

MRS. HOSKINS' CASE GOES TO THE JURY

DEFENDANT DOES NOT TAKE THE STAND IN HER OWN CAUSE--ABLE SPEECHES LAST NIGHT AND TODAY--TESTIMONY OF M. B. WESSON

THE CLOSING CHAPTERS IN A REMARKABLE TRIAL

The question of whether Mrs. Nellie Hoskins shall spend from two to five years in the state penitentiary or go free is now in the hands of the jury which, all this week, has been hearing testimony calculated to elucidate points at issue in the case.

Last night Assistant County Attorney R. H. Buck made the opening address. Today Judge W. R. Parker and Judge Robert Seay for the defense and Judge R. E. Beckham and County Attorney O. S. Lattimore for the state closed the case and, after hearing Judge Mike E. Smith's charge, the twelve men filed into an apartment at one side of the court room to decide whether or not Mrs. Nellie Hoskins was guilty of conspiracy to make fraudulent representations to a railroad company for the purpose of gain.

Much testimony of a contradictory character was presented to the jury. County Attorney Lattimore, with his usual address, held some of his strongest testimony until after the defense had closed and then put it in rebuttal. The last two witnesses to testify directly contradicted one another. Mrs. A. E. Burness, matron at the Protestant sanitarium, was put on at the session last night, and in order to contradict her, Mrs. Florence Campbell was recalled to the stand by the defense.

Mrs. Burness was sent to Mrs. Hoskins' home on the night that Hoskins "woke up," her mission being to escort Mrs. Hoskins to the sanitarium. When Mrs. Burness was introduced, the defense objected, but after an argument her testimony was admitted. She said in answer to Mr. Lattimore's questions, that when Hoskins returned to consciousness she was dispatched to Mrs. Hoskins' house in a hack to take that lady to the sanitarium. Mrs. Florence Campbell, sister of Mrs. Hoskins, accompanied them.

On cross examination, Mrs. Burness was asked if she did not urge Mrs. Hoskins to depart for Mexico, and suggested that she change the style of wearing her hair and change her name to "Mrs. Thompson." She denied having said any of these things and said that it was Oran who wished his mother to go away.

Mrs. Burness did not recall any such instructions, but did say that Dr. Walker told her to use her own judgment in the matter.

Mrs. Florence Campbell thereupon was recalled. She testified that she and Mrs. Hoskins sat in the hack side by side on the drive to the sanitarium, with their backs to the horses. She said she didn't hear any whispering and was confident that there was none. She was asked if it was not Mrs. Burness who announced that she would not be permitted to enter the sanitarium, and if Mrs. Burness did not tell them that the sick room was no place for a crowd, to which she gave answers in the affirmative.

Yesterday afternoon's session was one of the most interesting of the many interesting ones that have marked the trial. At the opening of the session Mrs. Florence Campbell's cross examination was concluded. Mrs. Emma Nelson, a trained nurse, who was in a street car passing near the place where Hoskins fell at the time of the alleged accident, when she was apprised by the motorman of the happening, was called. She left the car and went to the scene. She helped remove the dust and dirt from Hoskins' face and hair. She said that she saw no signs upon him. He was in convulsions. She went to Mrs. Hoskins' house and informed the mother of the young man that her son had met with an accident. She said that Mrs. Hoskins had been taking a bath when she arrived and was only partly dressed. She said that Mrs. Hoskins seemed half dazed by the news, cried, wrung her hands and screamed. She quoted Mrs. Hoskins as saying, "He's killed, he's killed; you're deceiving me." She said that Mrs. Hoskins was so crazed she was unable to find her clothes, which witness did find for her, and that Mrs. Hoskins finally rushed from the house to go to the scene of the accident with her clothes only half buttoned.

At this point the defense rested. The state then began the introduction of testimony in rebuttal. Colonel R. M. Wynne was recalled to the stand. He deplored that he communicated with Mrs. Campbell at the sanitarium or anywhere else.

Assistant County Attorney Buck was then sworn. His testimony was objected to, but the objection was overruled. He said that on the morning after the disclosures at the sanitarium he went to the home of Mrs. Hoskins to interview Mrs. Hoskins and her son. She compelled him to wait for some time and he finally started to leave, whereupon she called him back. She refused to grant him an interview until after a consultation with her lawyer. After she talked with her lawyer she invited Mr. Buck into the room, where Hoskins was lying upon a bed. At this point another objection was raised, the point made being that any statement made by Hoskins at that time was while he was in duress and in fear. Judge Smith sustained the objection and Mr. Buck's testimony did not reach the jury.

Dr. A. C. Walker was recalled. He was asked if he had with him a record of Hoskins' pulse as taken during the three weeks immediately following the accident, while Hoskins was at the sanitarium. He produced the record, but as he did not make it himself, was not allowed to introduce it. In answer to Mr. Lattimore's questions, he said that he did not see how any disease could cause the fluctuations in Hoskins' pulse; he added that at the time he was unable to understand why the fluctuations could be caused by medicinal agents.

Dr. Walker also testified in regard to the incident when Mrs. Hoskins arrived at the sanitarium after being sent for on the night Hoskins' mind was restored. When he entered the room she said, "Doctor, how's my boy?" He responded by saying, "He is all right; he is well."

He said that she would give the world, if she had it, to know that Oran was well again. He told her that to convince her, if she desired, he would have the boy write a note to her. She said that that would not be necessary; that she wanted to see him. He then took her to the boy's room. She and the boy embraced and she went a little and then turned toward the doctor and said: "Doctor, I smell chloroform on his breath."

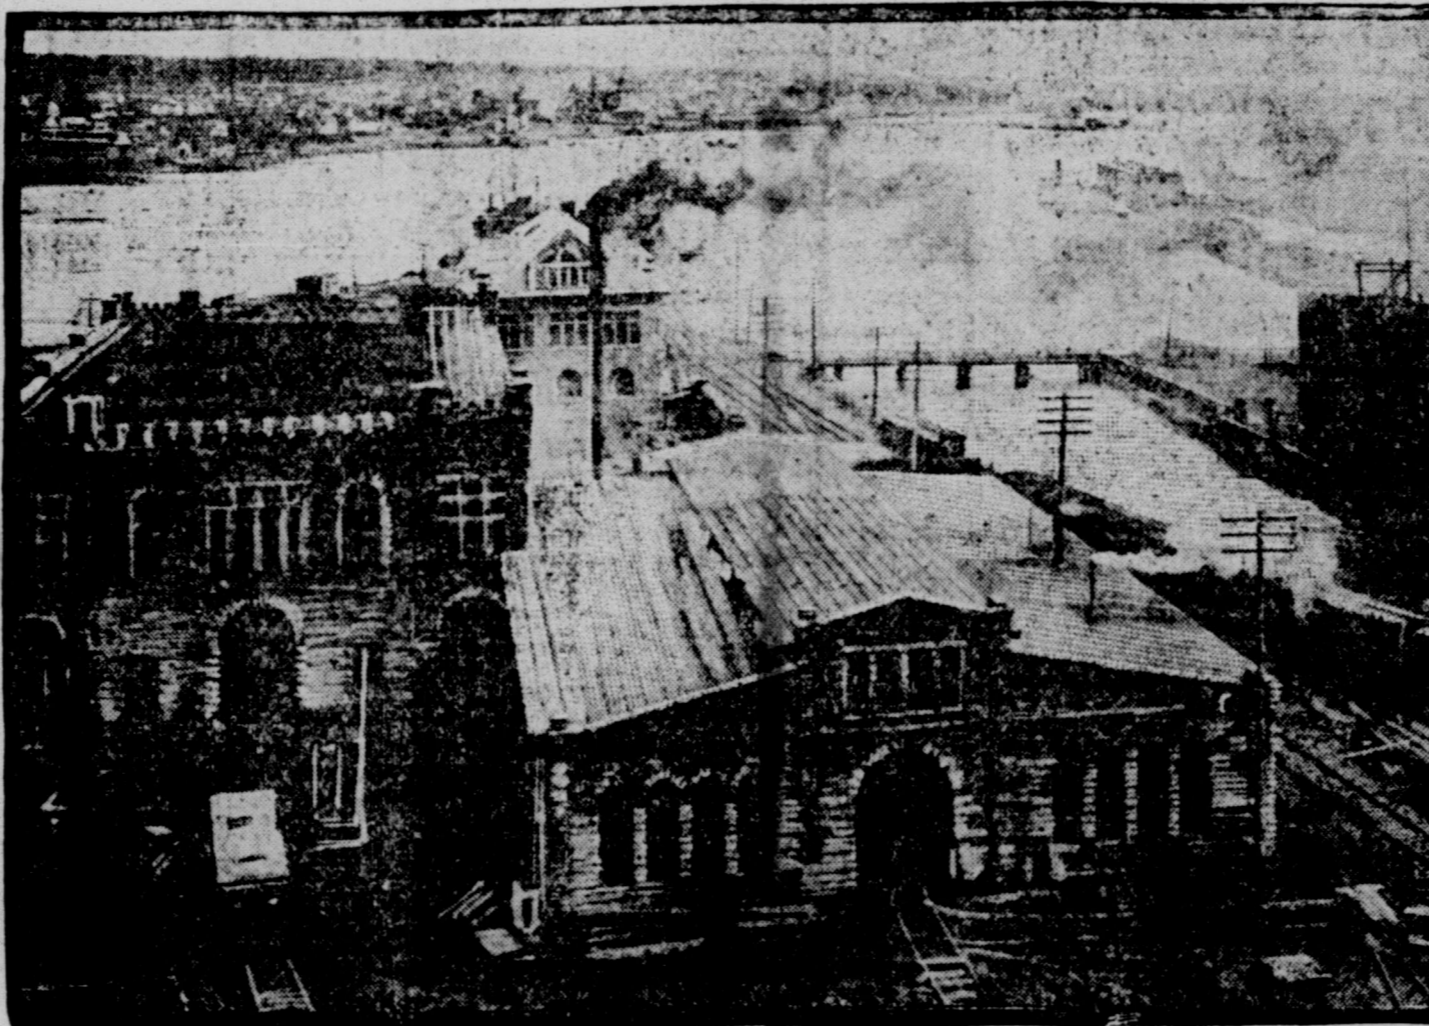

"No; it's ether," he replied. He was asked how she looked when she asked this question. He replied that she did not look pleased; that her eyes flashed and that she turned toward him. He couldn't say that she started toward him.

He said that Hoskins said to his mother: "It's all right, mother, between us," meaning between the doctor and himself. "Do you think you can tell when a woman is angry?" was asked. "Yes." "When you told her you had used ether, did she strike you as being very angry?" "I thought her angry."

The doctor was asked why he left the room at the time. He replied that the whole affair was unpleasant to him. He did not think that Mrs. Hoskins caught him by the arm, but she was very close to him. He said that he returned to the room while she was in it and did not think he saw her again that night.

On cross-examination he was asked if Mrs. Hoskins tore the bandages off her son's head and feet, but he did not remember.

Judge Seay replied emphatically that it was true. Judge Smith was weary of the delay in the case and asked Mr. Lattimore if he

The collapse of the financial undertakings of Francis H. Clergue, the Morgan of Canada, which were capitalized at $17,000,000, is causing widespread disaster at Sault Ste. Marie. It has been necessary to call troops out to quell the rioters, some of whom were starving, owing to non-payment of wages. Sir Wilfred Laurier and other leading men of Canada have promised aid and it is hoped that Clergue will be able to patch up his colossal combination so that operations can be resumed. Meanwhile, the Ontario government promises to pay wages due.

STARTLING THREAT OF LABOR LEADER

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 10.—Organized capital, through its Anti-Boycott and Employers' Associations, must stop its raid on the savings of the trade unions or the union men will withdraw $300,000,000 from the banks.

Such is the statement made by Thomas I. Kidd, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, after an investigation of the damage suits which the American Anti-Boycott Association and Employers' Association have filed against trade unions within the last three months.

Mr. Kidd intimated that it was within the power of union labor to throw the country into a financial panic by taking from circulation the $300,000,000 which he says labor controls. In this connection it may be stated that the money stock of the country approximates $2,275,000,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Twelve men have had a desperate fight for life in the Pennsylvania railroad tunnel now being dug under the Hudson river. They were at work in the Hoboken end when, without warning, the water and loose earth began to rush through the shield and in a few moments 200 feet of mud had caved in.

Owen McConnell was buried alive under the river bottom. Two other laborers were taken out unconscious. The big tunnel, which is to cross under the Hudson to New York, is already advanced 700 feet, and work is being pushed with night and day shifts. Twelve men were working in the air pressure tank behind the great shield which squeezes out the mud ahead of it like a giant sieve, when suddenly the earth became loosened and a gush of water followed.

The prevailing air pressure at the time was only twice the normal. The only thing to be done to stop the cave in and save the lives of the twelve men was to instantly increase the pressure to hold back the water.

Forty pounds was thrown in immediately upon the men struggling in the rapidly rising mud and water. McConnell could not get away. The others were dragged to safety, but two fainted under the strain and were carried out in time to save their lives.

The Board of Trade has received a communication from J. M. Lindsley, M. D., president of the International Quarantine Bureau, headquarters at New York, giving that gentleman's views on the yellow fever situation along the Texas-Mexico border as to the mosquito being the only means of transmission of the yellow fever germs.

The communication contains letters from surgeons of the United States navy and public health and marine hospital service, which corroborate the position taken by Dr. Lindsley. One of these letters is from Carlos J. Finlay, M. D., chief sanitary officer of Cuba, and says: "I do firmly believe that the mosquito is the only natural means by which yellow fever is transmitted. My experience in Havana during the last months admitting of no other interpretation."

"During that space of time ten yellow fever patients imported from different Mexican ports have been conveyed from the vessels on which they had come or from the observation camp, across the

Legal Aid Society Considering Serious Charges Made by a Wisconsin Boy

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The seamen's branch of the Legal Aid Society here is considering complaints made by some of the crew of the United States collier Arcthusa. James Henry Herbert, who describes himself as a native of Wisconsin and a graduate of Beloit College, has made an affidavit covering alleged experiences on the Arcthusa since last November.

