Washington Bureau, 601 14th St., N. W. WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11.—Grover Cleveland's interview favorable to Judge Parker's candidacy is becoming probably the most widely discussed topic in political circles. Its effect has two obvious directions, one on the Cleveland wing of the party and the other on the Bryan wing. It will doubtless help Judge Parker with the one and hurt him with the other.

Southwestern democrats who are extremely solicitous of harmony think it will make it much harder for Bryan to turn in with good grace to support the Parker ticket. They say that the defeat of everything which Mr. Bryan stands for at the St. Louis convention will be most complete and the Cleveland interview will only add to the Nebraskan's discomfort. His own state is now the scene of a bitter factional struggle in the democratic party between those who want its delegates to go for Parker and the old Bryan wing which would leave the state's representation of the "peerless leader."

MR. COLQUITT'S LETTER

In the Sunday papers there is a letter from Mr. Colquitt to a friend which indicates very strongly that the present member of the railroad commission will be a candidate for Governor against Col. Lanham. The letter goes deeply into state affairs, and unless Mr. Colquitt means to run, he has opened the way for a very wide breach between him and the administration, because of the strictures he has passed on the policy now in vogue. Of course, if he makes the race he will have the opposition of the combined forces of Lanham, Robbins, Stephens and the ring which maintains its headquarters at Austin and seeks to control the state. This ring has been in power quite a long time. It is headed by a man whom few people in the state know, but he is a man of wealth and he seeks to make governors because of the satisfaction he gets out of being the power behind the throne. He is a man who knows nothing of state affairs and rarely leaves his home city, and there is not a hotel register in Texas which shows his name on many occasions during the year. He has an ax to grind, but what that ax is no one knows except those on the inside, and none of these is willing to tell. It was to him that Hon. Tom Campbell referred when he retired from the race two years ago, in saying that he could not win against the ring opposition. This ring leader has slated Lanham for a second term and after Lanham he has the man picked out whom he will put forward. It is a powerful organization, and against Mr. Colquitt all its strength will be pitted.

Mr. Colquitt is against free passes being given to state officers, and in this pronouncement he gets closer to the people than any man has since the day when Jim Hogg fought for that principle so hard. The people today are considering the free pass proposition very carefully, and the chances are that no man will be given a place in legislative halls who will not agree to oppose such a practice. Candidates for the legislature are expressing themselves on the question every day, and when the next session meets there will be a sentiment in favor of it, so strong that it can not be put down. Mr. Colquitt is very clear on the point, and this will attract the people to him.

Another thing which he opposes is nepotism, and in discussing this he certainly lays the whip across the back of the present administration. He does not specify any one department, but his language is strong and it touches the state house from end to end; except the administration of the office of the attorney general. In this argument he will have the support of the people, because they know that kinfolk do not apply their energies to their work when under a superior who is bound to them by that tie of blood which is so much thicker than water.

He touches a tender spot with the labor vote when he opposes the use of convicts in competition with free labor. This is a principle which has been much discussed in this column. The recent contract entered into with the mines of East Texas by which penal labor is substituted for the men who have been earning sustenance for their families has aroused the indignation of all working people in the state, and upon that one point alone Mr. Colquitt will have the sympathy of a very heavy vote in the state.

Mr. Colquitt points out also the growing deficiency in state finances and points to the ad valorem taxes as being the only means by which this deficiency can be met. He gives figures which it would be well for all to study because next year will test every man's patriotism and faith in his state.

Mr. Colquitt's letter is an able one and it will awake the state. This year will be different from any other because there is a uniform primary. In 1898, when Sayers was first elected, all opposition was swept from the way by the manipulation of certain large counties early in the campaign and the pivotal influence of these counties had an effect with the smaller ones, but no such condition will obtain this year. All counties will vote at one time and the manipulators will not have a chance to decide which is the stronger candidate until the vote tells the whole story.

There is much said about an unwritten law that all democratic governors shall have the second term. This is not necessary. If a governor has given satisfaction and the people want to renominate him, all right, but if he has not given satisfaction it is the people's right to make a change. This campaign will not be a campaign similar to that followed in 1892. Governor Hogg had accomplished much which the people then believed was for the good of the state, and they were not disposed to let him be defeated. He had an issue upon which he went before the commission, and it was upon that issue he was elected. The Lanham administration has no issue to present. It will be simply on the defensive throughout, asking for an indorsement of policies which have been criticized rather than for a chance to make good on some policy of state government which is yet untried and which might be of benefit.

