response. Law rises a prominent part in English finances and again encounters Lady Catharine, who is condemned to die, escapes through the aid, unknown to him of Lady Catharine. She goes to the prison and is attended to encounter Law and Mary as they depart together. Law and Mary go to America at the head of an expedition to the Mississippi valley, under the guidance of Du Mesne. Mary discloses to him her jealousy of Lady Catharine. Law is visited by Sir Arthur Pembroke to arrange his friend, Mary Conynge at her own learning how Law was deceived by the party are captured by the Indians and are taken to the great demand to death and Mary is consigned to cast lots. The lot falls to Law in a canoe. The others are rescued by a peace embassy from Quebec. Mary Conynge finds a new lover and sails with him for France, where Law and the two others arrive at the time of Louis XIV's death. Law and Kitty then agree that the latter shall care for Law's child and Law, the regent, permits Law to establish a bank.

CHAPTER VII
The Miracle Unwrought

"You do not know my brother, Lady Catharine."

This spoke Will Law, who had been admitted but a half hour since at the great door of the private hotel where dwelt the Lady Catharine Knollys.

"Would seem, then, 'tis by no fault of his," replied Lady Catharine, hotly.

"And is that not well? There are many in Paris who would fain change places with you, Lady Catharine."

"Would heaven they might!" exclaimed she. "Would that my various friends, or the prefect of police, or heaven knows who that may have parliament tomorrow if he chose. My brother can do all things—except to win from you, Lady Catharine, one word of kindness, of respect. Now, then, he has come to the end. He told me to say to you that 'tis is the last time he will importune the last time that he will implore. Oh, Lady Catharine! Once before I carried to you a message from John Law—from John Law, not in distress then more than he is now, even in this hour of his success."

Lady Catharine paled as she sank back into her seat. Her white hand caught at the lace at her throat. Her eyes grew dark in their emotion.

"Yes, madam," went on Will Law, tears shining in his own eyes, "twas I, an unfaithful messenger, who, by an error, wrought ruin for my brother and for yourself, even as I did for myself. Madam, hear me! I would be a better messenger today."

Lady Catharine sat still silent, her bosom heaving, her eyes gone wide and straining.

"I have seen my brother weep," said Will, going on impulsively. "I have seen him walk the floor at night, have heard him cry out to himself. They call him crazed. Indeed he is crazed. Yet 'tis for one word from you."

"Sir," said Lady Catharine, struggling to gain self-control, and in spite of herself softened, by this appeal, "you speak well."

"If I do, 'tis but because I am the mouthpiece of a man who all his life has sought to speak the truth; who has sought—yes, I say to you even now, Lady Catharine—who has sought always to live the truth. This I say in spite of all that we both know."

There came no reply from the woman, who sat still looking at him, not yet moved by the voice of the proxy as she might then have been by the voice of that proxy's principal. Vehemently the young man, ordinarily so timid and diffident, approached her.

"Look you!" exclaimed he. "If my brother said he could lay France at your feet, by heaven! he can well-nigh do so now. See! Here are some of the properties he has lately purchased in the realm of France. The Marquis sat d'Elbat—'tis worth eight hundred thousand livres; the estate of Riviere—worth nine hundred thousand livres; the estate of Roissy—worth six hundred and fifty thousand livres; the estates of Gerenville, of Fontaine, of Yville, of Gerponville, of Tancerville, of Guermande—the tale runs near a score! Later my brother has purchased the Hotel Mazarin, and the property at Rue Vivienne, paying for them one million two hundred thousand livres. He has other city properties, houses in Paris, estate here and there, running not into the hundreds of thousands, but into the millions of livres in actual value. Among these are some of the estates of the greatest nobles of France. Their value is more than any man can compute. Is this not something? Moreover, there goes with it all the dignity of the most stupendous personal success ever made by a single man since the world began. 'Tis all yours, Lady Catharine. And unless you share it, it has no value to my brother. I know myself that he will fling it all away, calling it worthless, since he can not have that greatest fortune which he craves!"

"Sirrah, I have entertained much speech of both yourself and your brother, because I would not seem ungracious nor forgetful. Yet this paying of court by means of figures, by virtue of lists of estates—do you not know how ineffectual this must seem?"

"If you could but understand!" cried Will. "If you could but believe that there is none on earth values these less than my brother. Under all this he has yet greater dreams. His ambition is to awaken an old world and to build a new one. By heaven! Lady Catharine, I am asked to speak for my brother, and so I shall! These are his ambitions. First of all, America, 'Tis a people for America—a people who may hope! Oh, I admit all the folly of his life. He played deep, yet 'twas but to forget you. He drank, but 'twas to forget you. Foolish he was, as are all men. Now he succeeds, and finds he can not forget you. I have told you his ambitions, madam, and though others may never know nor acknowledge them, you, at least must do so. And I beg you to remember, madam, that of all his ambitions, 'twas you, Lady Catharine, your favor, your kindness, your mercy, that made Lis first and chief desire."