According to Herbert's complaint, men who are reported to the officers with loaves of wormy bread were confined in the brig, an iron cage between decks, where the temper varied from 90 to 140 degrees. Some times they were put there for twenty-four hours, he alleges. Other charges of similar nature are included in the complaint. The Arcthusa has been employed recently in Porto Rican waters.

HILLSBORO, Texas, Oct. 10.—The Trinity and Brazos Valley railroad will run a special train to Hillsboro from Hubbard City Monday, October 12, on account of the circus which is to be here that day. The trains will run regularly thereafter if the weather continues favorable.

MOSQUITOES ALONE CAN TRANSMIT THE GERMS CAUSING YELLOW FEVER

The Board of Trade has received a communication from J. M. Lindsley, M. D., president of the International Quarantine Bureau, headquarters at New York, giving that gentleman's views on the yellow fever situation along the Texas-Mexico border as to the mosquito being the only means of transmission of the yellow fever germs.

The communication contains letters from surgeons of the United States navy and public health and marine hospital service, which corroborate the position taken by Dr. Lindsley. One of these letters is from Carlos J. Finlay, M. D., chief sanitary officer of Cuba, and says: "I do firmly believe that the mosquito is the only natural means by which yellow fever is transmitted. My experience in Havana during the last months admitting of no other interpretation."

"During that space of time ten yellow fever patients imported from different Mexican ports have been conveyed from the vessels on which they had come or from the observation camp, across the bay, through the entire lengths of the streets of Havana, to Las Animas hospital, and were there treated during consecutive weeks without the disease having ever been transmitted to the non-immunes who surrounded them. Now, considering that the only carrier which had been interposed between these patients and the public or the other inmates of the hospital consisted in simple mosquito bars or wire netting of fourteen strands to the inch, this simple fact conclusively proves that the disease is not transmitted either by air borne germs or by any blood-sucking insects which can find their way through the meshes of such netting. Indeed, consistently with all the observed facts, I cannot think of any other means by which yellow fever may be transmitted except through the yellow fever mosquitoes."

Extracts from the same line are given in the communication from the pen of equally prominent physicians and yellow fever experts. Dr. Lindsley says that replies received from thirteen of the eighteen physicians who were asked their opinion on the subject, believe that the stegomyia basicoata mosquito is the only natural means by which yellow fever is transmitted. CROSSES OF HONOR ARE GIVEN TO THE VETERANS

The members of Julia Jackson Chapter, United Confederate Veterans, observed the birthday anniversary of John H. Reagan last night in a befitting manner, and what is known as "bestowal event" was the manner in which the occasion was celebrated. The meeting was held in the headquarters of Lee Camp in the court house and was very largely attended by the members of the various Confederacy orders with their friends.

The program was a very interesting one and was made up of short addresses, recitations, etc. The principal speech was made by Judge J. I. Wright. Adrian Ford and Miss Edith Ellis delighted the audience with their recitations. Crosses of honor were presented by the Daughters of the Confederacy to the following old veterans, members of Lee Camp: J. M. Adams, Henry L. Abston, T. T.

Duttonville, N. J., Swept by Water From Bursted Dam. Loss of Life Unknown

FLOODS IN NEW JERSEY TRACKS ARE UNDER SIX FEET OF WATER

Wind at Philadelphia Blowing Fifty Miles An Hour But Shipping Is Not Yet Seriously Injured—Floods Abating

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—It is feared there has been considerable loss of life in the village of Duttonville, N. J., through the bursting of the Westbrook dam in the Passaic river, in yesterday's flood. The village was in the path of the flood which swept down upon the town of Passaic. There were about twenty-five persons belonging in the village who had not been fully accounted for at an early hour today and it is thought likely at least ten were drowned.

During the night guns were being constantly fired by persons surrounded on the roofs of their houses in the Wallington town of Wallington is from two to six feet under water and 300 families are homeless. Volunteers in boats rescued many inhabitants from the roofs of their homes. They were cared for in Passaic, where many houses were thrown open to the sufferers.

As reports of the storm's havoc accumulate the estimate of the damage in and about Greater New York grows to startling figures and undoubtedly the total loss will run far into the millions.

GRAVEYARD WASHED AWAY An extraordinary occurrence was reported from Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn. As the result of a half dozen landslides on the hillsides of the beautiful burying grounds, tombs were opened and head stones torn from their fastenings. Portions of coffins were scattered about over a large area and in other sections the slide of dirt, weighing many tons, had swept the monuments and buried scores of graves so that it may be impossible to again locate them.

FLOODS SUBSIDE SLIGHTLY TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 10.—The heavy floods which caused a suspension of through traffic have somewhat subsided. Five trains which should have passed Trenton last night were stalled here. One of them was the midnight express from New York city. Special trains containing cars of Barnum & Bailey's circus were among the stalled Pullman sleepers which are derailed. Ladders were used to rescue passengers. Heavy freight trains were placed on the bridge to keep it from washing away.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 10.—At the offices of the general manager of the Pennsylvania railroad it was stated today that the tracks of that road at Trenton, N. J., were under six feet of water and that no trains had reached this city over the Pennsylvania road from New York since midnight. At the Delaware breakwater the wind today was blowing at the rate of fifty miles an hour. Heavy seas were breaking over the telegraph lines, but thus far no hindrance to shipping is reported.

FIRE STARTS IN KITCHEN BUILDINGS ON LOWER MAIN ARE DAMAGED

The Loss Approximates $6000, With Insurance About $3000. Prompt Work of Department Prevents Conflagration

Fire at about 3 o'clock this morning did considerable damage on lower Main street near the Texas and Pacific passenger depot. It started in the kitchen of the A. Q. Thompson restaurant, located at 1622 Main street, from which building the flames spread rapidly to adjoining buildings.

Mr. Thompson's loss will be in the neighborhood of $1,000, on which an insurance of $400 was carried. The upper floors of the building were used for rooming purposes, but little damage was done.

W. T. McConnell's confectionery store was quite badly damaged, but is fully covered with insurance. Mr. McConnell said that he presumed his loss, provided the fountain is damaged, would reach as much as $2,000. His stock of goods is valued at about $3,000. Most of the damage to this stock was done in the front part of the building, where the flames spread rapidly. Good work of the fire department prevented greater damage to the McConnell stock.

The branch office of the Western Union was also slightly injured, as was also the brokerage business of Bascom Dunn. He reports that his loss will not be more than $100. No insurance.

The fire extended along the balcony of the Alamo saloon and did some damage. Possibly $100 will cover the loss. The greatest individual loss is sustained by A. G. Rintlemen, who owns the building in which the fire originated. The property is valued at $7,000, and Mr. Rintlemen stated this morning that his loss on the building would likely foot up $2,500 or $3,000. The property is fully covered by insurance. Carpenters will be put to work at once to make the necessary repairs on the burned buildings.

SOME NARROW ESCAPES There were quite a number of people sleeping in the upper story of the Thompson restaurant when the fire broke out and in making a quick escape down the stairway, two or three of them were slightly injured. Mrs. Hickey and Mrs. Connell, both of Timpan, Tex., were burned on the arms. A little boy of Mrs. Hickey had both feet and arms badly burned, and in consequence the child is laid up for a few days. They came to Fort Worth to attend the Fall Festival festivities.

In the rush to get out of the burning building, Mrs. Hickey and Mrs. Connell fell on the pavement at the foot of the stairs which also slightly injured them, though not seriously.

HILLSBORO CRIMINAL MATTERS HILLSBORO, Texas, Oct. 10.—The jury in the Bud Greenwood criminal assault case reduced the grade of the offense and fined him $50 and imposed a jail penalty of 60 days on him. W. T. Denton is on trial also charged with criminal assault.

Fort Worth, Texas, October 10, 1903.

DEAR SIR:

There were 11,634 head of cattle on the market this week, the greater portion of which were common cows, with about 15 per cent stockers and feeders. The market has fluctuated a little during the week, but closes up steady to strong as compared with last week's close. Desirable feeder steers are bringing more money, anywhere from 10c to 25c, than the light weight. Common canners are not showing much strength and we anticipate very little improvement in this class of stuff for the next 30 days, until after the feeders have unloaded and begin to re-stock their pastures.

There were 4,800 head of hogs on our market this week. All the Northern markets have suffered a decline of from 40c to 60c on all classes of hogs, and our market, in sympathy with them, has declined from 30c to 50c since our last report, but today the market has reacted and is 5c to 10c higher on the better class of hogs. We would advise the shippers, if they have anything ready, to let it come, as it looks like now the market is going to settle somewhere around $5.00 to $5.25 per 100 lbs. We quote top hogs, $5.50 to $5.60; medium hogs of fair quality, $5.25 to $5.50; lights and roughs, $5.00 to $5.25; stock hogs, $5.25 to $5.75 per 100 lbs. We again call the attention of the shipper to the fact that stock hogs must be billed as such in order to be unloaded in the division set apart for them and sold as stockers, otherwise they cannot be taken out of the yards and will have to be sold to the packers for what they are willing to pay for them.

Sheep receipts this week were 1,040 head. Our sheep market remains about steady with last week's quotations. We quote choice muttons, $3.25 to $3.50; lambs, $3.50 to $4.00; stockers, $2.00 to $2.50 per 100 lbs. We give below a few of our representative sales for the week:

Have Consolidated

The newspapers have given out reports that there was under consideration a proposition looking to union of interests of the undersigned two companies. By this plan we will be better able to serve the patrons of both companies inasmuch as the service of the Fort Worth Live Stock Commission Co., has enabled them to occupy the place of leader on the Fort Worth market since the opening of the packing houses, and the St. Louis house of the Cassidy-Southwestern gives us our own office and salesmen on that market.

We retain the name of the Fort Worth Live Stock Commission Co., but will continue the business under the name of the Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co., on account of the St. Louis office.

The affairs of this office are under the management of the officers of the Fort Worth Live Stock Commission Co., and with the combined efforts of the active working force, we are able not only to continue the best service, but to improve it, and all shipments, large or small will receive the best attention. All consignments should be billed to the Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co., Fort Worth, or National Stock Yards, Ill., but anything billed to the Fort Worth Live Stock Commission Co., at any of the markets will have the same attention as heretofore.

We take this occasion to thank the friends and customers of both companies for their support, and to solicit a continuance of the same, assuring you that while we change straight commission in all cases, we represent only the seller. We are pleased to have you call on us freely at any time we can serve you on any of the markets.

Yours truly,

EXTRA! FLOODS GROWING SERIOUS

(Associated Press.)
PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 10.—The flood in the Passaic river has surpassed the mammoth inundation of March, 1902. The river has overflowed 100 acres. Hundreds of families are driven from their homes. Many are being rescued from upper windows in boats. Mayor Hinchliff has appointed a committee to organize a relief movement.

AT NEW BRUNSWICK
(Associated Press.)
NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 10.—The freshet is the worst in years. All the factories are closed. The Pennsylvania bridge has been washed away.

AT EASTON, PA.
(Associated Press.)
EASTON, Pa., Oct. 10.—Martin's bridge has been washed away. Other bridges are in grave danger.

HOTEL FLOODED
(Associated Press.)
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 10.—A dispatch from Townsend Inlet says the hotel there was undermined by the flood and is breaking up.

SEVERAL DROWN
(Associated Press.)
MIDDLETOWN, Pa., Oct. 10.—Barrett's bridge collapsed in the flood. Several persons were drowned.

UNVEILED BY THE WOODMEN

The Woodmen of the World of this city will unveil several monuments of late members at different cemeteries in Fort Worth tomorrow morning and also in the afternoon.

The procession will leave Woodman hall on Main street at 9 o'clock in the morning and, arriving at the court house, will disband and take cars to the old cemetery, where the monument of J. T. McKinley will be unveiled. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the ceremonies of unveiling will take place at New and Oakwood cemeteries, the services being conducted under the direction of W. R. Parker, master of ceremonies, assisted by W. H. Lendon and Captain W. R. Rea. Addresses will be made by O. S. Lattimore and W. R. Parker. On the program are a number of interesting things. One will be the recitation of "Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud." This poem will be delivered by Mrs. Emma Vera Brown and Miss Selma Lendon.

The affair will be made quite a notable one in Woodmen circles. Quite a number of the order are expected to be here to attend the ceremonies. The Dallas union degree team is expected to be on hand and take part in the line of march from the hall to the court house. If they arrive in time they will also take part in the unveiling.

The monuments to be unveiled are over the graves of J. T. McKinley, George E. Thorne, F. B. Crisp, J. M. Glass, P. McGee, W. M. Smith, R. H. Waggoner, W. J. Rogers, L. L. Chesnut and Sam Moore.

W. B. NEWKIRK ROBBED

Sneak Thieves Enter His Room and Steal Valuable Clothing

Sneak thieves ransacked the room of W. B. Newkirk over the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company's store a night or so ago and made way with nearly all Mr. Newkirk's wearing apparel. Among the articles taken were a new overcoat, pantaloons, coat, several shirts and cuffs and several other articles. All the plunder was stored away in a suitcase. The thieves took the whole thing and made good their escape. The officers have not as yet been able to locate the thieves or the stolen goods.

FAMOUS STALLION DEAD

Richard Croker Orders Dobbins Killed Because of Disease

(Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Richard Croker's famous American stallion, Dobbins, has been killed, on orders from his owner, says a World dispatch from London. The old sire had developed an enlargement of one hind leg, from which he suffered greatly.

KEMPFF RETIRES SUNDAY

Rear Admiral Quits Active Service After Forty-six Years in Navy

(Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Rear Admiral Kempff will be retired from active service tomorrow. He was born in Illinois and was appointed to the navy in 1857. His last service was the command of the squadron at Taku, China, during the recent difficulty, when the forts were bombarded.

PACKERS TAKE STATIONS AWAY

Rivalry for Territory Business Will Be Fought Out From Headquarters

HOLDENVILLE, I. T., Oct. 10.—The sales stations of Swift & Co., Armour Packing Company, and Cudahy Packing Company have suspended business here, preparatory to closing up the offices and warehouses permanently and removing. This is the result of a mutual agreement reached by the respective heads of these packeries. The move was made in Kansas City among the representatives, who decided for their mutual benefit to withdraw the majority of the stations in the Oklahoma district, which includes a large part of the Indian Territory.

