A DAY OF CARNAVE

Three more days are left before the dawning of the nation's annual day for the discharge of patriotic obligations and cheap gunpowder.

Time there was when the high price of fireworks made their use comparatively limited and the accident roll was consequently shortened.

In the case of the two men in jail, one had a reputation with the police for petty crimes; the other's reputation was unblemished.

For further argument it might help the anxious parent to jot down these figures compiled from last year's list:

Of the list of injuries, fireworks leads the roll with 341 accidents to the credit of rockets, pinwheels, Roman candles, mines and other ornamental displays.

Yet out of the 2,643 accidents, it is safe to say that more than 2,000 were caused by carelessness.

Lord Rosebery of England, arguing for the need of an English technical school, is quoted as saying: "It is little short of scandalous that our ambitious youths should be obliged to resort to the United States and Germany for technical training."

WILSON THOUGHT

GRAFTERS DO IT

MURDERED MAN'S EXPRESSION TO HARRY HUEY

JUDGED BY THEIR TALK

HAD BEEN IN DAILY CONTACT WITH THAT CLASS OF MEN ALL HIS LIFE

IMPORTANT AT THIS TIME

Two Men Who Roomed on Hemphill Street Were Members of That Criminal Element—How Will Lowry's Testimony Fits Mrs. Speck's Story

"I believe that the men who shot and robbed me were grafters."

According to Harry T. Huey that is the reply that James M. Wilson made to him when he asked the dying man if he could describe the two men who met him at his gate on the evening of January 3, last, and inflicted the wounds which resulted in his death.

The importance of this ante-mortem statement by Wilson, in view of the recent publicity given the Hemphill street case in the Wilson murder mystery by The Telegram, cannot be gainsaid.

In the second place there is no doubt in any one's mind, from the description given of the two men who roomed with Mrs. John H. Speck at 105 Hemphill street, that they were grafters.

Wilson's reason for believing the men were grafters was a cogent one and showed that he thought clearly at the time he spoke.

From this it is clear that Wilson believed that they were grafters.

Mr. Huey was right by he had not made this conversation with Wilson public.

Another phase Newspaper readers will recall that on the night of the killing and at the trial of the cases of Wolf and Lawrence, Will Lowry, a former policeman, who encountered the two men on the Fourth Ward school lot immediately after the shooting, said that he was confident they were the same two who he met on Mason street near Wilson's house the night before the shooting.

According to Mrs. Speck's statement, it was on the day preceding the shooting that the two men who roomed at her house first told her that they might leave that night.

The trial of Joe Lawrence, who with Joe Wolf is jointly charged with murdering Wilson, comes up in the Seventeenth district court tomorrow morning.

GRAUSTARK GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON Copyright, 1901, by Herbert S. Stone

SYNOPSIS. Grenfall Lorry, a wealthy American globe trotter stumbles into acquaintance with a charming foreign girl on the train from Denver to Washington.

"But how could you have remained there, child? Tell me how it happened. We have been frantic," said her aunt, half in English, half in German.

"It is nothing—a mere scratch. Bumped my head against the side of the coach. Please don't worry about it; I can care for myself. Really, it doesn't."

"Oh, not a great deal," answered Lorry, closing his eyes comfortably. It was all very pleasant, he thought.

"You must let Hedrick bandage your head," she insisted. "Go with him, Hedrick."

"I trust you were not hurt during that reckless ride," he said, more as a question, stopping in the aisle to look back at her.

"Thank you. You are very good. I shall join you as soon as I am presentable."

"We are to be honored, sir," said the old gentleman, but in such a way that Grenfall had a distinct feeling that it was he who was to be honored.

LITTLE TRAVELER DIES IN STATION

A tiny human life, born in far away Russia, racing against a modern passenger train in America, afforded a pathetic scene to those of the Texas and Pacific manager station in Fort Worth last evening.

The little passenger won, and when Rock Island train No. 12 departed for Kingfisher at 9 o'clock it was without the baby on board which had been brought 500 miles and buried in its final resting place over this time.

The child was dead. All day long had it suffered from the ill to which infants are heir, but its parents had no other thought than to travel onward toward their final destination.

Rock Island train No. 12 is scheduled to depart at 9 o'clock p. m. It was on time. Eight o'clock came, and baby was still alive.

Eight thirty arrived and the weary immigrants began making preparations to continue their journey.

Eight forty-five brought them nearer the hour when they would depart on the final stage of their travel.

Five minutes later, the little form which had withstood the hardships of an ocean voyage and had traveled hundreds of miles in the crude railroad coaches of the native Russia, accompanied by his wife and six children, the oldest of whom is a boy of 12, left their home in Stavropol, Russia, on the 27th day of last May, to come to Kingfisher, Ok., to reside.