"As for that," said the woman, somewhat scornfully, "if you please, I had rather I received my protestations direct, and your brother knows I forbid him further protestations. He has, it is true, raised some considerable noise by way of enterprises. That I might know, even did I not see this horde of dukes and duchesses and princes of the blood, clamoring for the recognition of even his remotest friends. I know, too, that he is accepted as a hero by the people."

"And well he may be. Coachmen and valets have liveries of their own these days. Servants now eat from plate and clerks have their own coaches. Paris is packed with people, and look you, they are people no longer clamoring for bread. Who has done this? Why, my brother, John Law of Lauriston, Lady Catharine, who loves you, and loves you dearly."

The old wrinkle of perplexity gathered between the brows of the woman before him. Her face was clouded, the changeful eyes now deep covered by their lids.

Lacking the precise word for that crucial moment, Will Law broke fur-

Late Odd Styles in Mid-Winter Millinery

Hat of Brown and Ecru

Touque of Pearl Gray Beaver

Mink and Lamb Turban

Round Cloth Hat

White French Felt

IN midwinter every woman, young and old, requires a new hat, and sometimes several, and the milliners always provide for their head dressings early in January. Not only have the shapes and styles changed a little with the incoming year, but those hats which were purchased early in the season, if they have been worn much, are ready to be cast aside. Well off the face are most of the hats that milliners show to attract feminine taste, and whether the hat be large or small no veil is worn with it. This seems to be one of the strongest dictates of Dame Fashion, that stray locks must be kept in place with delicate pins instead of a webby face coverlet. Among the prettiest hats that have been put forth to tempt young women is one that is considered by you to be on the left side of the hat. The trim is brown, and alternating with the dark cloth that covers the crown and the crown is an ecru silk. The trimming is all on the under side of the rim, knot of which is looped over the rim for that a soft fringe of hair is not and can be simply and delicately tucked on the right side and then is tucked away when the hair begins. Of light brown camel's hair, mixed with ivory white silk, a jaunty round turban is made. In the crown alternate the cloth and the silk, and of the same combination the crown is made. A pheasant's breast of brown and yellow, delicately flecked with scarlet, is placed on the left side toward the back of the hat. All white is a dainty afternoon hat that is as simple in its trimming as it is lovely. The hat is of fine French felt, and the broad brim rolls well away from the face. Upon this is rich Russian lace and a scarf of the same fabric from the back and away down on to the hair.

Entirely of deep, dark sable is a becoming touque formed. It sets a little off from the brow, that the hair may be seen, and is of such shape that it covers well the whole head, coming down over the low coiffure. With a single fancy feather, brown in tone, this turban is decked, the feather being held in place with a handsome cabochon.

To the land of the czar the milliners went for a model for a round, perfectly round, turban.

Beatrice Fairfax Says

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am just 18 and entangled in a web of love. I know of two young men who are in love with me. One of them is at present out of the city, but has written to me regularly since he left town. His letters express his sincere affection for me. The other gentleman does not know of the existence of a rival, and visits me regularly, but not too frequently. I believe he is also sincere in his affections. Kindly advise me what I should do, as I do not care to refuse either one's attentions.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am 18 years old and am greatly in love with a young man two years older. I hear from others that he loves me dearly, but is afraid to show his love for me because his parents are against his going with me. Will you kindly advise me what to do? - C. H. M. S.

I would advise you to get out of your tangled web of love as quickly as possible and make up your mind which one you like, and let the other go. Between the two you may fall to the ground and find yourself without any lover. You can not be very much in love with either since you are so undecided.

There is nothing that you can do. The young man's regard for his parents' wishes is stronger than his love for you. He is not much of a man when he goes about prating of his love for you, but acknowledging that he dare not tell you of it. I would not worry over him.

SIMPLE HOME CURES.

Vegetables and fruits are often useful in other ways than that of food, in simple home remedies they each play a part, and many cures have been effected in serious diseases by their use. For instance: Cranberries are used internally and externally in cases of erysipelas. Pure lemon juice is a capital remedy for biliousness and bilious headaches. To relieve carache in children bind on a small bag of hops, moistened with boiling water, and keep it warm. Apples are good for those disposed to gout and sluggish liver, and for those who follow a sedentary life. The pineapple is a fruit most valuable in throat affections. Indeed, it has saved many a life of diphtheritic patients. The juice squeezed from a ripe pineapple is the finest thing in the world for cutting the fungus-like membrane which coats the throat in diphtheria, and if used in time never fails to cure.