The stations were established as a result of the keen rivalry between the packers for the territorial trade, and they followed each other in every case. The business would justify the maintaining of all the stores, but by agreement each company can still control its quota. The only stations in this territory will now be Oklahoma City and South McAlester, which strictly belong in the Arkansas district. Very few men will be thrown out of employment, the majority being cared for

PATRIOTISM ON LARGE SCALE

When the Liberty Bell sounded on July Fourth years ago, it declared a freedom for this country, and those who have been reared under the protecting folds of Old Glory do not forget the lesson of Independence which has been taught them. As children they have joined in the celebration of each recurring Independence day, and when they wander in foreign lands they remember all this and the same sentiment inspires them. There is quite a colony of Americans in the City of Mexico, and there has just been published a statement in the Mexican Herald showing the expenses of the celebration of the Fourth of July two months ago. It must have been a gorgeous affair. It was arranged at an expense of over $11,000, and the list of contributors shows all classes of people. General Powell Clayton, the United States minister, heads the list with $200, and others gave in like amount. Over $12,000 was on hand, and the Americans evidently made the welkin ring. They fired bombs, had bands, sent up balloons, touched off explosives, had a great ball, gave a dinner to the president of the republic and the diplomats which cost $500, and altogether they conducted themselves as good Americans should. It was the exhibition of that native sentiment which the American never fails to show. He is imbued with the spirit of independence, and be he at home or in foreign land, he does not forget the Stars and Stripes and what the banner stands for. It showed the people of the City of Mexico that the people of the United States love "their own, their native, land," and that not one among them but remembers the "states," although he is far from the country. The committee in charge of the affair has about $1,300 left, together with material, and it is promised that next year the Glorious Fourth will be properly remembered again.

PARTY PLATFORM PLEDGES

Waco Times-Herald: But how will The Fort Worth Telegram "reform the legislature of Texas," when there is no way to enforce the platform demands? For many days it has been apparent that the Waco Times-Herald has been oblivious of the fact that platforms are made to get in on and not to stand on. The average legislator wants to follow platform demands and goes to Austin to do it. After he gets there he is informed that the convention which made the platform was a drunken mob, and that it would be criminal of him to listen to the utterances of a brawling, intoxicated crowd of politicians. This charge has been made more than once by leading democrats, and it is nearly always repeated after a convention, though that convention may be in the highest degree sober and respectable. The democratic conventions in Texas, as a rule, are exceptionally deliberate and respectable. Yet this does not prevent democrats, standing high in the party, from declaring they are mobs. Those fellows who make the charges are bold, to be sure, in their denunciations; but it is observed that they are not bold enough to denounce and fight such conventions on the stump. They invariably fall in and vote for the ticket nominated by the "drunken mob," and also vote for the platform made by the "blackguards."—Dallas News.

The officer cannot rise above the wisdom of his creators. This is a democratic country and those who accept public service at the hands of the people must be convinced that under a rule wherein government derives its powers from the consent of the governed, the expression of the governed must be obeyed. The state convention is but a step higher than the district convention, and men who accept nominations from their district conventions must abide by the will

GOOD WORDS ABOUT THE SUNDAY TELEGRAM
The Fort Worth Telegram came out last Sunday in full colors equal to any metropolitan journal. The Telegram deserves the great success it has attained, and Fort Worth is an afternoon paper of which it may well feel proud.—Jacksonboro Gazette.
The Fort Worth Telegram sent out with its Sunday edition an up-to-date colored supplement and comic section, which indicates a deserved degree of success for its energetic management.—Boyd Index.
The Fort Worth Telegram has ordered a new three-decker color press. The Telegram will doubtless be read-headed when it gets it.—Houston Post.

of the party which is expressed in state convention.

In Texas the democratic party is in control politically. It controls by virtue of the power of the people, and to the people it owes allegiance. It is responsible to the people for the manner in which it handles the business of the commonwealth, and those men in whom it reposes confidence and to whom it gives office, must respect the party will or they are traitors to the power from which they get authority and should be relegated to the background.

What candidate for office refuses a nomination, because the convention is a "howling drunken mob?"

Not one. They all fall in line and accept the commissions offered, and then as soon as the oath of office is spoken, they carry out their own ideas, the will of their party to the contrary notwithstanding.

A man accepting a party nomination pledges himself to support the party platform, and if he is recreant to that trust he is unworthy the position given him. This is not campaign talk nor is it theory. Too long have the people suffered by reason of the failure of the men elected to consult the interests which have elected them, and it has reached the point where the demand will be for a strict compliance with orders or be discharged from service.

The people will watch the next platform and they will watch the men who administer the affairs of state. Those who do not come up to the standard, will be severely treated, and those who remain steadfast, will be honored for their fealty to the party's interests.

Let slip the dogs of war.

Don't forget to get your Sunday Telegram with its colored magazine section.

ACCOMPLISHED HAIR SPLITTER

Judge Parker, who is conducting the defense of Mrs. Hoskins at Fort Worth is an accomplished hair-splitter. "Swindling involves the consent of the party swindled." Hence, if you swindle a person without his consenting to be swindled, you have not perpetrated a swindle. Plain, isn't it? Let the case be dismissed.

PATRONIZE THE PACKERS

Texas people complain of the extortions of railroads and of the exorbitant rates they are forced to pay, and yet they pay the freight on cotton to the North to have it manufactured and pay freight on the manufactured article back; hogs and cattle are shipped to Chicago and Kansas City and the meat is shipped back and freight is paid two ways. It is the same with many other things. No wonder the people don't prosper as they should. It is a good thing for the railroads, but who can blame them if it is a good thing and the people pay? On with the dance.—Paris Morning News.
This is not altogether true. Fort Worth has two of the largest packing houses in the world. Houston has a packery that enjoys a splendid trade and is supplying thousands of persons with meat and meat products, and there are several other similar concerns in various parts of the state. While it is a fact that the beef combine, popularly known as the trust, has agencies in nearly all of the important centers of Texas, it cannot be said that it enjoys an unopposed monopoly. Just now it is probable that there will soon be a third packery at Fort Worth, an establishment that will have an output equal to either of the two already there, and that will operate outside the influence of the combine. If the people of Texas eat meat on which double freight has been paid it is a matter of choice with them, as home-raised and home-dressed beef, pork and mutton are readily accessible.

LADYLOVE

MARtha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

As Jack Vanston stepped through the French window into the library at Cresswell he made half a motion to turn back. Ladylove was crying hard, her head buried in her folded arms on the big library table. Aunt Nan sat a little way off, frowning, yet beaming over a letter. She it was who caught sight of Jack and called to him with little excited breaks between her words: "Don't go away, Mr. Vanston. You must help me make this headstrong child listen to reason."

"If she's badly in need of discipline suppose you let me take her for a walk this morning?" Jack said, pulling a rebellious curl that strayed down over Ladylove's neck. "She told me yesterday she hated me."

Miss Nancy shook her head. "I cannot permit the walk—now." She put such emphasis on the last word Jack could not choose but ask, "Why?"

"Oh, Jack!" Ladylove wailed, sitting up, but keeping her face hidden. "It's because she wants me to marry that fat, pig-eyed Sandy Corlew. He—he has written to her—proposing—fancy proposing that way!"

"I at least appreciate dear Sandy's fine deference to your natural guardian," Miss Nancy said, sitting a thought straight and caressing the letter with two fingers. Then, in answer to the question of Jack's eyes, she went on: "Of course Ladylove will accept. She came here to establish herself—"

"I didn't! It was just because I thought you were lonely and wanted me—and there were so many of us at home one could well be spared," Ladylove broke in, "and I had rather go back to daddy and the pigs and the chickens and the children and have only called frocks than marry this—"

She was standing at the last word, one little foot stamping hard as she spoke. Jack dared not look straight at her—if he did he knew he should catch her in his arms and comfort her. That would ruin everything, it was clearly a case for diplomacy. He said soothingly to Ladylove, "Hush, naughty girl!" Then to Aunt Nancy: "I agree with you, Miss Cresswell. Sandy Corlew is a fine, solid fellow, who may always be depended on to do the right thing. But please let me see his letter—"

"I'm not asking out of impertinent curiosity," as he saw denial in her face. "Do believe that! I—I have an idea—that that you may not have understood quite what he meant."

Jack's breath came fast as he said it. He was by turns hot and cold. But desperate cases require desperate remedies. He bent toward Miss Nancy and half forcibly took the letter, read it through twice, folded it, read it again, then stood with it in his hand, the model of one impelled to speak, yet loath to obey the impulse. Miss Nancy, watching him as a bird watches a snake, at last snapped out: "Well, what's the matter? Do you find anything strange or startling in the fact that a gentleman has the courage and decency to say outright he wants to marry my niece?"

"I do not," Jack said; then in a constrained voice: "But—forgive me, Miss Nancy—has he said so? I think not." "Why, bless and save us! Are you crazy?" Miss Cresswell demanded.

"Not a bit of it!" Jack retorted stoutly. "Only that you have misunderstood. Here is all the first page about how he has admired you all his life and now that he has reached man's estate 'hopes for a closer alliance.' And then with a manly courage most admirable he sums up, 'My heart is set on marrying the one woman in the world for me—Miss Nancy Walton Cresswell.' Ladylove is Nancy Walton Cresswell on the family register, but whoever heard her called so anywhere else?"

"Oh, you can't mean that! It would be too ridiculous," Miss Cresswell said, but as she said it she turned away her head to hide the blush that spread even to her round white chin. Ladylove sprang at her like a mad thing crying out: "It's true, Auntie Nan! It must be true. Sandy means you; nobody else. And you'll take him, and I'll adore my Uncle Sandy. He's only nicely fat after all, and I'm sure a pig's eyes can be kind and funny—"

"Ladylove, you forget yourself!" Jack said, his voice heavy with reproach. Then to Miss Cresswell: "Honestly I cannot doubt that Sandy meant you. That was why I insisted upon seeing the letter. I had heard him say things which made me sure you misunderstood, and I did not want you to make a grave mistake."

"Why, the boy is ten years younger than I am," Miss Cresswell said weakly, stealing a glance at herself in the mantel glass.

"And looks five years older at the very least," Jack said. "That is one advantage of being so—ahem—well, so finely built. At least think it over. Tell him you'll take a week to consider his proposal!"

"You don't think I could be so indelicate as to accept—I mean to say either yes or no—under a fortnight," Miss Cresswell said. "I'll write to Sandy that I must consult my brother and shall possibly give him a definite answer at the end of a fortnight."

With that she clutched the letter and vanished. The door had hardly shut behind her when Jack had Ladylove tight in his arms and was saying to the curls on the top of her head: "Honey girl, would you believe I sat up two full nights concocting that epistle for the good fat witted Sandy? Even at the last I was afraid he'd see through it, although truly it is a document you can read pretty well any way you choose. My heart was in my mouth until Aunt Nan took the bait. Now we two have plain sailing. Before the fortnight is up we can be—"

"What?" Ladylove asked breathlessly, freeing herself and standing in front of him on tiptoe. He caught both her hands and made her a reverence, saying softly: "Happy and married. My governor sailed for home three days back. Just let him get here, and I'll show the gossips I'm no such bad match for you as they have tried to make me out. He meant to stay away another year, but I cabled him how my life's happiness was at stake. Oh, I didn't doubt you, not the least. I knew you'd be equal to love in a cottage. Is our friendly enemies I wanted to confound."

"I'm wondering," Ladylove said in an almost awestruck whisper, "what Aunt Nan's answer will be."

"I hope yes, for Sandy's sake," Jack said. "But one can never tell what is going to happen when one man proposes as another man disposes."

The gossips of Creston were duly confounded. Jack married Ladylove, with Aunt Nan's beaming approval, the day before Sandy Corlew's probation ended. Such a piece of news, of course, ran through the country life wildfire. Sandy heard it about sundown and rode straight and hard to Cresswell. He found Miss Cresswell upon the porch there, a figure of graciously mature womanhood, wonderfully enchanting in the softening dusk. In spite of feeling that he had been fooled and played with, Sandy could not speak even gruffly when he asked, "What's all this cock and bull story of Ladylove marrying that artist chap Vanston and going off with him in a coach and four?"

"Oh, it's a real romance, a beautiful one!" Miss Cresswell said, rising and giving him her hand. She did it half shyly, as though fearing it might be detained. It was a very white hand, plump and dimpled as a baby's. Sandy held it between both his own big palms, while the owner of it ran on: "You see it was love at first sight with Jack and Ladylove, but I had to be cool to him because he was strange. Not a soul we knew had ever heard of him. He understood and really acted very well; waited until his father came to speak up for him. Then there was no withstanding them. I had to let them marry offhand!"

"I think you might have at least told me," Sandy said, half resentfully.

Miss Cresswell blushed—blushed unmistakably and said: "There were reasons against it. I—you see, I did not quite know my own mind. Besides it might have seemed to you—well, pre-emptive!"

"No such thing," Sandy said stoutly. Even through his denseness he began to see how the land lay. He began to see, too, how he could save his vanity from smart. Miss Cresswell was rich and handsome and kind. At the worst she could but refuse him.

"Now I am here, tell me you'll marry me Christmas," he went on masterfully. Miss Cresswell said nothing, only let him take her in his arms.

Five minutes later she whispered softly: "You owe Jack something Sandy—until he reads your letter I thought you wanted Ladylove."

"Oh, Jack is a wise guy!" Sandy said, with the accent of conviction.

The Man Who Knew It All. A Sixth avenue groceryman's boy appeared on the curb with a rat trap in his hand. Twenty pedestrians stopped at once and three dogs barked and leaped at the prisoner.

"Get out in the street!" shouted a voice.

"Give that rat a show!" added a second.

"Hold on till I get my dog!" piped a boy.

"Say, bub," interposed a fat man with a cane as he pushed his way into the crowd, "have you had any experience with rats? There's only one way to handle 'em. Let me take the trap."

With bad grace the boy surrendered it, and while some one held the fat man's cane he held the trap high over the street. When the spring door was opened six or seven dogs were waiting, and the rat didn't like the looks of things. He sprang from the door, twisted to the top of the trap and then jumped to the fat man's shoulder.

The crowd noisily fell back. The fat man yelled. The dogs butted in. One dog got the rat and four dogs got the fat man's legs. When that gentleman arose, his silk hat ruined, he demanded his cane. The holder had disappeared. "Rats!" shouted the crowd. And the fat man steamed fustily down the avenue.—New York Press.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

A Boy of Fifteen, Vomiting Quantities of Blood, and Given Up by Doctors to Die in Last Stages of Consumption, Marvelously Cured by

DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY.