The Holstein family is of German descent and speak that language only. In his native country, Mr. Holstein was engaged in farming, which, unlike that vocation in America, is not one in which wealth and distinction as an agriculturist is attained.

Jacob Smith, an uncle of Mr. Holstein, has prospered on one of the many rich farms in the vicinity of Kingfisher, Ok., and to this haven, as it were, the Holsteins are destined.

The journey has been a weary one. From Russia, the parents started with their six children, three girls and three boys. Stavropol is an inland town, and before reaching seaport many days were consumed in traveling on the crude and unimproved railway trains of that country.

The youngest member of the family, a babe of six months, has been the mother's constant care. Only that love known to a mother could have withstood the hardships which were attendant on such a voyage.

At Fort Worth the baby fell sick. A physician was summoned, but his ministrations were of no avail, and the little life passed away. The kindly ministrations of a good sister, Imelda, of the Sisters of Divine Providence, who chanced to be passing through the city en route to San Antonio, consoled the parents, who, sorrowful, though unreluctantly, witnessed the American method of caring for the dead.

From the sister, who interpreted the father's desire, it was learned that the family desired to remain in Fort Worth until the remains of the infant might be properly prepared for them to take to Kingfisher. Undertaker Robertson was summoned, and conveyed the remains of the deceased to his parlors on Houston street, where during the night they were prepared for shipment.

The other members of the Holstein family spent the night at the depot, and this morning continued their journey. At Kingfisher the infant will be laid at rest.

Miss Jewell did not "draw" this prize she won it by hard and untiring work—and we congratulate her and her faithful and zealous friends.

Abilene has made no mistake in this staying by her daughter, and we are proud of the record.

EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY

Point of Law to Be Decided in the California Courts

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 29.—A case involving the liability of an employer for injuries received by an employee in service, a point of law which has caused both in this country and in England, came up for argument today in the United States circuit court in this city. Peculiar circumstances connected with the case make it one of more than ordinary interest.

On the face of it the case is a damage suit for $50,000, filed by T. Holmes, a former engineer on the Santa Fe, for personal injuries sustained in a wreck at Evanson Station, Ariz., nearly two years ago. The company, it is asserted, will set up as a defense the "fellow servant" doctrine, which makes an employer, instead of the employer, responsible for injuries sustained by a fellow worker, where the cause can be laid to carelessness or negligence of one engaged in contributory labor.

The last legislature amended the law on this point, which was held to be favorable to the employer. Holmes' suit was brought under the provisions of the old law, and both sides are prepared to fight the case, the plaintiff's attorney, desiring to establish a precedent for similar cases now pending.

EQUALIZATION BOARD TO MEET

THIS YEAR'S SESSION TO BE BEGUN THURSDAY

Total Assessment Will Be Well Over $200,000,000, and the City By Next October Will Be in Excellent Financial Condition—Some Figures

On Thursday of this week the board of equalization will begin its session. It will continue sitting until some time in September, meeting every day with the exception of Sundays and holidays. The board is composed of W. L. Ligon, chairman; T. P. Boyd and J. J. Roche. City Assessor and Collector W. J. Gilvin today completed the real estate tax assessment and the transference of the same to the rolls of his office. He at once notified Chairman Ligon and the latter announced that the board would commence its session on Thursday. Property owners should lose no time in ascertaining the valuation that has been placed on their holdings of real estate and if dissatisfied with the same should appeal to the board of equalization for relief.

It will be impossible until sometime near the close of the board's session to give more than a rough estimate of the increase in the assessment this year over last. The assessment for this year is not made on present valuations, but on the valuations on January 1, since which date there has been a considerable increase in values.

It was said a day or two ago by one in authority that the increase in the assessment this year over last would be in the neighborhood of $1,500,000; this estimate included probable reductions by the board of equalization and related to real estate alone. The total assessment last year was nearly $19,000,000. Therefore this year's will run the total considerably over $20,000,000, and will result in an increase of the city's revenue under the present $1.66 rate of in round figures, $26,500. The city's total revenue on a $20,000,000 basis would be $350,000, this from taxes on real estate and personal property. There is considerable income from other sources. When it is considered that the sum set apart last year for payments on the viaduct can be utilized after next October for other permanent public improvements, and that several other funds will be in better shape this year than last, it will be seen that the city's financial condition when the receipts for this year's taxes begin to roll in, will be better than at any time in recent years, although there is a heavy overdraft at the State National bank as a result of the settlement of the bond controversy and of drafts yet to be made under an arrangement with W. B. Harrison to meet current expenses until next October. The total of this overdraft by next October probably will be over $100,000.
