Our stay was very brief, only fourteen days. I hope to visit America again and spend more time there."

SPECIAL JUDGE DAVIS FINES THE COUNTY ATTORNEY

W. R. PARKER PROSECUTES IN THE COUNTY COURT IN PLACE OF O. S. LATTIMORE

ORDER IS SET ASIDE

Quo Warranto Proceedings Instituted in District Court to Decide Whether Davis Is Legally Serving as County Judge While Milam Is Ill

Following the most remarkable session a county court ever held in Texas, or perhaps anywhere else, quo warranto proceedings were instituted in the district court this afternoon to oust Special Judge James S. Davis, who is serving in Judge R. F. Milam's place in the Tarrant county court.

When Special Judge Davis took his seat on the bench this morning at 9 o'clock and opened the docket the first thing that confronted him was an order written by Judge Milam adjourning court until Monday, May 18.

He promptly summoned Clerk of the Court Chilcutt and interrogated him as to when the order was entered and where. Chilcutt informed the court that in response to a telephone message from Judge Milam he took the docket to his home at 214 West Second street yesterday afternoon at 5:15 and that there and then Judge Milam entered up the order adjourning court.

SETS ORDER ASIDE

Judge Davis at once set aside Judge Milam's order as void and defective. "I am the legally elected county judge at this time, elected to serve until Judge Milam is able or willing to serve, and therefore, he has no authority to adjourn the court," said the special judge, with emphasis.

At the conclusion, a case not having been established, the defendant was given his liberty and court adjourned for the morning, to reconvene at 1:30 this afternoon.

Get Their Usual Rap at the Hands of the Convention—Resolutions Passed Tending to Impress Doctors With Need of Working With the Census Bureau

NEW ORLEANS, May 6.—Sectional meetings kept the delegates to the American Medical Association busy today. There were seven of them in the forenoon and a dozen in the afternoon.

Dr. Adolphus Lorenz has been a conspicuous figure at the section of surgery and anatomy. Though he entered the hall quietly at the opening he was immediately recognized and introduced from the chair by Chairman James Moore.

He was very cordially applauded and briefly expressed his acknowledgments. Stories have been afloat here that there would be some criticisms of Dr. Lorenz' methods in the discussions, but nothing of this character has yet cropped out.

As a result of interesting papers read by Drs. H. M. Bracken and Cresay Wilbur and Hon. W. A. King, of the census bureau, resolutions have been passed by the hygiene and science department impressing the physicians throughout the country with the necessity of co-operation with the census bureau in recording vital statistics and improving the methods of delegating causes of death.

SCORE. The exact number of passengers and members of the Saginaw's crew who were drowned is not known. EIGHT-HOUR LAWS The decision handed down last week by the New York Court of Appeals in the matter of enforcement of the state's eight-hour law is a unique piece of judicial legislation. The facts leading up to the decision are these:

A road construction company required one James Toohy and others to work ten hours a day on the improvement of a highway through the town of New Windsor. The state of New York has a law providing that eight hours shall constitute a day's work performed for the state or a municipality.

Basing action on this law, suit was begun against the construction company, with James Toohy as star witness. The trial resulted after being reviewed by the court of appeals, in a decision that the New York eight-hour law is unconstitutional and therefore void.

Judge Cullen, who wrote the decision, says in part: "It seems to me to be entirely clear that the statute cannot be upheld as an exercise of the police power vested in the legislature. I should think the proposition too plain for debate. But if this assertion be considered dogmatic, then I say that the question is settled by the decisions both of this court and the Supreme Court of the United States. While the field for the exercise of the police power, subject to which all his property possessed by the citizen and all his callings or vocations must be pursued, is very broad, so broad that no court has sought to define accurately its extent, still it is subject to recognized limitations. In the interest of public health or public morals and of public order a state may restrain and forbid what would otherwise be the right of a private citizen. It may enact laws to regulate the extent of the labor which women and children or persons of immature years shall be allowed to perform and prohibit altogether their employment in dangerous occupations. It may limit the hours of employment of adults in unhealthy work, and it may be that it could prohibit the performance of excessive physical labor in all callings. But while it is generally for the legislature to determine what laws and regulations are needed to protect the public health and serve the public comfort and safety, such measures must have some relation to these ends.