A LETTER FROM HIS FATHER. Dear Sirs—My son Alfred is fifteen years and six months old. He had heart disease very bad, but I never knew he had consumption until the doctor said so. Six weeks ago he vomited a large quantity of blood, and for three weeks had hemorrhages three or four times a week. I had a doctor, and he prescribed medicines that I bought. I don't know the names of them, but they did the boy no good; the blood kept on coming in large quantities. Doctor said it was no use to come, he could do no good. He said it was a question of but a few days. I then had to tell him how my son was getting on, and he would write out another prescription. The case got worse, and I called in another doctor. He, too, said he could do no good; the boy would die. For a month he could not lie down. I had used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey eight years ago for my wife, and she got well, so I thought, as the second doctor said it was no use to come again, that I would try Duffy's for Alfred. He has used three bottles, according to directions, one teaspoonful to three of water, and in two weeks the hemorrhages had stopped and he has had none since. He is up and about, his appetite is good, and he is improving by leaps and bounds. I need scarcely say he is a living wonder. We had given him up, but thanks to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, he is alive today, free from the deadly consumption."—JAMES CLARK, 3215 Hoyne Avenue, Chicago.

A WONDERFUL CURE, almost beyond belief, and yet Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has cured thousands of just such cases—men, women and children given up to die of so-called incurable consumption.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey not only drives out consumption germs and heals the lungs but it builds up new tissue and renovates the entire system. It aids digestion, one teaspoonful and enriches the blood, tones up the heart, quiets the nerves, invigorates and builds up the body so that it will throw off all disease. At the Medical Convention in Albany one of the leading doctors said he would rather have Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to cure consumption, catarrh, asthma, grip, pneumonia, coughs, colds and diseases of the throat and lungs than all the quack medicines in the world, and the doctors present agreed with him unanimously. It is also prescribed by doctors for indigestion, dyspepsia and every form of stomach trouble, malaria and all low fevers. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is good for old and young. It has carried the blessing of health to hundreds of thousands of sufferers. Duffy's is absolutely pure, contains no fuel, and is the only whiskey recognized by the Government as a medicine. This is a guarantee. It is used exclusively in 2,000 hospitals.

CAUTION—When you ask for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. Unscrupulous dealers, mindful of the excellence of this preparation, will try to sell you cheap imitations and make whiskey substitutes, which are put on the market for profit only, and which far from relieving the sick, are positively harmful. Demand "Duffy's," and be sure you get it. It is the only absolutely pure Malt Whiskey which contains medicinal health giving qualities. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in sealed bottles only; never in flask or bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and be certain the seal over the cork is unbroken. Beware of refilled bottles. Sold by all druggists and grocers, or direct, $1.00 a bottle. Interesting medical booklet postpaid to any address. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, New York.

THE LATEST IN RAILROAD NEWS

Judge R. S. Lovett Is in the City On An Important Mission

R. S. Lovett, attorney for the Southern Pacific, is in New York City on what is said to be very important business in connection with the pending Rock Island-Central deal.

As has been repeatedly stated in the press, it is the opinion of railroad officials that the undesirable attitude of the Texas railroad commission in the transaction is the cause for the delay in making the announcement of the transfer.

The delay in closing up the transaction becomes more mysterious each day, but it is believed that when the real facts of the case are made public, if they ever are, it will be shown that the trouble came from the adverse action of the commission.

TO INDUCE FREIGHT REDUCTIONS A plan is being devised by which the railroads operating between Kansas City and St. Louis may be forced to grant lower freight rates than have prevailed.

MAY BE SO LATER Recently published reports which make B. F. Yoakum, president of the Frisco system, a director of the Rock Island, are now being strenuously denied from the New York office, but it is understood that Mr. Yoakum will enter the board at the next meeting of the directors.

TO REFUND BONDED DEBT A meeting was called to be held at Davenport, Iowa, this week, of the stockholders of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific for the purpose of authorizing the issuance of bonds amounting to $250,000,000.

"DEVIL'S AUCTION" Charles H. Yale's "Everlasting Devil's Auction," which has for twenty-one years held the confidence of the theater-going public to the extent of annually re-arranging the "Standing Room Only" sign in all cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, announces that the present season marks the twenty-second edition of this phenomenal play, and that the latest production of this famous show piece is undoubtedly the best that has yet been presented.

"THE LAND O' COTTON" In the play "The Land o' Cotton" are many situations to gladden the spectator, cause a laugh and to bring to the eyes tears of sympathetic pity.

THE STEREOTYPYER

A SKILLED WORKMAN WHO LABORS AMID HEAT AND FUMES

His Work Is But an Incident in the Production of a Modern Newspaper, But the Physical Requirements Are Great

The work of a stereotypy on a modern newspaper is a part of the process of publication concerning which the public knows but little. It requires a man of perfect health, for the heat is enormous and the air filled with the fumes of ordinary strength.

Mr. Gerdum lives at No. 202 Walnut street, Oakland, Topoka, Kan., and the story of the wonderful change in his condition is given in his own words. He says: "About a year ago I had a great deal of trouble with my stomach and what ever I ate caused me the utmost distress."

"I went to our family physician and he unhesitatingly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I got a box and commenced taking them. The improvement was noticeable from the first. I developed a wonderful appetite and went to meals as hungry as a bear."

Anyone having indigestion or dyspepsia can be cured if Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are given a sufficient trial. These pills act, not on the symptoms, but on the cause of disease and have cured not only indigestion and other forms of stomach trouble, but are a specific for all diseases arising from impoverished blood or shattered nerves.

FARMERS' INSTITUTES

State Agricultural College Wants to Awaken Interest

The A. and M. College, through its department of Farmers' Institutes, will organize and hold institutes at many points in the state during the fall and winter months, and communities wanting an organization are urged to notify the director of Farmers' Institutes as soon as possible.

These institute meetings bring together the farmer, the specialist and the scientist for instruction and discussion of agricultural problems, methods and crops, and as the winter season is now approaching farmers are urged to hold institute meetings for the discussion of methods and plans that may be advantageous.

For institute meetings competent lecturers will be supplied upon application to this department, and in making such application it is important to state the subject on which the lecture is desired.

The college specially desires the organization of institutes in counties where no institutes have been held, and the director solicits correspondence with interested persons in such counties, and if not more than one is interested and cannot work up sufficient interest for a meeting, the director of institutes will aid in working it up.

Address: R. L. Bennett, Director Farmers' Institutes, College Station, Texas.

Things Heard In Hotel Lobbies

Joe H. Simpson, "globe trotter," was in the city yesterday. He denies that he was with the circus and insists that he passed through on his way to San Angelo county to fish for a week or two.

James D. Leeper of Gainesville is in the city on a business trip. He is accompanied by Mrs. Leeper, and they have apartments at the Worth.

Rev. William Cross of Gainesville, rector of the Episcopal church there, is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Ferris. He made many friends while he was here recently during the absence of Rector Ramage of St. Andrews parish, and on this return trip he has been cordially welcomed.

Col. C. L. Potter of Gainesville, former state senator of that district, was here Thursday night en route home after participating in the argument before the higher court at Tyler on the Gainesville prohibition contest.

W. C. Henderson, past great sachem of the Improved Order of Red Men, was here Friday night for a visit. He has just returned from the great council of the United States, which met at Atlantic City, and is enthusiastic in his discussion of the future of the order.

Tom J. King of Gainesville, manager for the cotton business of William Bauer & Co. of Liverpool, is in the city on a business trip.

Captain William Lightfoot, deputy sheriff in charge of the official duties at Thurber, is here today shaking hands with old friends. He says the unions have become well organized in Thurber and every condition appears to be satisfactory.

Tony Day, a cowman of prominence, was here today and left for New Mexico, where he has large interests. Mr. Day controlled for many years the F ranch in Motley and Hale counties, which was one of the largest in west Texas at one time.

Judge John A. Hendricks of Marshall, N. C., is at the Worth. Judge Hendricks is of the department of justice at Washington and for months past has made frequent trips here, investigating claims which are pending against the government. He has made many acquaintances here, and each visit finds those who know him glad to welcome him.

GOSSIP OF THE RING AND TURF

Here is a record of the fastest miles in various lines of sporting endeavor: Lou Dillon, champion trotting horse, who has recently traveled a mile in 2 minutes.

Major Delmar, champion trotting horse, who September 25 trotted a mile in 2 minutes, equalling Lou Dillon's feat.

Prince Alert, champion pacing horse, who paced a mile in 1:57 against time, September 22.

Dick Welles, champion running horse, who has a record of one mile in 1 minute 37 3-5 seconds.

M. Augieres, champion automobilist, who drove his machine in France at the rate of a mile in 45 seconds.

R. R. Flyer, on the Plant system, which did its mile between Fleming and Jacksonville in 30 seconds.

The Reliance, champion sailing yacht, whose fastest time made in recent races was 1 mile in 4 minutes 57 seconds.

W. J. George, champion man runner, who covered a mile in the remarkable time of 4 minutes 12 3-4 seconds.

Joe Wilson, the champion bicyclist, who made his mile in 1 minute 18 3-5 seconds.

PROTEST AGAINST WIND SHIELD The crusade which has been started against the wind shield protection used in making track records has been taken up by the Memphis Trotting association.

F. G. Jones, president, and Murray Howe, secretary of the Memphis association, have put their foot down on the new device and announced it is made that it will be excluded from the trials scheduled at Memphis during the meeting commencing October 20.

C. K. G. Billings, who built the Memphis track and who owns Lou Dillon, the trotting queen, will try to raise her two-minute mark on October 20, has been appealed to for final advice, and he is known to be adverse to the shield, it is not likely that any world's records will be established here with its aid.

The Memphis officials take the view that the new device should not be tolerated for official records any more than a kite-shaped track. Other horsemen in favor of an artificial device than the bike sulky was at the time of replacing the old-fashioned high wheel affair.

LOU DILLON NOT ENTERED Entries to class events of the Memphis Trotting association average 19 horses to the race.

It was noticeable that, while E. E. Smathers has named Maj. Delmar to meet Charley Herr, Dan T., Walnut Hall, Billy Buck and rhythmic in the free-for-all, the name of C. K. G. Billings' Lou Dillon is missing.

In the Memphis gold cup for amateur drivers both Lou Dillon and Maj. Delmar are entered. Smathers has also entered Billy Buck, Ma. Higwood, Westworth and Queen Wilkes. Billings entered The Monk, Equity and Clarita. The only entry outside of these made by Billings and Smathers is The Roman, who is named for the contest by J. S. Smith of Chamlicothe, O.

AT THE RING SIDE Terry McGovern, the ex-featherweight champion, will be out of the fighting game for a month at least, owing to an injury received in his bout with Billy Willis last Saturday night at Philadelphia.

McGovern said that if he had not injured his hand in the first part of the bout he would have knocked his man out. McGovern had his hand examined at a Brooklyn hospital, and he was told by the physician that it would be necessary for him to take a rest for at least a month. McGovern was billed to go on with Jimmy Briggs of Boston but the bout is called off for the present.

GARDNER GETS READY George Gardner is at West Baden just at present, where he will stay for a day or two, and then leave for San Francisco, where he is matched to fight Bob Fitzsimmons November 28. Gardner is below the stipulated weight, and while he is in San Francisco his training will be light.

Australian Jimmy Ryan, Carl Strong and Bill Jackson will assist him in his training.

YOUNG CORBETT HEARD FROM Young Corbett, the featherweight champion is matched to fight Tim Callahan in Philadelphia in a six-round affair. Corbett will also take on Sammy Smith. The Denverite is doing his training for these fights at a quaker roadhouse. Harry Tut-hill is looking after his work and John Burdick is boxing with him.

WILL FIGHT AT 122 POUNDS Kid Abel, with his manager, Nick Alligretti, are at West Baden, where they will stay for several weeks. Abe is reported in fine shape, and will go to the coast from West Baden. His manager declared he is ready to bet from $1,000 to $5,000 on him against any 122-pounder in the business.

KID CARTER TO MEET WALCOTT Kid Carter, who fought Gus Rubin for a standstill twice, is matched to meet Joe Walcott for ten rounds at Boston on Oct. 12.

TED SULLIVAN'S WORK A sensational baseball story cropped to the surface today when some small reached Club Owner Marjorie Johnson from the headquarters of the National Association of Minor League Baseball Clubs, says the Galveston Tribune. It is Secretary Farrell alleges that Ted Sullivan has been quietly working to form an opposition league in this section, with Fort Worth and Dallas to be taken in from the north. He enlisted the co-operation of a Galveston capitalist to that end and had plans laid for financial assistance in Beaumont, Houston and San Antonio.

To make the league successful, however, protection from the National Association of Minor League Baseball Clubs had to be secured in order to keep players from jumping their contracts. Sullivan was led to believe that the South Texas League had failed to pay its protection money for 1904 at the last minute (September 26) and that left him free to do as he pleased down here. Said to say, though, when Sullivan applied to Secretary Farrell for protection he was tartly informed that the South Texas League of Baseball Clubs was still in good standing, had paid its dues and met every requirement of the association and that nothing could be done for him until dissolution came through financial weakness or other causes.

Mr. Sullivan is too old a hand in the business to try to run an outlaw league in any section, so he has graciously and quietly given up his plan, and his Galveston friend is, unknowingly, money in pocket.

"We've known about this all along," said Mr. Johnson, "and paid no more attention to it than an elephant would to a fly. Our protection money for next season was wired to Farrell immediately after the close of the regular season. We'll be in the ring stronger than ever next year."

The scheme outlined was known of in Houston. A few "ex-magnates" and would-be were very quiet about their part in it, but they were being assiduously conferring with the chief letter writer, who talks a great deal, and there was a leak. There is not likely to be anything further of it. The four-club league was a success, and when the ex-magnates were running baseball they didn't live the season through.

ABILENE FEDERAL BUILDING The new federal building at Abilene, which was put up by John Barton of this city, is practically completed and will be turned over to the government in a short time. The building was near enough to completion to permit of the present term of federal court being held in it. When completed the building will cost $30,000. Contractor Barton is now working on a new federal building for Dallas. The construction work is progressing very satisfactorily.