The Telegram is non-committal at this time. The fight is between two democrats, and which will make the better governor remains to be seen, but the thoughts above have been gathered from a general discussion of the question by the papers in the state, combined with the facts as they have come from each side in the controversy. At any rate, if Mr. Colquitt makes the race he will cause a lively campaign.

THE BILL AS AMENDED

The senate has amended the bill regarding rural free delivery carriers as it came from the house and the chances are that the people along the routes will be able to secure accommodation from those who carry the government mail. The senate amendment reads:

That said carrier may carry merchandise for hire and receive subscriptions for and deliver newspapers, magazines and other periodicals for and upon their respective routes whenever the same shall not interfere with the proper discharge of their official duties and under such regulations as the postmaster general may prescribe and not otherwise; and, provided, further, that no carrier shall refuse to deliver or to take orders or subscriptions for any merchandise, newspaper or periodical requested by any patron on his route, subject to the laws of the United States and the regulations of the postmaster general.

By this it is made the duty of the carrier to take subscriptions for patrons along the route, and the man on his farm can subscribe to his home paper without inconvenience to himself, and the carrier will be paid by the publisher for the little trouble it gives him.

Newspapers are always willing to pay those who get subscribers for them. The newspaper in fact is willing to pay for anything done for it, and generally the people require that this shall be so. The newspaper is anything but a charity object. It does for others, but few do anything for it, and it only asks the government to allow the rural route man to bring in the name of the subscriber, if that subscriber cares to give him the subscription price.

Manual training in the public schools is being talked of everywhere and next year it will be a widespread system. Superintendent Alex. Hogg of Fort Worth has long advocated it and his first year's work in this regard in the schools here shows a class of twenty-five. Next year there will be many more. It is with a degree of satisfaction that Superintendent Hogg looks at the workers and wonders what good results will come from the early efforts of those boys who are now being trained.

It Judge Parker of New York able to take a shorter cut to the presidency than Cleveland and Roosevelt? They had to go through the New York state house to reach the coveted goal.

Every fellow in town ought to ring up Captain Paddock at the Board of Trade rooms and get his name on that auditorium subscription list. It is for the benefit of the town.

Say, just tell your neighbor about the subscription campaign of The Telegram and get him to enroll his name. Every household ought to have it.

James Jones says he is for Hearst. That settles the newspaper man's chances. Everybody is against Jones.

The White Company by A. Conan Doyle

SYNOPSIS.
 Alleyne Edricson, who has spent his life in a monastery, leaves at the age of 25 to see the world. His brother, the Bocman of Minstead, an arrogant, cruel man, refuses to allow him to enter the house. He saves Lady Maude, daughter of Sir Nigel Loring, a famous warrior, from his brother and is made a squire to Sir Nigel, who is about to go to France to take command of the White Company, a company of English archers, the invitation having been carried to him by Sam Aylward. Horde John, a former brother at the monastery, joins the company. Alleyne falls in love with Maude, and she returns his love.

Sir Nigel and Sir Oliver Buttethorn report to the Black Prince, who is preparing to send an army to Spain to place Don Pedro on the Spanish throne. Alleyne gets into a quarrel in the squire's hall.

During the duel which follows, Alleyne's antagonist falls into the river and Alleyne springs in to rescue him.

"Every man to his own humor," said Pedro, carelessly. "Carajo! there is a sweet face at yonder window! Don Fernando, I pray you to mark the house and to have the maid brought to us at the abbey."

"Nay, brother, nay!" cried the squire, "I have had occasion to tell you more than once that things are not ordered in this manner."

"A thousand pardons, dear friend," the Spaniard answered quickly, for a flush of anger had sprung to the dark cheek of the English prince. "You make my exile so like a home that I forget at times that I am not in very truth back in Castile. Every land hath indeed its ways and manners, but I promise you, Edward, that when you are my guest in Toledo or Madrid you shall not yearn in vain for any commoner's daughter on whom you may design to cast your eye."

"Your talk, sire," said the prince still more coldly, "is not such as I love to hear from your lips. I have no taste for such amours as you speak of, and I have sworn that my name shall be coupled with that of no woman save my ever dear wife."

"Ever the mirror of true chivalry!" exclaimed Pedro, while James of Majorca, frightened at the stern countenance of their all powerful protector, plucked hard at the mantle of his brother exile.

"Have a care, cousin," he whispered; "have a care, for you have angered him."

"Phshaw! fear not," the other answered. "If I miss one stoop I will strike him on the next."