"The statute now before us does not deal with the character of the work, the age, sex or condition of the employes, nor even the personality of the employer, but applies only to the case of a contract with the state or a municipality. What possible bearing on the health or security of the employes or on public health has the fact that the employer is exercising a contract for the construction or performance of a state or municipal work? The defendant might be constructing in the next town a road for a turnpike company or for its own use. In this work it could require labor for as many hours a day as it saw fit and could get workmen to perform. Yet the same action, involving exactly the same character of work, when done in performance of a contract with the public is by this statute made criminal. If we assume that a general statute forbidding in all cases the performance of physical labor for more than eight hours out of the twenty-four would be constitutional, that concession would not sustain the validity of the act before us. The vice of the statute is the arbitrary distinction drawn between persons contracting with the state and with other employers."

The decision will doubtless be widely quoted by opponents of union labor and eight-hour laws, but its effect on the cause of unionism will be nil. To the man outside it would seem that the state of New York would have as much right to regulate the length of a day's work on the part of its employes as a bank would the time to be spent in the office by its clerks. The recognition of a uniform working day forms a basis for computation and is merely a part of a necessary system.

The decision of the court of appeals may result in an attempt on the part of organized labor to fix the eight-hour limit throughout the state and in case this would succeed the self-appointed protectors of New York's state treasury who would save money by lengthening the working days of the state's employes, would find their first victory decidedly like a boomerang.

FICKLE FAME The dispatches yesterday told a sweetly pitiful story of how a New York lady, while driving downtown, was delayed by the falling of one of the horses attached to the carriage. The animal had ruptured a blood vessel and as it lay quivering on the pavement, unable to struggle to its feet, a big crowd gathered to see an elegantly dressed woman step from the carriage, walk quickly to the place where the horse lay, and then seat herself beside the animal, raise its head to her lap and caress it while she spoke gentle words of pity.

Unconscious of the assorted Fifth avenue mob that surrounded her, she sat there petting the dying horse till help arrived, but then the animal was too far gone and died as it was being lifted into an ambulance.

What a beautifully touching story. We can see the distracted coachman running for the nearest telephone to summon help, we can see the horse's carriage mate looking down sorrowfully at his dying companion. All around there is a circle of curious spectators, and in the center a woman petting a horse. The brute's eyes turn toward her gratefully and as it struggles for breath, her caresses seem to make it suffer less.

In fact we might go on seeing all sorts of things in the picture, did not the veterinary's ambulance arrive to break into the scene and take away the horse.

Such is the fickle course of fame. A New York woman starts downtown to do some shopping. Her horse falls in the street. She gets out and pets it, and next day the fact is known all over the country. A few caresses, and the thing is done. Fame and a pretty story that will supply the Sunday school magazines with choice reading for six months are attained with a few simple pats. A Broadway crowd, a dying nag, a news-thirsty reporter, and the scene is repainted in a thousand newspapers.

Fame, like rumor, travels over the housetops. She rests on one and skips over another like a Texas tornado on a freak jaunt through a new town.

Many a weary farmer's wife has sat up nights with a sick cow, but no mention was ever made of it in the papers. Even if the cow got well the reward did not sometimes amount to as much as a new

DAILY SHORT STORY

A LITTLE THING

BY GRETE HAHN It was only a little thing, but it was big enough to make two people very miserable.

The two people were Tom Halkett and Marjorie Page, and it began in this way: Tom had come into the room quite unexpectedly and had found Marjorie with an open letter in her lap. She had not heard him come in, and, just for fun, he had stolen up behind her and had looked over her shoulder, pretending to read her letter.