FINE TEXAS GRAPES Collecting Agent Graham of the Texas World's Fair Exhibit has received a collection of fine Texas grapes that are hard to beat. The variety is Flaming Tokay and one of the several bunches sent in weighs three and a quarter pounds, and other bunches are nearly as large. They were raised by Carson & Chaney of Barstow, Ward county.

Agent Graham said today that he will soon be on the road again in the interest of the World's Fair exhibit collections. He will likely make a trip over the Texas and Pacific next. He reports that exhibits are coming very well and that the Texas show will no doubt be as great as any other from the south.

GAMES FOR TODAY Yale-Springfield, at New Haven, 7-5. Harvard-Amherst, at Cambridge, 6-0. Princeton-Brown, at Providence, 12-0. Pennsylvania-Penn State, at Philadelphia, 17-0. Cornell-Colgate, at New York, 5-0. Columbia-Williams, at New York, 4-0. Carlisle-Franklin and Marshall, at Lancaster. Dartmouth-Union, at Hanover. Chicago-Purdue, at Chicago, 33-0. Michigan-Beloit, at Ann Arbor. Wisconsin-Lawrence, at Madison, 11-0.

ON THE GIRDIRON The football games of last week proved exceptionally interesting to the girldiron follower. It was remarkable, chiefly because of the failure of two of the "big four," which appeared to have promising teams, to live anywhere near up to expectations.

Shaping up in the middle of the week by defeating Swarthmore 24 to 6, Princeton fell down miserably in the Saturday game with Georgetown and could only pull out a 5 to 6 victory, and that only after Georgetown had been thrown back three successive downs when it was their ball on Princeton's one-yard line and first down.

Scholarship has played havoc with some of the Tiger's most promising candidates. Kafer, the star hurdling full-back, failed to rid himself of delinquencies in the past week and now watches the game from the stand. Bradley, the heavy guard, is also blacklisted by the faculty, but there remains another chance for him next week.

Harvard did not come up to what was expected of her either. For two twenty-minute halves the University of Maine team played the Crimson to a standstill and it was only a forty-yard run that netted Harvard her only touchdown. The interference, hitherto fast and compact, became unaccountably slow and stringy and back breaks were time and again swept off their feet before they were well under way. The work of the entire crimson team was a great disappointment to the coach, who had expected a far better showing.

Cornell was another team that had its own troubles, but the failure of Saturday was not a very great surprise, as the practice had been miserable throughout the week. The game resulted in the appearance of Brewster for the first time on Monday. Brewster is counted by many experts as the best quarter back of the season.

Pennsylvania, playing poorly early this year, came along with a rush and put up a whirlwind game against the strong Lehigh team. The improvement was due to the expert handling of the team by Carson, the new quarter back.

Yale plugged along throughout the week at a steady, though not brilliant, gait. The New Haven eleven has met nothing of any great caliber as yet, and Yale men are still in the dark as to the team's real strength. There is such a fine record back of nearly all the players, however, that there seems to be no occasion for worry just now.

TRANSFER OF PUPILS Twenty-eight Transferred Children Were Found in the City Schools Superintendent Alexander Hogg of the public schools, assisted by the various principals, has made an investigation to ascertain how many pupils living outside the city limits are attending the various schools. The result is as follows.

Building No. 1—Three transferred from Riverside. Building No. 2—One transferred and two pay pupils. Building No. 4—Three transfers. Building No. 6—Six with doubtful guardians. (These will be personally investigated.) Building No. 7—Two transfers. Building No. 8—Five transfers and one doubtful guardianship. Building No. 9—Four transfers. Or in the aggregate, nineteen transfers two pay pupils and of doubtful guardianship, seven, or a total of 28 pupils.

By transfers it is meant that these children are within the jurisdiction of the county superintendent, but for convenience they are transferred to the city schools and the amount of the state and county apportionment for each child is turned over to the city to defray the tuition. This is done under the following rule: Scholastic pupils residing beyond the corporate limits may, according to the laws of the state of Texas, obtain a transfer from the county superintendent, and may attend any of the city schools for such length of time as their parents will pay for tuition in the same, after which they may attend upon the conditions heretofore prescribed.

These transferred pupils will be permitted to remain in the schools until the several apportionments appropriated for them have been absorbed, and they must then quit, or pay tuition under the rules of the city schools. If it is determined at any time that the seats occupied by such pupils are needed for those who rightly belong in the city schools, the money will be returned to the county superintendent so the children may be provided for elsewhere.

DETERMINED ...TO WED (Original.) Arnold Treat was thirty-five and an eminent man. When he spoke in court the people turned out to hear him and were spellbound at his eloquence. A number of young women set their caps for him, but he would have none of them.

At last he met Eugenia Duffield and was captured. Miss Duffield was twenty-eight and director on the boards of hospitals and helping hand societies. She had a fine figure, a firm step and carried her head erect on her shoulders. Her administrative ability was remarkable, and it was this that made her valuable as a manager.

When Miss Duffield and Mr. Treat announced their engagement the world said, "What a splendid match!" All went well with the lovers till one day a suit was brought against one of the institutions of which the lady was managing director, and she put the case in the hands of Mr. Treat. In submitting it she told him the incidents leading up to the trouble, to which he listened attentively. Then she gave him the line of defense, he was to pursue, to which he listened respectfully. She finished by stating what she conceived to be the law bearing on the case, and he appeared a trifle bored. As a last word she directed him to proceed in every particular on the lines she had laid down.

"Do I understand," he asked, "that I am to try the case as your assistant or your attorney?" Miss Duffield without a word folded up the papers and marched away with the remark, "You'll not try it at all."

Before the end of a week it was announced that the engagement was broken. Nevertheless the breaking of it was a great disappointment to both Mr. Treat and Miss Duffield. It was finally renewed after she had acknowledged herself in the wrong, for her brother was a lawyer and told her she had acted like a fool. For awhile the couple were very happy. Their trouble came again, this time from the side of the man. He had a protegee, whom he endeavored to get into Miss Duffield's hospital. She informed him that under the rules the patient was not admissible, whereupon Mr. Treat remarked that he would apply at a hospital where there were more elastic rules.

"Do you mean to imply," asked Miss Duffield, "that our rules are not proper ones?" "They are not such as I should approve. I am on the board at St. Luke's, you know."

"Our institution doesn't follow the leadership of St. Luke's by any means. I think you had better take your patient to your own hospital."

"I did not ask your advice. I asked admittance for the patient at your hospital."

Immediately after this interview it was announced again that the engagement was broken. "That will never be a match," said a veteran matrimonial observer. "You might as well put two captains in command of the same ship."

However, the two lovers were miserable apart, and this time at the suit of the man they came together again. Then they concluded that once married they would learn to work in double harness and decided to make a plunge into matrimony, and the wedding day was set. One day Mr. Treat drove up to Miss Duffield's residence and, alighting from his carriage, ran up the steps and rang the bell.

"I have just heard," he said when his ladylove came down, "that our wedding is to be the largest and most brilliant ever held in this city. This I hear from others, while I, the principal participant, have not been consulted."

"First," replied Miss Duffield, "I was not aware that you were to be the principal participant; second, I consider you on such an occasion without any rights whatever, and, third, the woman's will as to marriage ceremonies being absolute, I did not think it necessary to inform you."

"I think it necessary," said the groom expectant, flushing, "to inform you that I detest spectacular performances and would not consent to make a guy of myself on any account."

"You'll neither make a guy nor a groom of yourself with me," replied the lady. "We will consider this affair off for the third and last time."

The next step in this affair, after weeks of misery on the part of both, was a note from the man, which by a singular coincidence crossed one from the woman. The man's note asked for an interview; the woman's invited him to call. When they met the man began: "I have called to say that I have found it impossible for me to live without you. I confess that I expect to find it impossible to live with you and have my own way about anything. Therefore I have called to beg for one more trial. The first time I attempt to have my own way you may break the engagement."

"I have come to a similar conclusion," said the woman. "I confess that I have been very miserable. I have sent for you to say that if you care to try it once more we will be married as privately as you wish."

"That is the woman's part. I am ready to submit to as resplendent an affair as you desire."

They were married before a few friends and went on their wedding trip. That was five years ago. They are married today and comparatively happy. But they do not live as married people usually live. The man lives at his club, the woman at her own home. He dines with her twice a week and frequently takes her to the opera or to a party.

 Reading—"The Major's Appointment".....Ora Archer
 Orator—"The Man of Imagination".....W. R. McCauley
 Piano—Impromptu (Schubert).....M. Dunlap
 Reading—"Aux Talents".....L. Cameron Boone
 Violin solo.....Jacob Schreiner
 After the program has been rendered a social hour will be enjoyed. All friends are cordially invited.

MRS. HOSKINS CASE
 had any more witnesses. Mr. Lattimore said he had sent an instant attachment for the nurse, Wesson.
 "I can't wait for Mr. Wesson," said Judge Smith.
 "I have sent for Mrs. Burgess."
 "I can't wait for Mrs. Burgess."
 "I have sent for Miss Eberling."
 "I can't wait for her."
 The jury then was permitted to retire while Mr. Lattimore argued on the admissibility of Mr. Buck's testimony.
 Mr. Buck was put on the stand in order that the judge might hear what he had to say and thus be enabled to pass upon its admissibility. Among other things Mr. Buck said that while he was endeavoring to question Oran Hoskins, Mrs. Hoskins insisted on answering the questions. After the three-cornered conversation had proceeded for some time Hoskins sat up on the side of the bed and swung his feet to and fro. Mr. Buck testified that Oran told him he first recovered consciousness some time between the first and second trials of the civil suit.
 "Mr. Buck, you know that's not so," said Mrs. Hoskins, passionately.
 Mr. Buck paid no attention to the interruption. He said that he asked Oran why he kept up the semblance of insensibility after he regained consciousness. He quoted Hoskins as replying that he heard the people about his bedside talking about some man having been arrested for conspiracy and for some reason or other determined to feign the condition he formerly was really in.
 This testimony was not permitted to go to the jury.

WESSON'S STRONG TESTIMONY
 At this time M. B. Wesson, who nursed Hoskins when he was at the sanitarium the second time, arrived and was put on the stand as soon as the jury could be brought in. He said that there was an interval of four or five hours between the time Hoskins returned to consciousness and the arrival of his mother, and that Hoskins talked freely and rationally with him during that time. He said that after the arrival of the mother, the pair held a low-toned conversation during which they were trying to make arrangements to communicate with each other after their separation. The idea, he said, was that the mother was to leave the city in order to prevent arrest by the police. Their arrangement contemplated an intermediary, he said, one to whom a letter intended for Hoskins could be sent without being addressed to him.
 "Mrs. Hoskins suggested that perhaps I would do to transmit letters between them, but I declined to enter into the plan."
 He was asked if Hoskins complained of the treatment to which he was subjected while in the operating room. He said that Hoskins asked him if they, meaning the doctors, burned his feet. He told him that they did not, but had pricked his feet with needles.
 He did not complain of the treatment.
 On cross-examination witness denied that he thought Hoskins was dead twice while he was in the operating room. He said that Hoskins told him he did not care what become of himself, but he wanted to protect his mother.
 "He told me she was going down the Santa Fe, but gave the impression that she was only going a few miles."
HOSKINS NOT FRIGHTENED
 He said that Hoskins was not frightened at any time, but after it was all over, seemed greatly disappointed. He told witness that he was positively hurt, but upon regaining consciousness heard the people about his bed talking, not the drift of their object and decided to "carry it out." On being further questioned, witness said that Hoskins told him that he gathered from what they said the idea that there was a suit pending and that he could further the suit by continuing the sham. He did not tell those about him that he was shamming. He could not fix the date when he returned to consciousness.

 When this witness was told to stand aside, Judge Smith asked if there were any more witnesses. Mr. Lattimore had several more witnesses for whom he had sent. Judge Smith asked if it was possible for the lawyers to close the case at once, to which Mr. Lattimore replied that he thought not.
 "Then I'll close the case myself," said Judge Smith. "The case is closed. How much time do you want for argument?"
 A recess was then taken in order that the lawyers might agree upon time.
 A few minutes later an agreement was reached to hold a night session. Miss Johanna Eberling, who nursed Hoskins part of the time at the sanitarium, then appeared. She was put on the stand and identified the record which Dr. Wesson had brought from the sanitarium. She marked her own entries. "The whole record was admitted."
 The proceedings of the night session are given in the fore part of this article.

DISAPPROVAL IS STRONGLY MANIFESTED
Stock Yards Business Men Strenuously Object to Present Street Car Service
 A meeting was held in North Fort Worth yesterday afternoon to protest against the service given by the Northern Texas Traction Company. It was called by the following: C. A. Lyford, C. L. Brown, S. D. Greene, Cassidy, Southwestern Commission Company, Campbell & Rosson Live Stock Commission Company, per James K. Rosson; John F. Grant, North Texas Live Stock Commission Company; J. P. Daggett, Panther City Live Stock Commission Company, by H. Rogers; National Live Stock Commission Company, J. F. Hovenkamp; Fort Worth Stock Yards Company, by W. B. King; Strahorn-Hutton Evans Commission Company, by J. W. Montague, manager state of Texas; Interstate Live Stock Commission Company, Ed F. Smith; Fort Worth Live Stock Commission Company, V. S. Wardlaw, secretary; George W. Saunders Commission Company, Barse Commission Company, M. M. Hargis; Panhandle Live Stock Commission Company, per A. M. Moore; Greer, Mills & Co., by D. S. Wyrick and J. E. McCarthy; the Flato Commission Company, Horace Wilson; Stock Yards National Bank.
 The meeting was largely attended. R. H. McNatt presided and V. S. Wardlaw was secretary.
 As a sense of the meeting the following communications were drawn up and sent officially, one to the North Fort Worth city council and the other to the management of the Traction Company:
 To the Honorable City Council of North Fort Worth, Tex.:
 Gentlemen: We, the members of the Fort Worth Live Stock Exchange, most respectfully submit and call your attention to the street car service now being furnished to the stock yards. The apparent inexcusable delay in furnishing transportation is a great inconvenience to all of the business interests of the stock yards and packing industry located in North Fort Worth, and would most respectfully ask you to take this matter up with the management of the street railway company and see if we cannot get some relief. Respectfully,
 R. H. McNATT, President.
 V. S. WARDLAW, Secretary.