It was an enormous crowd which covered the whole vast plain. From the northern gate the prince and his companions looked down at a dark sea of heads. A path had been staked off from the city gate to the stands which had been erected for the court and nobility. Down this, amid the shouts of the enormous multitude, the prince cantered.

The holders of the lists occupied the end which was nearest to the city gate. There, in front of their respective pavilions, flew the martlets of Audley, the roses of Loring, the scarlet bars of Wake, the lion of the Percies and the silver wings of the Beauchamps, each supported by a squire clad in hanging green stuff to represent so many Tritons, and bearing a huge couch shell in their left hands. Behind the tents the great war horses, armed at all points, champed and reared, while their masters sat at the doors of their pavilions, with their helmets upon their knees, chatting as to the order of the day's doings. The English archers and men-at-arms had mustered at that end of the lists, but the vast majority of the spectators were in favor of the attacking party, for the English had declined in popularity. Hence the applause was by no means general when the herald-arms proclaimed the names and styles of the knights who were prepared, for the honor of their country, and for the love of their ladies, to hold the field against all who might do them the favor to run a course with them. On the other hand, a deafening burst of cheering greeted the rival herald, who, advancing from the other end of the lists, rolled for the well known titles of the five famous warriors who had accepted the defiance.

"Faith, John," said the prince, "it sounds as though you were right. Ha! my grace D'Armagnac, it seems that our friends on this side will not grieve if our English champions lose the day."

"It may be so, sire," the Gascon nobleman answered. "I have little doubt that in Smithfield or at Windsor an English crowd would favor their own countrymen."

"By my faith! that's easily seen," said the prince, laughing, "for a few score English archers at yonder end are hollering as though they would out-shout the mighty multitude. I fear that they will have little to shout over this tourney, for my gold vase has small prospect of crossing the water. What are the conditions, John?"

"They are to tilt single not less than three courses, sire, and the victory to rest with that party which shall have won the greater number of courses, each pair continuing till one or other have the vantage. He who carries himself best of the victors hath the prize, and he who is judged best of the other party hath a jeweled clasp. Shall I order that the nakirs sound, sire?"

The prince nodded and the trumpets rang out, while the champions rode forth one after the other, each meeting his opponent in the center of the lists. Sir Wm. Beauchamp went down before the practiced lance of the Capital de Buch. Sir Thos. Percy won the vantage over the Lord of Mucident, and the Lord Audley struck Sir Perducas d'Albert from the saddle. The burly De Clisson, however, restored the hopes of the attackers by beating to the ground Sir Thos. Wake, of Yorkshire. So far, there was little to choose betwixt challengers and challenged.

"By St. James of Santiago!" cried Don Pedro, with a tinge of color upon his pale cheeks, "win who will, this has been a most notable contest."

"Who comes next for England, John?" asked the prince in a voice which quivered with excitement.

"Sir Nigel Loring of Hampshire, sire."

"Hah! he is a man of good courage, and skilled in the use of all weapons." "He is indeed, sire. But his eyes, like my own, are the worse for wars. Yet he can tilt or play his part at hand-strokes as merrily as ever. It was he, sire, who won the golden crown which Queen Philippa, your royal mother, gave to be bestowed for all the knights of England after the harrying of Calais. I have heard that at Twynham castle there is a buffet which grows beneath the weight of his prizes."

"I pray that my vase may join them," said the prince. "But here is the cavalier of Germany, and by my soul! he looks like a man of great valor and hardiness. Let them run their full three courses, for the issue is over great to hang upon one."

As the prince spoke, amid a loud flourish of trumpets and the shouting of the Gascon party, the last of the assailants rode gallantly into the lists. He was a man of great size, clad in black armor. Mounted upon a horse as large as black and as forbidding as himself, he cantered slowly forward, gravely and sternly he inclined his head to the prince and took his place at the further end of the arena.

He had scarce done so before Sir Nigel rode out from the holders' inclosure and galloping at full speed down the lists, drew his charger up before the prince's stand with a jerk which threw it back upon its haunches. With the air of a man who hastens to a joyous festival, he waved his lance in salute, and reining the pawing horse round without permitting its fore feet to touch the ground, he hastened back to his station.

A great hush fell over the huge multitude as the two last champions faced each other. A double issue seemed to rest upon their contest, for their personal fame was at stake as well as their party's honor. Both were famous warriors, but they had never before been able to cross lances. For a moment they waited—the German somber and collected, Sir Nigel quivering in every fibre with eagerness and fiery resolution. Then, amid a long-drawn breath from the spectators, the glove fell from the marshal's hand and the two steel-clad horsemen met like a thunderclap in front of the royal stand. The German, though he recoiled for an instant before the thrust of the Englishman, struck his opponent so fairly upon the vizor that the laces burst, the plumed helmet flew to pieces and Sir Nigel galloped on down the lists with his bald head shimmering in the sunshine. A thousand waving scarves and tossing of caps announced that the first bout had fallen to the popular party.