MARROW BEEF BONES.

For a formal luncheon a dainty dish is marrow rings. This should be served as an entree, and besides being a delicacy the dish may be made a very attractive one to look upon. It is not difficult to make, but like all dainties it has to be prepared with care and patience. Have the marrow bone of beef sawed in rings about an inch deep. Cut some slices of bread in round shapes, first cutting off all the crust. Butter the slices on each side and lay them in a roasting pan. Put a marrow ring in the middle of each slice of bread and sprinkle the marrow with a little salt and pepper, red pepper preferred. Stand the pan in a moderate oven and let the marrow roast with the bread until they are a light brown. Remove the pan from the oven then with a flat cake turner lift each slice separately and lay on a hot platter. Put a white paper fringe about each marrow ring and serve with marrow forks.

Young Matrons Goton

FOR a young matron a charming gown is of light gray crepe de chine over white silk. The skirt is trimmed with lace medallions of gray lace, and the white under-neath is dimly seen. The skirt is un-trimmed, save for the medallions, but the waist is made entirely of the lace. White chiffon is filled in for a vest and the same soft material makes the undersleeves. The upper ones are of the lace and end full and flowing at the elbow. A big black velvet hat goes with this costume. It has a long waving plume about the crown.

Talks With Beauty Seekers

BY LOUISE CHAPELLE.
Dear Miss Chapelle: I have a slight growth of hair on the face which would not be noticed if it were not so dark. Can you give me a recipe for a solution that would bleach it and not injure the skin. Thanking you, I remain yours truly. AUBURNDALE.
Touch the annoying growth with peroxide. Put a little in a saucer and add one-third water to it. Then apply it with a tooth brush and the hairs will be lightened in color.
Dear Miss Chapelle: I am a young girl and I have blonde hair. At first my hair was very light, but now it is becoming very dark. Could you give me a remedy so as to keep it light. Yours very truly, ALICE.
The best thing to do is to wash it frequently and your hair may only look dark on account of the heavy atmosphere. If it is really growing darker I would not bleach it if I were you, for when one feature changes so do others to harmonize with it. Try shampooing your hair every ten days, or even once a week and see if it is not because of the coal smoke in the air that it looks darker than formerly.

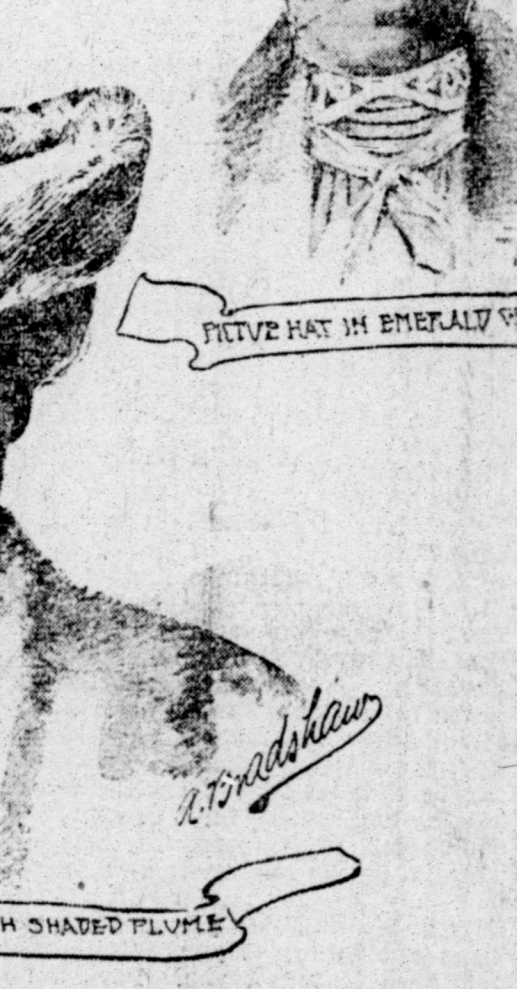

Artful Aids for the Beauty's Mid-Winter Bonnets

As the lengthened days come on in which cold is supposed to strengthen, earning fur touches adorn pretty heads for walking, driving and visiting. While the fastidious woman, who pays decided attention to detail, has her fur hat match that of her stole, boa or wrap, yet every woman does not think this is necessary. Often a muff is added to carry out the general effect, or the fur toque may be worn to harmonize with the color of the walking or visiting costume.