F. M. HAINES, Esq., Manager Street Railway Company, North Fort Worth, Texas:
 Dear Sir: We, the members of the Fort Worth Live Stock Exchange, would most respectfully call your attention to the service now being rendered by your company to the Fort Worth stock yards. The lack of service and the long promises that you have made to extend the line to the stock yards seem to be almost inexcusable. The number of people that are at the mercy of your road and now being forced to walk a half mile through the mud and slob is certainly unjust and unfair. We have been promised this road for almost one year, and still the service is now in a worse condition than at the beginning.
 We hope that you will take this matter in hand at once, and see that the proper service is rendered. Respectfully,
 R. H. McNATT, President.
 V. S. WARDLAW, Secretary.
 The Telegram investigated the protest against the bad service by the Northern Texas Traction Company this morning, calling upon the managers of both the packing plants in North Fort Worth, Swift & Co. and Armour & Co.
 At the plant of Swift & Co. Manager Joseph B. Goggins said: "It is true the service has been bad on the old line, but as we understand it the company is making an effort to get the new line finished so that it can be put into commission. We considered that the work was being done as fast as possible, and that the new line would be used just as soon as it could be finished. I notice that the wires are over head and that the track is laid, and all remains is for the connection. I think the Northern Texas Traction Company has done a good work in putting in the line it has. Heavy steel has been put down, and the company, in my opinion, has made every effort to complete its work. We are willing to be easy on the company as long as it is making the effort it is to improve its system."
 Mr. Cargill of Armour & Co. was seen. He said: "I find Mr. Haines anxious to do all he can to accommodate us. When I discovered some time ago that I could not reach here on the proper car before the whistle sounded I called the attention of Mr. Haines to it, and he asked me to indicate what change was necessary to accommodate the employees of the plant. He said that he considered that our business made his business and he wanted to do all he could to accommodate us. I indicated the running time I thought necessary and the change was made. While the service is not as good as it might be, yet I feel satisfied the company is doing its best to get the new line in running order, and when it is running it will accommodate every one. I really think the company should have a double track out here."
 H. A. Judd, manager of Armour & Co., was seen. "We did not participate in the meeting yesterday," said he. "We were invited to attend and when the call for the meeting was presented to me I hurriedly signed it, not thinking as it was just at the close of office hours and I was leaving the place. I think the company is doing everything it can to get the new line to work, and I am disposed to be lenient with them because of the difficulties under which they work. I remember what the system was before this company took hold of it, and I think the improvement is great. It is as well handled as any single track street railway system I ever saw."
 John K. Rosson of the Campbell & Rosson company said: "We considered it was time to protest against the system and therefore had the meeting. We have been waiting a year for the improvement and it has not been given us and we are tired of walking through the mud from that old bridge where the car now stops. We don't want to do this all winter and so made the protest."
 V. S. Wardlaw was seen. He was secretary of the meeting yesterday. He said: "The whole thing is told in our report. It was a large, representative meeting, and we made the protest because we want a better service. We are tired of being treated as we are."
 General Manager F. M. Haines of the traction company was seen about the matter. He said: "We have been working to get the new line started and it has been generally known with all the company people that the change to the new line would be made Monday. Had the people who participated in the meeting made an inquiry they would have been told that the service would be installed October 12. We were delayed because it was necessary to put in a switch north of Marine."
 "Mr. Cargill suggested that you need a double track," he was told.
 "I am willing to put it in the minute I can. It will be necessary to get permission from the two municipal corporations, Fort Worth and North Fort Worth, and I would be glad to have it. We are hurrying the new line to completion as fast as possible and it will be in next Monday. I have told the managers of the two packing plants that I will start my cars at whatever hour they indicate it is necessary for the convenience of their employes."

PERSONALS.
 It will always be found a little better and perhaps a little cheaper at the William Henry & R. E. Bell Hardware Co., 1618-17 Main and 513-15 Houston streets.

NO LIVES WERE LOST
 PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 10.—The village of Duttonville, near here, was one of the worst sufferers from the flood, but so far as is known there was no loss of human life. Over one hundred houses were swept away, many of them being wrecked by the breaking of the fifteen-foot embankment of the Erie railroad, behind which a large volume of water gathered. The flood poured down into Duttonville carrying everything before it.
 The village of Wallington, a suburb of this city, is submerged in from six to twelve feet of water. The inhabitants went about in boats today. At least a hundred houses were moved from their foundations, and in some cases turned completely over.
THE FLIGHT OF BIRDS
 There is conclusive evidence to show that in unbroken nocturnal flight the European bird known as the Northern bluebreast passes from Central Africa to the German sea, a distance of 1,500 miles, making the journey in nine hours. From its winter home in Africa, observations have determined that it starts after sunset, arriving at its far northern summer haunts before dawn on the next morning.
A POWERFUL RIFLE.
 The new Springfield rifle is probably the most effective military arm in the world. At a distance of 50 feet it penetrates 55 one-inch pine boards placed one inch apart. It has a muzzle velocity of 2,300 feet per second and carries a ball five miles, although one mile is the greatest distance that any rifle can be effective, even with telescope sight.

 Rev. Junius B. French, D. D., was called to St. Louis last Tuesday on account of the severe and sudden illness of his mother, Mrs. J. H. French this morning and will preach at the Broadway Presbyterian church tomorrow at 11 a. m. Monthly praise service will be held at night.
 The Woman's Auxiliary of the Taylor Street Cumberland Presbyterian church will meet next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the church parlors. The "quiz" on the Missionary Record will be conducted by Mrs. M. A. Cunningham.
 The Country Club's usual Thursday night reception will be held on Tuesday night this coming week. The house committee asks that members take note. There was no reception this week and it is hoped that attendance next Tuesday will make up for the omission.
A PHYSICIAN'S RESPONSIBILITY
 A popular impression prevails that the physician, by reason of the privileges conferred on him by the state, is, in the absence of an adequate reason for doing so, required to respond to all calls for professional services. This is clearly erroneous, except where the physician has already undertaken the treatment of the case, or except where he is an officer of the government charged with specific duties which he thereby violates.

MRS. WONG KAI KAH A CELESTIAL AMBASSADRESS TO THE OCCIDENT

By Sarah Comstock

Suppose that a New Woman
In China held her sway,
And studied Parliamentary Law
And called herself B. A.;
Suppose she took to club life
With all its downs and ups—
What sort of ladies would be left
To decorate our cups?

ROBED in gorgeous embroideries, adorned with splendid, barbaric jewels, jingling with countless bells, a wonderful little Chinese woman toddled into America not long ago.

She toddles, because she can't help herself. Her feet were bound long years ago with the torturing bandages that mean swiftness in China, and she will never be able to walk in anything except crippled fashion. But she longs to have two firm, free feet with which to tread this American soil of ours, for she is that rarest of rare persons, an advanced Chinese woman.

"I wish I could speak so loud that all the women of China would hear," she said, through her English-speaking husband.

"What would you say to them, Mrs. Wong?"

This Chinese Woman Disapproves of Foot Binding.

"I would say—oh, so loud—'Leave the feet of the women unbound. There is more than physical strength in a firm, elastic step. It gives courage and confidence to the mind as well.'"

This little teacher of a big truth is no less a person than the wife of Wong Kai Kah, Vice-Imperial Commissioner to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. She has lately arrived in St. Louis with her husband, who comes to make all arrangements for the display that China is preparing. This is the first time in history that the Chinese government has placed an official exhibit at one of these World's Fairs, and it is a fat plum in the way of honor to be given charge of it. But Mr. Wong is not to have that plum all to himself.

"I shall oversee all the interior decorations of our building," Mrs. Wong announces complacently, while Mr. Wong beams proudly and informs you in flawless English that she is most artistic.

"All the women of China are that," he adds, with a glance that says better than words, "but my wife is the prize package." His words would never say that, for his English is the uncorrupted kind that text books have taught him. He is a graduate of Yale, class of '83, and he has probably given a great deal of his own broad-mindedness to his wife; but far more of it is all her own.

Advanced Courtesy from a High-Bred Celestial.

"I am very glad to see you," she says to her American visitors, and she extends a tapering hand in a droll, rigid way, as if it were made of wood.

Think of what it means for one of the aristocratic Chinese women to do that. As a rule, they are by no means glad to see you, nor have they a hand ready to extend. Madame Wu Tingfang was considered remarkable because she showed us friendliness. Mrs. Ho Yow, wife of the famous consul in San Francisco, was never seen except by her own race. A camel could get through the eye of a needle just as readily as any of us could win the favor of one of the rich merchant's wives in San Francisco.

So Mrs. Wong's funny little wooden hand means a great deal more than the ordinary "glad hand" of our own casual life. It means that she has come to America full of good feeling toward us, and that she intends both to teach and to learn.

"You do not know all you should know about the women of my race," she says. "They are not so narrow as you think. I shall be glad to tell you something of them. And I wish to learn much more about you that I may teach them new things of great value."

Mrs. Wong Will Decorate the Chinese Building at St. Louis.

It is true that all the wonderful decorations of the Chinese Building at St. Louis are to be under the direction of Mrs. Wong. This fact alone should teach Americans something of the Chinese woman's ability. After American carpenters have put up the rough framework, after imported workmen have elaborated upon that framework with carved wood and topped screens are to be placed, ivories must be put where they will show to the best advantage. There is only one person to whom Commissioner Wong will entrust this work of art, and that person is his wife.

There Are Four Plump and Frisky Little Wong Babies.

There are four little Wongs, who frisk so fast that you can't count them, and you have to take their parents' word for the number. This is the extent of the Wong family in St. Louis. With them came a retinue of servants, also men who are engaged upon the exhibition building. They stopped at American hotels on their way, and they were determined to keep house by the time they reached St. Louis. So there is to be a Wong residence here during the winter.

"Your hotels are charming," Mrs. Wong says, apologetically, "but I grow a little homesick for my Chinese dishes. You would miss your style of cooking in China, would you not? None of your hotels seem to serve the paste balls filled with shrimps, and I never feel that a dinner is finished soups served with floating fruits. You must not consider me impolite. This is merely a matter of custom."

But she likes us immensely in spite of our menus.

The Women of China Are to Be Enlightened.

"I shall tell as many Chinese women as possible all about your women when I return," she said. She was so eager to talk that she could not bear to wait while her husband interpreted, and she kept up a chatter that sounded like a thousand tiny women to know how yours study for advanced learning, and how they enter into many lines of work and show great independence in all phases of life. I want to see my sisters broader in their ideas. There is no reason why they should be kept so closely at home. I wish that they might travel more and study many branches that they now know nothing of."

"What do they study now?"
"Ah, perhaps you think I cannot answer that. I believe Americans consider us far more ignorant than and embroidery and house decoration. While you seek degrees in mathematics, do not forget that these feminine accomplishments are of value."

Of value! She need not mention that to any one who sees her trousseau. I looked at the marvellous blue and rainbow robe that she wore, and wondered what trigonometry and physics had to offer that could make up for the possession of that robe.

Marvelous Crimson and Pink and White Embroidered Peonies.

The fingers of those little Chinese women whom American women call ignorant had wrought those marvellous pink and crimson and white peonies that wound in an intricate design about the phoenixes which looked ready to fly away.

"All our embroideries are full of symbols," she said, patting the robe with the satisfaction that the wearer of a Paris trousseau shows. "The phoenix is the mythical bird that always rises from the ashes. The peonies signify long life. So this robe should bring me longevity."

The phoenix robe, priceless in its wealth of embroidery, is nothing but a long, shapeless coat hanging loosely to the knees. Below it Mrs. Wong displayed a gay skirt heavily embroidered in every color. Near the bottom of this the bells were hung—rows of tiny golden bells that kept up a merry jingle at every motion. The skirt barely touched the floor. From under it the misshapen feet peeped out, the slipper-toes coming to an absurd little point.

"My daughters have unbound feet," she said. "I did not have any choice in the matter of mine, for they were bound while I was a helpless child. There are two reasons for leaving the feet free. The child is better off, and the mother has less trouble, for small-foot children must be carried so much."

"But you mean to keep to Chinese fashions with this exception of shoes?"

"Certainly I do—not because of prejudice, but because I really think that the robes of our country are the most beautiful in the world. Don't you think these are rather pretty?" she added, and threw open a trunk.

A Chinese Gentlewoman's Dazzling and Wonderful Wardrobe.

There lay the splendid array of gowns that she has brought to wear at functions in St. Louis. It was dazzling to western eyes. There were clinging skirts of an infinite variety of colors, and coats showing the most marvellous needlework. Beaming with pride, she laid out one after another. There was one of grass-green satin wrought in a myriad of tiny butterflies, no two of the same color. Another was of pale yellow brocade strikingly ornamented with daring bands of black. One of royal blue satin flaunted huge gold dragons, and on the back of it appeared two golden and impossible lions tossing a ball.

"Do you like my jewels, too?" she asked, and stretched out a hand for me to examine her bracelets.

She was wearing four pairs of bracelets, two pairs of the deep yellow gold that the Chinese use, one pair of strung jade beads, and the fourth studded with pearls and blood rubies. Then she called attention to a chain that hung against her coat. It was of all colors—jewels strung together at random just as the colors in the embroidery seemed to be blended. There were big uncut pearls, pieces of green and, still more precious, white jade, crystals as pink as a rose, and immense amethysts.

Short of Stature, Stooping of Carriage and Gentle of Manner.

The little woman who is the possessor of all this splendor is hardly five feet tall by a rough guess, rather stooping in carriage, and gentle to the extreme in manner. Her black hair is drawn to the nape of the neck and held by jeweled pins. So far as one can see and still be polite, she has no eyebrows of her own, but heavy painted lines take the place of what nature seems not to have provided. Her cheeks are rouged, her lips colored brilliantly red, the whole face is powdered. It is mask-like in its artificiality. But the little Kiang Su lady is only following the custom of her people.

"She is the first lady from the Kiang Su province to come to America," Mr. Wong said. "I suppose that is why people took such an interest in her on the steamer. They photographed her all the time. She is a curiosity," he added ingenuously.