"Now the moment Marjorie discovered Tom's presence, she pounced upon the letter, crumpled it hastily, and threw it into the fire. 'That wasn't nice of you,' said Tom. Marjorie turned very red. 'I didn't want you to see what was in the letter,' Marjorie never prevaricated. 'So it would seem,' returned Tom. 'Suppose we talk of something more interesting.' 'I'm not angry in the least,' he replied, 'only sorry.' 'Tom, I've hurt you,' cried Marjorie penitently. 'Forgive me, dear; I didn't mean to.' 'There's nothing to forgive,' said Tom in a cold voice. 'Tom, I know what you're thinking. Marjorie went on hurriedly. 'You think I don't trust you.' 'What else am I to think?' 'Dear, you are wrong, quite wrong. That letter—'

'Please don't trouble to explain,' interrupted Tom proudly. 'I've no wish to force your confidence.' 'Tom, dear, do let me speak.' 'Your action just now spoke volumes. And, really, Madge, I've no curiosity whatever on the subject of that letter. Suppose we talk of something more interesting.' 'If you're going to look at me like that, Tom, I don't want to talk to you at all. One would think I'd committed a crime!' Marjorie had her share of spirit.

"I'm sorry my looks annoy you so much," retorted Tom. "Perhaps you would like me to go away." "Go, by all means!" cried Marjorie angrily, and Tom, hurt and puzzled, waited for no second bidding.

On second thoughts, perhaps it was not such a little thing after all. It involved a lover's principle hitherto cherished by both Tom and Marjorie—the principle that without perfect confidence there can be no true love. Marjorie that day had shown, only too clearly, that there was something she wished to conceal from Tom.

It mattered little to Tom whether that something were great or small. It was the principle, he told himself, that mattered.

"The woman who doesn't trust the man she has promised to marry ought never to have given her promise." These were Marjorie's own words. Tom smiled bitterly as he recalled them now.

By her own showing she doesn't really care for me," he thought, with a sinking heart.

For a whole week Tom brooded in solitude over the wretched little incident. He made no attempt to see Marjorie, and the seven days seemed like seven years. By the end of the week his mind was dress, and the thrifty farmer looked on it as a part of his wife's duties to be able to make a satisfactory bran mash, or cozen a sick bossy through the after-effects of too much green wheat.

WHAT THE SWEEPER DID WITH THOMAS PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 6.—Persons who have met the street sweeper, with its revolving broom and been conquered by the clouds of dust which attend its progress through the streets will appreciate the feat of Thomas McQueen.

Thomas, whose months are twelve, was alive and cheerful at the home of his parents, 2719 Sterner street, Falls of Schuylkill, after having been swept up by a sweeper and deposited on a pile of dirt by the side of the road. The Providence which watches over children kept him safe through it all.

While his attendant busied herself with other matters the baby was left in his coach on the sidewalk in front of the McQueen home. Coming down the street, heralded by a pillar of dust, was the street sweeper.

When the machine was approaching the spot Thomas McQueen overbalanced himself and toppled from the coach. Being a chubby youngster, he sustained no hurt and rolled comfortably from the sidewalk over the edge of the curb and into the path of the sweeper.

Revolving rapidly, the broom seized hold of the child's garments and turned Thomas, his mouth, eyes and ears filled with the refuse of the pavement, several times about the sweeper.

Then the machine set him down hard. Thomas wailed lustily and the sweeper went on. Save for a bruise or two and a few scratches, the baby emerged unscathed.

PRAISE FOR WINE OF CARDUI SUPREME DEPUTY Maccabees of the World. PRESIDENT Shakesperian Club. CRECHE NURSE DAVIS. MADAM MARLIANI. For four years I suffered with torpid liver until my skin looked yellow and dull. I then found my kidneys were affected and had severe pains across my back, and I felt that I must do something to regain my health. A friend advocated your Wine of Cardui, and I tried it, although I had little faith in patent medicines. I am now very thankful that I did so, for within ten days blessed relief came to me, and in less than three months I was cured, and have enjoyed fine health ever since. I know there is nothing better for a sick woman who wishes to enjoy perfect health; and am very pleased to give my hearty endorsement. Edna Mc Donald, Fay Lee, Florence Davis, Madame Rose Marie

AMUSEMENTS

WHEAT'S ROOF GARDEN
To a slightly smaller crowd than on opening night, the Curtiss Comedy Company played the second night of its engagement at Wheat's roof garden, again presenting "The Senator's Daughter." S. M. Curtiss, who plays the old man, is a capable actor, as is also William Robinson, not of new thought fame, who plays the villain. Miss Dale is a good leading lady, but the most refreshing member of the cast is Miss Gertrude Ridgely, who in the part of June Clay last night did as much for the audience's enjoyment as any one of the company. Frank Cushman again delighted his audience with his impersonations and witticisms. Tonight "The Senator's Daughter" is repeated, and then for the rest of the week the company will give "Utah."