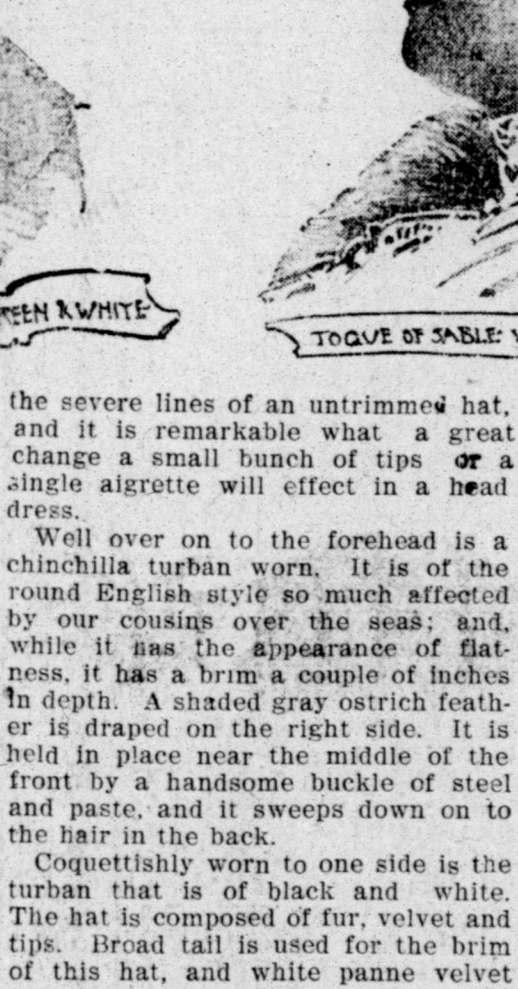

There are few women today so daring that they rely entirely upon the touque for beauty. While the trimming is simple, yet it is there. It may only be a small knot of gray colored velvet, a perky, straight quill, or a long, waving plume, but trimming of some sort is sure to be on every touque. Few women are sufficiently lovely to stand the severe lines of an untrimmed hat, and it is remarkable what a great change a small bunch of tips or a single aigrette will effect in a head dress.

Well over on to the forehead is a chinchilla turban worn. It is of the round English style so much affected by our cousins over the seas; and, while it has the appearance of flatness, it has a brim a couple of inches in depth. A shaded gray ostrich feather is draped on the right side. It is held in place near the middle of the front by a handsome buckle of steel and paste, and it sweeps down on to the hair in the back. Coquettishly worn to one side is the turban that is of black and white. The hat is composed of fur, velvet and tips. Broad tails is used for the brim of this hat, and white panne velvet helps to make the folds while as many tips of one color as the other curl gently over the right ear of the pretty wearer.

Entirely of deep, dark sable is a becoming touque formed. It sets a little off from the brow, that the hair may be seen, and is of such shape that it covers well the whole head, coming down over the low coiffure. With a single fancy feather, brown in tone, this turban is decked, the feather being held in place with a handsome cabochon.

To the land of the czar the milliners went for a model for a round, perfectly round, turban.

Summer Fabrics.

JACK FROST still holds high carnival. The kindly atmosphere of dear old Santa Claus lingers in the air. One might naturally conclude that summer was a thing of the far future. But in the boldest, most unexpected way she thrust her lovely self upon us, and the shop windows are full of her glories. Side by side with heavy furs she flaunts her beautiful wares. Never have such bewitching combinations of color and fabric been seen. There is a wonderful material called cotton gloria that fully justifies its name. A beautiful combination of cotton and silk is known as pontealaise de soie.

All our old familiar friends have taken new guises, and mercerized effects are to be found by the score. Among these last, chevrons take first place. They are varied and really charming. White with colored figures meshes is one of the season's fancies, and gives the effect of embroidery on fur. Collar and cuff sets of huckaback, done in cross stitch, are the latest to be adopted by the most stylish gowned women. A shirt composed of three deep

FADS AND FASHIONS.

A touch of purple is seen on many hats. Fur toques are growing more numerous daily. Some of the smartest muffs are shown in melon and heart shape. A rather pretty hair ornament is of white oak leaves set with brilliants. A small blue beetle trying to crawl along a gold branch forms an attractive brooch. The old-time "Jersey" has returned again in a much trimmed and much improved style. An 1830 fichu makes a charming and becoming finish for an afternoon gown. The soft girldie, wide in the back and drawn down to almost nothingness in front, is preferred above all others. Dresden buttons close picturesquely any of the white blouses except those of sheer white lawn, now so much worn. An enamelled brooch is in the shape of an autumn leaf and shows all the exquisite tints of the autumnal colorings. The mode of sewing heavy lace on fur and combing the fur through the flounces to the waist is to be much used for the coming summer's frocks of diaphanous stuffs. The hip yoke steadily grows in favor and will be a distinguishing feature of many of the spring and summer skirts as it offers so many pleasing combinations of fabrics.