"I have the photographs," she put in, and hurried as best she could to produce an album. In it she has preserved all the pictures that kodaking tourists made of her, proud in the knowledge that she was considered a "curiosity."

So even to the kodak album she is adopting American fads. Mrs. Wong will have a year of thorough Americanism, in the midst of representative Americans. Her mind is open to all that America has to offer. When she goes back to China and propounds her up-to-date ideas she will make history among

GOOD RECEIPTS FOR Peach Pie and Tomatoes

An English Peach Pie.

Peel a dozen or eighteen fine ripe peaches. Put the peels in a large sauce pan, just cover them with water and let them simmer to nearly a pulp. Then press them till all the juice is out through a fine sieve; return the liquid to the sauce pan, add the peaches, stand them over the fire and add a generous tablespoonful of sugar to each peach. Cover the sauce pan and let the peaches cook gently till rather soft. While they are cooking make a rich paste, allowing  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a pound of butter to 1 pound of flour. After mixing and rolling out the paste, fold it and stand it on the ice.

Take a large, deep earthen baking dish and fill it with the peaches, pouring the juice over them. Grate a little nutmeg over the top and dust on a little flour. Roll out the paste rather thick, cut little gashes in the center, and cover the fruit with it, pressing it closely about the edge of the dish. Make little indentations all around, stand in the oven and bake till the crust is a delicate brown. Then remove from the oven and stand the pie in a cool place. It should be eaten cold with cream.

Peach Ice Cream.

Peel and cut in quarters enough ripe peaches to make a quart when chopped fine. Sweeten the chopped peaches palatably, then measure a quart and a pint of cream and sweeten it very sweet with pulverized sugar, stirring it briskly with a patent egg whip till the sugar is dissolved. Gradually add the sweetened peaches to the cream, then put the mixture in a patent freezer and freeze as by the directions which always come with freezers.

Delicious Stewed Tomatoes.

Scald the tomatoes, strip off the skins, put the tomatoes in a sauce pan over the fire, with your hands crush the tomatoes to a pulp, season well with salt and let them cook gently four hours. Then with a potato masher press them to a finer pulp, or press them through a very coarse colander, add a very generous quantity of butter, plenty of black pepper and a little red pepper; let them cook fifteen minutes longer. Then serve.

Baked Stuffed Tomatoes.

There are many sorts of stuffing for tomatoes, some with and others without force meat. One of the very best is with rice.

Select medium sized tomatoes, cut a small piece from the top, with a spoon scoop out the pulp leaving enough to form a stiff wall so that the tomatoes will stand. Put the pulp in a chopping bowl, add a few sprays of parsley, enough grated onion to flavor well, the grated rind and the juice of half a lemon and a green pepper after removing the seeds. Chop all very fine, then add an equal amount of boiled rice, pour in a little melted butter, season well with salt and pepper. Mix the whole thoroughly, and stuff the tomatoes with it. Sprinkle the top with very fine bread crumbs, put a lump of butter on top, stand the tomatoes in a pan and bake in a quick oven till they are quite brown on the surface.

There are almost numberless ways of cooking tomatoes. It would fill the pages of a big book to give half of them.

NEW BOURETTE PLAID TAILORED GOWN.

AUTUMN fashions are now well under way, and the somewhat tantalizing uncertainty of mid-season experiments has given place to charmingly defined costumes for street usage, at least, with characteristics of style that will be in evidence throughout the winter.

The tailor-made gown with elaborate decorations has disappeared except in revers effects. Cloth suits are stitched, strapped and banded either with the same goods or with inlaid black taffeta. Braids and pendants are used sparingly, and buttons, although serving as trimmings, are small and unobtrusive.

The shirt-coat is seen in a variety of forms. It moulds the figure like a corsage. It is double-breasted and semi-fitting, it has a vest front richly embroidered, or it opens with revers of white cloth, braided and fantastically decorated. Then again it combines the Russian or French blouse with a postillion coat-skirt. But in all cases these coats are stitched, tucked, strapped and belted.

A noticeable feature of this season is the absence of the high-standing collar. Necks are finished with flat-stitched lapels falling in a pointed front so as to show an inside and stock of some soft woolen blouse goods, either white voile or beige.

Capes Replaced by Carefully Shaped Revers.

The small, circular capes that promised to have so wide a popularity have not grown in favor, although they are neat and jaunty. They are replaced by carefully shaped revers or collarettes in graduated sizes, finished by pipings of white or black, and trimmed with fancy braids or small buttons.

White cloth effects in revers, linings and pipings are seen on gowns of all styles, from the all-over trailing coat to the smart blouse that reaches only to the waist line. I have noticed with both the short and full length coat an intent to revive the old vest effect, the vest being of contrasting color stitched in gold or with Oriental threads, but neither the vest nor the decorated revers is so distinguished or correct as the closely buttoned suit.

Fall skirts present a number of innovations and are decidedly novel, handsome and becoming. They are many-seamed and each seam is accentuated by stitched bands and straps. The broad front panel is quite new and adds length to a short figure. It also serves as a starting point of horizontal bands, as well as for the stitched straps that have replaced the hip yoke of the past summer. As a matter of course, this broad center panel lends itself to any variety of decorative effects, but it is really more effective when constructed of the plain, unadorned cloth. Skirts are decidedly longer and flare into a ruffle around the feet.

The New and Fetching Ripple Skirt. The prevalence of numerous gowns has led to the creation of a new and extremely pretty effects known as the weight and slinness to the most uncompromisingly stout figure.

There is no change in the heavy woollens cloths, plaited, flecked and hopped, that were seen in the early part of the season. There are few plain cloths. Tweeds are threaded in white, and mohairs are especially beautiful and long-haired. Colors run to every shade and tint of plum, both purple and red; then, as second favorites, are champagne, sage-green, deep-blue and castor-pastel tints, I think they are called. At any rate, they tone off into tinted white, threaded in darker shades.

Handsome Full Length Coats for Carriage Wear.

In contrast to the complete suit, I noticed some handsome full length odd coats for carriage wear. They were of either silver-gray or brown mixed wools, threaded in black and plum red. They were loose fitting, and caught at the back with a belt, while the fronts were thrown open with revers linings of cloth, either champagne, rose or pastel blue. The flat, open collars, the belt, the cuffs and the revers were piped in white cloth and trimmed with narrow braid, with further decorations of oxidized silver buttons.

Sleeves, as seen on the new tailored gowns, are not too shapely. They are somewhat on the bag style, caught at the wrist by a cuff band, or they are tucked and pleated to the elbow, falling thence into a puffed lower sleeve.

A pretty, sensible suit, combining correctness of style with good taste, was of the new bourette plaid. It was constructed on the French blouse model, with white cloth stole, collars and cuffs braided in black and gold. The shaped collar was fastened over the stole front with brown pearl buttons. The skirt was finished with piped seams and fell into inlaid fan-folds about the feet. A gracefully curved hat of black silk flowers completed this costume.

Words of Up-to-Date Wisdom About Walking Suits.

Covert cloths are more pliable than English suitings, and for this reason are preferably used for the close-fitting coat suit. An artistic model of this style is of the new greenish shade, and has a coat carefully adjusted to the figure. The seams are strapped, and two small horizontal bands with buttons are used with decorative effect on the right side only. The skirt of the new shape is long and clinging with flare bottom. The gores are broadly strapped and elaborately stitched. The necessary touch of black is found in the cluster of black ostrich plumes that droop over the crown of the dark-green beaver hat.

A walking costume imported from a London house is modelled on different lines. It is of heavy tan English suiting, with a semi-fitting three-quarter length coat, and one of the new rippled skirts, the latter finished with a band of machine stitching and an under-piping of velvet. Nowadays it is considered the proper thing to use the handsomest velvet for skirt binding, with the added privilege of showing it as a decorative piping or edging. The above costume is to be worn with a tan mohair hat, showing a contrasting crown of white cloth.

Up-to-Date Tips for Home Dressmakers

DAINTY UNDERWEAR

By ROSA E. PAYNE

A GREAT many garments of underwear are made to look dainty and pretty in the hand, but are not cut with regard to comfort in the wear.

This is especially the case as regards drawers, although there is no reasonableness in ignoring fit in these garments any more than there would be in having riding trousers made with little or no care. Moreover, whenever there is a pull on any part of a garment, as there so frequently is above the knees in drawers, the natural result is quick wear at such parts.

If properly cut the filled edges of drawers should set as evenly around the knees when in a sitting as in a standing posture. A pattern is given here that has been cut with considerable care and which will be found comfortable in every way.

The material used may be either muslin, jaconet, quilt or silk. The drawers are cut quite short and edged with a frill, set on to the knee edges by a heading through which ribbon is run and tied in a bow to the outside of each knee.

The illustration shows a simple frill edged with embroidery or lace and with three small tucks above the edging.

nate strips of tucking and insertion, making the ends mitred. To these are added a narrow heading with ribbon run through, and to which a frill of lace is sewn. (See illustration.)

Another pretty style is to procure the narrow lace heading, which is obtainable with several rows to the strip. Cut the strips the depth of the frill and join them all together. Then run ribbons through, finishing the lower edge with loops.

So many pretty suitable patterns of muslin, lace and insertion may be purchased ready for use that this part of the work may be lessened if desired. The pattern is quite easily cut, by measuring, according to the following:

From A to B, C, D and E are 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ , 17 $\frac{1}{2}$ , 18 $\frac{1}{2}$  and 25 inches, respectively, down a fold. F is 13 inches straight across from E; G, G, respectively, 16 and 17 inches from D; H, H, 18 $\frac{1}{2}$  and 19 $\frac{1}{2}$  inches from C; I, 12 inches from B, and J, 11 $\frac{1}{2}$  inches from A.

Draw the lines like those in the diagram, which is a perfect miniature drawn to scale of  $\frac{1}{8}$  to the inch. The small notches indicate the middle of front. See that the slight dip from

1, 2 inches, to the notch, is made.

The diagram is shown on folded 36-inch wide material, which necessitates a small join to the back corner. It is better to cut out by the outside lines first. Then open out two pieces, and, laying the pattern on, cut to the smaller part from one side.

The pieces outside the notches, with the exception of the top edges, are narrower hemmed and form wraps, which are made to fasten over by buttons and buttonholes. The top edges of the fronts overlap so that both notches meet and are put into the band so.

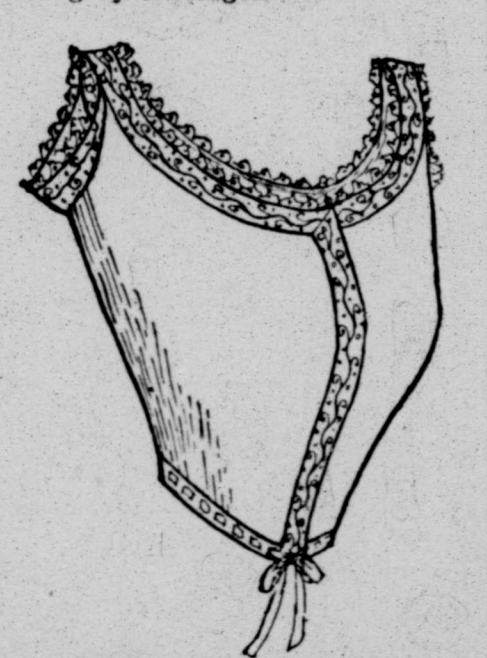

The band should be made to wrap to the same extent at the back if the drawers are to be buttoned. If they are to have tapes, do not forget to work a buttonhole in the band to pass the under tape through in order to tie it in the front.

Make quarter-inch seams, running and felling them. The edges that are joined to the frill, or insertion, should be made neat and strong by hemming very narrow tape on the inside. Each pair of frills requires one and a half yards for the size and width of material quoted. The frill should be about half a yard wide.

sewn to. For one like that in the illustration, 24 yards of embroidery and 48 inches of muslin 40 inches long and 4 $\frac{1}{2}$  wide. It is wise to procure the edgings with a deep plain part and then tuck it just above the pattern of embroidery.

One of these drawings illustrates an exceedingly simple way of making a stay cover for those to whom a plain, tight-fitting one is more desirable under thin waists than one that is gathered or does not hold the figure in well. It is absolutely imperative that those whose figures are fully developed should wear a tight-fitting slip bodice of some kind. They are decidedly cooler than the stay kind which are laced over the bust, and at the same time are perfectly satisfactory. There are no seams anywhere in a low neck one, and only on the shoulders if it is high to the throat.

Anyone can cut her own from an old fitting waist foundation. Having removed the sleeves, unpick only the shoulder seams of this. Then cut it through by the waistline. Next, carefully pin the two halves evenly together (or only use one), place the back to a fold and pin it to the paper at various points, as flat as it will lie, with the darts in, pulling the fullness above the darts as much as possible to the front. This constitutes the high neck pattern and only requires cutting by the edges.

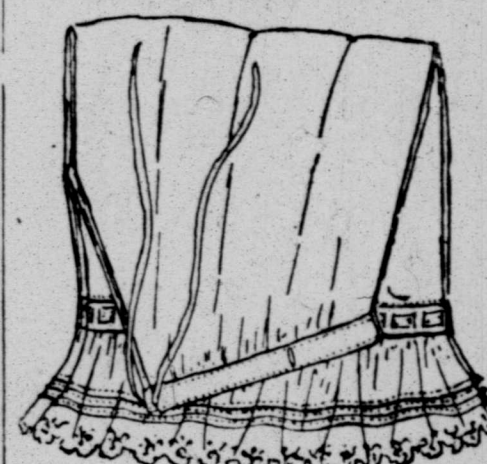

For a low neck one, cut the tops from the paper, as shown in the diagram. Those who may desire to cut the pattern by the diagram, which is length, can do so by the following measurements:

From A to B, 1 inch; A to C, 4; A to D, 5; A to E, 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; A to F, 10 $\frac{1}{4}$ ; A to G, 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; A to H, 16, and A to I, 22 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Across—From A to Q, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; C to P, 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ ; D to O, 16; E to N, 21; F to M, 11 and 20 $\frac{1}{2}$ , respectively; G to L, 22; H to K, 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; I to J, 11.

It is a good plan to use newspaper for cutting patterns, as the lines help to measure straight.