The Hampshire knight was not a man to be disheartened by a reverse. He spurred back to the pavilion and was out in a few instants with another helmet. The second course was so equal that the keenest judges could not discern any vantage. Each struck fire from the other's shield, and each endured the jarring shock as though welded to the horse beneath him. In the final bout, however, Sir Nigel struck his opponent with so true an aim that the point of the lance caught between the bars of his vizor and tore the front of his helmet out, while the German, aiming somewhat low and half stunned by the shock, laid the misfortune to strike his adversary upon the thigh, a breach of the rules of the tilting yard, by which he not only sacrificed his chances of success, but would also have forfeited his horse and armor, had the English knight chosen to claim them. A roar of applause from the English soldiers, with an ominous silence from the vast crowd who pressed round the barriers, announced that the balance of victory lay with the holders. Already the ten champions had assembled in front of the prince to receive his award, when a harsh bugle call from the further end of the lists drew all eyes to a new and unexpected arrival.

gently rising plain curved the white road which leads inland.

Shortly after the contest had begun, anyone looking from the lists along this road might have remarked far away in the extreme distance, two brilliant and sparkling points which glittered and twinkled in the bright sun. Within an hour these had become clearer and nearer, until they might be seen to come from the reflection from the headpieces of two horsemen who were riding at the top of their speed in the direction of Bordeaux. Another half hour had brought them so close that every point of their bearing could be discerned. The first was a knight in full armor. He was a short man of great breadth of shoulder, with vizor closed and no blazonry upon his simple white surcoat or plain black shield. The other, who was evidently his squire and attendant, was unarmed save for the helmet upon his head, but bore in his right hand a very long and heavy oaken spear which belonged to his master. In his left hand the squire held not only the reins of his own horse, but those of a great black war horse, fully harnessed, which trotted along at his side. Thus the three horses and their two riders rode swiftly to the lists, and it was the blare of the trumpet sounded by the squire as his lord rode into the arena which had broken in upon the prize giving and drawn away the attention and interest of the spectators.

"Ha, John!" cried the prince, craning his neck, "who is this cavalier and what is it that he desires?"

"On my word, sire," replied Chandos, with the utmost surprise upon his face, "it is my opinion that he is a Frenchman."

As he spoke, the attendant cantered up the grassy inclosure and pulling up his steed in front of the royal stand, blew a second fanfare upon his bugle. He was a raw-boned, swarthy-cheeked man, with black, bristling beard and a swaggering bearing. Having sounded his call, he reined up within a spear's length of the royal party.

Cleanings From the ...Exchanges...

One of the most unfavorable signs of the times is the fact that so many of our boys are leaving school before their education is completed. The girls as a rule go on and the gradual displacement of men by women in the various walks of life is to continue until this thing is changed.—Denison Herald.

Boys imagine they know exactly what their sphere in life should be and quit school too early. A boy selects a line of work which he thinks is more congenial than spending his time with books and blackboards, and after he has put in a few years he finds he has made a mistake. If the boy will remain in school until his mind is matured he will make a better selection of a vocation. The system proposed by Superintendent Hogg of the education of the hand as well as the head is a plan which will work a change in the education of boys.

The Pullman Company has sent to St. Louis for exhibit ten cars that cost $50,000 each. All are of different styles—private, buffet, tourist sleeper, chair car, day coach, compartment sleeper, parlor chair, ordinary sleeper, dining and composite car. The last contains a smoking room, buffet and barber shop. In the private car is an elaborately furnished bath room. Instead of the brilliant varnish used in railroad cars a dead finish has been used. In the buffet car the wood work is all of Flemish oak.—Clarendon Chronicle.

This will give a lot of fellows a chance to see the palace cars who never see them unless they are elected to the legislature and work the free pass habit.

AN EVEN DOZEN VETERANS HOLD FOR FORT WORTH WEEKLY MEETING

While Natchez Fails to Get a Man Across Home Plate Daughters State That They Will Erect Building on Park Grounds

The "Japs" presented Natchez yesterday with a neat little package carefully tied with black ribbon.

Christman was in fine fettle and pitched ball that would have done business anywhere.

As McMurray went to bat he winked a little wink and then hung up a pretty single.