"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA"
Of all romantic dramas extant possibly none has enjoyed the continuous prosperity and favorable criticisms that have ever been accorded to the "Prisoner of Zennda," which comes to Greenwall's opera-house tonight.

From the night of its first presentation, when E. H. Sothern began a limited engagement in New York city with this play, which finally culminated in a run that extended far into a second season, until the present time this famous romance still maintains the first rank in the

LUTHERAN SYNOD ENDS AT BRENHAM

BRENHAM, Texas, May 5.—The fifty-first annual session of the First Evangelical Lutheran synod closed here today, after a most pleasant and profitable session, lasting for a week. The important business of the body was transacted in the early part of last week, when the election of officers was held and reports of the various committees heard. These latter show a flourishing condition of the church generally and bear flattering testimony to the efficiency of the church's very able corps of ministers.

The last few days were devoted entirely to devotional exercises, and Breham has enjoyed a religious feast. Some very able discourses were delivered.
This afternoon another brief business meeting was held, but nothing further of importance came before it, and the meeting adjourned to convene again at Austin sometime next spring.

OREGON WORKMEN WANT REFERENDUM

LA GRANGE, Oregon, May 6.—The State Federation of Labor now in session here has adopted resolutions calling on all workmen to invoke the referendum on the state appropriation of $500,000 for the Lewis and Clark exposition, to be held at Portland in 1905. The resolutions ask the state convention to lay the facts before the American Federation of Labor and to ask them to address circulars to all international, national and central bodies in the United States, calling upon them to petition congress not to appropriate money for the fair. The resolutions say that the sawmills of Portland have formed a trust, raised the price of lumber 75 per cent and refuse to sell lumber to contractors who employ union men; that rents have been raised and that under these conditions the fair will not benefit the workmen.

WANTS TO SELL THE WALL PAPER RIGHTS

GREENWICH, Conn., May 6.—Mrs. Geneva Peats, who was appointed conservator of the personal estate of her husband, Alfred Peats, a wealthy wall paper manufacturer, by the probate court here last January, after her husband had become insane, has applied to the Greenwich court for permission to sell her husband's business and property.
Mrs. Peats sets forth that she is president of the company, which has branches in New York, Chicago, Boston and Brooklyn, that the business is solvent, but that its actual assets are much smaller than the capital stock, and that it has not sufficient working capital to withstand competition.
She declares that she finds herself incapable of continuing the business except at great loss.

COLORADO PASTOR COMING TO DALLAS

SILVERTON, Col., May 6.—Rev. George Eaves, pastor of the Congregational church of Silverton, has accepted a call to the Central Congregational church of Dallas, Texas, and is making arrangements to leave for his new station.

"SWEET CLOVER"

"Sweet Clover" is a clean, sweet comedy-drama, full of homely, simple rural life and exhalant an atmosphere as fresh and fragrant as that of the clover for which it is named. Delicate comedy, clean and wholesome, interwoven with tender pathos and dramatic climaxes or stirring interest form the plot of the sweetest story ever told upon the stage. One that holds the audience spell-bound in their seats until the final word is spoken and the curtain drops upon the last beautiful picture.

"Sweet Clover" will be the attraction at Greenwall's opera-house Saturday, matinee and night, May 9.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO NEW ORLEANS

On May 17, 1903, the Texas and Pacific railway will run a special train, consisting of standard and tourist sleepers, chair cars and day coaches, to New Orleans, on the occasion of the Confederate reunion. This train will carry General Van Zandt and staff, and will leave the Texas and Pacific passenger station at 11:15 a. m., arriving in New Orleans at 7:45 next morning.
The Texas and Pacific has been selected by the Confederate Veterans as the official route from north Texas, Indian and Oklahoma Territories to the reunion, and is the only line from North Texas running to New Orleans on its own rails, thus enabling them to give better service, avoiding disagreeable layovers.
Call at the city ticket office, 615 Main street, for your tickets and full information.