In the textures usually employed for stay covers, it is necessary to cut them the reverse way of the material. (See diagram.) Low ones will sometimes cut out of the width folded down the middle. When this is the case, it is better and more economical to cut them so.

They are exceedingly nice in pongee silk, and cut out of the 24-inch width, as in the diagram. The front may be ornamented in any desired way by letting in insertions or strips of tucking, the one thing needful being to keep it all flat and to join a straight edge to each of the front ones, which are on the bias and require slightly easing.

The illustration has insertion down the middle of the front. To finish it properly in this way, two straight strips of the material should be cut along the selvage way and twice as wide as the insertion. These should be set on to each edge, tightening the latter, especially over the widest part of the curve. They should set out over the other when fastened with buttons and buttonholes. The insertion should be hemmed or stitched down its outer edge, and the inner one secured to the right front edge, to set over the fastening wrap.

For the neck, the insertion is secured to the edge, and either hemmed or finished with narrow tape, and the lace is eased on to the top. The piece to form the armhole is secured to the material edge and sloped off as illustrated, or it may be carried around the shoulder if the strap is desired wider than the one insertion.

Beading finishes the waist edge simply for the decorative effect of the ribbon, as it fits without any drawing up.

This pattern may be equally well finished off to form a straight upper edge above the bust, under the arms and across the back, and have shoulder straps added to hold it up.

A Luncheon Dish—Crab Flakes au Gratin

Get a pound of crab flakes from a reliable dealer, or boil hard-shell crabs, and when they are cold pick out the flakes till you have a pound. Put a pint of milk in a saucepan over the fire with two well-rounded tablespoonfuls of butter, and a saltspoonful of salt. When the milk begins to bubble, stir in two heaping tablespoonfuls of flour dissolved in a gill of cream, stirring briskly to prevent lumping. When this sauce has simmered till it is quite thick stir in the crab flakes;

Turn it in the dish, cover the top with finely ground bread crumbs and a few little flakes of butter. Stand in the oven until it is brown over the surface, then remove from the oven, garnish with sprigs of parsley and serve with lettuce and lemon.

A FAILURE IN INDIAN CIVILIZATION

MICMAC WOMEN AND CHILDREN

WHERE HOCKEY CLUBS COME FROM

MICMAC MEN AND CHILDREN

THE QUEEN OF THE MICMACS

MICMAC FAMILY AND GUEST

Present Condition of the Micmacs, the Tribe That Has Been Longest Subjected to Indian Civilization

By Broughton Brandenburg

HE came to the door of her wigwam, a structure of stolon boards and scrap tin, lit her rank old pipe from a fire burning near, and then smiled a silly, conciliating sort of smile, supposed by her to be the kind to get tobacco or brandy from me.

So this was the noble queen of the famous, war-like, redoubtable Micmacs, the tribe that has been longest subjected to the beneficent influences of Anglo-Saxon civilization. As I looked on the oak-tan face of Her Royal Highness Andrew Paul—for that is her name—I had a glimpse of the monumental failure of that civilization to reach the Indian. I felt for the first time that Indian schools, agricultural encouragement and political franchise notwithstanding, there is an impassable gulf between the pale face and the red skin. Their paths can never lie side by side, and the original North American is doomed to obliteration actually as well as theoretically.

Of Entirely Different Stock From the Mexican Indians.

This head of the tribe who lives on the east coast of Nova Scotia is the chief ruler of the largest fragment of any of the great tribes first met by the explorers. I intentionally except the Mexican Indians, for they are of a different stock, and so amenable to civilization.

Cabot found the Micmacs before white men saw any of the mainland Indians, either in the North or South, and of all the tribes of the Atlantic seaboard—the Pequods, the Delawares, the Algonquins, the Seminoles, the Beothics, etc.—the Micmacs are the only ones left. They have had everything done for them that the United States government could do in New England, and by the English government in Newfoundland and in the Maritime provinces, but for nearly four hundred years they have balked civilization's best efforts, and to-day are a lazy, besotted, worthless remnant of a once powerful nation.

The last time that there was any show of spirit on their part, any collective effort to assert their tribal rights or wishes, was some twenty years ago when the Maritime Provinces decided to abolish the practice of allowing them just so much liquor and making it punishable, by a heavy penalty, for any man to sell or give them any quantity of strong drink whatever. Then the scattered clusters of the tribe gathered at Ferris Hill near Sydney, Cape Breton, and at the Dartmouth encampment across the harbor from Halifax, Nova Scotia. They protested and danced and sang and even threatened, but the governments were firm, and now even Chief John, the husband of Queen Andrew Paul, would sell his soul for a half pint of very bad whiskey.

Chief John is the Tribe's Nominal Head.

Chief John is nominally the head of the tribe, and has a long line of ancestors behind him, all with fine records as warriors and some of them as statesmen, but now he is ruled by a Queen, who beats him with a and gets drunk without dividing with her. In latter years all the Micmacs have come to respect her authority, and she guides their destinies in all inter-tribal matters.

In the market place around the postoffice at Halifax a summer morning will find scores of these Indians squatted on the pavement with berries, baskets, roots and tow bows and arrows to sell. In winter they bring hockey clubs, snowshoes, evergreens, etc., and, winter or summer, rain or shine, cluster in the unsheltered square around the postoffice.

Some years since the city of Halifax built a handsome and spacious market house directly across from the postoffice and opened it free to the country people who came to market. The Indians absolutely refused to leave the spot where they had sold their wares as long as they could remember, and the white hucksters, fearing loss of business if they entered the market house and the Indians did not, also stayed in their old stands. The city has just torn down the new market house and is putting up a new municipal building in its place.

On the Bay of Fundy near the Basin of Minas there are several villages of Micmacs, who, several years ago, were supposed to be particularly favored. The villagers took up a number of farms, under government help, and seemed to be turning to agriculture at last. A number of the most promising young men were given education in Osgood Hall at Toronto and at Queens University at Kingston, while a few went to Pine Hill Seminary in Halifax. Most of them were duly graduated. Two or three were ordained in the Church of England, and some became clergymen in the Presbyterian Church.

Of all that promising galaxy, only two or three are left, and they are merely missionaries. The others have all gone back to the wilds, to tramp-like encampments and irresponsible existence. That is, all but two, and they are in prison, one for killing a man and running away with his wife, the other for stealing a fund that belonged to a church of which he was in charge.

An Aboriginal Scholar Who Has Relapsed Into Savagery.

I had the opportunity of seeing one of these especially favored ones who, having been inoculated with the virus of civilization under the most propitious circumstances, had strongly demonstrated that it would never take. His story, as I heard it from a churchman who knew it, was that, having graduated from the university with honors, he remained as a tutor to help other Indian students. He became in time a professor, and then later was given the degree of doctor of divinity.

When I saw him he was squatting before a shack in the edge of the woods. On his head was an old felt hat too large for him. His long hair, hanging to his shoulders, was very dirty. His face was thinly covered with wisps of beard and a layer of filth. His clothes were nondescript, picked from waste barrels or given from back doors, and his feet were shod with worn-out shoes of different sizes and makes. Yet this stupid-looking specimen, who was whittling hockey clubs with which to buy food, fifteen years ago was in a university chair, and is still a doctor of divinity.

The Micmacs have one unflinching source of revenue. No matter what happens, the boys of the country use up a certain quantity of hockey clubs every year, and the very best hockey clubs made come from the Micmac camps. There is a firm in Toronto which sends yearly to the sub-chiefs of the various villages orders for so the money they bring in is absolutely necessary to buy what food the forest will not supply, there are times when the contractors go wild because the Indians refuse to work and the supply is held up.

In the hunting season there is great demand for Micmac guides in Maine, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Labrador, and there are some really famous guides among them.

There died not long since in the Ferris Hill village a very old chief who was widely known throughout Canada for his part in the Indian wars. He had been a comrade with Sir John Barrington, the last English baronet in Canada. Barrington was a man who thoroughly despised his provincial neighbors, and had a horse which he would ride through the streets and that was trained to kick whenever his master gave the signal. If the old baronet was in a particular nasty humor he would back the horse up to the house door, let him kick it in, and then toss the owner of the house a gold piece and ride away.

The old baronet's greatest pleasure was to drive to the Ferris Hill camp and seek the old chief's wigwam. There the two would shut themselves away from the world, smoke Indian pipes, talk in Micmac over the times that were gone, and fight over their battles till sunset. Then the old bar-

Queer Funeral Story from Jamaica

There are some curious funeral superstitions in Jamaica.

Hearses are unknown in the country districts, and the coffin has to be borne to the grave on the shoulders of the mourners. The negroes gravely assert that only with the greatest difficulty can they persuade the corpse to pass places with which it was well acquainted in life, and if the coffin strikes against a tree on the way to the grave something dreadful is sure to happen.

Hesketh Bell, a well-known West Indian official, tells a good story on this head. A negress had died rather suddenly, and, according to custom, she was fastened down in her coffin with all possible speed. Funerals in the West Indies usually take place a few hours after death. On the way to the cemetery the coffin struck against a tree, and immediately afterwards the bearers were horrified to hear the supposed corpse thumping at the lid. They opened the coffin, and the woman was found to be alive and arms of her astonished husband.

Some time later, this same woman died in grim earnest, and the funeral procession once more wended its way along the same road. As it approached the scene of the former resurrection, the bereaved widower excitedly rushed up to the bearers and cried: "For de blessid Lord's sake, mind dat tree dis time!"

The First Fly Answer.

"Where," inquired Noah passionately when the dove returned, "where are we at?"

"Why, Ararat, to be sure," replied the dove.

Deep below in the hold the laughing jacksaw unlocked his mouth and began a wholesale business.

He Reformed.

"Well," sighed the sturdy agriculturist watching the last of the summer boarders totter away, "well, that's over. Let's settle down and earn an honest living the rest of the year."

Out!

It was the last match.

How Mrs. Maxim Plays With Explosives

Not many brave men would care to poach eggs over smokeless powder, hammer nails with nitro-gelatin, make tea over a cake of yellow Maximite, hang out gun-cotton to dry and cap fuses with fulminate of mercury.

These are a few of the risky "stunts" which a plucky young English girl does in the drawing-room of her home in Brooklyn. She is the wife of Hudson Maxim, the well-known inventor, and she has helped her husband in his laboratory work since he lost his left hand in an explosion of fulminate of mercury, one of the most deadly of all explosives.

Maximite cartridges are filled by forcing the fulminate into the fuses with a two thousand pound pressure and screwing in the caps. The danger lies not in the high pressure on the explosive, for no pressure can set it off, but in any possible friction. One tiny grain of powder overlooked and left in the mouth of the fuse, so that the end of the cap would grate upon it, would blow the experimenters to bits.

"Do you always help Mr. Maxim to fill these fuses?" Mrs. Maxim was asked.

"Yes," she replied. "You see, he cannot manage them with one hand."

"But aren't you afraid when it comes to the cap-screwing part?"

"I am dreadfully afraid," confessed the young wife, "but it is easier to help out here in the laboratory, no matter how dangerous, than to wait in the house—listening!"

Queer Name for English Charity

"The Guild of the Brave Poor Things" is the curious name adopted by a company of English charity workers, whose womanly efforts are being directed toward the amelioration of the condition of cripples, young and old.

The guild has recently acquired a country holiday home at North Common, Chailly, Sussex. It is called The Heritage, and was formally opened in June by the Duchess of Bedford. The home is picturesquely situated and will accommodate fifty guild members—men, women and children—some of whom will become permanent residents and others will be taken from the various branches of the guild for short vacation periods. As soon as may be, it is intended to start a school of arts and crafts for the crippled and deformed inmates, and the work will be sold for their benefit.

Big and Small Creatures

THE smallest known vertebrate animal—that is, an animal with a backbone—is a tiny fish that lives in the Philippines, where it is a favorite object of food. It is so small that thousands of them are needed to make a meal.

Besides producing this microscopic vertebrate, the ocean also furnishes a home for the largest creatures of the world—the basking shark and the whale. The largest land animal, the elephant, is a small thing compared with a full grown right whale, that has so much fat that a hundred barrels of oil can be tried out of it. A really big right whale is so huge that the strongest mast on a whaling ship will not support the head alone, after it has been cut from the body.

The basking shark grows to dimensions as large as ordinary whales. It has a mouth so great that it can swallow a man with a gun! It is believed that the basking shark is responsible for many of the stories

THE postoscope is made as follows: Cut a piece of cardboard into the shape A and make a little box having four sides, each  $2\frac{1}{2} \times 2\frac{1}{2}$  inches. One side is fitted at one end with a flap  $1\frac{1}{2} \times 1\frac{1}{2}$  inches in size.

Before you glue the sides together, cut a heart-shaped opening into the side (h). When the box is done, insert a piece of looking-glass  $2\frac{3}{4} \times 1\frac{1}{2}$  inches, diagonally from the left to the right, and the postoscope is finished.

Place the square opening of the box before one eye and close the other.

You will be able to see anything in the rear, as shown in the illustration.

The Appetite of a Bird

WHEN an old-fashioned hostess urges her guest to eat after the old-fashioned manner of showing hospitality, and remarks, "Why, you haven't the appetite of a bird," she really speaks the truth, though she does not intend to.

appetite, would devour from thirty to thirty-one pounds of food a day, which would be rough on the old-fashioned hostess.

Recent experiments have proved that the average bird manages to eat daily with ease, if it can get so much food, and in a wild state, though the bird has to "hustle" for its daily provender, he is eating a large part of the time during the day and manages to get its full rations.

The smaller the bird, the more canary under observation for a month. The little creature weighed only sixteen grammes, but in the course of the month it managed to eat 512 grammes weight of food—that is, thirty-two times its own weight. The bird must, therefore, have eaten its own weight in food every day.

An ordinary man with a canary's appetite would consume 150 pounds of food a day.

But the canary is an extreme case. The ordinary bird in good health will be satisfied with one-fifth of its weight

The Tides of the World

ONE of the things that is known to exceedingly few persons is the wonderful harmony of the tides throughout the world.

There is no place on the face of the earth where ocean waters do not ebb and flow regularly, the ebb and flow obey a natural law with such stancy that they can be counted on as surely as changes of the seasons or day and night.

As a result, it is possible to make up tide tables predict the exact time to the very minute when the high or low tide in any part of the world given time. Every year the United States