The third inning looked promising for the visitors for about ten seconds.

The fifth made the fans think they were watching a ball game.

In the next inning Shetlock was put in the box and the "Japs" had to be content with only two hits.

Blackburne did not give any exhibitions of his heavy hitting.

The score: Fort Worth. R. BH. PO. A. E. McMurray, c. 4 3 7 1 0

Summary: Earned runs—Fort Worth 4, Natchez 0. Hits—Fort Worth 9, Natchez 2.

The meeting of Lee Camp, United Confederate Veterans, held yesterday was not so largely attended as usual.

There were several applications for membership received, among them the following: T. C. Carrier, J. B. Hutchinson and J. H. Gibson.

Resolutions of respect on the death of James B. Martin, an old citizen of Tarrant county, which occurred some weeks ago, were passed.

Colonel Jordan announced that the Daughters of the Confederacy would assist in receiving at the Loan Art Exhibit at the public library on Tuesday evening of this week.

There is every reason to believe that these announcements will bring about a line war among the lines that are now competing for this class of business.

SOFT CORN FOR FEEDING

Some Interesting Experiments at the Iowa Experiment Station, Which Demonstrate the Value of the Article

The Feeding Value of Soft Corn for Beef Production is the title of bulletin No. 75, just issued by the animal husbandry section of the Iowa experiment station.

Much of the corn from a marketable standpoint was worthless, it must either be fed to stock or allowed to rot in the field.

What was the value of soft corn? This at once became a pertinent question. It could not be evaded. The feeder had his feed lots full of high-priced cattle, the grain farmer had his fields of unmarketable corn.

The following conclusions are deduced from the results obtained: 1. That soft corn grown on the college farm in 1902 and containing 25 per cent of moisture at the beginning of the test, found for pound, on a water free, or dry matter basis, was fully equal in feeding value to mature corn grown in 1900 when used for fattening cattle.

2. That cattle fed on such soft corn made nearly as heavy gains and finished equally as well as those fed on mature corn grown in 1900.

3. That when soft corn similar to that used in this test, could be purchased for 30 cents per bushel, the prevailing market price, gains on fattening cattle could be made at a cost of 3.05 cents per pound less than when mature corn, costing 50 cents per bushel, the prevailing market price, was fed under similar conditions.

4. That a study of the live stock market conditions from January 1, 1902, to July 31, 1902, shows conclusively that the generally low prices of beef prices of 1902 was not caused by an over supply of half finished cattle.

5. That the chemical analyses would indicate that the nutritive value of the corn grown in 1902 compares favorably with mature corn grown in dry matter basis, water free substance or dry matter serves as a basis of comparison.

6. That the amount of moisture present was the main difference so far as composition is concerned. That amount of moisture depends mainly on the maturity of the corn when struck by frost.

Matching

Probably the least thing our city does is—cut. The real skill appears in the matching of stripes and plaids with geometrical nicety; the matching of tipings and buttons with artistic taste; the examination of construction with critical exactness.

It is really wonderful how we do it for the price—and we don't claim cheapness, either.

The Mississippi River is Likely to Recede from Present Mark. MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 11.—The Mississippi river—today marks thirty-nine feet on the gauge and is stationary. It will probably remain at this stage until tomorrow, when it will begin to recede. The local situation is practically unchanged. No serious delays to traffic on any railroad have been reported. Officials of the St. Francis levee board believe unless bad water sets in that the levee will stand the strain. The weakest points are at Hollybush and Bradley's Ark. SARATOGA ASKS MAIL SERVICE BE IMPROVED

J. J. Roche Is Here to See Superintendent Gaines About the Delay Which Is General at This Time

J. J. Roche, who has charge of the business of the Saratoga Townsite Company, is in the city, where he spent Sunday with his family. Primarily, he came to Fort Worth to confer with Sam M. Gaines, superintendent of the eleventh division, railway mail service. In an effort to have provided better mail facilities for Saratoga, which is now very poorly provided for in the matter of receiving mail, as it is now brought to that place in a wagon from Brage, the junction point on the main line of the Santa Fe from Somerville to Beaumont. Under the present arrangement it takes a letter sent from Fort Worth at least three days to reach Saratoga, and on account of this poor service the town is made to suffer. On this account Superintendent Gaines is to be asked for better postal service. Mr. Roche believes that on account of the growing importance of Saratoga the town is entitled to more expeditious service. He says the place is growing rapidly and the influx of prospectors is very large. Daily new people are arriving at Saratoga, consequently the necessity of improved mail service is apparent.
